
EDNAH DEAN PROCTOR, Humming-Bird.

8 And the humming-bird that hung
Like a jewel up among

The tilted honeysuckle horns.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The South Wind and the Sun.

9 A flash of harmless lightning,
A mist of rainbow dyes,

The burnished sunbeams brightening
From flower to flower he flies.

HUMOR

10 Guess his humor ain't refined
Quite enough to suit my mind.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER, Jabed Meeker, Humorist. Referring to Mark Twain.

11 Unconscious humour.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Life and Habit. (1877) Butler claims to have coined this phrase.

A sense of humour keen enough to show a man his own absurdities will keep him from the commission of all sins, or nearly all, save those that are worth committing.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Life and Habit.

12 The essence of humour is sensibility; warm tender fellow-feeling with all forms of existence.

CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

True humour springs not more from the head than from the heart; it is not contempt, its essence is love; it issues not in laughter, but in still smiles, which lie far deeper. It is a sort of inverse sublimity, exalting as it were, into our affections what is below us, while sublimity draws down into our affections what is above us.

CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

Humour has justly been regarded as the finest perfection of poetic genius.

CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

13 Joking and humor are pleasant, and often of extreme utility. (Suavis autem est, et vehementer sæpe utilis jocus et facetiæ.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 54.

14 No mind is thoroughly well organized that is deficient in a sense of humour.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

15 I never dare to write As funny as I can.

O. W. HOLMES, The Height of the Ridiculous.

16 Humor's the true democracy.

R. U. JOHNSON, Divided Honors.

17 Humor is the only test of gravity, and gravity of humor, for a subject which will not bear raillery is suspicious, and a jest which will not bear serious examination is false wit.

GORGAS LEONTINUS. (ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. iii, ch. 18. As quoted by Shaftesbury, Essay on the Freedom of Wit and Humour. Sec. 5.) See also under JESTING.

Humor is gravity concealed behind the jest.

JOHAN WEISS, Wit, Humor, and Shakespeare.

18 Reader who art too seriously disposed, depart whither you will: I wrote these verses for the man of wit. (Qui gravis es nimium, potes hinc jam, lector, abire Quo libet: urbanæ scripsimus ista togæ.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 16.

19 It [a sense of humor] always withers in the presence of the messianic delusion, like justice and truth in front of patriotic passion.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 32

20 Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 131.

21 What an ornament and safeguard is humour! Far better than wit for a poet and writer. It is a genius itself, and so defends from the insanities.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Miscellanies: Emerson.

22 For the love of laughter, hinder not the humour of his design.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 44.

<sup>1</sup> I love not the humour of bread and cheese,
and there's the humour of it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 140.

<sup>2</sup> Humour is the mistress of tears.
THACKERAY, Charity and Humour.

<sup>3</sup> Humour is odd, grotesque, and wild,
Only by affectation spoiled;
'Tis never by invention got;
Men have it when they know it not.
SWIFT, To Mr. Delany.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 78.

All arts his own, the hungry Greekling counts;
And bid him mount the skies, the skies he mounts.
JUVENAL, Satires, iii, 78. (Gifford, tr.)

No nice extreme a true Italian knows;
But bid him go to hell, to hell he goes.
JUVENAL, iii. Paraphrased by Thomas Phillips, in a letter to George III, with reference to the trial of the king's sister, Caroline of Denmark.

All sciences a fasting Monsieur knows,
And bid him go to hell, to hell he goes!

<sup>18</sup> Hunger forceth the wolf out of her den.
WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, iii, 216.
(1567)

Hunger, thou knowest, brings the wolf out of the wood.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas, iv, 245. (Smollett, tr. 1750)

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 44.

3 So if unprejudiced you scan
The goings of this clock-work, man,
You find a hundred movements made
By fine devices in his head;
But 'tis the stomach's solid stroke
That tells his being what's o'clock.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Pt. iii, l. 272.

My stomach serves me instead of a clock.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

My belly began to cry cupboard.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

4 Hunger and cold deliver a man up to his enemy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 126.

5 A hungry people listens not to reason, nor cares for justice, nor is bent by any prayers. (Nec rationem patitur, nec æquitate mitigatur nec ulla prece flectitur, populus esuriens.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ, i, 18.

An empty stomach is not a good political adviser.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 107.

A hungry man is an angry man.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 13. (1659)

If thou be hungry, I am angry; let us go fight.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 65.

6 Oppress'd by two weak evils, age and hunger.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 32.

They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs,

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,

That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for rich men only: with these shreds

They vented their complainings.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 209.

7 Hunger that persuades to evil. (Malesuada fames.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 276.

8 Because of body's hunger are we born,
And by contriving hunger are we fed;
Because of hunger is our work well done,
As so are songs well sung, and things well said.

Desire and longing are the whips of God.

ANNA WICKHAM, Sehnsucht.

II—Hunger: The Best Sauce

See also Appetite

9 Hunger is the best sauce in the world. (La mejor salsa del mundo es la hambre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Hunger is the best Pickle.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

Nor do you Find fault with the sauce, keen hunger being the best.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Unnatural Combat. Act iii, sc. 1. (1639)

10 My more-having would be a sauce
To make me hunger more.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 81.

11 The best sauce for food is hunger and the best flavoring for drink thirst. (Cibi condimentum esse famen, potionis sitim.)

SOCRATES. (CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, sec. 90.)

Socrates said, the best sauce in the world for meats is to be hungry.

ERASMUS, Apothegms, 2. (Udall, tr., 1542.)

12 Make hunger thy sauce as a medicine for health.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Good Husbandry Lessons.

III—Hunger: Famine

13 All's good in a famine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

14 They that die by famine die by inches.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries. Psalm lix.

15 Famine ends famine.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

16 Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 69.

17 Famine can smile
On him who brings it food, and pass, with guile

Of thankful falsehood, like a courtier grey,
The house-dog of the throne; but many a mile

Comes Plague, a winged wolf, who loathes always

The garbage and the scum that strangers make her prey.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto x, st. 24.

18 Our stern foe
Had made a league with Famine.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. ii.

HUNTING

I—Hunting: Apothegms

<sup>1</sup> There is a passion for hunting something deeply implanted in the human breast.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 10.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

<sup>3</sup> He was a mighty hunter before the Lord; wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord.

Old Testament: Genesis, x, 9.

Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 61.

<sup>4</sup> What he hit is history,
What he missed is mystery.

THOMAS HOOD, Impromptu. In reference to a guest's shooting stories.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 32.

Back limped with slow and crippled pace,
The sulky leaders of the chase.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 10.

<sup>7</sup> Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 14.

A buck of the first head.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 10.

<sup>8</sup> Like a dog, he hunts in dreams.

<sup>9</sup> Oh, Sir Thomas Lucy,
Your venison's juicy.

Juicy is your venison;

Hence I apply my benison.

UNKNOWN. Old bit of doggerel, sometimes humorously attributed to Shakespeare, referring to Sir Thomas Lucy, who prosecuted Shakespeare for poaching.

II—Hunting: Its Pleasures

<sup>10</sup> The mellow autumn came, and with it came
The promised party, to enjoy its sweets.

The corn is cut, the manor full of game;

The pointer ranges, and the sportsman beats

In russet jacket;—lynx-like is his aim;

Full grows his bag, and wonderful his feats.

Ah, nut-brown partridges! Ah, brilliant pheasants!

And ah, ye poachers!—'Tis no sport for peasants.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 75.

<sup>11</sup> By perilous paths in coomb and dell,
The heather, the rocks, and the river-bed,
The pace grew hot, for the scent lay well,
And a runnable stag goes right ahead,
The quarry went right ahead—
Ahead, ahead, and fast and far;
His antlered crest, his cloven hoof,
Brow, bay and tray and three aloof,
The stag, the runnable stag.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Runnable Stag.

A stag of warrant, a stag, a stag,

A runnable stag, a kingly crop,

Brow, bay and tray the three on top,

A stag, a runnable stag.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Runnable Stag.

<sup>12</sup> The dusky night rides down the sky
And ushers in the morn:

The hounds all join in glorious cry,
The huntsman winds his horn;

And a-hunting we will go.

HENRY FIELDING, A-Hunting We Will Go.

<sup>13</sup> Soon as Aurora drives away the night,
And edges eastern clouds with rosy light,
The healthy huntsman, with the cheerful
horn,

Summons the dogs, and greets the dappled Morn.

JOHN GAY, Rural Sports. Canto ii, l. 93.

<sup>14</sup> Yet if once we efface the joys of the chase
From the land, and outroot the Stud,

Good-bye to the Anglo-Saxon race,
Farewell to the Norman blood!

A. L. GORDON, Ye Wearie Wayfarer. Fytte 7.

To brace the nerves, and stir the blood: . . .
Hygeia's sons with hound and horn,
And jovial cry awake the Morn.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 67.

<sup>16</sup> Oh, who will stay indoor, indoor,
When the horn is on the hill?
With the crisp air stinging, and the huntsmen singing,

And a ten-tined buck to kill!

RICHARD HOVEY, King Arthur: Hunting-Song.

<sup>17</sup> A wild bear chase didst never see?
Then thou hast lived in vain.

Thy richest bump of glorious glee
Lies desert in thy brain.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, The Bear Hunt. (1844)

<sup>18</sup> With a hey, ho, chevy!
Hark forward, hark forward, tantivy!
This day a stag must die!

JOHN O'KEEFFE, Czar Peter: Song. Act i, sc. 4.

1 Good and much company, and a good dinner; most of their discourse was about hunting, in a dialect I understand very little.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 22 Nov., 1663.

2 The chase I follow far,
'Tis mimicry of noble war.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 26.

3 The horn, the horn, the lusty horn
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 18.

4 Theseus: We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top

And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hippolyta: I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,

When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear . . .
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 113.

5 Rose-cheeked Adonis hied him to the chase; Hunting he loved, but love he laughed to scorn.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 3.

6 My hoarse-sounding horn
Invites thee to the chase, the sport of kings,
Image of war, without its guilt.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. i.

7 Come out, 'tis now September,
The hunter's moon's begun,
And through the wheaten stubble
Is heard the frequent gun.

UNKNOWN, All Among the Barley.

8 D'ye ken John Peel with his coat so gay?
D'ye ken John Peel at the break of the day?
D'ye ken John Peel when he's far, far away,
With his hounds and his horn in the morning?

UNKNOWN, John Peel. Old hunting song.

III—Hunting: Its Cruelty and Stupidity

9 Assassins find accomplices. Man's merit
Has found him three, the hawk, the hound, the ferret.

WILFRID SCAWEN BLUNT, Assassins.

10 For what were all these country patriots
born?

To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 14.

He thought at heart like courtly Chesterfield,
Who, after a long chase o'er hills, dales, bushes,
And what not, though he rode beyond all price,

Ask'd next day, "If men ever hunted twice?"
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 35.

11 And though the fox he follows may be tam'd,

A mere fox-follower never is reclaim'd.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 409.

Detested sport,
That owes its pleasures to another's pain.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 326.

12 Hunting has now an idea of quality joined to it and is become the most important business in the life of a gentleman. Anciently it was quite otherways. M. Fleury has severely remarked that this extravagant passion for hunting is a strong proof of our Gothic extraction, and shows an affinity of humour with the savage Americans.

DRYDEN, Preface to the Pastorals of Vergil.
Sometimes attributed to William Walsh.

13 The woods are made for the hunters of dreams,

The brooks for the fishers of song;

To the hunters who hunt for the gunless game

The streams and the woods belong.

SAM WALTER FOSS, Bloodless Sportsmen.

14 Wild animals never kill for sport. Man is the only one to whom the torture and death of his fellow creatures is amusing in itself.

J. A. FROUDE, Oceana: Passengers' Amusements.

15 Of horn and morn, and hark and bark,
And echo's answering sounds,

All poets' wit hath ever writ
In dog-rel verse of hounds.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt, l. 37.

Where folks that ride a bit of blood
May break a bit of bone.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt, l. 99.

The field kept getting more select;
Each thicket served to thin it.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt, l. 303.

16 Soe that courageous Hart doth fight
With Fate, and calleth up his might,
And standeth stout that he maye fall
Bravelye, and be avenged of all,
Nor like a Craven yeeld his Breath
Under the Jaws of Dogges and Death!

THOMAS HOOD, The Fall of the Deer.

17 It is very strange, and very melancholy, that the paucity of human pleasures should persuade us ever to call hunting one of them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 288.

Hunting was the labour of the savages of North America, but the amusement of the gentlemen of England.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (KEARSLEY, Johnsoniana, 606.)

1 He did not know that a keeper is only a poacher turned inside out and a poacher a keeper turned outside in.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 1.

2 To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish, and indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heaved forth such groans,

That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat

Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

I was a stricken deer that left the herd
Long since: with many an arrow deep infix'd
My panting side was charg'd, when I withdrew
To seek a tranquil death in distant shades.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 108.

A herd-abandoned deer, struck by the hunter's dart.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 33.

Fainting, breathless toil,
Sick seizes on his heart: he stands at bay, . . .
The big round tears run down his dappled face;
He groans in anguish.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 451.

3 Everybody can see that the people who hunt are the right people, and the people who don't are the wrong ones.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii.

4 When a man wants to murder a tiger he calls it sport: when the tiger wants to murder him
he calls it ferocity.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

5 Hunting their sport, and plundering was their trade;

In arms they ploughed, to battle still prepared:

Their soil was barren and their hearts were hard.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, ad fin. (Dryden, tr.)

you all?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 22.

12 And then this best and weakest woman bore
With such serenity her husband's woes,
Just as the Spartan ladies did of yore,
Who saw their spouses kill'd, and nobly chose

Never to say a word about them more.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 29.

Wedded she was some years, and to a man
Of fifty, and such husbands are in plenty;
And yet, I think, instead of such a ONE,
'Twere better to have two of five-and-twenty, . . .

Ladies, even of the most uneasy virtue,
Prefer a spouse whose age is short of thirty.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 62.

13 Until the hours of absence should run

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

<sup>6</sup> I should like to see any kind of a man, distinguishable from a gorilla, that some good and even pretty woman could not shape a husband out of.

<sup>8</sup> The husband is the last to know the dishonor of his house. (Dedecus ille domus sciet ultimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 342.

<sup>9</sup> Father to me thou art, and mother dear, And brother too, kind husband of my heart.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Monday before Easter.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex, Being so father'd and so husbanded?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 296.

<sup>10</sup> The lover in the husband may be lost.

GEORGE LYTTELTON, Advice to a Lady, l. 112.

There is only one real tragedy in a woman's life. The fact that her past is always her lover, and her future invariably her husband.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii.

<sup>11</sup> If you want a man's money, you should be willing to put up with his company.

JOHN COLE MCKIM, Husbands and Wives.

<sup>12</sup> God is thy law, thou mine: to know no more Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 637.

And to thy husband's will

Thine shall submit; he over thee shall rule.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 195.

With thee goes

Thy husband, him to follow thou art bound; Where he abides, think there thy native soil.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 290.

<sup>13</sup> Serve your husband as your master, and beware of him as a traitor. (Sers ton mari comme ton maître, Et t'en garde comme d'un traître.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. Quoted.

A. W. PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act ii.

<sup>15</sup> Well, if our author in the Wife offends, He has a Husband that will make amends: He draws him gentle, tender, and forgiving, And sure such kind good creatures may be living.

POPE, Epilogue to Jane Shore, l. 25.

No worse a husband than the best of men.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 131.

<sup>16</sup> Men, more divine, the masters of all these, Lords of the wide world and wild watery seas,

Indued with intellectual sense and souls, Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls, Are masters to their females, and their lords.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 20.

I will attend my husband, be his nurse, Diet his sickness, for it is my office.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v, sc. 1, l. 98.

That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care and duty.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 103.

<sup>17</sup> If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 67.

<sup>18</sup> What a taking was he in when your husband asked who was in the basket!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 192.

Your husband is in his old lunes again.

<sup>20</sup> Hero: My heart is exceeding heavy.

Margaret: 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero: Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Margaret: Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? . . . Is there any harm in "the heavier for a husband"?"

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 26.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,

And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince
Even such a woman oweth to her husband; . . .

I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace,

Or seek for rule, supremacy and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 2, l. 146.

I am thine husband—not a smaller soul,
Nor Lancelot, nor another.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 563.

The husband who desires to surprise is often very much surprised himself. (Mari qui veut surprendre est souvent fort surpris.)

VOLTAIRE, La Femme Qui a Raison. Act ii, sc. 2.

If he [the husband] takes a chance and returns home suddenly, he is the master, but it is imprudent and in bad taste, for he exposes himself to unhappy surprises.

(Si, par mégarde, Il se hazarde,
À rentrer chez lui tout à coup,
Il est le maître, Mais c'est peut-être
Imprudent et de mauvais goût;
Car il s'expose À . . . triste chose!)

HENRY MEILHAC AND LUDOVIC HALÉVY, La Belle Hélène. Act ii.

HYACINTH

If of thy mortal goods thou art bereft,
And from thy slender store two loaves alone to thee are left,

Sell one, and with the dole
Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul.

MOSLEH EDDIN SAADI, Gulistan: Garden of Roses.

If thou of fortune be bereft
And in thy store there be but left
Two loaves—sell one, and with the dole
Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul.

JAMES TERRY WHITE, From the Greek Anthology.

If thou hast a loaf of bread, sell half and buy the flowers of the narcissus; for bread nourisheth
the body, but the narcissus the soul.

MOHAMMED. (OSWALD CRAWFURD, Round the Calendar in Portugal, p. 114.)

Hearts starve as well as bodies: give us Bread, but give us Roses!

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Bread and Roses.

The hyacinth's for constancy wi' its unchanging blue.

BURNS, The Posie. St. 3.

Come, evening gale! the crimson rose
Is drooping for thy sighe of dew;
The hyacinthe woos thy kisse to close
In slumberre sweete its eye of blue.

GEORGE CROLY, Inscription for a Grotto.

Here hyacinths of heavenly blue
Shook their rich tresses to the morn.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Adventure of a Star.

And the hyacinth purple, and white, and blue,
Which flung from its bells a sweet peal anew
Of music so delicate, soft, and intense,
It was felt like an odour within the sense.

SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 25.

HYPOCRISY

I—Hypocrisy: Definitions

9
Your cold hypocrisy's a stale device,
A worn-out trick; would'st thou be thought in earnest?

Clothe thy feigned zeal in rage, in fire, in fury!

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 3.

The veil
Spun from the cobweb fashion of the times,
To hide the feeling heart.

MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of Imagination. Bk. ii, l. 147.

Of all villainy, there is none more base than that of the hypocrite, who, at the moment he is most false, takes care to appear most virtuous.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 41.

12
A hypocrite is in himself both the archer and the mark, in all actions shooting at his own praise or profit.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: The Hypocrite.

13
The only vice that cannot be forgiven is hypocrisy. The repentance of a hypocrite is itself hypocrisy.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 236.

There is some virtue in almost every vice, except hypocrisy: and even that, while it is a mockery of virtue, is at the same time a compliment to it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 274.

A hypocrite despises those whom he deceives, but has no respect for himself. He would make a dupe of himself, too, if he could.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 398.

1 He never used his arms against the stream, nor uttered the unfettered thoughts of his mind, nor devoted his life to the cause of truth.

2 JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 89.

2 When a man puts on a Character he is a stranger to, there's as much difference between what he appears, and what he is really in himself, as there is between a Vizor and a Face.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

One is never so ridiculous for the qualities he has as for those he pretends to have. (On n'est jamais si ridicule par les qualités que l'on a que par celles que l'on affecte d'avoir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 134.

3 Hypocrisy is a homage which vice pays to virtue. (L'hypocrisie est un hommage que le vice rend à la vertu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 218.

4 Affectation is an awkward and forced imitation of what should be genuine and easy, wanting the beauty that accompanies what is natural.

LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 66.

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 5.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 25.

6 For neither man nor angel can discern Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks Invisible, except to God alone.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 682.

7 Those who daub both sides of the wall. (Qui utrosque parietes linunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 39. The equivalent of being on both sides of the fence.

8 Your tongues are steeped in honey and milk, your hearts in gall and biting vinegar.

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2.

9 I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 227.

To beguile the time,
Look like the time; . . . look like the innocent flower,

But be the serpent under 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 63.

Away, and mock the time with fairest show;
False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 81.

10 I am a woman of the world, Hector, and I can assure you that if you will only take the trouble always to say the perfectly correct thing, you can do just what you like.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act i.

11 Face-flatterer and back-biter are the same.
And they, sweet soul, that most impute a crime

Are pronest to it.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 822.

12 How inexpressible is the meanness of being a hypocrite! how horrible is it to be a mischievous and malignant hypocrite.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Philosopher. Sec. i.

13 I hope you have not been leading a double life, pretending to be wicked, and being really good all the time. That would be hypocrisy.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii.

II—Hypocrisy: Apothegms

14 Great hypocrites are the real atheists.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Fortuna.

15 There be many wise men that have secret hearts, and transparent countenances.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

16 A sheep without, a wolf within.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1232.

17 Oh, for a forty-parson power to chant
Thy praise, Hypocrisy!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 34.

Be hypocritical, be cautious, be
Not what you seem but always what you see.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 86.

18 Till Cant cease, nothing else can begin.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch. 7.

It is now almost my sole rule of life to clear myself of cants and formulas, as of poisonous Nessus shirts.

CARLYLE, Letter to His Wife, 2 Nov., 1835.

My dear friend, clear your mind of cant. You may talk as other people do, . . . but don't think foolishly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 15 May, 1783.)

Sworn foe of Cant, he smote it down
 With trenchant wit unsparing,
 And, mocking, rent with ruthless hand
 The robe Pretence was wearing.
 J. G. WHITTIER, Randolph of Roanoke.

Great King of Cant!
 AMBROSE BIERCE, An Impostor. Referring to Andrew Carnegie.

 How cheerfully he seems to grin,
 How neatly spreads his claws,
 And welcomes little fishes in
 With gently smiling jaws!
 LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 2.

 Musical as the chime of tinkling rills,
 Weak to perform, though mighty to pretend.
 COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 14.

 Mr. Podsnap settled that whatever he put behind him he put out of existence. . . . Mr.
 Podsnap had even acquired a peculiar flourish of his right arm in often clearing the world of its most difficult problems, by sweeping them behind him.
 DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 11.
 Hence "Podsnappery."

 She looketh as butter would not melt in her mouth.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546);
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

 No man is a hypocrite in his pleasures.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1783.)

6
 Who could endure the Gracchi railing at sedition? (Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?)
 JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 24. That is: Who could listen to a man denouncing things which he does shamelessly himself?

 It is more difficult to disguise feelings which one has than to feign those which one has not. (Il est plus difficile de dissimuler les sentiments que l'on a que de feindre ceux que l'on n'a pas.)
 LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées.
 No. 559.

8
 He passed by on the other side.
 New Testament: Luke, x, 31.

 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.
 New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 24. The correct reading, used in the revised version is "strain out a gnat," the allusion being to straining wine lest insects should be inadvertently swallowed.

 I hate a bad man saying what is good. (Μισῶ πονηρόν, χρηστὸν εἶπαι λόγον.)
 MENANDER, Fragments. No. 767.

11
 Act as if I did not know it. (Faites comme si je ne le savais pas.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 19. The teacher of philosophy has remarked that of course M. Jourdain knows Latin, and the latter answers, "Of course; but explain it just as if I didn't."

 Who point, like finger-posts, the way
 They never go.
 THOMAS MOORE, Song: For the Poco-Curante Society.

13
 He is an extremely hypocritical man; a Greek of the lower empire.
 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, referring to Alexander
 I of Russia. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile,
 5 Dec., 1816.)

He has the smartness of an attorney's clerk, and the intrigues of a Greek of the lower empire.
 BENJAMIN DISRAELI, referring to Lord Palmerston. (Runnymede Letters, 1836.)

14
 The foolish, fashionable air
 Of knowing all and feeling nought.
 COVENTRY PATMORE, *The Angel in the House:
 Sahara*. Pt. iv.

 There Affectation, with a sickly mien,
 Shows in her cheek the roses of eighteen.
 POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iv, l. 31.

16
 He knows how much of what men paint themselves
 Would blister in the light of what they are.
 EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Ben Jonson Entertains a Man from Stratford.

17
 There are people who laugh to show their fine teeth; and there are those who cry to show their good hearts.
 JOSEPH ROUX, Méditations of a Parish Priest.
 Pt. ix, No. 51.

 At home he is a savage; abroad a saint. (Intra domum sævus est; foris mitis.)
 SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 10.

A saint abroad, and a devil at home.
 JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.
 See also WOMEN: SAINTS ABROAD.

 Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile,
 And cry "Content" to that which grieves my heart;
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 And frame my face to all occasions.
 SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l.
 182. See also SMILE: DECEITFUL SMILES.

'Tis too much prov'd—that with devotion's vis-age
 And pious action, we do sugar o'er
 The devil himself.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 46.

<sup>1</sup> Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 151.

III—Hypocrisy: The Whited Sepulchre

<sup>2</sup> An ill man is always ill, but he is worst of all when he pretends to be a saint. (Malus ubi bonum se simulat, tunc est pessimus.)

FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 28.

<sup>3</sup> God knows, I'm not the thing I should be,
Nor am I even the thing I could be,
But twenty times I rather would be

An atheist clean,
Than under gospel colours hid be
Just for a screen.
BURNS, Epistle to the Rev. John M'Math.

<sup>4</sup> There's nothing so absurd, or vain,
Or barbarous, or inhumane,
But if it lay the least pretence
To piety and godliness,
Or tender-hearted conscience,
And zeal for gospel-truths profess
Does sacred instantly commence.

SAMUEL BUTLER, On a Hypocritical Nonconformist. Pt. i, l. 1.

<sup>5</sup> He blam'd and protested, but join'd in the plan;

He shar'd in the plunder, but pitied the man.
COWPER, Pity for Poor Africans, l. 43.

<sup>6</sup> Built God a church, and laugh'd his word to scorn.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 688.

The cross on his breast and the devil in his heart.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4462.

Not he who scorns the Saviour's yoke
Should wear his cross upon the heart.

SCHILLER, The Fight with the Dragon. St. 24.

They set the sign of the cross over their outer doors, and sacrifice to their gut and their groin in their inner closets.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Impostura.

He hailed the power of Jesus' name
An' soaked 'em twelve per cent.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, Behind a Spire.

<sup>7</sup> You, too, take cobweb attitudes
Upon a plane of gauze!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 125.

<sup>8</sup> Thus 'tis with all: their chief and constant care

Is to seem everything but what they are.
GOLDSMITH, Epilogue to "The Sister", l. 25.

<sup>9</sup> A man may cry Church! Church! at ev'ry word,

With no more piety than other people—
A daw's not reckoned a religious bird

Because it keeps a-cawing from a steeple.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 171.

That little simile exactly paints

How sinners are despis'd by saints.

By saints!—the Hypocrites that ope heav'n's door

Obsequious to the sinful man of riches—

But put the wicked, naked, barelegg'd poor

In parish stocks instead of breeches.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 347.

<sup>10</sup> Inwardly base, but with an outward appearance of virtue. (Introrsum turpem, specio-sum pelle decora.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 45.

<sup>11</sup> Who pretend to be men of the austere pattern of Curius, and who live the life of Bac-chanals. (Qui Curios simulant, et Bacchanalia vivunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 3.

Far worse are those who denounce evil ways in the language of a Hercules; and after discoursing upon virtue, prepare to practise vice. (Sed peiores, qui talia verbis Herculis invadunt et de virtute locuti Clunem agitant.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 19.

For vice deceives, under the appearance of virtue, when sad in mien and austere in countenance and dress. (Fallit enim vitium, specie vir-tutis et umbra, Cum sit triste habitu vultuque et veste severum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 109.

<sup>12</sup> Some hypocrites and seeming mortified men, that held down their heads, were like the little images that they place in the very bowing of the vaults of churches, that look as if they held up the church, but are but puppets.

WILLIAM LAUD, Archbishop of Canterbury.
(FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 273.)

<sup>13</sup> Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 27.

After the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 5.

Publicans and sinners on the one side; Scribes and Pharisees on the other.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ix, l. 711.

Madam, 'twas a pious fraud, if it were one.
APHRA BEHN, Lucky Chance. Act v, sc. 7.

When pious frauds and holy shifts
Are dispensations and gifts.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1145.

It is with a pious fraud as with a bad action; it begets a calamitous necessity of going on.

THOMAS PAINE, Age of Reason. Pt. i.
The outworn rite, the old abuse,
The pious fraud transparent grown.
J. G. WHITTIER, The Reformer.

<sup>2</sup> The hypocrite had left his mask, and stood
In naked ugliness. He was a man
Who stole the livery of the court of heaven
To serve the devil in; in virtue's guise, Devoured the widow's house and orphan's bread;

In holy phrase, transacted villanies
That common sinners durst not meddle with.
ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii,
l. 615.

<sup>3</sup> With one hand he put
A penny in the urn of poverty,
And with the other took a shilling out.
ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii,
l. 632.

If you cannot make a speech,
Because you are a flat,
Go very quietly and drop
A button in the hat!

were sure;
His givings rare, save farthings to the poor.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 347.

<sup>5</sup> Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger; Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted;
Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 12.

With an auspicious and a dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 11.

<sup>6</sup> Thou simular man of virtue
That art incestuous.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 54.
Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 164.
Behold yond simpering dame, . . .
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to 't
With a more riotous appetite.

<sup>7</sup> O, 'tis the cunning livery of hell,
The damned'st body to invest and cover
In phrenzie guards!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc.
1, l. 95.

O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 285.

<sup>8</sup> The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart:
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 3, l. 99.

But then I sigh; and, with a piece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With old odd ends, stolen out of holy writ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 334.

<sup>9</sup> He is no less than a stuffed man.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 58.

<sup>10</sup> O, what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 36.

When devils will the blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 357.

virtue, . . .
He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 29.

<sup>12</sup> Knaves are men
That lute and flute fantastic tenderness,
And dress the victim to the offering up,
And paint the gates of Hell with Paradise,
And play the slave to gain the tyranny.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 113.

<sup>13</sup> A man I knew who liv'd upon a smile,
And well it fed him; he look'd plump and fair,
While rankest venom foam'd thro' every vein.
Living, he fawn'd on every fool alive;
And, dying, curs'd the friend on whom he liv'd.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 336.

ICE

1 In things that are tender and unpleasing, it is good to break the ice, by some whose words are of less weight, and to reserve the more weighty voice, to come in, as by chance.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

When I had but broke the ice of my affection, she fell over head and ears in love with me.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Love Tricks. Act iii, sc. 1.

To break the ice in making the first overture.

ALEMAN, Guzman, i, 173.

"If he would have the goodness to break the—in point of fact, the ice," said Cousin Feenix.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 61.

2 Yet all how beautiful! Pillars of pearl
Propping the cliffs above, stalactites bright
From the ice roof depending; and beneath, Grottoes and temples with their crystal spires

And gleaming columns radiant in the sun.

WILLIAM HENRY BURLEIGH, Winter.

3 Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni.

4 And ice, mast-high, came floating by
As green as emerald.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i.

5 In skating over thin ice our safety is in our speed.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

6 Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice.

From what I've tasted of desire,
I hold with those who favor fire.
But if it had to perish twice,
I think I know enough of hate
To say that for destruction ice
Is also great
And would suffice.

ROBERT FROST, Fire and Ice.

7 When it cracks, it bears; when it bends, it breaks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Of ice.

8 Trust not one night's ice.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 What a sea Of melting ice I walk on!

MASSINGER, Maid of Honour. Act iii, sc. 3.

10 O'er the ice the rapid skater flies,
With sport above and death below,
Where mischief lurks in gay disguise
Thus lightly touch and quickly go.

(Sur un mince cristal l'hiver conduit leurs pas,
Telle est de nos plaisirs la légère surface,
Glissez, mortels; n'appuyez pas!)

Three children sliding on the ice,

Upon a summer's day,

As it fell out, they all fell in,

The rest they ran away.

UNKNOWN, The Lamentation of a Bad Market. (1653)

IDEA

See also Mind, Thought

11 If the ancients left us ideas, to our credit be it spoken that we moderns are building houses for them.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Enterprise.

12 One of the greatest pains to human nature is the pain of a new idea.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Physics and Politics, p. 163.

13 Only the wise possess ideas; the greater part of mankind are possessed by them.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Miscellanies, p. 154.

14 The moment of finding a fellow-creature is often as full of mingled doubt and exultation as the moment of finding an idea.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Ch. 17.

15 God screens us evermore from premature ideas.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

16 The party of virility rules the hour, the party of ideas and sentiments rules the age.

EMERSON, Journal, 1864.

17 Ideas must work through the brains and the arms of good and brave men, or they are no better than dreams.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: American Civilization.

It is a lesson which all history teaches wise men to put trust in ideas, and not in circumstances.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

18 Olympian bards who sung
Divine ideas below,

Which always find us young

And always keep us so.

EMERSON, Ode to Beauty.

19 When we are exalted by ideas, we do not owe this to Plato, but to the idea, to which also Plato was debtor.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

1 Almost everyone knows this, but it has not occurred to everyone. (Sciunt plerique omnes, sed non omnibus hoc venit in mentem.)
ERASMUS, Epicureus.

2 A favourite theory is a possession for life.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 52.

3 Ideas are, in truth, forces. Infinite, too, is the power of personality. A union of the two always makes history.

HENRY JAMES, Charles W. Eliot, i, 235

4 An idea, to be suggestive, must come to the individual with the force of a revelation.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 113.

5 He who receives an idea from me, receives instruction himself without lessening mine; as he who lights his taper at mine receives light without darkening me.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 334.

6 That fellow seems to possess but one idea, and that is a wrong one.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1770.)

Mr. Kremlin himself was distinguished for ignorance, for he had only one idea, and that was wrong.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

7 To die for an idea: it is unquestionably noble. But how much nobler it would be if men died for ideas that were true!

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. v, p. 283.

8 General notions are generally wrong.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Wortley Montagu, 28 March, 1710.

General and abstract ideas are the source of the greatest errors of mankind. (Les idées générales et abstraites sont la source des plus grandes erreurs des hommes.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv.

9 There is no squabbling so violent as that between people who accepted an idea yesterday and those who will accept the same idea tomorrow.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalistici.

10 For an idea ever to be fashionable is ominous, since it must afterwards be always old-fashioned.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Words of Doctrine, 55.

11 This creature man, who in his own selfish affairs is a coward to the backbone, will fight for an idea like a hero.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii.

12 Early ideas are not usually true ideas.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. iii, ch. 2, sec. 110.

13 It's bad form to think, feel, or have an idea.
ALFRED SUTRO, The Walls of Jericho. Act i.

14 A nice man is a man of nasty ideas.
SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

15 Ten thousand great ideas filled his mind; But with the clouds they fled, and left no trace behind.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 59.

16 He had ideas about everything. He could no more help having ideas about everything than a dog can resist smelling at your heels.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. i, sec. 2.

17 Through thy idea, lo, the immortal reality! Through thy reality, lo, the immortal idea!
WALT WHITMAN, Thou Mother With Thy Equal Brood. Sec. 2.

18 Ideas are free. But when the author confines them to his study, they are like birds in a cage, which none but he can have a right to let fly.

SIR JOSEPH YATES, Judgment, Miller v. Taylor. (4 Burr. Pt. iv, p. 2379.)

IDEALS

19 Our ideals are our better selves.
A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Habits.

20 Still bent to make some port he knows not where,
Still standing for some false impossible shore.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Summer Night, l. 68.

21 Egeria! sweet creation of some heart
Which found no mortal resting-place so fair
As thine ideal breast!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 115.

22 Ah! would but one might lay his lance in rest,
And charge in earnest—were it but a mill.
AUSTIN DOBSON, Don Quixote.

23 An idealist is a person who helps other people to be prosperous.

HENRY FORD, on the witness stand at Mt. Clemens, Mich., in his libel suit against the Chicago Tribune, July, 1919.

24 Ideals are the world's masters.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: The Ideal Christ.

25 Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not. . . . Man never falls so low that he can see nothing higher than himself.

THEODORE PARKER, A Lesson for the Day.

SCHILLER, To Goethe, when the latter produced Voltaire's Mahomet.

<sup>2</sup> We have two lives about us,
Two worlds in which we dwell,
Within us and without us,
Alternate Heaven and Hell:—
Without, the somber Real,
Within, our heart of hearts,
The beautiful Ideal.

R. H. STODDARD, The Castle in the Air.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iii, l. 201.

IDLENESS

I—Idleness: Definitions

<sup>4</sup> Idleness is emptiness; the tree in which the sap is stagnant, remains fruitless.

HOSEA BALLOU, MS. Sermons.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 444. (1566)

Men must not be poor; idleness is the root of all evil; the world's wide enough, let 'em bustle.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

Idleness is the root of all mischief.

<sup>7</sup> Idleness is an appendix to nobility.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 6.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 July, 1749.

I look upon indolence as a sort of suicide; for the man is effectually destroyed, though the appetites of the brute may survive.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Feb., 1754.

<sup>9</sup> An idler is a watch that wants both hands; As useless if it goes as when it stands.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 681.

<sup>10</sup> He is idle that might be better employed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1919.

That man is idle who can do something better.

EMERSON.

<sup>11</sup> Idleness is the sepulchre of a living man.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Indolence.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Fall of Princes. Bk. ii, l. 2249. (c. 1440)

Sluggish idleness, the nurse of sin.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto iv, st. 18.

Idleness the parent of all vice.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Livest.

<sup>14</sup> In lazy apathy let Stoics boast
Their virtue fix'd: 'tis fix'd as in a frost;

Contracted all, retiring to the breast;

But strength of mind is Exercise, not Rest.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 101.

<sup>15</sup> Nothing is so certain as that the evils of idleness can be shaken off by hard work. (Nihilque tam certum est quam otii vitia negotio discuti.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 9.

<sup>16</sup> That ghostliest of all unrealities, the non-working man.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 17.

<sup>17</sup> Idleness is the greatest prodigality in the world; it throws away that which is invaluable in respect of its present use, and irreparable when it is past, being to be recovered by no power of art or nature.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

II—Idleness: Apothegms

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, his closing prescription for health of body and mind.

If you are idle, be not solitary; if you are solitary, be not idle.

CARLYLE,  Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 3.

<sup>20</sup> As idle as a painted ship
Upon a painted ocean.

<sup>22</sup> I live an idle burden to the ground.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 134. (Pope, tr.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11, l. 28. The English phrase is by Sir James Mackintosh,

Vindiciæ Gallicæ.

Disciplined inaction.

6 The unyok'd humour of your idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 219.

When on my three-foot stool I sit.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 89.

7 Their only labour was to kill time;

And labour dire it is, and weary woe.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 72.

8 I trow he was infect certeyn

With the faitour, or the fever lordeyn.

UNKNOWN. (HAZLITT, Early English Poetry, i, 93. c. 1500) Fever lurdien: laziness.

You have the palsy or eke the fever lurdien.

WILLIAM FULWOOD, Enemies of Idleness, 132.

Sick of the idles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 182.

III—Idleness: Busy Idleness

9 It is better to do nothing, than to be doing of nothing. (Otiosum esse quam nihil agere.)

ATILIUS. (PLINY, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 9.)

10 Wretched estate of men by fortune blest,
That being ever idle never rest.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Tears of Peace, l. 341.

11 Admirals, extoll'd for standing still,
Or doing nothing with a deal of skill.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 192.

12 I have spent my life laboriously doing nothing. (Vitam peridi laboricose agendo.)

GROTIUS. Quoted by him on his death-bed.

My life is lost in laboriously doing nothing. (Vitam peridi operse nihil agendo.)

JOSIAH WOODWARD, Fair Warnings to a Careless World, p. 97.

They'll do little

That shall offend you, for their chief desire
Is to do nothing at all, sir.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act ii, sc. 1.

14

A nation rushing hastily to and fro, busily employed in idleness. (Trepide concursans, occupata in otio.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 2.

Thus idly busy rolls their world away.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 256.

She went from opera, park, assembly, play,
To morning walks, and prayers three times a day;

To part her time 'twixt reading and bohea,
To muse, and spill her solitary tea,
Or o'er cold coffee trifle with the spoon,
Count the slow clock, and dine exact at noon.

POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount, l. 13.

15

They do nothing laboriously. (Operose nihil agunt.)

IV—Idleness: Sloth

19

Sloth is the tempter that beguiles, and expels from paradise.

20

The foul sluggard's comfort: "It will last my time."

THOMAS CARLYLE, Count Cagliostro: Flight Last.

Ever sick of the slothful guise,
Loath to bed and loath to rise.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 292. (1639)

'Tis the voice of the sluggard, I heard him complain,
"You have waked me too soon, I must slumber again";

As the door on its hinges, so he on his bed,
Turns his sides, and his shoulders, and his heavy head.

ISAAC WATTS, The Sluggard.

1 Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Way to Wealth. (1736)
Sloth makes all things difficult, but industry all things easy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Way to Wealth. (1736)

2 Sloth brings in all woe.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 424.

3 Sloth must breed a scab.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Sloth turns the edge of wit.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 126. (1579)

Sloth is a foe unto all virtuous deeds.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, Sloth.

Hog in sloth.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 95.

4 That shameful Siren, sloth, is ever to be avoided. (Vitanda est improba Siren Desidia.)

5 Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 6.

6 The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 13.

The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 16.

We excuse our sloth under the pretext of difficulty. (Difficultas patrocinia prætexitur segnitiæ.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i,
ch. 12.

7 No one has become immortal by sloth. (Ig-navia nemo immortalis factus.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. lxxxv, sec. 49.

For sluggard's brow the laurel never grows;
Renown is not the child of indolent repose.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto ii, st. 50.

See also under BOLDNESS.

8 Many faint with toil,
That few may know the cares and woe of sloth.

SEELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 116.

9 But when dread Sloth, the Mother of Doom, steals in,
And reigns where Labour's glory was to serve,

Then is the day of crumbling not far off.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Mother of Doom.

10 Sloth is the devil's pillow.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 306. (1669)

V—Idleness and Satan

11 Find some work for your hands to do, so that Satan may never find you idle. (Facito aliquid operis, ut semper te diabolus inveniat occupatum.)

Patrologiæ Cursus. Vol. xxii, p. 939.)

12 An idle person tempts the devil to tempt him.
RICHARD KINGSTON, Apoph. Curiosa, 57. (1709)

13 An idle brain is the devil's workshop.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 161.

14 Eschew the idle life,

Flee, flee from doing nought:

For never was there idle brain

But bred an idle thought.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, The Lover to Cupid for Mercy, l. 109.

15 In works of labour or of skill

I would be busy too;

For Satan finds some mischief still

For idle hands to do.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Idleness.

VI—Idleness: Its Pleasures

16 With ecstasies so sweet

As none can even guess,

Who walk not with the feet

Of joy in idleness.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Spring. Ode i, st. 10.

17 You should do nothing that did not absolutely please you. Be idle, be very idle! The habits of your mind are such that you will necessarily do much; but be as idle as you can.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Letter to Southey, 1799.

18 How various his employments whom the world

Calls idle; and who justly, in return,
Esteems that busy world an idler too!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 352.

19 God loves an idle rainbow,

No less than labouring seas.

RALPH HODGSON, A Wood Song.

20 It is impossible to enjoy idling thoroughly unless one has plenty of work to do.

3 That indolent but delightful condition of doing nothing. (Illud iners quidem, jucundum tamen nihil agere.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis. 9.

4 But see, while idly I stood looking on, I found the effect of love in idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 155.

5 There is one piece of advice, in a life of study, which I think no one will object to; and that is, every now and then to be completely idle,—to do nothing at all.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 19.

6 Extreme busyness, whether at school or college, kirk or market, is a symptom of deficient vitality; and a faculty for idleness implies a catholic appetite and a strong sense of personal identity.

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

7 The more characteristic American hero in the earlier day, and the more beloved type at all times, was not the hustler but the whittler.

MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times. Vol. iii, p. 297.

8 The sweetness of being idle. (Inertiæ dulcedo.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. The origin, perhaps, of the pseudo-Italian phrase, "Dolce far niente."

9 Other men have acquired fame by industry, but this man by indolence. (Utque alios industria, ita hunc ignavia ad famam protulerat.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 18. Referring to Caius Petronius.

So that what was indolence was called wisdom. (Ut quod segnitia erat, sapientia vocaretur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 49.

10 Life does not agree with philosophy: there is no happiness without idleness, and only the useless is pleasurable.

TCHERKHOV, Note-Books.

11 It is well to lie fallow for a while.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Recreation.

12 I am happiest when I am idle. I could live for months without performing any kind of labour, and at the expiration of that time I should feel fresh and vigorous enough to go right on in the same way for numerous more months.

ARTEMUS WARD, Natural History. Ch. 3.

13 I loafe and invite my soul,
I lean and loafe at my ease observing a spear of summer grass.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 1.

14 The lazy man gets round the sun
As quickly as the busy one.

R. T. WOMBAT, Quatrains.

VII—Idleness: Its Penalties

15 He slept beneath the moon,
He basked beneath the sun;
He lived a life of going-to-do,
And died with nothing done.

JAMES ALBERY, Epitaph Written for Himself.

16 Expect poison from the standing water.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

17 There is no greater cause of melancholy than idleness; "no better cure than business," as Rhasis holds.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

Idleness overthrows all.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 1.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. v, l. 430. See also under HOLIDAY.

19 All Nature seems at work. Slugs leave their lair—

The bees are stirring—birds are on the wing— . . .

And I the while, the sole unbusy thing, Nor honey make, nor pair, nor build, nor sing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Work Without Hope. St. 1.

20 A lazy man is necessarily a bad man; an idle is necessarily a demoralized population.

J. W. DRAPER, Thoughts on Future Civil Policy.

(Otiosus in otio animus nescit quid velit.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia: Chorus. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter on the Stamp Act, 11 July, 1765.

Trouble springs from idleness, and grievous toil from needless ease.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State, p. 174.

Old Testament: Habakkuk, xi, 17.

Alas! what boots it with incessant care
To tend the homely, slighted shepherd's trade,
And strictly meditate the thankless Muse?
Were it not better done, as others use,
To sport with Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair?

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 64.

<sup>5</sup> Both gods and men are angry with a man who lives in idleness, for in nature he is like the stingless drones who waste the labor of the bees, eating without working.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 303.

Not, like a cloistered drone, to read and doze,
In undeserving, undeserved repose.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, To the Rev. Dr. Ayscough.

A glorious lazy drone, grown fat with feeding
On others' toil.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>6</sup> What heart can think, or tongue express,
The harm that groweth of idleness?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Idleness.

NATHIEL HOWE, A Chapter of Proverbs.

<sup>8</sup> To be idle and to be poor have always been reproaches, and therefore every man endeavours with his utmost care to hide his poverty from others, and his idleness from himself.

Whose very languor is a punishment

Heavier than active souls can feel or guess.

AUBREY DE VERE, A Song of Faith.

<sup>18</sup> But how can he expect that others should Build for him, sow for him, and at his call

Love him, who for himself will take no heed at all?

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.
St. 6.

IDOLATRY

1 Four species of idols beset the human mind:
idols of the tribe; idols of the den; idols of the market; and idols of the theatre.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary
of the Second Part. Aphorism 39.

Mankind are an incorrigible race. Give them but bug-bears and idols—it is all that they ask.

HAZLITT, Collected Works. Vol. xi, p. 557.

2 God keeps a niche
In Heaven to hold our idols; and albeit
He brake them to our faces, and denied That our close kisses should impair their white,

I know we shall behold them raised, complete,

The dust swept from their beauty,—glorified,
New Memnons singing in the great God-light.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnet: Futurity.

3 Spurn every idol others raise: before thine own Ideal bow.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st.
20.

4 Her overpowering presence made you feel
It would not be idolatry to kneel.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 74.

Her spirit is devout, and burns
With thoughts averse to bigotry;
Yet she herself, the idol, turns

Our thoughts into idolatry.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Verses on Our Queen.

5 Ah, spare your idol! think him human still.
Charms he may have, but he has frailties too!

Dote not too much, nor spoil what ye admire.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 496.

6 There's a one-eyed yellow idol to the north of Khatmandu,

There's a little marble cross below the town,
There's a broken-hearted woman tends the grave of Mad Carew,

And the yellow god forever gazes down.

J. MILTON HAYES, The Green Eye of the Yellow God.

7 What though the spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle;

Though every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile:

In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strown;

The heathen, in his blindness,

Bows down to wood and stone.

REGINALD HEBER, From Greenland's Icy Mountains.

The 'eathen in 'is blindness bows down to wood an' stone;

'E don't obey no orders unless they is 'is own.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The 'Eathen.

Ev'n them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
When all our fathers worshipt stocks and stones.

MILTON, On the Late Massacre in Piedmont.

8 In that day a man shall cast his idols . . .
to the moles and to the bats.

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 20.

9 Yet, if he would, man cannot live all to this world. If not religious, he will be superstitious. If he worship not the true God, he will have his idols.

THEODORE PARKER, Critical and Miscellaneous
Writings: A Lesson for the Day.

10 Idolatry is in a man's own thoughts, not in the opinion of another.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk, p. 54.

11 The god of my idolatry.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 114.

She is the goddess of my idolatry.

FANNY BURNEX, Letter to Miss S. Burney, 5
July, 1778.

Was this the idol that you worship so?

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 144.

12 An idiot holds his bauble for a god.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 79.

'Tis mad idolatry

To make the service greater than the god.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 56.

13 He who slays a king and he who dies for him are alike idolaters.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

14 And taking . . . a crooked piece of wood,
and full of knots, hath carved it diiligently,
. . . and fashioned it to the image of a man;
Or made it like some vile beast, laying it over with vermilion; . . . and when he had made a convenient room for it, set it in a wall. . . . Then maketh he prayer for his goods, for his wife and children, and is not ashamed to speak to that which hath no life.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, xiii, 13-17.

Impudence is the bastard of ignorance.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 213. (1680)

4 Ignorance is the mother of devotion.
HENRY COLE, Dean of St. Paul's, Disputation with the Papists at Westminster, 31 March, 1559. (JEWEL, Works, Vol. iii, p. 1202.) Cole was one of the eight Romanist disputants at Westminster Abbey; BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, 4, l. (1621); JEREMY TAYLOR, To a Person Newly Converted to the Church of England, 1657.

Your ignorance is the mother of your devotion to me.

DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act i, sc. 2.

5 Ignorance and superstition ever bear a close,
and even a mathematical, relation to each other.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Jack Tier. Ch. 13. See also under SUPERSTITION.

6 If there are two things not to be hidden—love and a cough—I say there is a third, and that is ignorance, when once a man is obliged to do something besides wagging his head.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola.

7 Ignorance is the dominion of absurdity.
J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

8 The recipe for perpetual ignorance is: be satisfied with your opinions and content with your knowledge.

The tragedy of ignorance is its complacency.
ROBERT QUILLEN, in syndicated editorial, 1932.

Or the dull sneer of self-loved ignorance.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 4.

Ignorance and conceit go hand in hand.
The Talmud.

9 He that voluntarily continues in ignorance, is guilty of all the crimes which ignorance produces.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mr. W. Drummond, 13 Aug., 1766.

Ignorance is a voluntary misfortune.
UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 63. (1669)

10 I know no disease of the soul but ignorance:
. . . a pernicious evil, the darkener of man's life, the disturber of his reason, and common confounder of truth.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Ignorantia.

11 A man may live long, and die at last in ignorance of many truths which his mind was capable of knowing, and that with certainty.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. i, ch. 2.

But let a man know that there are things to be known, of which he is ignorant, and it is so much carved out of his domain of universal knowledge.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. No. 6.

12 The living man who does not learn, is dark, dark, like one walking in the night.

UNKNOWN, Ming-hsin pao-chien. (William Milne, tr., in the Indo-Chinese Gleaner, Aug., 1818.)

13 The common curse of mankind—folly and ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 30.

14 There is no darkness but ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 47.

There is no slavery but ignorance.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

15 Blind and naked Ignorance

Delivers brawling judgments, unashamed,
On all things all day long.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 662.

16 For thus the saying goes, and I hold so:
Ignorance only is true wisdom's foe.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt. Bk. ii, sat. 1. (1613)

17 I know that the multitude walk in darkness.
I would put into each man's hand a lantern, to guide him; and not have him set out upon his journey depending for illumination on abortive flashes of lightning, or the coruscations of transitory meteors.

WORDSWORTH, Letter to Matthew.

IV—Ignorance of Ignorance

<sup>5</sup>
To be ignorant of one's ignorance is the malady of the ignorant.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Discourse.
See also KNOWLEDGE: ITS LIMITATIONS.

With Ignorance wage eternal war, to know thyself for ever strain,
Thine ignorance of thine ignorance is thy fiercest foe, thy deadliest bane;
That blunts thy sense, and dulls thy taste; that deafs thine ears, and blinds thine eyes;
Creates the thing that never was, the Thing that ever is defies.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st. 14.

<sup>6</sup>
I am not ashamed to confess that I am ignorant of what I do not know. (Nec me pudet fateri nescire quod nesciam.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 60.

<sup>7</sup>
We have become increasingly and painfully aware of our abysmal ignorance. No scientist, fifty years ago, could have realized that he was as ignorant as all first-rate scientists now know themselves to be.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 17.

<sup>8</sup>
Content, if hence th' unlearn'd their wants may view,

<sup>9</sup>
We strip illusion of her veil;
We vivisect the nightingale
To probe the secret of his note.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Realism.

<sup>10</sup>
But time strips our illusions of their hue,
And one by one in turn, some grand mistake
Casts off its bright skin yearly, like a snake.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 21.

<sup>11</sup>
I drink the wine of aspiration and the drug of illusion. Thus I am never dull.
JOHN GALSWORTHY, The White Horn Mountain.

Impell'd with steps unceasing to pursue
Some fleeting good, that mocks me with the view;
That, like the circle bounding earth and skies,
Allures from far, yet, as I follow, flies.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 25.

<sup>13</sup>
Death only grasps; to live is to pursue,—
Dream on! there's nothing but illusion true!
O. W. HOLMES, The Old Player.

Feeling is deep and still; and the word that floats on the surface
Is as the tossing buoy, that betrays where the anchor is hidden.
Therefore trust to thy heart, and to what the world calls illusions.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 2, l. 112.

<sup>14</sup>
Rob the average man of his life-illusion, and you rob him of his happiness at the same stroke.

HENRIK IBSEN, The Wild Duck. Act v.

<sup>15</sup>
Better a dish of illusion and a hearty appetite for life, than a feast of reality and indigestion therewith.

H. A. OVERSTREET, The Enduring Quest, p. 197.

<sup>16</sup>
Nothing can justly be called an illusion which is a permanent and universal human experience.

J. C. POWYS, The Complex Vision, p. 352.

<sup>17</sup>
And here we wander in illusions;
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 42.

<sup>18</sup>
I have, alas, only one illusion left, and that is the Archbishop of Canterbury.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, ch. 9, p. 231.)

<sup>19</sup>
Don't part with your illusions. When they are gone, you may still exist, but you have ceased to live.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

I—Immortality: Definitions

<sup>13</sup> Immortality is the bravest gesture of our humanity toward the unknown. It is always a faith, never a demonstration.

GATUS GLENN ATKINS. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 47.)

<sup>14</sup> Immortality is a great affirmation of the soul of man.

HUGH BLACK. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 45.)

<sup>15</sup> There is nothing strictly immortal, but immortality.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v,
sec. 12.

<sup>16</sup> That which is the foundation of all our hopes and of all our fears; all our hopes and fears which are of any consideration: I mean a Future Life.

JOSEPH BUTLER, Analogy of Religion.

<sup>17</sup> Immortality is the glorious discovery of Christianity.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Immortality.

<sup>18</sup> Immortality—twin sister of Eternity.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: The Way to Grow Old.

1 The idea of immortality . . . will continue to ebb and flow beneath the mists and clouds of doubt and darkness as long as love kisses the lips of death. It is the rainbow—Hope, shining upon the tears of grief.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, The Ghosts.

2 Belief in the future life is the appetite of reason.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Marcus Tullius and Quintus Cicero.

3 There is no more mystery or miracle or supernaturalness . . . in the wholly unproved fact of immortality than there is in the wholly unexplainable fact of life or in the unimaginable fact of the universe.

HOWARD LEE MCBAIN, Address, Columbia University, 7 Jan., 1934.

II—Immortality: Apothegms

4 Thus God's children are immortal whiles their Father hath anything for them to do on earth.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. ii, cen. 8.

Men are immortal till their work is done.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, Letter, March, 1862, describing the death of Bishop Mackenzie.

Man is immortal till his work is done.

JAMES WILLIAMS, Sonnet: Ethandune. (See The Guardian, 17 Nov., 1911.)

5 They had finished her own crown in glory, and she couldn't stay away from the coronation.

THOMAS GRAY, Enigmas of Life.

6 Work for immortality if you will; then wait for it.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Patience.

7 From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead, there comes no word; but in the night of death Hope sees a star, and listening Love can hear the rustle of a wing.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Tribute to Eben C. Ingersoll.

8 He ne'er is crowned

With immortality, who fears to follow
Where airy voices lead.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. ii, l. 211.

9 All men deserve to be saved, but he above all deserves immortality who desires it passionately and even in the face of reason.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 265.

10 The universe is a stairway leading nowhere unless man is immortal.

E. Y. MULLINS. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 199.)

11 All men desire to be immortal.

13 The cry of the human for a life beyond the grave comes from that which is noblest in the soul of man.

HENRY VAN DYKE. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 68.)

14 He saw wan Woman toil with famished eyes;
He saw her bound, and strove to sing her free.

He saw her fall'n; and wrote "The Bridge of Sighs";

And on it crossed to immortality.

WILLIAM WATSON, Hood.

15 He sins against this life, who slights the next.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 399.

But if man loses all, when life is lost,
He lives a coward, or a fool expires.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 199.

III—Immortality: Belief

16 My flesh shall rest in hope.

New Testament: Acts, ii, 26.

Immortal Hope dispels the gloom!

An angel sits beside the tomb.

SARAH FLOWER ADAMS, The Mourners Came at Break of Day.

On the cold cheek of Death smiles and roses are blending,

And Beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit. Last lines.

It must be so,—Plato, thou reason'st well!—

Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?

Or whence this secret dread, and inward horror,
Of falling into naught? Why shrinks the soul
Back on herself, and startles at destruction?

'T is the divinity that stirs within us;

'T is Heaven itself that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

17 Singly they are mortal, collectively they are immortal. (Singillatim mortales; cunctum perpetui.)

APULEIUS, De Deo Socratis.

18 No, no! The energy of life may be Kept on after the grave, but not begun;

And he who flagg'd not in the earthly strife,
From strength to strength advancing—only
he,

His soul well-knit, and all his battles won,
Mounts, and that hardly, to eternal life.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Immortality.

19 Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust, in sure and certain hope of the resurrection.

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead.

Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

1 As to immortality, my conviction stands thus: If there be anything in me that is of permanent worth and service to the universe, the universe will know how to preserve it. Whatsoever in me is not of permanent worth and service, neither can nor should be preserved.

HORACE JAMES BRIDGES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 176.)

2 There is surely a piece of Divinity in us, something that was before the elements, and owes no homage to the sun.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 11.

3 I go to prove my soul!
I see my way as birds their trackless way.
I shall arrive! what time, what circuit first,
I ask not: but unless God send his hail
Or blinding fireballs, sleet or stifling snow,
In some time, his good time, I shall arrive.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. i.

If I stoop
Into a dark tremendous sea of cloud,
It is but for a time; I press God's lamp
Close to my breast; its splendour, soon or late,
Will pierce the gloom: I shall emerge one day.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

Unfettered to the secrets of the stars
In thy good time.

JOHN DRINKWATER, A Prayer.

4 Fool! All that is, at all,
Lasts ever, past recall;
Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure:

What entered into thee,
That was, is, and shall be:
Time's wheel runs back or stops; Potter and clay endure.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 27.

And I shall thereupon
Take rest, ere I be gone
Once more on my adventure brave and new.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 14.

5 When mortal man resigns his breath,
And falls, a clod of clay,
The soul immortal wings its flight
To never-setting day.

MICHAEL BRUCE, The Complaint of Nature.

6 Cold in the dust this perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once shall never die!

That spark unburied in its mortal frame,
With living light, eternal, and the same.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope.
Canto ii, l. 429.

7 I laugh, for hope hath happy place with me,
If my bark sinks, 'tis to another sea.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, A Poet's Hope.

8 If I err in my belief that the souls of men are immortal, I gladly err, nor do I wish this error, in which I find delight, to be wrested from me. (Si in hoc erro, qui animos hominum immortales esse credam, libenter erro, nec mihi hunc errorem, quo delector, dum vivo, extorqueri volo.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xxiii, sec. 85.

Whatever that may be which feels, which has knowledge, which wills, which has the power of growth, it is celestial and divine, and for that reason it must of necessity be eternal. (Quicquid est illud, quod sentit, quod sapit, quod vult, quod viget, cœleste et divinum, ob eamque rem æternum sit necesse est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 27, sec. 66.

9 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 53.

They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 25.

10 Though life's valley be a vale of tears,
A brighter scene beyond that vale appears.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 881.

11 Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long-continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul, the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful.

CHARLES DARWIN, Life and Letters.

12 If then all souls, both good and bad do teach
With general voice, that souls can never die;

'Tis not man's flattering gloss, but Nature's speech,

Which, like God's oracles can never lie.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 30, st. 81.

13 For I never have seen, and never shall see, that the cessation of the evidence of existence is necessarily evidence of the cessation of existence.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 40.

14 Or ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 6, 7.

<sup>1</sup> I believe in immortality fundamentally, not because I vehemently crave it for myself as an individual, but because its denial seems to me to land the entire race in a hopeless situation and to reduce philosophy to a counsel of despair.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 12.)

<sup>2</sup> Here is my Creed. I believe in one God, Creator of the Universe. That he governs it by his Providence. That he ought to be worshipped. That the most acceptable service we render him is doing good to his other children. That the soul of Man is immortal, and will be treated with justice in another life respecting its conduct in this.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Ezra Stiles, 9 March, 1790.

<sup>3</sup> I am immortal! I know it! I feel it! Hope floods my heart with delight! Running on air, mad with life, dizzy, reeling, Upward I mount—faith is sight, life is feeling,

Hope is the day-star of might!

MARGARET WITTER FULLER, Dryad Song.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 30, l. 6.

<sup>5</sup> Let us not be uneasy then about the different roads we may pursue, as believing them the shortest, to that our last abode, but following the guidance of a good conscience, let us be happy in the hope that by these different paths we shall all meet in the end.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 198.

<sup>6</sup> And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.

Old Testament: Job, xix, 26.

This is the promise that He hath promised us, even eternal life.

New Testament: I John, ii, 25.

<sup>17</sup> This life is but the passage of a day, This life is but a pang and all is over; But in the life to come which fades not away Every love shall abide and every lover.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Saints and Angels.

1 As the mother's womb holds us for ten months, making us ready, not for the womb itself, but for life, just so, through our lives, we are making ourselves ready for another birth. . . . Therefore look forward without fear to that appointed hour—the last hour of the body, but not of the soul. . . . That day, which you fear as being the end of all things, is the birthday of your eternity.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cii, sec. 23.

2 We have passed Age's icy caves,

9 God created man to be immortal, and made him to be an image of his own eternity.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 23.

10 O joy! that in our embers
Is something that doth live.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 133.

11 Though inland far we be,
Our Souls have sight of that immortal sea
Which brought us hither.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 166.

We see by the glad light
And breathe the sweet air of futurity;
And so we live, or else we have no life.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 24.

High sacrifice, and labour without pause,
Even to the death:—else wherefore should the eye

Of man converse with immortality?

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 14.

12 Immortal! ages past, yet nothing gone!
Morn without eve! a race without a goal!
Unshor'ten'd by progression infinite!
Futurity for ever future! Life
Beginning still, where computation ends!
'Tis the description of a Deity!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 542.

Still seems it strange, that thou shouldst live forever?

Is it less strange, that thou shouldst live at all?
This is a miracle; and that no more.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1407.

IV—Immortality: Doubt

13 And then he thinks he knows
The Hills where his life rose,
And the Sea where it goes.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Buried Life, l. 96.

Stern law of every mortal lot!
Which man, proud man, finds hard to bear,
And builds himself I know not what
Of second life, I know not where.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Geist's Grave.

14 Fish say, they have their Stream and Pond;
But is there anything Beyond?

RUPERT BROOKE, Heaven.

1 As for a future life, every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities.

CHARLES DARWIN, Life and Letters.

While Reason sternly bids us die, Love longs for life beyond the grave:

Our hearts, affections, hopes and fears for Life-to-be shall ever crave.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 5.

2 But ask not bodies (doomed to die),
To what abode they go;

Since knowledge is but sorrow's spy,
It is not safe to know.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, The Just Italian.
Act v, sc. 1.

3 Personal immortality may be a fact, but we have no shred of evidence, one way or another.

FRANKLIN H. GIDDINGS. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 114.)

Thou canst not prove thou art immortal—no,
Nor yet that thou art mortal.

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 62.

4 Is there beyond the silent night
An endless day?

Is death a door that leads to light?
We cannot say.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Declaration of the Free.

5 If a man die, shall he live again?

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 14.

6 But blind to former as to future fate,
What mortal knows his pre-existent state?

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 47.

7 A future life is a matter of faith or presumption; it is a prophetic hypothesis regarding occult existences.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Reason in Religion. Vol. iii, p. 13.

8 What shall become of man so wise,
When he dies?

None can tell

Whether he goes to heaven or hell.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Lycophron.

9 Man's ignorance as to what will become of him after he dies never disturbs a noble, a truly religious soul.

W. M. SLATER, Ethical Religion, p. 40.

10 Until that immortality of the individual is irrefragably demonstrated, the sweet, the immeasurably precious hope of ending, with this life, the ache and languor of existence, remains open to burdened human personalities.

J. A. SYMONDS, Letter to Henry Sidgwick.

11 Ah, Christ, that it were possible,
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, l. 153.

12 And can eternity belong to me,
Poor pensioner on the bounties of an hour?
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 66.

13 Shall man alone, for whom all else revives,
No resurrection know? shall man alone,
Imperial man! be sown in barren ground,
Less privileg'd than grain, on which he feeds?
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 704.

V—Immortality: Unbelief

14 It seems nobler to me to hide one's self and one's nudity, than to ask for anything more.

BJÖRNSTJERNE BJÖRNSON. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 115.)

15 Whitman once said to me that he would as soon hope to argue a man into good health as to argue him into a belief in immortality. He said he knew it was so without proof; but I never could light my candle at his great torch.

JOHN BURROUGHS. (BARRUS, Life and Letters.)

16 Suns may rise and set; we, when our short day has closed, must sleep on during one perpetual night.

(Soles occidere et redire possunt;
Nobis cum semel occidit brevis lux,
Nox est perpetua una dormienda.)

CATULLUS, Ode. Ode v, l. 4.

17 The origin of the absurd idea of immortal life is easy to discover; it is kept alive by hope and fear, by childish faith, and by cowardice.

CLARENCE DARROW. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 111.)

I do not believe in immortality and have no desire for it. The belief in it issues from the puerile egos of inferior men.

H. L. MENCKEN. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 35.)

Life is pleasant and I have enjoyed it, but I have no yearning to clutter up the Universe after it is over.

H. L. MENCKEN. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 114.)

18 Human society may most wisely seek justice and right in this world without depending on any other world to redress the wrongs of this.

CHARLES W. ELIOT. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 108.)

Other world! There is no other world! Here or nowhere is the whole fact.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

<sup>1</sup> Lo, in my heart I hear, as in a shell,
The murmur of the world beyond the grave,
Distinct, distinct, though faint and far it be.
Thou fool; this echo is a cheat as well,—
The hum of earthly instincts; and we crave
A world unreal as the shell-heard sea.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Sea-Shell Murmurs.

<sup>2</sup> The thought of life that ne'er shall cease
Has something in it like despair.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i, l. 42.

<sup>3</sup> His last day places man in the same state as before he was born; nor after death has the body or soul any more feeling than they had before birth.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. lvi,
sec. 1.

<sup>4</sup> To desire immortality is to desire the eternal perpetuation of a great mistake.

SCHOPENHAUER, The World as Will. Vol. ii, p.
561.

<sup>5</sup> After death there is nothing and death itself is nothing, the final goal of a course full swiftly run. (Post mortem nihil est ipsaque mors nihil, Velocis spatii meta novissima.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 397.

Dost ask where thou shalt lie when death has claimed thee? Where the unborn lie. (Quæris quo jaceas post obitum loco? Quo non nata jac-cent.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 407.

<sup>6</sup> If you wish to live forever you must be wicked enough to be irretrievably damned, since the saved are no longer what they were,
and in hell alone do people retain their sinful nature: that is to say, their individuality.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

If some devil were to convince us that our dream of perpetual immortality is no dream but a hard fact, such a shriek of despair would go up from the human race as no other conceivable horror could provoke. . . . What man is capable of the insane self-conceit of believing that an eternity of himself would be tolerable even to himself?

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

<sup>7</sup> This little life is all we must endure,
The grave's most holy place is ever sure,
We fall asleep, and never wake again;
Nothing is of us but the mouldering flesh,
Whose elements dissolve and merge afresh
In earth, air, water, plants, and other men.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. xiv.

<sup>8</sup> I am a temporary enclosure for a temporary purpose; that served, my skull and teeth, my idiosyncrasy and desire, will disperse, I believe, like the timbers of a booth after a fair.

H. G. WELLS, First and Last Things.

VI—Immortality and the Soul

<sup>9</sup> The soul secured in her existence, smiles
At the drawn dagger, and defies its point.
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself Grow dim with age, and Nature sink in years;

But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the wars of elements,
The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Awake, my soul! stretch every nerve,
And press with vigour on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

PHILIP DODDRIDGE, Zeal and Vigour in the Christian Race.

<sup>11</sup> Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit! rest thee now!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Dirge.

Dust, to its narrow house beneath!
Soul, to its place on high!
They that have seen thy look in death
No more may fear to die.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Dirge.

<sup>12</sup> Crocus and cowslip from earth's riven tomb Flower in the sun; but thou, O soul, shalt bloom,

Waked by the Star of that perpetual Spring,
Beyond the seed-time and the harvesting.

THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Quatrains.

<sup>13</sup> No, no, I'm sure,
My restless spirit never could endure
To brood so long upon one luxury,
Unless it did, though fearfully, espy
A hope beyond the shadow of a dream.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 853.

<sup>14</sup> Either the soul is immortal and we shall not die, or it perishes with the flesh, and we shall not know that we are dead. Live, then, as if you were eternal.

ANDRÉ MAUROIS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 53.)

<sup>15</sup> Who, as they sung, would take the prison'd soul
And lap it in Elysium.

MILTON, Comus, l. 256.

<sup>16</sup> The soul, uneasy and confin'd from home,
Rests and expatiates in a life to come.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 97.

<sup>1</sup> Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 14, l. 51.

<sup>2</sup> I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 67.

<sup>3</sup> I swear I think now that everything without exception has an eternal soul!

The trees have, rooted in the ground! the weeds of the sea have! the animals!

WALT WHITMAN, To Think of Time.

IMPERIALISM

<sup>4</sup> The burning issue of imperialism growing out of the Spanish War involves the very existence of the Republic and the destruction of our free institutions. We regard it as the paramount issue of the campaign.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Guildhall, London, 19 Jan., 1904.

<sup>6</sup> So that Lancashire merchants whenever they like

Can water the beer of a man in Klondike,
Or poison the beer of a man in Bombay;
And that is the meaning of Empire Day.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Songs of Education.

<sup>7</sup> My idea of anti-imperialism is opposition to the fashion of shooting everybody who doesn't speak English.

RICHARD CROKER, Interview, during 1900 campaign.

<sup>8</sup> I do not share in the apprehension held by many as to the danger of governments becoming weakened and destroyed by reason of their extension of territory . . . Rather do I believe that our Great Maker is preparing the world, in His own good time, to become one nation, speaking one language, and when armies and navies will no longer be required.

U. S. GRANT, Second Inaugural, 4 March, 1873.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Mason and Slidell.

<sup>10</sup> The mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Letter to General Otis, 21 Dec., 1898.

<sup>11</sup> We have bought ten million Malays at two dollars a head unpicked, and nobody knows what it will cost to pick them.

THOMAS B. REED, referring to the purchase of the Philippines. (ROBINSON, Life.)

<sup>12</sup> With a hero at head, and a nation
Well gagged and well drilled and well cowed,

And a gospel of war and damnation,
Has not Empire a right to be proud?

SWINBURNE, A Word for the Country. St. 14.

<sup>13</sup> Nerva has united two things long incompatible, Empire and liberty. (Nerva Cæsar res olim dissociabilis miscuerit, principatum ac libertatem.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. Cicero has "Libertem imperiumque." (Philippicæ, iv, 4.)

Here the two great principles, Imperium et libertas, res olim insociabiles (saith Tacitus), began to encounter each other.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL, Divi Britannici, p. 349. (1675)

One of the greatest Romans, when asked what were his politics replied, "Imperium et libertas." That would not make a bad program for a British Ministry.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Mansion House, London, 10 Nov., 1879.

IMPOSSIBILITY

<sup>14</sup> You cannot make a crab walk straight. (Οὐποτε ποιήσεις τὸν καρκίνον ὀρθὰ βαδίζειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1083.

<sup>15</sup> It is a disease of the soul to be enamoured of things impossible of attainment.

BIAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias. Bk. i, 86.)

<sup>16</sup> It is not a lucky word, this same impossible; no good comes of those that have it so often in their mouth.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. 3, ch. 10.

<sup>17</sup> There is no obligation to attempt the impossible. (Impossibilium nulla obligatio est.)

CELSUS, Alethes Logos.

A wise man never Attempts impossibilities.

MASSINGER, The Renegado. Act i, sc. 1.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 32, sec. 118.

<sup>19</sup> Consider nothing, before it has come to pass, as impossible. (Nihil, ante quam evenierit, non evenire posse arbitrari.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 14, sec. 30.

And what's impossible, can't be,
And never, never comes to pass.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Maid of the Moor.

Apparently there is nothing that cannot happen.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. 1, p. 91.

I think and think on things impossible,
Yet love to wander in that golden maze.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act iii, sc. 1.

Hope not for impossibilities.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Of Expecting Preferment.

To believe a business impossible is the way to make it so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

To the timid and hesitating everything is impossible because it seems so.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 16.

Impossible is a word which I never say.
(Impossible est un mot que je ne dis jamais.)

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Malice pour Malice.
(1793)

"It is not possible," you write me? That is not French. ("Ce n'est pas possible," m'écrivez-vous?
Cela n'est pas français.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Letter to Lemarois, 9
July, 1813. Usually quoted, "Le mot 'impossible' n'est pas français."

Impossibilities recede as experience advances.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Nothing is impossible to a willing heart.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4.

Few things are impossible to diligence and skill.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 12.

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will.

MIRABEAU, (EMERSON, Considerations by the Way.)

Nothing is impossible to a valiant heart. (À cœur vaillant rien d'impossible.)

Motto of JEANNE D'ALBRET of Navarre, mother of Henry IV, and adopted by him as his own device.

Do not think that what is difficult for thee to master is impossible for man; but if a thing is possible and proper to man, deem it attainable by thee.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, sec. 19.

You bid me to number the waves of the sea. (Oceani fluctus me numerare jubes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 34, l. 2.

You tell me to strip the clothes off a naked man.
(Nudo detrahare vestimenta me jubes.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 92. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbering sands and drinking oceans dry.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 145.

Everything will be accomplished which I once believed impossible. (Omnia jam fient, fieri quæ posse negabam.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 7.

To blow and to swallow at the same time is not easy; I cannot at the same time be here and also there. (Simul flare sorbereque haud factu facilest. Ego hic esse et illic simitu hau potui.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 791. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

We cannot be here and there too.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5,
l. 15.

I will strive with things impossible.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 325.

I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 38.

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 113.

Make not impossible

That which but seems unlike.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc.
1, l. 51.

Nothing is unnatural that is not physically impossible.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 1.

Only he who attempts the absurd is capable of achieving the impossible.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 104.

Th' inverted pyramid can never stand.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1302.

IMPULSE

A thing of impulse and a child of song.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 24.

I am the very slave of circumstance
And impulse,—borne away with every breath!

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act iv, sc. 1.

The pupil of impulse.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 45.

What is now reason was formerly impulse.
(Quod nunc ratio est, impetus ante fuit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 10.

Impulse manages all things badly. (Male cuncta ministrat Impetus.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. x, l. 704.

Mistrust first impulses, they are always good.

TALLEYRAND. (Biographie Universelle.)

μέλλοντας.)
EURIPIDES, Heraclidæ, l. 722. Ares, the War-god.

<sup>7</sup> Lose this day loitering 'twill be the same story
Tomorrow, and the next, more dilatory;
Each indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting o'er lost days.
GOETHE, Faust: Prelude at the Theater. (Auster, tr.)

<sup>8</sup> And while I at length debate and beat the bush,
There shall step in other men and catch the birds.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3.

<sup>9</sup> How long halt ye between two opinions.
Old Testament: I Kings, xviii, 21.

<sup>10</sup> I mean a kin' o' hangin' roun' an' settin' on a fence.
J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii,
No. 3.

<sup>11</sup> And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.
New Testament: Luke, ix, 62.

<sup>12</sup> Time was, I shrank from what was right
From fear of what was wrong;

I would not brave the sacred fight,
Because the foe was strong.

But now I cast that finer sense
And sorer shame aside:
Such dread of sin was indolence,
Such aim at Heaven was pride.
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Sensitiveness.

<sup>13</sup> Now this, now that way torn, Quintus, in doubt
And fear of doing ill, does nothing well.
ETIENNE PASQUIER, Epigrammata, ii, 63.

Act ii.

<sup>16</sup> Fain would I but dare not; I dare, and yet I may not;
I may, although I care not for pleasure when
I play not.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Lover's Verses. See also under OPPORTUNITY.

<sup>17</sup> Like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 41.

Now, whether it be
Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on the event,
A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,
And ever three parts coward, I do not know
Why yet I live to say "This thing's to do";
Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do't.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 39.

<sup>18</sup> That we would do,
We should do when we would.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 119.

What thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holly; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 21.

INDEPENDENCE

1 Let every vat stand upon its own bottom.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Dialogue, 65. (1564)

Sloth said, Yet a little more sleep; and Presumption said, Every vat must stand upon his own bottom.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

Every tub must stand upon its bottom.

CHARLES MACKLIN, The Man of the World. Act i, sc. 2.

2 To catch Dame Fortune's golden smile,

Assiduous wait upon her;

And gather gear by ev'ry wile

That's justified by honour;

Not for to hide it in a hedge,

Nor for a train-attendant,

But for the glorious privilege

Of being independent.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend.

A little in one's own pocket is better than much in another man's purse.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

3 I came hither [to Craigenputtoch] solely with the design to simplify my way of life and to secure the independence through which I could be enabled to remain true to myself.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to Goethe, 1828.

4 Every man for himself, and God for us all.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. See also SELFISHNESS: APOTHEGMS.

5 Whoso would be a man, must be a Non-conformist.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

6 That independence Britons prize too high, Keeps man from man, and breaks the social tie.

Paddle your own canoe.

UNKNOWN, Paddle Your Own Canoe. Published anonymously in the Editor's Drawer of Harper's Monthly for May, 1854, with this prefatory note: "They have a very expressive term at the West, in speaking of a young man who would be the architect of his own fortune, that he must 'paddle his own canoe.' A lady of Indiana has expanded the curt advice into a piece of original and sparkling verse." The poem consisted of seven eight-line stanzas, each closing with the same refrain. It has been attributed to Sarah K. Bolton, Sarah Tittle and Edward P. Philpots. Mrs. Bolton was only thirteen years old at the time, and it is difficult to see how Philpots could qualify as "a lady from Indiana." The probability is that all three wrote verses with this refrain. (See Notes and Queries, 25 May, 1901, p. 414.)

INDEPENDENCE DAY

JOHN ADAMS. Adams died July 4, 1826. He had been aroused on the morning of that day by a discharge of cannon, and asked the cause. On being told it was Independence Day, he murmured "Independence forever!" Four days previously he had given those words in answer to a request for a toast to be offered in his name on the Fourth.

It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment,—Independence now and Independence forever!

DANIEL WEBSTER. The closing words of the imaginary speech attributed to John Adams, in a eulogy pronounced 2 August, 1826. The eulogy was in memory of both Adams and Jefferson, who had died on the same day, 4 July, 1826.

<sup>8</sup> Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams. 3 July, 1776.

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams. 3 July, 1776.

While Gen'l Howe with a Large Armament is advancing towards N. York, our Congress resolved to Declare the United Colonies Free and Independent States. A Declaration for this Purpose, I expect, will this day pass Congress. . . . It is gone so far that we must now be a free independent State, or a Conquered Country.

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence: Preamble.

<sup>4</sup>
We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inherent and inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Draft of Declaration of Independence. (Writings, xix, 278.)

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. . . . We, therefore, . . . do . . . solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be free and independent States. . . . And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence, as adopted by the Continental Congress, in session at Philadelphia, on the evening of July 4, 1776.

Among the natural rights of the colonists are these: First a right to life, secondly to liberty, thirdly to property; together with the right to defend them in the best manner they can.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Statement of the Rights of the Colonists, etc., 20 Nov., 1772. (WELLS, Life of Samuel Adams, i, 496.)

All men are born free and equal, and have certain natural, essential, and unalienable rights.

Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish,
I give my heart and my hand to this vote.

DANIEL WEBSTER. In a eulogy upon John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, 2 August, 1826, Webster introduced a speech supposed to have been made by Adams in favor of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The phrase was derived from the record of a conversation between Adams and Jonathan Sewall in 1774: "I answered that the die was now cast; I had passed the Rubicon. Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish with my country, was my unalterable determination."

INDEX

I certainly think that the best book in the world would owe the most to a good index, and the worst book, if it had but a single good thought in it, might be kept alive by it.

HORACE BINNEY, Letter to S. A. Allibone, 8 April, 1868.

So essential did I consider an index to be to every book, that I proposed to bring a bill into Parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him for his offence to a pecuniary penalty.

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices of England: Vol. iii, Preface.

An index is a necessary implement, and no impediment, of a book, except in the same sense wherein the carriages of an army are termed impediments. Without this a large author is but a labyrinth without a clew to direct the reader therein.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England: Norfolk Writers: Alan of Llyn.

One writer, for instance, excels at a plan or a title-page, another works away at the body of the book, and a third is a dab at an index.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 1.

He writes indexes to perfection.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter No. 7.

3
The index tells us the contents of stories and directs us to the particular chapters.

MASSINGER AND FIELD, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 1.

Index-learning turns no student pale,
Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 279.

A mere index hunter, who held the eel of science by the tail.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 43.

The most accomplished way of using books at present is twofold: either, first to serve them as men do lords,—learn their titles exactly and then brag of their acquaintance; or, secondly, which is, indeed, the choicer, the profounder and politer method, to get a thorough insight into the index, by which the whole book is governed and turned, like fishes by the tail. For to enter the palace of learning at the great gate requires an expense of time and forms, therefore men of much haste and little ceremony are content to get in by the back door. . . . For this great blessing we are wholly indebted to systems and abstracts, in which the modern fathers of learning, like prudent usurers, spent their sweat for the ease of us their children. For labour is the seed of idleness, and it is the peculiar happiness of our noble age to gather the fruit.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub: A Digression in Praise of Digressions.

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

A stoic of the woods—a man without a tear.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 23.

8
His erect and perfect form, though disclosing some irregular virtues, was found joined to a dwindled soul. Master of all sorts of woodcraft, he seemed a part of the forest and the lake, and the secret of his amazing skill seemed to be that he partook of the nature and fierce instincts of the beasts he slew. . . . Thomas Hooker anticipated the opinion of Humboldt, and called them "the ruins of mankind."

Far as the solar walk or milky way;
Yet simple nature to his hope has giv'n,
Behind the cloud-topt hill, an humbler
Heav'n; . . .

But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.

The sexton tolling his bell at noon,
Deems not that great Napoleon

Stops his horse, and lists with delight,
Whilst his files sweep round yon Alpine
height;

Nor knowest thou what argument
Thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent.
EMERSON, Each and All.

I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.
I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

LONGFELLOW, The Arrow and the Song.

8
So our lives In acts exemplary, not only win Ourselves good names, but doth to others give Matter for virtuous deeds, by which we live.
CHAPMAN, Bussy D'Ambois. Act i, sc. 1.

Thou art the framer of my nobler being;
Nor does there live one virtue in my soul,
One honourable hope, but calls thee father.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act i, sc. 1.

Blessed influence of one true loving human soul on another.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 19.

11
O may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence: live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like
stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

GEORGE ELIOT, O May I Join the Choir Invisible.

12
It costs a beautiful person no effort to paint her image on our eyes; yet how splendid is that benefit! It costs no more for a wise soul to convey his quality to other men.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

It is for man to tame the chaos; on every side, whilst he lives, to scatter the seeds of science and of song, that climate, corn, animals, men, may be milder, and the germs of love and benefit may be multiplied.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

The very room, coz she was in,
Seemed warm f'om floor to ceilin'.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 6.

Before her ran an influence fleet,
That bowed my heart like barley bending.
J. R. LOWELL, Hebe.

No life
Can be pure in its purpose or strong in its strife

And all life not be purer and stronger thereby.
OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, sec.
40.

So it often happens that more good is done without our knowledge than by us intended.

To dazzle let the vain design,
To raise the thought and touch the heart be thine!

POPE, Moral Essays. Ep. ii, l. 249.

O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 157.

He makes a July's day short as December,
And with his varying childness cures in me
Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 169.

For, when the power of imparting joy
Is equal to the will, the human soul
Requires no other heaven.

4

Though her mien carries much more invitation than command, to behold her is an immediate check to loose behaviour; to love her was a liberal education.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 49. Of Lady
Elizabeth Hastings. Swinburne called this passage "the most exquisite tribute ever paid to the memory of a noble woman," and Augustine Birrell, in Obiter Dicta, echoes the opinion.

5

Such souls,
Whose sudden visitations daze the world,
Vanish like lightning, but they leave behind
A voice that in the distance far away
Wakens the slumbering ages.

HENRY TAYLOR, Philip Van Artevelde. Pt. i,
act i, sc. 7.

6

Whose powers shed round him in the common
strife,
Or mild concerns of ordinary life,
A constant influence, a peculiar grace.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 45.

Controls them and subdues, transmutes, bereaves
Of their bad influence, and their good receives.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 17.

An instinct call it, a blind sense;
A happy, genial influence,
Coming one knows not how, nor whence,
Nor whither going.

WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy.

IV—Influence for Evil

7

Corrupt influence, which is in itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder; which loads us, more than millions of debt; which takes away vigour from our arms, wisdom from our councils.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Economical Reform, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

8

You made me what I am to-day,
I hope you're satisfied. . . .

And though you're not true,
May God bless you,

That's the curse of an aching heart.

HENRY FINK, The Curse of an Aching Heart.
(1913)

I was once a step above her,
But she brought me to her level,

So I drink the death of Daisy—

Little angel—little devil!

E. J. APPLETON, Little Angel, Little Devil.

Each man, in corrupting others, corrupts himself; he imbibes, and then imparts, bad-
ness.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 54.

10

Like a mildewed ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 64.

The rotten apple spoils his companions.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.
See also under SHEEP.

V—Influence: In Battle

11

We must have your name. There will be more efficacy in it than in many an army.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to George Washington, 1798, when war with France seemed imminent.

12

But how many ships do you reckon my presence to be worth?

ANTIGONUS, when told by his pilot that the enemy outnumbered him in ships.
(PLUTARCH, Apothegms of Kings and Great Commanders: Antigonus II.)

The saying of old Antigonus, who when he was to fight at Andros, and one told him, "The enemy's ships are more than ours," replied,
"For how many then wilt thou reckon me?"

PLUTARCH, Lives: Pelopidas.

As that great captain, Ziska, would have a drum made of his skin when he was dead, because he thought the very noise of it would put his enemies to flight.

ROBERT BURTON, *Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader*.

14

Oh, for one hour of blind old Dandolo,
The octogenarian chief, Byzantium's conquering foe!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 12.

15

Napoleon was called by his men Cent Mille.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. Because his presence was worth a hundred thousand men.

It is very true that I have said that I considered Napoleon's presence in the field equal to forty thousand men in the balance. This is a very loose way of talking; but the idea is a very different one from that of his presence at a battle being equal to a reinforcement of forty thousand men.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Memorandum, 18 Sept., 1836. (STANHOPE, Conversations with the Duke of Wellington, p. 81.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. iii, l. 219. (Pope, tr., l. 293.) Referring to Ajax.

<sup>2</sup> Whenever I stamp my foot in any part of Italy, there will rise up forces enough in an instant.

POMPEY, when asked where the forces were to come from to resist Cæsar. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pompey.)

<sup>3</sup> Where, where was Roderick then?
One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 18.

Oh for a blast of that dread horn
On Fontarabian echoes borne!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 33.

O for the voice of that wild horn.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 186.

<sup>5</sup> Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 85.

The King's name is a tower of strength.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 12.

<sup>6</sup> Lord John is a host in himself.

Who on that day the word of onset gave!

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet in the Pass of Killcrankie. "Oh, for an hour of Dundee," was the cry of Gordon of Glenbucket, at the battle of Sheriffmuir, 13 Nov., 1715. "Dundee" was the terrible Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee. (MAHON, History of England, i, 184.)

VI—Influence: Homer's Golden Chain

<sup>8</sup> Make ye fast from heaven a chain of gold.
(Σειρήν χρυσέην ἐξ οὐρανὸν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii, l. 19.

Lay ye down the golden chain
From Heaven, and pull at its inferior links

Both Goddesses and Gods.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. viii. (Cowley, tr.)

By the golden chain Homer meant nothing else than the sun.

PLATO. (KIRCHER, Magnes Sive de Arte Magnetica.)

<sup>9</sup> And this is that Homer's golden chain, which reacheth down from heaven to earth, by which every creature is annexed, and depends on his Creator.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 2. Referring to God's love for the world.

<sup>10</sup> Now lately heaven and earth, another world
Hung o'er my realm, link'd in a golden chain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1004.

And fast by, hanging in a golden chain,
This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1051.

<sup>11</sup> This gift which you have . . . is not an art, but an inspiration; there is a divinity moving you, like that in the stone which Euripides calls a magnet, but which is commonly known as the stone of Heraclea. For that stone not only attracts iron rings, but also imparts to them a similar power of attracting other rings; and sometimes you may see a number of pieces of iron and rings suspended from one another so as to form a long chain: and all of them derive their power of suspension from the original stone. Now this is like the Muse, who first gives to men inspiration herself: and from these inspired persons a chain of other persons is suspended, who take the inspiration from them.

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 533. This simile has come to be known as "Plato's rings."

<sup>12</sup> To be imprisoned in the viewless winds
And blown with restless violence around about
The pendent world.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 124.

<sup>13</sup> Together linkt with adamantine chains.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 89.

I gnawed my brazen chain, and sought to sever
Its adamantine links.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto iii, st. 19.

<sup>14</sup> For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

TENNYSON, Morte D'Arthur, l. 305.

<sup>15</sup> The chain that's fixed to the throne of Jove,
On which the fabric of our world depends,
One link dissolved, the whole creation ends.

EDMUND WALLER, Of the Danger His Majesty Escaped, l. 68.

INGRATITUDE

1 Earth produces nothing worse than an ungrateful man. (Nil homine terra pejus ingrato creat.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 140, l. 1.

2 And having looked to Government for bread, on the very first scarcity they will turn and bite the hand that fed them.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts and Details on Scarcity.

We set ourselves to bite the hand that feeds us.

EDMUND BURKE, Cause of the Present Discontents.

3 The wicked are always ungrateful.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23.

Hell is full of the ungrateful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

4 Ingratitude is the daughter of pride.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51.

5 Deserted at his utmost need

By those his former bounty fed;

On the bare earth expos'd he lies,

With not a friend to close his eyes.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 4.

6 Ingratitude's a weed of every clime,

It thrives too fast at first, but fades in time.

SAMUEL GARTH, Epistle to the Earl of Godolphin, l. 27.

7 A man is very apt to complain of the ingratitude of those who have risen far above him.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

8 An ingrate is sometimes less to blame for his ingratitude than the one who did him the favor. (Tel homme est ingrat, qui est moins coupable de son ingratitude que celui qui lui a fait du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 96.

Too great haste in repaying an obligation is a species of ingratitude. (Le trop grand empressement qu'on a de s'acquitter d'une obligation est une espèce d'ingratitude.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 226.

One finds few ingrates as long as one is capable of bestowing favors. (On ne trouve guère d'ingrats tant qu'on est en état de faire du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 306.

9 Ah, how have I deserved, inhuman maid,
To have my faithful service thus repaid?

GEORGE LYTTELTON, Progress of Love.

10 Besotted base ingratitude.

MILTON, Comus, l. 778.

11 You love a nothing when you love an ingrate. (Nihil amas, quom ingratum amas.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 228. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

12 We should not treat living creatures like shoes, or pots and pans, casting them aside when they are bruised and worn out with service.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. v, sec. 5.

13 One ungrateful man does an injury to all who are in suffering. (Ingratus unus miseris omnibus nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 274.

14 He is ungrateful who denies that he has received a kindness; he is ungrateful who conceals it; he is ungrateful who makes no return for it; most ungrateful of all is he who forgets it.

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iii, sec. 1. See also BENEFITS: BENEFITS AND INJURIES.

15 Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude:
Thy tooth is not so keen,

Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 174.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
Thou dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot:

Though thou the waters warp,

Thy sting is not so sharp

As friend remember'd not.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 184.

16 This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him; then burst his mighty heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 187.

You also, O Brutus, my son. (Et tu, Brute fili.)

JULIUS CÆSAR, on being stabbed by Brutus.

(SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius.)

Et tu Brute! Then fall, Cæsar!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 77.

See what a rent the envious Casca made.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 179.

17 Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 281.

Monster ingratitude!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 43.

18 How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is

To have a thankless child!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 310.

All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall

On her ingrateful top!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 164.

Filial ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to 't?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 14.

He gives his daughters his estate:
The daughters give him—what? The gate.

UNKNOWN, Our Book Review Department:
King Lear.

I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 388.

When ingratitude bars the dart of injury,
the wound has double danger in it.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act iv, sc. 3.

He that's ungrateful, has no guilt but one;
And other crimes may pass for virtues in him.

EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris.

venit undam.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 175.

A son could bear complacently the death of his father, while the loss of his inheritance might drive him to despair.

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. xvii.

Never think of leaving perfumes or wine to your heir. Let him have your money, but give these to yourself. (Unguentum heredi numquam nec vina relinquo. Ille habeat nummos, hæc tibi toto dato.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 126.

Atossa, curs'd with every granted prayer,
Childless with all her children, wants an heir;
To heirs unknown descends th' unguarded
store,

Or wanders, Heav'n-directed, to the poor.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 147.

Pulling his beard because he had no heir.

THOMAS HOOD, The Stag-Eyed Lady.

The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage.

Old Testament: Psalms, xvi, 6.

The tears of an heir are laughter under a mask. (Heredis fletus sub persona risus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 221. Quoted by BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 18.

The weeping of an heir is laughter in disguise.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 37.

I owe much; I have nothing; the rest I leave to the poor.

RABELAIS, His Will. (MOTTEUX, Life.)

To Messire Noël, named the neat,
By those who love him, I bequeath
A helmless ship, a houseless street,
A wordless book, a swordless sheath.

J. H. MCCARTHY, If I Were King. (After Villon.)

Thou left'st me nothing in thy will.

I—Injury: Apothegms

The injuries we do and those we suffer are seldom weighed in the same scales.

ÆSOP, Fables: The Partial Judge.

BACON, Of Church Controversies.

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 25.

He threatens many that hath injured one.

BEN JONSON, Fall of Sejanus. Act ii.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12.

To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and be too acute in their apprehension, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, and to resolve to sleep no more.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12.

<sup>4</sup> Injury may be done by two methods, by fraud or by force. (Duobus modis, id est aut vi, aut fraude, fiat injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 41.

<sup>5</sup> It is better to receive than to do an injury. (Accipere quam facere injuriam præstat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 19, sec. 56.

It is more wretched to commit than to suffer an injury. (Miserius est nocere quam lædi.)

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 52.

<sup>6</sup> What a fool

An injury may make of a staid man.

KEATS, Otho the Great. Act iii, sc. 1.

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 26.

<sup>8</sup> A strong sense of injury often gives point to the expression of our feelings. (Plerumque dolor etiam venustos facit.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 9.

<sup>9</sup> It is the mark of a good man not to know how to do an injury. (Vivi boni est nescire facere injuriam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 711.

<sup>10</sup> Whom they have injured they also hate. (Quos læserunt, et oderunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 33.

It is a principle of human nature to hate those whom you have injured. (Proprium humani ingenii est odisse quem læseris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 41.

<sup>11</sup> To wilful men

The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 306.

His heart-struck injuries.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 17.

<sup>12</sup> A readiness to resent injuries is a virtue only in those who are slow to injure.

SHERIDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act v, sc. 1.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 341.

<sup>14</sup> It costs more to resent injuries than to bear them.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims. No. 303.

UNKNOWN. Latin Proverb.

II—Injuries: Their Forgiveness

<sup>16</sup> The fairest action of our human life

Is scorning to revenge an injury;

For who forgives without a further strife,

His adversary's heart to him doth tie:

And 'tis a firmer conquest, truly said,

To win the heart than overthrow the head.

LADY ELIZABETH CAREY, The Tragedie of Marian: Chorus. (1613) This attribution of authorship has been disputed.

<sup>17</sup> Forgiveness to the injured doth belong,

But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 2.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 1164.

<sup>19</sup> Christianity commands us to pass by injuries; policy, to let them pass by us.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1741.

<sup>20</sup> A brave man thinks no one is superior who does him an injury; for he has it then in his power to make himself superior to the other by forgiving it.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 250. Quoted by SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium, xciv, 28.

<sup>22</sup> He who has injured thee was either stronger or weaker. If weaker, spare him; if stronger, spare thyself. (Aut potentior te, aut imbecillior læsit: si imbecillior, parce illi; si potentior, tibi.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 5.

III—Injuries and Benefits

1 An injury graves itself in metal, but a benefit writes itself on the wave. (L'injure se grave en metal, et le bienfait s'écrit en l'onde.)

JEAN BERTAUT, Maximes. (c. 1611)

On adamant our wrongs we all engrave,
But write our benefits upon the wave.

WILLIAM KING, The Art of Love, l. 971.

All your better deeds
Shall be in water writ, but this in marble.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v, sc. 3.

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 45.

Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

JOHN KEATS, his epitaph dictated by himself for his monument in Rome.

2 Some write their wrongs in marble: he, more just,
Stoop'd down serene and wrote them in the dust,

Trod under foot, the sport of every wind, Swept from the earth and blotted from his mind.

There, secret in the grave, he bade them lie,
And grieved they could not 'scape the Almighty eye.

SAMUEL MADDEN, Boulter's Monument.

For men use, if they have an evil turn, to write it in marble; and who doth us a good turn, we write it in dust.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Richard III and His Miserable End.

Write injuries in the sand, but benefits in marble. (Écrives les injures sur le sable, Mais les bienfaits sur le marbre.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

3 Injuries are writ in brass, kind Graccho,
And not to be forgotten.

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan. Act v, sc. 1.

4 How bitter it is, when you have sown benefits to reap injuries! (Sed ut acerbum est, pro bene factis cum mali messim metas.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 718. (Act v, sc. 2.)

5 A benefit cited by way of reproach is equivalent to an injury. (Un bienfait reproché tint toujours lieu d'offense.)

RACINE, Iphigénie. Act iv, sc. 5.

6 What is more wretched than the man who forgets his benefits and clings to his injuries?
(Quid autem eo miserius, cui beneficia ex-cidunt hærent injuriæ?)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, 23.

7 Kindnesses are easily forgotten; but injuries?

—what worthy man does not keep those in mind?

THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower.

INJUSTICE

8 Let twenty pass, and stone the twenty-first.

ROBERT BROWNING, Caliban Upon Setebos.

9 No man can mortgage his injustice as a pawn for his fidelity.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

10 But when I observed the affairs of men plunged in such darkness, the guilty flourishing in continuous happiness, and the righteous tormented, my religion, tottering, began once more to fall. (Sed cum res hominum tanta caligine volvi Adspicerem lætosque diu florere nocentes, Vexarique pios, rursus labefacta cadebat Religio.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 12.

It's hardly in a body's pow'r
To keep at times frae being sour,

To see how things are shar'd;

How best o' chiefs are whiles in want,
While coofs on countless thousands rant,
And ken na how to wair't.

BURNS, Epistle to Davie. St. 2.

11 National injustice is the surest road to national downfall.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Plumstead, 1878.

12 Injustice, swift, erect, and unconfin'd, Sweeps the wide earth, and tramples o'er mankind,

While prayers, to heal her wrongs, move slow behind.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 628. (Pope, tr.)

13 It is too common for those who have unjustly suffered pain to inflict it likewise in their turn with the same injustice.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iii, p. 294.

14 A good man should and must
Sit rather down with loss, than rise unjust.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act iv, sc. 3.

15 To do injustice is more disgraceful than to suffer it.

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 489.

It is better to suffer injustice than to do it.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

I swear 't is better to be much abused
Than but to know 't a little.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 336.

16 My comfort is that heaven will take our souls
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

The injustice done to an individual is sometimes of service to the public.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 41.

<sup>2</sup>
Condemn you me for that the duke did love me?

So may you blame some fair and crystal river
For that some melancholic, distracted man
Hath drown'd himself in 't.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act iii, sc. 2.

<sup>8</sup>
To let the world wag and take mine ease in mine inn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

In this proverbial saying, inn does not mean a tavern or public house, but one's own home. The original meaning of inn was a private house or dwelling-place.

Thou most beauteous inn,

Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodged in thee,

When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 13.

Here "inn," a private house, is contrasted with tavern.

Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 92.

These great rich men take their ease i' their inn.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The World at Tennis.

<sup>9</sup>
But I'm for toleration and for drinking at an inn,

Says the old bold mate of Henry Morgan.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy. St. 6.

<sup>10</sup>
Servant: Where dwell'st thou?

Coriolanus: Under the canopy. . . I' the city of kites and crows.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 40.

And there's naught to pay

For a couch of hay

At the Inn of the Silver Moon.

H. K. VIELÉ, The Inn of the Silver Moon.

When you sleep in your cloak there's no lodging to pay.

Lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 143.

<sup>13</sup>
I reckon this always, that a man is never undone till he be hanged, nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say "Welcome!"

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 3.

II—Inns: Their Praise

<sup>14</sup>
You may go to Carlisle's and to Almack's too,
And I'll give you my head if you find such a host,

For coffee, tea, chocolate, butter, or toast;
How he welcomes at once all the world and his wife,

And how civil to folks he ne'er saw in his life.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEY, New Bath Guide, p. 130. (1767)

<sup>15</sup>
He who has not been at a tavern knows not what a paradise it is. O holy tavern! O miraculous tavern!—holy, because no carking cares are there, nor weariness, nor pain; and miraculous, because of the spits, which of themselves turn round and round!

ARETINO. (LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 2.)

<sup>16</sup>
Now musing o'er the changing scene
Farmers behind the tavern screen

Collect; with elbows idly press'd
On hob, reclines the corner's guest,
Reading the news to mark again
The bankrupt lists or price of grain.
Puffing the while his red-tipt pipe
He dreams o'er troubles nearly ripe,
Yet, winter's leisure to regale,
Hopes better times, and sips his ale.

JOHN CLARE, The Shepherd's Calendar.

Along the varying road of Life,
In calm content, in toil or strife,
At morn or noon, by night or day,
As time conducts him on his way,
How oft doth man, by Care oppressed,
Find in an Inn a place of rest.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto ix, l. 1. (1809)

Where'er his fancy bids him roam,
In ev'ry Inn he finds a home. . . .
Will not an Inn his cares beguile,
Where on each face he sees a smile?

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto ix, l. 13.

2
Would you have each blessing full,
Hither fly and live with Bull,
Feast for body, feast for mind,
Best of welcome, taste refin'd.
Bull does nothing here by halves,
All other landlords are but calves.

LORD THOMAS ERSKINE. (Notes and Queries, 8 Sept., 1866.)

There is no private house in which people can enjoy themselves so well as at a capital tavern. Let there be ever so great plenty of good things, ever so much grandeur, ever so much elegance, ever so much desire that everybody should be easy, in the nature of things, it cannot be: there must always be some degree of care and anxiety. . . . There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 21 March, 1776.)

4
Souls of Poets dead and gone,
What Elysium have ye known,
Happy field or mossy cavern,
Choicer than the Mermaid Tavern?

KEATS, Lines on the Mermaid Tavern, l. 1.

The atmosphere
Breathes rest and comfort, and the many chambers
Seem full of welcomes.

LONGFELLOW, Masque of Pandora. Pt. v, l. 33.

With doubt, with fear, and haply with remorse.

WORDSWORTH, The River Duddon. Sonnet xxx.

3 As innocent as the child unborn.

UNKNOWN. (Somers Tracts, viii, 131. 1679.)

She was innocent as the child unborn.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants.

You are as innocent as a devil of two years old.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

As innocent as a new-laid egg.

INSPIRATION

4 Midnight filled my slumbers with song;
Music haunted my dreams by day.
Now I listen and wait and long,
But the Delphian airs have died away.

T. B. ALDRICH, The Flight of the Goddess.

And the woman I loved was now my bride,
And the house I wanted was my own;
I turned to the Goddess satisfied—
But the Goddess had somehow flown.

T. B. ALDRICH, The Flight of the Goddess.

5 'Tis inspiration expounds experience.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Ruined Temple.

6 To see a world in a grain of sand,
And a heaven in a wild flower,
Hold infinity in the palm of your hand,
And eternity in an hour.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

7 Gie me ae spark o' Nature's fire,
That's a' the learning I desire;
Then, tho' I trudge thro' dub an' mire
At pleugh or cart,
My Muse, tho' hamely in attire,
May touch the heart.

BURNS, Epistle to John Lapraik. Epis. i, st. 13.

8 No man was ever great without some portion of divine inspiration. (Nemo vir magnus sine aliquo adflatu divino unquam fuit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 66, sec.
167. Hence, "divine afflatus."

9 Fill'd with fury, rapt, inspired.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 10.

10 Inebriate of air am I
And debauchee of dew,
Reeling, through endless summer days,
From inns of moulten blue. . . .

Till seraphs swing their snowy hats,
And saints to windows run,
To see the little tippler
Leaning against the sun!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 20.

11 The text inspires not them, but they the text inspire.

DRYDEN, The Medal, l. 166.

12 We cannot carry on inspiration and make it consecutive. One day there is no electricity in the air, and the next the world bristles with sparks like a cat's back.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

13 If there be good in that I wrought,
Thy hand compelled it, Master, Thine—
Where I have failed to meet Thy Thought
I know, through Thee, the blame was mine.

RUDYARD KIPLING, "My New-Cut Ashlar."

14 Earth's fiery core alone can feed the bough
That blooms between Orion and the Plough.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet: Grow Not Too High.

15 The heart desires, The hand refrains,
The godhead fires, The soul attains.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Inscription on Burne-Jones's painting, Pygmalion and Galatea, in the Grosvenor Gallery, London.

16 Fair are the flowers and the children, but their subtle suggestion is fairer;
Rare is the roseburst of dawn, but the secret that claps it is rarer;
Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter
And never was poem yet writ, but the meaning outmastered the meter.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

I wonder if ever a song was sung but the singer's heart sang sweeter!

I wonder if ever a rhyme was rung but the thought surpassed the meter!

I wonder if ever a sculptor wrought till the cold stone echoed his ardent thought!

Or, if ever a painter with light and shade the dream of his inmost heart portrayed!

JAMES C. HARVEY, Incompleteness.

17 No more inspiration in her than in a plate of muffins.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii.

18 All around him Patmos lies
Who hath spirit-gifted eyes.

EDITH M. THOMAS, Patmos.

1 She with one breath attunes the spheres,
And also my poor human heart.
HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Inspiration.
2 But if with bended neck I grope,
Listening behind me for my wit, . . .
Then will the verse forever wear,—
Time cannot bend the line which God hath writ.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Inspiration.
3 She comes not when Noon is on the roses—
Too bright is Day.
She comes not to the Soul till it reposes
From work and play.
But when Night is on the hills, and the great Voices
Roll in from Sea,
By starlight and by candle-light and dream-
light
She comes to me.

HERBERT TRENCH, *She Comes Not When Noon
Is on the Roses*.

4 Immured in sense, with fivefold bonds confined,
Rest we content if whispers from the stars.
In wafings of the incalculable wind Come blown at midnight through our prison-bars.
WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

5 Great God! I'd rather be
A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;
Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea,
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 33.

INSTINCT

I—Instinct: Definitions and Apothegms

6 The not ourselves, which is in us and all around us. . . . The enduring power, not ourselves, which makes for righteousness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma.

An unfathomable Somewhat, which is Not we.
CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. i, ch. 2.

7 That which is imprinted upon the spirit of man by an inward instinct.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

8 Instinct is untaught ability.

BAIN, Senses and Intellect, p. 256.

Instinct is intelligence incapable of self-consciousness.

JOHN STERLING, Thoughts and Images.

9 My natural instinct teaches me
(And instinct is important O!)

You're everything you ought to be,
And nothing that you oughtn't O!
W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act ii.

10 A good man, through obscurest aspirations,
Has still an instinct of the one true way.
GOETHE, Faust: Prolog in Himmel: Der Herr,
l. 88.

11 We heed no instincts but our own. (Nous n'écoutons d'instincts que ceux qui sont les nôtres.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 8.

12 Man's natural instinct is never toward what is sound and true; it is toward what is specious and false.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 126.

13 By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing dangers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 42.

14 I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 34.

Beware instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 299.

15 Instinct is a great matter; I was now a coward on instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 300.

You ran away upon instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 331.

Upon instinct.—I grant ye, upon instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 389.

16 A few strong instincts and a few plain rules.
WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 12.

High instincts before which our mortal nature
Did tremble like a guilty thing surprised.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St.
9.

II—Instinct and Reason

17 Reas'ning at every step he treads,
Man yet mistakes his way,
Whilst meaner things, whom instinct leads,
Are rarely known to stray.
COWPER, The Doves.

18 A moment's insight is sometimes worth a life's experience.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

19 It is the instinct of understanding to contradict reason.

JACOBI THE ELDER. (CARLYLE, Novalis.)

20 Instinct preceded wisdom
Even in the wisest men, and may sometimes
Be much the better guide.

GEORGE LILLO, Fatal Curiosity. Act i, sc. 3.

1 How instinct varies in the grovelling swine,
Compared, half-reas'ning elephant, with thine!
'Twixt that and reason what a nice barrier!
For ever separate, yet for ever near!
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 221.

2 Reason, however able, cool at best,
Cares not for service, or but serves when prest,
Stays till we call, and then not often near;
But honest instinct comes a volunteer;
Sure never to o'er-shoot, but just to hit,
While still too wide or short in human wit.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 85.
And reason raise o'er instinct as you can,
In this 'tis God directs, in that 'tis man.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 97.

3 Instinct and reason how can we divide?
'Tis the fool's ignorance, and the pedant's pride.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vices of the World. Bk. i, l. 231.

4 Let him make use of instinct who cannot make use of reason.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

5 They live no longer in the faith of reason;
But still the heart doth need a language, still Doth the old instinct bring back the old names.

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act ii, sc. 4.

6 Reason progressive, instinct is complete;
Swift instinct leaps; slow reason feebly climbs.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 81.

INSULT

7 Let those who have betrayed him by their adulation, insult him with their malevolence.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation. Referring to Chatham.

8 An injury is much sooner forgiven than an insult.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

An old affront will stir the heart
Through years of rankling pain.

JEAN INGELow, Strife and Peace.

9 He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be. (Qui se laisse outrager, mérite qu'on l'outrage.)

CORNEILLE, Heraclius. Act i, sc. 2.

10 Am I to set my life upon a throw Because a bear is rude and surly? No—
A moral, sensible, and well-bred man
Will not affront me, and no other can.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 191.

11 To one well-born the affront is worse and
more,

When he's abused and baffled by a boor.

DRYDEN, Satire on the Dutch, l. 27.

Fate never wounds more deep the gen'rous heart,
Than when a blockhead's insult points the dart.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 168.

12 If he is insulted, he can be insulted; all his affair is not to insult.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

13 No sacred fane requires us to submit to insult. (Kein Heiligthum heisst uns den Schimpf ertragen.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 191.

The way to procure insults is to submit to them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 402.

14 Ashamed am I that such an insult could have been uttered and yet could not be answered.
(Pudet hæc opprobria nobis Et dici potuisse et non potuisse refelli.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 758.

15 To add insult to injury. (Injuriae qui ad-dideris contumeliam.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 3, l. 5.

This is adding insult to injuries.

EDWARD MOORE, The Foundling. Act v, sc. 2.
(1748)

16 If you speak insults, you shall also hear them.
(Contumeliam si dices, audies.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1173. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

17 Noble-mindedness does not receive an insult.
(Ingenuitas non recipit contumeliam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 271.

18 It is often better not to see an insult than to avenge it. (Sæpe satius fuit dissimulare quam ulcisci.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 32.

19 Insults are like bad coins; we cannot help their being offered to us, but we need not take them.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

20 They accept everything as an insult. (Ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 606. (Act iv, sc. 3.)

INTELLIGENCE

See also Cleverness, Mind

21 Instinct perfected is a faculty of using and even constructing organized instruments; intelligence perfected is the faculty of making and using unorganized instruments.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 2.

Intelligence is the faculty of manufacturing artificial objects.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 2.

1 I can look sharp as well as another, and let me alone to keep the cobwebs out of my eyes.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

2 'Tis good-will makes intelligence.

EMERSON, The Titmouse, l. 65; Letters and Social Aims: Immortality.

The intelligent have a right over the ignorant; namely, the right of instructing them.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato: New Readings.

3 On the whole we are Not intelligent.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i.

4 To perceive things in the germ is intelligence.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 52.

5 To educate the intelligence is to enlarge the horizon of its desires and wants.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: Democracy.

It is not the insurrections of ignorance that are dangerous, but the revolts of intelligence.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy.

6 All things are slaves to intelligence. ("Ἀπαντα δοῦλα τοῦ φρονεῖν καθίσταται.")

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 769.

7 You will more easily stamp out intelligence and learning than recall them. (Sic ingenia studiaque oppresseris facilius quam revocaveris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3.

8 He's very knowing.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 26.

9 She had no more intelligence than a banjo. (Νοῦν δ' εἶχεν ἐλάσσονα κινδὰρφοιο.)

TIMON, Silli. Frag. 38.

10 All men see the same objects, but do not equally understand them. Intelligence is the tongue that discerns and tastes them.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

INVENTION

13 The consciousness of good intentions is the greatest solace in misfortune. (Conscientia rectæ voluntatis maxima est rerum incommodarum.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 4.

14 A good intention clothes itself with sudden power.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

15 One often sees good intentions, if pushed beyond moderation, bring about very vicious results.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 19.

For there's nothing we read of in torture's inventions,

Like a well-meaning dunce, with the best of intentions.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 250.

16 Forgive my deeds, since you know that crime was absent from my intent. (Factis ignoscite nostris, Si scelus ingenio scitis abesse meo.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, eleg. 3, l. 309.

17 "He means well" is useless unless he does well. (Bene vult, nisi qui bene facit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 37.

18 A good intender needs nothing but a voice. (À bon entendeur ne faut qu'un parole.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 7.

19 Oft has good nature been the fool's defence,
And honest meaning gilded want of sense.

INVENTION

21 The industry of artificers maketh some small improvement of things invented; and chance sometimes in experimenting maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new; but all the disputation of the learned never brought to light one effect of nature before unknown.

FRANCIS BACON, In Praise of Knowledge.

The art of invention grows young with the things invented. (Ars inveniendi adolescit cum inventis.)

FRANCIS BACON. Quoted as a maxim.

22 A tool is but the extension of a man's hand, and a machine is but a complex tool. And he that invents a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit: Business.

Book of Common Prayer: Articles. No. 22.

<sup>2</sup> If it is not true, it is very well invented. (Se non è vero, è molto ben trovato.)

GIORDANO BRUNO, Degli Eroici Furori. (1585).

The "molto" is frequently omitted in quotation, which is rendered, "If not true, it is a happy invention." Antonio Doni (Marmi, 1552) said the same thing thirty years earlier, in slightly different form: "Se non è vero, egli è stato un bel trovato." Pasquier (Recherches, 1600) turns it into French: "Si cela n'est vrai, il est bien trouvé."

If it is not true, it is certainly well invented. (Se non è vero, è ben trovato.)

CARDINAL IPPOLITO D'ESTE, speaking of the Orlando Furioso, which Ariosto dedicated to him. (Grosse Leute, Kleine Schwächen.) Büchmann questions the authorship.

It's my own invention.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass, Ch. 8.

<sup>3</sup> A weak invention of the enemy.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act v, sc. 3.

Invented by the lying enemy. (Inventé par le calomniateur ennemi.)

<sup>4</sup> Beggars invention and makes fancy tame.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 709.

<sup>5</sup> Countless ages will beget many new inventions, but my own is mine. (Μυρία αὐτὸν πολλὰ προσευρήσεται χἄτερα· τὰ μὲν δ' ἐμα.)

DIOSCORIDES, Epigram on Thespis. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 410.)

<sup>6</sup> God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 29.

Many Inventions.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of book of short stories.

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis frivolous to fix pedantically the date of particular inventions. They have all been invented over and over fifty times. Man is the arch machine, of which all these shifts drawn from himself are toy models.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>8</sup> Only an inventor knows how to borrow, and every man is or should be an inventor.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

Invention breeds invention.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

<sup>9</sup> Take the advice of a faithful friend, and submit thy inventions to his censure.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Of Fancy.

The blocks of a child's game to make it whole?

R. U. JOHNSON, Psalm of Happiness in Nature.

<sup>11</sup> Electric telegraphs, printing, gas,
Tobacco, balloons, and steam,
Are little events that have come to pass
Since the days of the old régime.
And, spite of Lemprière's dazzling page,
I'd give—though it might seem bold—
A hundred years of the Golden Age
For a year of the Age of Gold.

H. S. LEIGH, The Two Ages.

<sup>12</sup> Th' invention all admir'd, and each, how he
To be th' inventor miss'd, so easy it seem'd, Once found, which yet unfound most would have thought Impossible.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 498.

Irish bull—its horns are tipped with brass [i.e., with impudence or assurance].

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Irish Bulls. Ch. 7.

It was Whewell who asserted that all the Irish bulls had been calves in Greece; and it was Professor Tyrrell who neatly explained that the Irish bull differed from the bull of all other islands in that "it was always pregnant."

4 Arm of Erin! prove strong, but be gentle as brave,
And, uplifted to strike, still be ready to save,
Nor one feeling of vengeance presume to defile

The cause, or the men of the Emerald Isle.

WILLIAM DRENNAN, Erin. (c. 1800) This has sometimes been stated to be the first use of the phrase, "Emerald Isle," but Dr. Drennan, in an introduction to the poem written in 1815, expressly states that the phrase was first used in Erin, To Her Own Tune, a "party song written without the rancour of party in the year 1795."

For dear is the Emerald Isle of the ocean,
Whose daughters are fair as the foam of the wave,

Whose sons unaccustom'd to rebel commotion,
Tho' joyous, are sober—tho' peaceful, are brave.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses. (1812)

6 Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the springtime of the year.

D. A. MCCARTHEY, Ah, Sweet Is Tipperary.

It's a long way to Tipperary, it's a long way to go;

It's a long way to Tipperary, to the sweetest girl I know!

Good-bye, Piccadilly, farewell, Leicester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there!

JACK JUDGE, Tipperary. Written in 1908, and popular with both British and American soldiers during the World War. Judge was a mediocre actor, who ran a fish-shop by day. A man named Harry Williams lent him money to finance the shop, and shared in the returns from Judge's song, his name appearing on it as co-author. His family claimed that he wrote it, and after his death in 1924, repeated the claim on his tombstone; but it was probably Judge's alone.

11 Will my soul pass through old Ireland,
Past my dear old Irish home?

VINCENT P. BRYAN AND HENRY W. ARMSTRONG,
Will My Soul Pass Through Old Ireland?

12 Dear Erin, how sweetly thy green bosom rises!

An emerald set in the ring of the sea.

Each blade of thy meadows my faithful heart prizes,

Thou queen of the west, the world's cushla-ma-chree.

JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN, Cushla-ma-Chree. (Cushla-ma-Chree: Darling of My Heart.)

The great waves of the Atlantic sweep storming on their way,

Shining green and silver with the hidden herring shoal;

But the little waves of Breffny have drenched
my heart in spray,
And the little waves of Breffny go stumbling through my soul.

EVA GORE-BOOTH, The Little Waves of Breffny.

1 Who fears to speak of Ninety-eight?
Who blushes at the name?

When cowards mock the patriot's fate,
Who hangs his head for shame?

JOHN KELLS INGRAM, The Memory of the Dead. (Dublin Nation, 1 Apr., 1843.)

2 Th' an'am an Dhia, but there it is—
The dawn on the hills of Ireland.
God's angels lifting the night's black veil
From the fair sweet face of my sireland!

O Ireland, isn't it grand, you look,
Like a bride in her rich adornin',
And with all the pent up love of my heart
I bid you the top of the mornin'.

JOHN LOCKE, The Exile's Return. (Th' an'am an Dhia: My Soul to God.)

3 The groves of Blarney
They look so charming

Down by the purling
Of sweet, silent brooks.

R. A. MILLIKEN, The Groves of Blarney.

There is a stone there,
That whoever kisses,
Oh! he never misses

To grow eloquent.
'Tis he may clamber
To a lady's chamber
Or become a member
Of Parliament.

FRANCIS SYLVESTER MAHONY, (FATHER PROUT),
The Groves of Blarney. Additional lines to Milliken's poem.

4 Sweet Innisfallen, long shall dwell
In memory's dream that sunny smile,
Which o'er thee on that evening fell,
When first I saw thy fairy isle.

THOMAS MOORE, Sweet Innisfallen.

5 And blest for ever is she who relied Upon Erin's honour and Erin's pride.

THOMAS MOORE, Rich and Rare.

6 And the Land of Youth lies gleaming, flushed with rainbow light and mirth,
And the old enchantment lingers in the honey-heart of earth.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, Carrowmore.

7 After the spiritual powers, there is nothing in the world more unconquerable than the spirit of nationality. . . . The spirit of nationality in Ireland will persist even though the mightiest of material powers be its neighbour.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, The Economics of Ireland, p. 23.

8 They say there's bread and work for all,
And the sun shines always there;
But I'll not forget old Ireland,
Were it fifty times as fair.

HELEN SELINA SHERIDAN, Lament of the Irish Emigrant.

9 Whether on the scaffold high
Or on the battle-field we die,
Oh, what matter, when for Erin dear we fall!
T. D. SULLIVAN, God Save Ireland.

10 Lovelier than thy seas are strong,
Glorious Ireland, sword and song
Gird and crown thee: none may wrong,
Save thy sons alone.

The sea that laughs around us
Hath sundered not but bound us:
The sun's first rising found us
Throned on its equal throne.

SWINBURNE, The Union. St. 3.

11 Och, Dublin City, there is no doubtin',
Bates every city upon the say;

'Tis there you'll see O'Connell spoutin',
An' Lady Morgan makin' say;

For 'tis the capital of the finest nation,
Wid charmin' pisintry on a fruitful sod,
Fightin' like divils for conciliation,

An' hatin' each other for the love of God.

UNKNOWN, Dublin City. (Lady Morgan, in her Memoirs, ii, 232, tells of this compliment paid her by a street ballad-singer, 30 Oct., 1826.) Sometimes attributed to Charles
Lever, who perhaps rewrote the old song.

III—Ireland: Her Sorrows

12 There came to the beach a poor Exile of Erin—

The dew on his thin robe was heavy and chill:

For his country he sigh'd when at twilight
repairing

To wander alone by the wind-beaten hill.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Exile of Erin.

Green be thy fields, sweetest isle of the ocean!
And thy harp-striking bards sing aloud with devotion,—

"Erin mavournin—Erin go bragh!"

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Exile of Erin.

13 The dust of some is Irish earth,
Among their own they rest.

JOHN KELLS INGRAM, The Memory of the Dead.

Many and many a son of Conn the Hundred-Fighter

In the red earth lies at rest;

Many a blue eye of Clan Colman the turf covers,

Many a swan-like breast.

T. W. ROLLESTON, The Dead at Clonmacnois.

1
Thy sorrow, and the sorrow of the sea,
Are sisters; the sad winds are of thy race:
The heart of melancholy beats in thee,
And the lamenting spirit haunts thy face,
Mournful and mighty Mother!

LIONEL JOHNSON, Ireland.

2
The Judgment Hour must first be nigh,
Ere you shall fade, ere you can die,
My dark Rosaleen!

JAMES CLARENCE MANGAN, Dark Rosaleen.

3
Down thy valleys, Ireland, Ireland,
Still thy spirit wanders mad;
All too late they love that wronged thee,
Ireland, Ireland, green and sad.
HENRY NEWBOLT, Ireland, Ireland.

4
"Oh! rise up, Willy Reilly, and come along with me,
I mean for to go with you and leave this countrie,
To leave my father's dwelling, his houses and free land;"
And away goes Willy Reilly and his dear
Coolen Ban.
UNKNOWN, Willy Reilly.

IV—Ireland: The Shamrock

5
There's a dear little plant that grows in our isle,
'Twas St. Patrick himself sure that set it;
And the sun on his labour with pleasure did
smile,
And with dew from his eye often wet it.
It thrives through the bog, through the brake,
and the mireland;
And he called it the dear little shamrock of Ireland—
The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,
The sweet little, green little, shamrock of Ireland!

ANDREW CHERRY, The Green Little Shamrock of Ireland.

O, the Shamrock, the green, immortal Shamrock!
Chosen leaf Of Bard and Chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, the Shamrock.

Oh, Paddy dear, an' did ye hear the news
that's goin' round?
The shamrock is by law forbid to grow on Irish ground!
No more Saint Patrick's Day we'll keep, his colour can't be seen,
For there's a cruel law agin the wearin' o' the green!

UNKNOWN, The Shan-van-Voght. This old Irish song is quoted in Trench, Realities of Irish Life.

When law can stop the blades of grass from growing as they grow;
And when the leaves in Summer-time their colour dare not show;
Then will I change the colour too, I wear in my caubeen;
But till that day, plaze God, I'll stick to wearin'
o' the Green.

DION BOUCICAULT, The Wearin' o' the Green.
An expansion of the old song written for Boucicault's Arrah-na-Pogue.

V—Ireland and England

7
England and Ireland may flourish together.
The world is large enough for us both. Let it be our care not to make ourselves too little for it.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Samuel Span, Esq.

8
The bane of England, and the opprobrium of Europe.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 9 Aug., 1843, referring to Ireland.

9
To apply, in all their unmitigated authority, the principles of abstract political economy to the people and circumstances of Ireland, exactly as if he had been proposing to legislate for the inhabitants of Saturn or Jupiter.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 April, 1881.

10
'Tis Ireland gives England her soldiers, her generals too.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 2.

11
A mirror faced a mirror: ire and hate
Opposite ire and hate.

ALICE MEYNELL, Reflexions in Ireland.

12
Mr. Butler was now all full of his high discourse in praise of Ireland. . . . But so many lies I never heard in praise of anything as he told of Ireland.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 July, 1660.

13
He that would England win,
Must with Ireland first begin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. Quoted by FROUDE, History of England, x, 480.

14
The uncivil kerns of Ireland.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 310.

Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 4, l. 38.

Now for our Irish wars:
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom where no venom else
But only they have privilege to live.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 156.

15
The moment the very name of Ireland is mentioned, the English seem to bid adieu to common feeling, common prudence and common sense, and to act with the barbarity of tyrants and the fatuity of idiots.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 2.

<sup>1</sup> The lovely and the lonely bride,
Whom we have wedded but have never won.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode on the Coronation of Edward VII, l. 79. Referring to Ireland.

<sup>2</sup> As the northern men loveth fight, also the southern, falseness; they strutteth to strength, these to sleights; they to stalwartness, these to treason.

UNKNOWN, Of Ireland. (c. 1425) (MS. Trinity College, Dublin, relating to the conquest of Ireland by the British.)

VI—Ireland: The Irish

<sup>3</sup> For the great Gaels of Ireland
Are the men that God made mad,
For all their wars are merry
And all their songs are sad.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Ballad of the White Horse.

<sup>4</sup> "Well, here's thank God for the race and the sod!"

Said Kelly and Burke and Shea.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

"Oh, the fighting races don't die out,
If they seldom die in bed,
For love is first in their hearts, no doubt,"
Said Burke.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

<sup>5</sup> Every Irishman has a potato in his head.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

<sup>6</sup> The Irish are a fair people; they never speak well of one another.

<sup>7</sup> And now the Irish are ashamed
To see themselves in one year tamed:

So much one man can do,
That does both act and know.

ANDREW MARVELL, Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland, l. 75.

<sup>8</sup> An Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 71.

<sup>9</sup> An Irishman's heart is nothing but his imagination.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i.

<sup>10</sup> A servile race in folly nursed,
Who truckle most when treated worst.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 461.

<sup>11</sup> O, love is the soul of a true Irishman;
He loves all that's lovely, loves all that he can,

With his sprig of shillelagh and shamrock so green.

UNKNOWN, The Sprig of Shillelagh. Sometimes attributed to Edward Lysaght.

<sup>12</sup> More Irish than the Irish. (Hibernicis ipsis Hibernior.)

UNKNOWN. A proverbial expression.

IRON

I—Iron: Apothegms

<sup>13</sup> "Gold is for the mistress—silver for the maid—

Copper for the craftsman cunning at his trade."

"Good!" said the Baron, sitting in his hall,
"But Iron—Cold Iron—is master of them all."

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cold Iron.

Ay me! what perils do environ
The man that meddles with cold iron!

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1.

Put up your iron.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 42.

DEKKER, Works, i, 100. (1603) Etc., etc.

1 When the iron is well hot, it worketh the better.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Sonnes of Aymon, 136. (c. 1489)

2 Pandare, which that stood her fast by,
Felt iron hot, and he began to smite.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1276. (c. 1374)

3 We must beat the iron while it is hot; but we may polish it at leisure.

JOHN DRYDEN, Dedication of the Æneis.

4 Strike now, or else the iron cools.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 49.

And with new notions,—let me change the rule,—
Don't strike the iron till it's slightly cool.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 302.

Some shelter is in sight, some sacred safe
abode.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: The First Sunday in Advent.

15 Many a green isle needs must be
In the deep wide sea of Misery,
Or the mariner, worn and wan,
Never thus could voyage on.

ITALY AND THE ITALIANS

I—Italy

17 How has kind heaven adorn'd the happy land,

And scatter'd blessings with a wasteful hand!
JOSEPH ADDISON, A Letter from Italy, l. 105.

For wheresoe'er I turn my ravish'd eyes,
Gay gilded scenes and shining prospects rise;
Poetic fields encompass me around,
And still I seem to tread on classic ground.

JOSEPH ADDISON, A Letter from Italy, l. 9.

18 Naples, the Paradise of Italy,
As that is of earth.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Double Marriage. Act i.

Naples sitteth by the sea, keystone of an arch of azure.

My soul to-day Is far away
Sailing the Vesuvian Bay.

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Drifting.

19 Oh, woman-country, wooed, not wed,
Loved all the more by earth's male-lands
Laid to their hearts instead!

ROBERT BROWNING, By the Fireside.

Queen Mary's saying serves for me—
(When fortune's malice Lost her Calais)

Open my heart and you will see
Graved inside of it, "Italy."

ROBERT BROWNING, "De Gustibus—"

20 Italy a paradise for horses, hell for women,
as the proverb goes.

21 I love the language, that soft bastard Latin,

Which melts like kisses from a female
mouth,
And sounds as if it had been writ on satin,
With syllables which breathe of the sweet South.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 44.

The Tuscan's siren tongue,
That music in itself, whose sounds are song,
The poetry of speech.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, l. 58.

The story is extant, and writ in choice Italian.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 273.

O Italy! thy sabbaths will be soon
Our sabbaths, clos'd with mumm'ry and buffoon.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 152.

Italy! Italy! thou who'rt doomed to wear
The fatal gift of beauty, and possess
The dower funest of infinite wretchedness
Written upon thy forehead by despair.

(Italia, Italia, O tu cui feo la sorte,
Dono infelice di bellezza, ond' hai
Funesta dote d'infinita guai
Che in fronte scritti per gran doglia porte.)
VICENZO DA FILICAJA, Italia. (Longfellow, tr.)

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast
The fatal gift of beauty, which became
A funeral dower of present woes and past,
On thy sweet brow is sorrow plough'd by shame,
And annals graven in characters of flame.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 42. A free rendering of Filicaja's sonnet, Italia, which Byron appropriated without credit.

O Italy, how beautiful thou art!
Yet I could weep—for thou art lying, alas!
Low in the dust. . . .

Thine was a dangerous gift, the gift of Beauty.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy. Pt. i, sec. 9, l. 9.

Know'st thou the land where the lemon-trees bloom,
Where the gold orange glows in the deep
thicket's gloom,
Where a wind ever soft from the blue heaven
blows,
And the groves are of laurel and myrtle and rose?

(Kennst du das Land wo die Citronen blühen,
Im dunkeln Laub die Gold-Orangen glühn,
Ein sanfter Wind vom blauen Himmel weht,
Die Myrthe still und hoch der Lorbeer steht?)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister: Bk. iii, ch. 1,
Mignon's Song. (Carlyle, tr.)

Knowest thou the land where bloom the lemon trees?

And darkly gleam the golden oranges?
A gentle wind blows down from that blue sky;
Calm stands the myrtle and the laurel high.

Knowest thou the land? So far and fair!
Thou, whom I love, and I will wander there.

GOETHE, Kennst Du das Land. (Flecker, tr.)

Home of the Arts! where glory's faded smile Sheds lingering light o'er many a mouldering pile.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Restoration of the Works of Art to Italy.

Dear Italy! The sound of thy soft name
Soothes me with balm of Memory and Hope.
R. U. JOHNSON, Italian Rhapsody.

Oh, land forever golden,
Oh, song forever young,
Where color is music painted
And music is color sung.
R. U. JOHNSON, An Old Town and a New.

A man who has not been in Italy is always conscious of an inferiority.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

Beyond the Alps lies Italy. (In conspectu Alpes habeant, quarum alterum latus Italiae sit.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxi, ch. 30, l. 17.

Yet courage, soul! nor hold thy strength in vain,
In hope o'er come the steeps God set for thee,
For past the Alpine summits of great pain
Lieth thine Italy.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Beyond.

Italy is only a geographical expression.

PRINCE METTERNICH, Memorandum to the Great Powers, 2 Aug., 1814.

Can this be Italy, or but a dream Emerging from the broken waves of sleep? . . .

This world of beauty, color, and perfume,
Hoary with age, yet of unaging bloom.

ADA FOSTER MURRAY, Above Salerno.

By many a temple half as old as Time.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy.

There is a pool on Garda,
You'll see it in your dreams;
'Tis shaped of silvery glamor,
'Tis fused of golden beams.
CLINTON SCOLLARD, There Is a Pool on Garda.

Keats and Shelley sleep at Rome,
She in well-loved Tuscan earth;
Finding all their death's long home
Far from their old home of birth.
Italy, you hold in trust
Very sacred English dust.

II—The Italians

3 The Italians are wise before the deed; the Germans in the deed; the French after the deed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 All Italians are plunderers. (Gli Italiani tutti ladroni.)

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Remark, in a loud voice in public company. To which a lady replied, "Non tutti, ma buona parte," "Not all, but a good part," a play upon Napoleon's name. (COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria: Satyrane's Letters. No. 2.) Pasquin made the same pun when the French were in possession of Rome: "I Francesi son tutti ladri; non tutti, ma buona parte." (CATHERINE TAYLOR, Letters from Italy. Vol. i, p. 239.)

5 Salad, and eggs, and lighter fare,
Tune the Italian spark's guitar.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 246.

6 Subtle, discerning, eloquent, the slave
Of Love, of Hate, for ever in extremes;
Gentle when unprovoked, easily won,
But quick in quarrel—through a thousand shades

His spirit flits, chameleon-like; and mocks
The eye of the observer.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Venice.

7 Thy locks jet-black, and clustering round a face

Open as day and full of manly daring.
Thou hadst a hand, a heart for all that came,
Herdsman or pedlar, monk or muleteer;
And few there were that met thee not with smiles.

Mishap pass'd o'er thee like a summer-cloud.
Cares thou hadst none; and they, who stood to hear thee,

Caught the infection and forgot their own.
Nature conceived thee in her merriest mood,
. . . And at thy birth the cricket chirp'd.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Luigi.

IVY

8 For ivy climbs the crumbling hall
To decorate decay.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party.

As creeping ivy clings to wood or stone,
And hides the ruin that it feeds upon.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 285.

Where round some mould'ring tow'r pale ivy creeps,
And low-brow'd rocks hang nodding o'er the deeps.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 243.

Round broken columns clasping ivy twin'd.
POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 69.

From a tower in an ivy-green jacket.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Marriage.

9 That headlong ivy! . . . bold to leap a height

'Twas strong to climb; as good to grow on graves

As twist about a thyrsus; pretty too (And that's not ill) when twisted round a comb.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 47.

10 Oh, a dainty plant is the Ivy green,
That creepeth o'er ruins old!
Of right choice food are his meals I ween,
In his cell so lone and cold. . . .

Creeping where no life is seen,
A rare old plant is the Ivy green.
DICKENS, The Ivy Green. (Pickwick Papers.
Ch. 6.)

For the stateliest building man can raise
Is the Ivy's food at last.

Creeping on, where time has been,
A rare old plant is the Ivy Green.
CHARLES DICKENS, The Ivy Green.

11 Oh! how could Fancy crown with thee,
In ancient days, the God of Wine,
And bid thee at the banquet be Companion of the Vine?

Ivy! thy home is where each sound
Of revelry hath long been o'er;
Where song and beaker once went round,
But now are known no more.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Ivy Song.

12 Direct The clasping ivy where to climb.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 216.

Yet once more, O ye laurels, and once more,
Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never-sere,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude,
And with forc'd fingers rude,
Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 1.

13 On my velvet couch reclining,
Ivy leaves my brow entwining,
While my soul expands with glee,
What are kings and crowns to me?

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode 48.

14 Bring, bring the madding Bay, the drunken vine;

The creeping, dirty, courtly Ivy join.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 303.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 2. (1812)

A work it is as easy to be done

As 'tis to say Jack! Robys on.

HALLIWELL, Archaic Dictionary, gives this as from an "old play," but the play has never been identified, and the couplet is palpably ben trovato. Many tales have been invented to explain the origin of the phrase, but none convincing.

<sup>3</sup> As cunningly . . . as ever poor cuckoo could commend his Jack in a box.

HENRY CHETTEL, Kind-Hart's Dreame, 45. (1592)

No other Jack i' the box but he.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 1. (1623)

<sup>4</sup> Jack Sprat will eat no fat,
And Jill doth love no lean,
Yet betwixt them both,
They lick the dishes clean.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 17. (1639)

Jack Sprat he loved no fat,
And his wife she loved no lean:
And yet betwixt them both,
They lick't the platters clean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 211. (1670)

Jack Sprat could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean;
And so, betwixt them both, you see,
They lick'd the platter clean.

HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes, 34. (1843)

CHARLES DIBDIN, All's One to Jack. Jack Tar, the popular name for a sailor. See also under SEA.

<sup>6</sup> "He calls the knaves Jacks, this boy," said Estella with disdain, before our first game was out.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 8.

<sup>7</sup> What is vulgarly called Jack of both sides.

(Ut vulgo dici solet Joannem ad oppositum.)
EDMUND GRINDAL, Letter to John Foxe, 28 Dec., 1557.

Who played jacks on both sides, and were indeed Neuters.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works, iv, 158. (1609)

Reader, John Newter, who erst played The Jack on both sides, here is laid.

UNKNOWN, Wits' Recreations. (1654)

How often have those men of honour . . . play'd

Jack a both sides, to-day for and to-morrow against.

DANIEL DEFOE, Complete Gentleman. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1729)

JOHN HEYWOOD, Philocothonista. (1635) A pitcher of waxed leather, sometimes called a black-jack.

Body of me, I'm dry still; give me the jack, boy;

This wooden skilt holds nothing.

JOHN FLETCHER, Bloody Brother. Act ii, sc. 2.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 12. (1659) THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6372. (1732)

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy,
All play and no work makes Jack a mere toy.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Harry and Lucy.

All work and no play may make Peter a dull boy as well as Jack.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters. Vol. i, p. 313.

And all labour without any play, boys,
Makes Jack a dull boy in the end.

H. A. PAGE, Vers de Société.

<sup>10</sup> There are giants to slay, and they call for their Jack.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Empty Purse.

GEFFRAY MINSHULL, Essays, 50. (1618)

You mongrel, you John-of-all-trades!

JASPER MAYNE, City Match. Act ii, sc. 5. (1639)

Yet I am still in my vocation; for you know I am a Jack of all trades.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 1. (1690)

He is a bit of Jack of all trades, or to use his own words, "a regular Robinson Crusoe."

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz. Ch. 2. (1836)

<sup>12</sup> To be Jack in an office.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 214. (1670)

Jack in an office is a great man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3050. (1732)

A type of Jacks-in-office insolence and absurdity.
DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1857)

And Jack out of office she may bid me walk.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

But long I will not be Jack out of office.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 175.

1
I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 12.

2
He speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 3, l. 87. (1600)

Can Jack an apes be merry when his clog is at his heels?
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 321. (1605)

There is more ado with one Jack an apes than all the bears.
THOMAS D'URFEE, *Comical History of Don
Quixote*. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 2. (1694)

3
Silken, sly, insinuating Jacks.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 53.

4
I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 60. A "Jack o' the clock" was a mechanical figure which struck the bell.

This is the night, nine the hour, and I the jack that gives warning.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2.

5
Lo, Jack would be a gentleman!
JOHN SKELTON, Works, i, 15. (1529)

Jack would be a gentleman, if he could speak French.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

We ape the French chiefly in two particulars:
First, in their language ("which if Jack could speak, he would be a gentleman").
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, i, 118.
(1662)

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 170.
(1592)

6
Then Jack-a-lent comes justling in,
With the head-piece of a herring.
UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary, 191. (c. 1560)

He was dressed up like a Jack a Lent.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, 50. (1575)

You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 27. (1600) A Jack-a-Lent was a puppet thrown at during the Lenten fairs.

II—Jack and Jill

7
There is not so bad a Jack but there is as bad a Jill.

BERTHELSON, English-Danish Dictionary. (1754)
There are many variations of this proverb:
"A good Jack makes a good Jill." "Jack's as good as Jill." "If Jack were better, Jill would not be so bad," Jack being a sort of generic name for a young fellow and Jill for a young woman.

8
For not a Jack among them but must have his Jill.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)

9
If Jack's in love, he's no judge of Jill's Beauty.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

10
What avaieth lordship, yourself for to kill With care and with thought how Jack shall have Jill?

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 290. (c.
1520)

Jack shall have Jill, Nought shall go ill.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 461. (1595)

Every Jack will find a Jill, gang the world as it
may.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 2.

11
While the ancient law fulfills,
Myriad moons shall wane and wax.

Jack must have his pair of Jills,
Jill must have her pair of Jacks.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Old Stuff.

12
Jack shall pipe and Jill shall dance.
GEORGE WITHER, Christmas.

13
Jack and Jill went up the hill,
To fetch a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown
And Jill came tumbling after.
UNKNOWN, Jack and Jill.

JACKSON, ANDREW

14
In answer to our shouting, fire lit his eye of gray;

Erect, but thin and pallid, he passed upon his bay. . . .

But spite of fever and fasting, and hours of sleepless care,

The soul of Andrew Jackson shone forth in glory there.

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, The Battle of New Orleans.

15
Old turkey-cock on a forest rock,
Old faithful heart who could boast and strut;
I will think of you when the woods are cut—
Old, old Andrew Jackson. . . .

He broke the bones of all cattle who horned him,
He broke the bones of all who scorned him,— . . .

The finest hope from the Cave of Adullam,
Since Davis ascended the throne;—
Old Andrew Jackson, the old, old raven, lean as a bone!

VACHEL LINDSAY, Old Old Old Andrew Jackson.

Honor him, aye, for the name that he bore!

Fierce as a fighter, and yet above trickery,
Virile and valiant and leal to the core!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, Old Hickory.

How General Andrew Jackson got the title of "Old Hickory" is told by Captain William Allen, who messed with him during the Creek War. Allen's story is that Jackson caught a severe cold during the advance. There were no tents, but Allen and his brother cut down a stout hickory tree, peeled off the bark and persuaded Jackson to use it as a covering. A drunken citizen fell over it next morning, and as Jackson crawled out, greeted him with, "Hello, Old Hickory! come out of your bark and jine us in a drink." This seems a tall yarn, and the sobriquet more probably referred to Jackson's strong and wiry build.

JACKSON, THOMAS JONATHAN (STONEWALL)

BRIG.-GEN. BERNARD E. BEE, at battle of Bull Run, 21 July, 1861, referring to the Confederate general, Thomas Jonathan Jackson. General Jackson always insisted that Bee had referred to his brigade and not to himself personally, but the sobriquet "Stonewall" stuck to him the rest of his life. (POORE, Reminiscences of Metropolis, ii, 85.)

<sup>3</sup> Says he, "That's Banks, he's fond of shell, Lord save his soul! we'll give him—;" well
That's Stonewall Jackson's way.

JOHN WILLIAMSON PALMER, Stonewall Jackson's Way.

<sup>4</sup> Yes, it was noblest for him—it was best (Questioning naught of our Father's decrees),

There to pass over the river and rest
Under the shade of the trees!

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Under the Shade of the Trees. General Jackson's last words were, "Let us cross the river and rest in the shade."

<sup>5</sup> Whom have we here—shrouded in martial manner,
Crowned with a martyr's charm?
A grand dead hero, in a living banner,

Born of his heart and arm.
UNKNOWN, The Brigade Must Not Know, Sir.

JASMINE

<sup>6</sup> Jasmine is sweet and has many loves.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

<sup>7</sup> Jas in the Arab language is despair,
And Min the darkest meaning of a lie.
Thus cried the Jessamine among the flowers,
How justly doth a lie

Draw on its head despair!

Among the fragrant spirits of the bowers
The boldest and the strongest still was I.

Although so fair,
Therefore from Heaven

A stronger perfume unto me was given
Than any blossom of the summer hours.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

Among the flowers no perfume is like mine:
That which is best in me comes from within.
So those in this world who would rise and shine,
Should seek internal excellence to win.
And though 'tis true that falsehood and despair
Meet in my name, yet bear it still in mind
That where they meet they perish. All is fair
When they are gone and nought remains behind.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

<sup>8</sup> And the jasmine flower in her fair young breast,
(O the faint, sweet smell of that jasmine flower!)

And the one bird singing alone to his nest.
And the one star over the tower.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

It smelt so faint, and it smelt so sweet,
It made me creep and it made me cold.
Like the scent that steals from the crumbling sheet

Where a mummy is half unroll'd.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

<sup>9</sup> And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tube-
rose,

The sweetest flower for scent that blows.

SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. St. 10.

<sup>10</sup> Out in the lonely woods the jasmine burns
Its fragrant lamps, and turns
Into a royal court with green festoons
The banks of dark lagoons.

HENRY TIMROD, Spring.

<sup>11</sup> As climbing jasmine pure.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

JEALOUSY

I—Jealousy: Definitions

<sup>12</sup> Thou tyrant, tyrant Jealousy,
Thou tyrant of the mind!

DRYDEN, Song of Jealousy.

1 Jealousy is the bellows of the mind;
Touch it but gently, and it warms desire,
If handled roughly, you are all on fire.

DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue to Horne's Alonzo.

2 Jealousy is said to be the offspring of Love.
Yet, unless the parent makes haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest till it has poisoned the parent.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

3 Jealousy is nourished by doubt, and becomes madness or ends when it passes from doubt to certainty. (La jalousie se nourrit dans les doutes, et elle devient fureur, ou elle finit, sitôt qu'on passe du doute à la certitude.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 32.

Jealousy is always born with love, but does not always die with it. (La jalousie naît toujours avec l'amour, mais elle ne meurt pas toujours avec lui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 361.

Jealousy is the greatest evil of all, and the one which excites the least pity in the persons who occasion it. (La jalousie est le plus grand de tous les maux, et celui qui fait le moins de pitié aux personnes qui le causent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 503.

4 No true love there can be without its dread penalty—jealousy.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto i, st. 24,
l. 8.

5 Nor jealousy
Was understood, the injur'd lover's hell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 449.

6 O jealousy thou magnifier of trifles!

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act i, sc. 1. (Bohn, tr.)

7 Jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster

Begot upon itself, born on itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 159.

8 Jealousy, at any rate, is one of the consequences of love; you may like it or not, at pleasure; but there it is.

R. L. STEVENSON, On Falling in Love.

9 Jealousy's a city passion; 'tis a thing unknown among people of quality.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Confederacy.

10 Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo.

H. G. WELLS, The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman.
Ch. ix, sec. 2.

11 It is the hydra of calamities,
The sevenfold death.

YOUNG, The Revenge. Act ii, sc. 1.

II—Jealousy: Apothegms

12 That is ever the way. 'Tis all jealousy to the bride, and good wishes to the corpse.

J. M. BARRIE, Quality Street. Act i.

13 Jealousy be so bred in the bone that it will never out of the flesh.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwark of Defence. Fo.
75.

14 Yet he was jealous, though he did not show it,
For jealousy dislikes the world to know it.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 65.

15 Our very best friends have a tincture of jealousy even in their friendship; and when they hear us praised by others, will ascribe it to sinister and interested motives if they can.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, p. 80. See also under FRIEND.

16 Anger and jealousy can no more bear to lose sight of their objects than love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. i, ch. 10.

Jealousy is never satisfied with anything short of an omniscience that would detect the subtlest fold of the heart.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. vi, ch. 10.

17 He that a white horse and a fair wife keepeth,
For fear, for care, for jealousy scarce sleep-eth.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 191.

'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 183.

18 Man's of a jealous and mistaking kind.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

19 There is more self-love than love in jealousy.
(Il y a dans la jalousie plus d'amour-propre que d'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 324.

20 Jealousy will be the ruin of you. (Perdet te dolor hic.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 98, l. 11.

21 Build on your own deserts, and ever be
A stranger to love's enemy, jealousy.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iv, sc. 2.

22 Jealousy shuts one door and opens two.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays, p. 370.

23 Love being jealous makes a good eye look asquint.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

24 One not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreme.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 345.

1 Jealousy in love . . . That is love's curse.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1340.

2 The ear of jealousy heareth all things.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 10.

This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 657.

III—Jealousy: Its Torments

3 A jealous love lights his torch from the firebrands of the furies.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 11 Feb., 1780.

4 Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
With groundless jealousy repine,
With silly whims and fancies frantic,
Merely to make our love romantic?
BYRON, To a Lady.

5 But whither am I strayed? I need not raise Trophies to thee from other men's dispraise;
Nor is thy fame on lesser ruins built;
Nor needs thy juster title the foul guilt
Of Eastern kings, who, to secure their reign,
Must have their brothers, sons, and kindred slain.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Mr. John Fletcher's Works.

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne;
View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes,
And hate for arts that caus'd himself to rise.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 197.

6 Then grew a wrinkle on fair Venus' brow,
The amber sweet of love is turn'd to gall!
Gloomy was Heaven; bright Phœbus did avow

He would be coy, and would not love at all:
Swearing no greater mischief could be wrought,

Than love united to a jealous thought.
ROBERT GREENE, Jealousy.

7 O jealousy,
Thou ugliest fiend of hell! thy deadly venom
Preys on my vitals, turns the healthful hue
Of my fresh cheek to haggard sallowness,
And drinks my spirit up!
HANNAH MORE, David and Goliath. Pt. v.

8 Self-harming jealousy. . . .
How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 102; l. 116.

A jealousy so strong
That judgement cannot cure.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 310.

9 Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague

To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 146.

10 Green-eyed jealousy.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 110.

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 165.

Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 322.

11 Think'st thou I'd make of life a jealousy
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions?
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 177.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 649.

12 What heart-breaking torments from jealousy flow,
Ah! none but the jealous—the jealous can know!
R. B. SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

13 Jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.
Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

But through the heart
Should Jealousy its venom once diffuse,
'Tis then delightful misery no more,
But agony unmix'd, incessant gall,
Corroding every thought, and blasting all Love's Paradise.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1075.

14 How great so e'er your rigours are,
With them alone I'll cope;
I can endure my own despair,
But not another's hope.
WILLIAM WALSH, Song.

The damning thought stuck in my throat and cut me like a knife,
That she, whom all my life I'd loved, should be another's wife.
H. G. BELL, The Uncle.

15 Hunger, revenge, to sleep are petty foes,
But only Death the jealous eyes can close.
WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i, sc. 4.

Inquisitiveness as seldom cures jealousy, as drinking in a fever quenches the thirst.
WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iv, sc. 5.

1 It is jealousy's peculiar nature,
To swell small things to great, nay, out of nought,
To conjure much; and then to lose its reason
Amid the hideous phantoms it has form'd.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iii, sc. 1.

IV—Jealousy and Women

2 She'd have you spew up what you've drunk abroad. (Ut devomas vult, quod foris potaveris.)

CÆCILIUS, Plocium, l. 162.

3 In jealousy I rede eek thou him bind,
And thou shalt make him crouch as doth a quail.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 1149. Advice to a wife on the way to treat a husband. "Rede" means to advise.

4 Jealousy is inborn in women's hearts.
(Ἐπίφθονόν τι χρέμα θηλείας φρενός.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 181.

5 A jealous woman believes everything her passion suggests.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

What frenzy dictates, jealousy believes.

JOHN GAY, Dione.

6 Can't I another's face commend,
And to her virtues be a friend,
But instantly your forehead lowers,
As if her merit lessen'd yours?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables: The Farmer, the Spaniel and the Cat.

7 All jealous women are mad.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii.

8 For story and experience tell us
That man grows old and woman jealous.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 65.

9 A jealous woman sets the whole house afire.
(Incendit omnem feminae zelus domum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ.

10 I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l.
151.

11 The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 69.

Each jealous of the other, as the stung are of the adder.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 1, l. 55.

12 Plain women are always jealous of their husbands, beautiful women never are!

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act i.

JEFFERSON, THOMAS

13 Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia.

JEFFERSON, Epitaph, written for himself.

14 I have the consolation to reflect that during the period of my administration not a drop of the blood of a single fellow citizen was shed by the sword of war or of the law.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 256.

15 Thomas Jefferson still lives.

JOHN ADAMS. Last words. As a matter of fact, Jefferson had died on the morning of that very day, 4 July, 1826. However, Adams's words were a prophecy, for he does still live.

16 He had a steadfast and abiding faith in justice, righteousness and liberty as the prevailing and abiding forces in the conduct of States, and that justice and righteousness were sure to prevail where any people bear rule in perfect liberty.

GEORGE F. HOAR, Thomas Jefferson.

17 Since the days when Jefferson expounded his code of political philosophy, the whole world has become his pupil.

MICHAEL MACWHITE, Address, at University of Virginia, 13 April, 1931.

18 A gentleman of thirty-two who could calculate an eclipse, survey an estate, tie an artery, plan an edifice, try a cause, break a horse, dance a minuett and play the violin.

JAMES PARTON, Life of Jefferson, p. 164.

19 The immortality of Thomas Jefferson does not lie in any one of his achievements, but in his attitude toward mankind.

I—Jesting: Apothegms

20 Intermingle . . . jest with earnest.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse.

A joke's a very serious thing.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 1373.

And tells the jest without the smile.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

21 He'd rather lose his dinner than his jest.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act i.

A joke never gains over an enemy, but often loses a friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 228.

Some had rather lose their friend than their jest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

See also under FRIEND.

The ordinary and over-worn trade of jesting.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Woman Hater: Prologue.

Vivacity and wit make a man shine in company; but trite jokes and loud laughter reduce him to a buffoon.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

A threadbare jester's threadbare jest.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 529.

Jesting lies bring serious sorrows.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 436.

The manner of jesting ought not to be extravagant or immoderate, but refined and witty. . . . There are, generally speaking, two sorts of jests: the one, coarse, rude, vicious, indecent; the other polite, refined, clever, witty. . . . The first, if well timed, is becoming to the most dignified person; the other is unfit for any gentleman.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 103.

O happy mortal! he never failed to have his jest. (O mortalem beatum! cui certo scio ludum numquam defuisse.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 30.

I love my jest, an the ship were sinking, as we say'n at sea.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 3.

Joking and humor are pleasant, and often of extreme utility. (Suavis autem est, et vehementer sæpe utilis jocus et facetiæ.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 24.

Moderation should be observed in joking. (Adhibenda est in jocando moderatio.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 59.

And the sign of the true-hearted sailor Is to give and to take a good joke.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Jack at the Windlass.

A chestnut. I have heard you tell the joke twenty-seven times, and I am sure it was a chestnut.

WILLIAM DIMOND, The Broken Sword. A forgotten melodrama first produced in 1816. Captain Xavier, the principal character, is always repeating the same yarns, and is telling about one of his exploits connected with a cork-tree, when Pablo corrects him, "A chestnut-tree, you mean, captain," and the discussion continues as to whether it was a cork or a chestnut.

As men aim rightest when they shoot in jest.

DRYDEN, Essay upon Satire, l. 20.

Beware of jokes; . . . we go away hollow and ashamed.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

Jest not with the two-edged sword of God's word.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Of Jestings.

Cease your funning.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Song, l. 1.

When thou dost tell another's jest, therein Omit the oaths, which true wit cannot need; Pick out of tales the mirth, but not the sin.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 11.

Less at thine own things laugh; lest in the jest

Thy person share, and the conceit advance.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 39.

He must not laugh at his own wheeze:

A snuff-box has no right to sneeze.

KEITH PRESTON, The Humorist.

A jest loses its point when the jester laughs himself. (Der Spass verliert Alles, wenn der Spassmacher selber lacht.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act i, sc. 7.

All things are big with jest: nothing that's plain

But may be witty, if thou hast the vein.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 40.

Putting jesting aside, let us turn to serious thoughts. (Sed tamen amoto quæramus seria ludo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 27.

Jesting apart. (Omissis jociis.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 21.

Leave jesting whiles it pleaseth, lest it turn to earnest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Jesting often cuts hard knots more effectively than gravity. (Ridiculum acri Fortius et melius magnas plerumque secat res.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 14.

Joking decides great things,

Stronglier, and better oft than earnest can.

MILTON, Imitation of Horace. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 14. (Apology for Smectymnus.)

I gleaned jests at home from obsolete farces.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 141.

A jest breaks no bones.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1781.)

Suppress me if you can! I am a Merry Jest!

II—Jesting: The Bitter Jest

<sup>2</sup> Jests that give pain are no jests.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 62.

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium. Bk. i, l. 24.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 148.

<sup>5</sup> Of all the griefs that harass the distress'd, Sure the most bitter is a scornful jest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 166.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 48, l. 21.

May there be no ill-natured interpreter to put false constructions on the honest intention of my jests. (Absit a jocorum nostrorum simplicitate malignus interpres.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, Preface.

<sup>7</sup> Not a letter of mine is dipped in poisoned jest. (Nulla venenato littera mixta joco est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 566.

No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence it the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 244.

<sup>8</sup> Bitter jests, whereof the memory is of long duration. (Acerbis facitiis . . . quarum . . . in longum memoria est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. v, sec. 2.

A bitter jest that comes too near the truth leaves a sharp sting behind. (Asperæ facetiæ, ubi nimis ex vero taxere, acram sui memoriam relinquunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 68.

<sup>9</sup> You jest: ill jesting with edge-tools!

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 184.

JESUS CHRIST, see Christ

JEW

<sup>10</sup> The unbelieving Jews.

<sup>11</sup> To be a Jew is a destiny.

VICKI BAUM, And Life Goes On, p. 193.

<sup>12</sup> Have mercy upon all Jews, Turks, Infidels, and Heretics.

Book of Common Prayer: Good Friday.

<sup>13</sup> A people still, whose common ties are gone; Who, mixed with every race, are lost in none.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 4.

<sup>14</sup> Yes, I am a Jew, and when the ancestors of the right honourable gentleman were brutal savages in an unknown island, mine were priests in the temple of Solomon.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, reputed reply to Daniel O'Connell.

The gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in Silesia, mine were princes of the earth.

JUDAH BENJAMIN, in reply to a taunt by a Senator of German descent. (MOORE, Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis.)

You call me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages. I am proud to be a Jew.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Loyalties. Act ii.

<sup>15</sup> The Jews are among the aristocracy of every land; if a literature is called rich in the possession of a few classic tragedies, what shall we say to a national tragedy lasting for fifteen hundred years, in which the poets and the actors were also the heroes.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. vi, ch. 42.

<sup>16</sup> The sufferance, which is the badge of the Jew, has made him, in these days, the ruler of the rulers of the earth.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>17</sup> Suavity toward the Jews! Although you have lived among them, it is evident that you little understand those enemies of the human race. Haughty and at the same time base, combining an invincible obstinacy with a spirit despicably mean, they weary alike your love and your hatred.

ANATOLE FRANCE, The Procurator of Judea.

<sup>18</sup> As dear as a Jew's eye.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 146. (1593)

There will come a Christian by

Will be worth a Jewess' eye.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 43.

<sup>19</sup> Triumphant race! and did your power decay? Failed the bright promise of your early day?

REGINALD HEBER, Palestine.

<sup>20</sup> When people talk about a wealthy man of my creed, they call him an Israelite; but if he is poor they call him a Jew.

HEINRICH HEINE, MS. papers.

If my theory of relativity is proven successful, Germany will claim me as a German and France will declare that I am a citizen of the world. Should my theory prove untrue, France will say that I am a German and Germany will declare that I am a Jew.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Address, Sorbonne, Paris.

1 The Jews spend at Easter.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 244.

2 Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

New Testament: John, i, 47.

3 A hopeless faith, a homeless race,
Yet seeking the most holy place,
And owning the true bliss. . . .
Or like pale ghosts that darkling roam,
Hovering around their ancient home,
But find no refuge there.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Fifth Sunday in Lent.

4 And Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people.

Old Testament: I Kings, ix, 7.

5 It is curious to see a superstition dying out. The idea of a Jew (which our pious ancestors held in horror) has nothing in it now revolting. We have found the claws of the beast, and pared its nails, and now we take it to our arms, fondle it, write plays to flatter it: it is visited by princes, affects a taste, patronizes the arts, and is the only liberal and gentleman-like thing in Christendom.

CHARLES LAMB, Specimens of the English Dramatic Poets: Marlowe's Rich Jew of Malta.

6 Still on Israel's head forlorn,
Every nation heaps its scorn.

EMMA LAZARUS, The World's Justice.

His cup is gall, his meat is tears,
His passion lasts a thousand years.

EMMA LAZARUS, Crowing of the Red Cock.

7 Who hateth me but for my happiness?
Or who is honoured now but for his wealth?
Rather had I, a Jew, be hated thus,
Than pitied in a Christian poverty.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 1.

To undo a Jew is charity, and not sin.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act iv, sc. 6.

8 Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea!
Jehovah has triumph'd—His people are free.

THOMAS MOORE, Sound the Loud Timbrel.

9 This is the Jew

That Shakespeare drew.

Attributed to POPE, after a performance of Shylock by Charles Macklin, 14 Feb., 1741. (Biographica Dramatica. Vol. i, pt. 2, p. 469.)

I believe there are few
But have heard of a Jew
Named Shylock, of Venice, as arrant a screw
In money transactions as ever you knew.

R. H. BARHAM, The Merchant of Venice.

10 Salvation is from the Jews.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 14. (Salus ex Judæis.—Vulgate.)

11 When Israel, of the Lord belov'd,
Out of the land of bondage came,
Her fathers' God before her mov'd,
An awful guide in smoke and flame.
SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 39.

12 I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 198.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gabardine.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 110.

13 He hath . . . laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 58.

Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 60.

I pray you, think you question with the Jew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise,
When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—
His Jewish heart.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 70.

14 I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 355.

15 The Jews generally give value. They make you pay; but they deliver the goods. In my experience the men who want something for nothing are invariably Christians.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. 4.

1 A race prone to superstition, opposed to religion. (Gens superstitioni obnoxia, religionibus adversa.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. v, sec. 13.

JEWEL

2 Have you ever noticed, Harry, that many jewels make women either incredibly fat or incredibly thin?

J. M. BARRIE, The Twelve-pound Look.

3 Nay, tarry a moment, my charming girl: Here is a jewel of gold and pearl;

A beautiful cross it is, I ween,
As ever on beauty's breast was seen.

There's nothing at all but love to pay;

Take it, and wear it, but only stay!

Ah! Sir Hunter, what excellent taste!

I'm not—in such—particular—haste!

4 Stones of small worth may lie unseen by day,
But night itself does the rich gem betray.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. iii, l. 37.

5 Jewels, orators of Love,
Which, ah! too well men know, do women move.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Complaint of Rosamond. St. 52.

Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More quick than words do move a woman's mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 90.

6 These gems have life in them: their colours speak,
Say what words fail of.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i, sc. 2, l. 528.

7 The rarest things in the world, next to a spirit of discernment, are diamonds and pearls. (Après l'esprit de discernement, ce qu'il y a au monde de plus rare, ce sont les diamants et les perles.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 12.

8 Bags of fiery opals, sapphires, amethysts, Jacinths, hard topaz, grass-green emeralds, Beauteous rubies, sparkling diamonds, And sold-seen costly stones of so great price. . . .

This is the ware wherein consists my wealth;
And thus, methinks, should men of judgement frame

Their means of traffic from the vulgar trade,
And, as their wealth increaseth, so inclose Infinite riches in a little room.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, l. 60.

'Tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their value's great.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 6, l. 189.

One entire and perfect chrysolite.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 145.

9 How many a thing which we cast to the ground,
When others pick it up, becomes a gem!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 41.

10 On her white breast a sparkling cross she bore,
Which Jews might kiss, and infidels adore.
POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 7.

11 From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 94.

She hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 48.

12 I see the jewel best enameled
Will lose his beauty.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 109.

13 Your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 416.

A hoop of gold, a paltry ring.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 147.

Rich and rare were the gems she wore,
And a bright gold ring on her hand she bore.

THOMAS MOORE, Rich and Rare.

14 I took a costly jewel from my neck,
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 106.

15 I'll give my jewels for a set of beads.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 147.

16 Like stones of worth, they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lii.

17 The tip no jewel needs to wear:
The tip is jewel of the ear.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, What Tongue Can Her Perfection Tell?

18 Have I caught my heavenly jewel?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet ii. From earliest times it has been the custom to call any shining excellence, or precious thing, a "jewel," as in the examples which follow:

Plain dealing's a jewel, but they that use it die beggars.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

My chastity's the jewel of our house.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 46.

The jewel of life

By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 1, l. 40.

My modesty, the jewel in my dower.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 54.

O discretion, thou art a jewel.

UNKNOWN. From a song included in a collection called The Skylark, London, 1772.

Job called his friends miserable comforters.

BRATSWAY, English Gentleman, p. 132. (1630)

They sat down, like Job's three comforters, and said not a word to me for a great while.

DANIEL DEFOE, Roxana. (Works, xii, 20.)

He called her Small Hopes, and Job's comforter.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, vii, 230.

UNKNOWN. In Thomas C. Haliburton's Sam Slick a turkey gobbler is described as being so poor that he had only one feather in his tail, and so weak he had to lean against a fence to gobble. This is the probable origin of the phrase. Job, of course, had no turkey, since the turkey was a native of America.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL

<sup>6</sup> All the nodosities of the oak without its strength; all the contortions of the sibyl without the inspiration.

EDMUND BURKE, of Croft's style in his Life of Young, which some one had compared to that of Dr. Johnson. (PRIOR, Life of Burke.)

A sort of broken Johnsonese.

MACAULAY, Essays: Madame d'Arblay.

FANNY BURNEY, Diary, 23 Aug., 1778.

You must not mind me, madam; I say strange things, but I mean no harm.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (FANNY BURNEY, Diary, 23 Aug., 1778.)

<sup>8</sup> Rough Johnson, the great moralist.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 7.

<sup>9</sup> Would that every Johnson in the world had his veridical Boswell, or leash of Boswells.

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

<sup>10</sup> Who wit with jealous eye surveys,
And sickens at another's praise.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 663.
Referring to Dr. Johnson.

<sup>11</sup> Here Johnson lies—a sage, by all allow'd,
Whom to have bred may well make England proud;

Whose prose was eloquence by wisdom taught,
The graceful vehicle of virtuous thought;
Whose verse may claim—grave, masculine,
and strong,

Superior praise to the mere poet's song;
Who many a noble gift from heav'n possess'd
And faith at last—alone worth all the rest.
Oh man immortal by a double prize!
By Fame on earth—by Glory in the skies!

COWPER, Epitaph on Dr. Johnson.

Here lies poor Johnson; reader have a care;
Tread lightly, lest you rouse a sleeping bear.
Religious, moral, generous, and humane
He was; but self-sufficient, rude, and vain;
Ill-bred, and overbearing in dispute,
A scholar and a Christian and a brute.

SOAME JENYNS, Epitaph on Samuel Johnson.

<sup>12</sup> If you were to make little fishes talk, they would talk like whales.

GOLDSMITH, to Dr. Johnson. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

descriptive epithet more nicely appropriate than that! Dr. Johnson's morality was as English an article as a beefsteak.

HAWTHORNE, Our Old Home: Lichfield and Uttoxeter.

<sup>1</sup> What a singular destiny has been that of this remarkable man! To be regarded in his own age as a classic, and in ours as a companion! To receive from his contemporaries that full homage which men of genius have in general received from posterity; to be more intimately known to posterity than other men are known to their contemporaries.

MACAULAY, Essays: Boswell's Life of Johnson.

<sup>2</sup> O rough, pure, stubborn, troubled soul: for whom

A smile of special tenderness men keep—
Who prayed for strength "to regulate my room,"

And "preservation from immoderate sleep."

LORD PEMBROKE, referring to Dr. Johnson. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

<sup>4</sup> The conversation of Johnson is strong and clear, and may be compared to an antique statue, where every vein and muscle is distinct and bold. Ordinary conversation resembles an inferior cast.

THOMAS PERCY, Bishop of Dromore and editor of the Reliques. (BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 1778.)

<sup>5</sup> This last and long enduring passion for Mrs. Thrale was, however, composed of cupboard love, Platonic love, and vanity tickled and gratified.

ANNA SEWARD, Letters, ii, 103. Referring to Dr. Johnson.

<sup>6</sup> I have not wasted my life trifling with literary fools in taverns as Johnson did when he should have been shaking England with the thunder of his spirit.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

Garrick, had he called Dr. Johnson Punch, would have spoken profoundly and wittily, whereas Dr. Johnson, in hurling that epithet at him, was but picking up the cheapest sneer an actor is subject to.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant: Preface.

SMOLLETT, Letter to Wilkes, 16 March, 1759.

<sup>8</sup> Of those who have thus survived themselves most completely, left a sort of personal seduction behind them in the world, and retained, after death, the art of making friends, Montaigne and Samuel Johnson certainly stand first.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books: Charles of Orleans.

<sup>9</sup> I own I like not Johnson's turgid style,
That gives an inch the importance of a mile,
Casts of manure a wagon-load around
To raise a simple daisy from the ground;
Uplifts the club of Hercules, for what?
To crush a butterfly or brain a gnat! . . .
Alike in every theme his pompous art
Heaven's awful thunder, or a rumbling cart!

JOHN WOLCOT, On Dr. Samuel Johnson.

JONSON, BEN

<sup>10</sup> Too nicely Jonson knew the critic's part;
Nature in him was almost lost in Art.

WILLIAM COLLINS, An Epistle to Sir Thomas Hammer, on His Edition of Shakespeare, l. 55.

<sup>11</sup> Next these learn'd Jonson in this list I bring
Who had drunk deep of the Pierian Spring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Of Poets and Poesy.

<sup>12</sup> Let Hebron, nay let Hell produce a Man
So made for Mischief as Ben Jochanan.
A Jew of humble Parentage was He,
By Trade a Levite, though of low Degree:
His Pride no higher than the Desk aspir'd. . . .
He could not live by God, but chang'd his Master:

Inspir'd by Want, was made a Factious Tool,
They got a Villain, and we lost a Fool.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 352.

<sup>13</sup> Here lies Jonson with the rest
Of the Poets; but the Best.
Reader, would'st thou more have known?
Ask his Story, not this Stone.
That will speak what this can't tell
Of his glory. So farewell.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Ben Jonson.

Ah Ben! Say how, or when Shall we thy guests Meet at those Lyric Feasts,
Made at the Sun, The Dog, the Triple Tun?
Where we such clusters had
As made us nobly wild, not mad;
And yet each Verse of thine
Out-did the meat, out-did the frolic wine!

ROBERT HERRICK, An Ode for Ben Jonson.

<sup>14</sup> Then Jonson came, instructed from the school,
To please in method, and invent by rule.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prologue on the Opening of the Drury Lane Theatre, l. 10.

<sup>15</sup> Ben Jonson, his best piece of poetry.

BEN JONSON, Epitaph on His Son.

<sup>1</sup>
Then to the well-trod stage anon,
If Jonson's learned sock be on.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 131.

<sup>2</sup>
O rare Ben Jonson!
SIR JOHN YOUNG, Epitaph, cut on the stone covering Jonson's grave in Westminster Abbey.

I—Joy: Definitions

<sup>3</sup>
Every joy is gain
And gain is gain, however small.
ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iv.

<sup>4</sup>
An infant when it gazes on a light,
A child the moment when it drains the
breast,

A devotee when soars the Host in sight,
An Arab with a stranger for a guest,
A sailor when the prize has struck in fight,
A miser filling his most hoarded chest,
Feel rapture; but not such true joy are reap-
ing

As they who watch o'er what they love while sleeping.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 196.

<sup>5</sup>
Joy is the sweet voice, joy the luminous cloud.
We in ourselves rejoice!

And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,

All melodies the echoes of that voice,
All colours a suffusion from that light.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection. St. 5.

<sup>6</sup>
For present joys are more to flesh and blood
Than a dull prospect of a distant good.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. iii, l. 364.

<sup>7</sup>
Not by appointment do we meet Delight
And Joy; they heed not our expectancy;
But round some corner in the streets of life,
They, on a sudden, clasp us with a smile.

GERALD MASSEY, The Bridegroom of Beauty.

<sup>8</sup>
Joy, in Nature's wide dominion,
 Mightiest cause of all is found;
And 'tis joy that moves the pinion
When the wheel of time goes round.

SCHILLER, Hymn to Joy. (Bowring, tr.)

<sup>9</sup>
Joy is an elation of spirit—of a spirit which trusts in the goodness and truth of its own possessions. (Est enim animi elatio suis bonis verisque fidentis.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 2.

Real joy, believe me, is a serious matter. (Mihi crede, verum gaudium res severa est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiii, 4.

Deemest thou labour only is earnest?
Grave is all beauty, solemn is joy.

WILLIAM WATSON, England, My Mother. Pt. iv.

<sup>10</sup>
For, when the power of imparting joy
Is equal to the will, the human soul
Requires no other Heaven.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 11.

II—Joy: Apothegms

<sup>11</sup>
The joy late coming late departs.

LEWIS J. BATES, Some Sweet Day.

<sup>12</sup>
Weak is the joy which is never wearied.
WILLIAM BLAKE. (GILCHRIST, Life, i, 62.)

<sup>13</sup>
Capacity for joy Admits temptation.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 703.

<sup>14</sup>
There's sic parade, sic pomp an' art,
The joy can scarcely reach the heart.
BURNS, The Two Dogs.

<sup>15</sup>
Oh, frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!
He chortled in his joy.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass.
Ch. 1.

<sup>16</sup>
One universal smile it seemed of all things;
Joy past compare.

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 6. (Cary, tr.)

<sup>17</sup>
Joy rul'd the day, and Love the night.
DRYDEN, The Secular Masque, l. 82.

<sup>18</sup>
Who baths in worldly joys, swims in a world of fears.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto
viii, st. 7.

They hear a voice in every wind,
And snatch a fearful joy.

THOMAS GRAY, *On a Distant Prospect of Eton
College*. St. 4.

Joy, but with fear yet link'd.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 139.

<sup>19</sup>
And, e'en while fashion's brightest arts decoy,
The heart, distrusting, asks if this be joy.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 263.

<sup>20</sup>
All creatures have their joy and man hath his.

GEORGE HERBERT, Man's Medley.

<sup>21</sup>
Joy makes us giddy, dizzy. (Die Freude macht drehend, wirblicht.)

LESSING, Minna von Barnhelm. Act ii, sc. 3.

<sup>22</sup>
Hence, vain deluding joys,
The brood of Folly, without father bred.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 1.

I will not be cheated—nor will I employ long years of repentance for moments of joy.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, to Pope. (COL-LIER, Hist. Eng. Lit., p. 293.)

1 For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 186.

2 A foutre for the world and worldlings base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 102.

3 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 6.

4 I wish you all the joy that you can wish.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 192.

Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. viii.

5 They send their shout to the stars. (Clamorem ad sidera mittunt.)
STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. xii, l. 521.

6 Beauty for ashes and oil of joy!
WHITTIER, The Preacher, l. 385.

Beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxi, 3.

7 Joys season'd high, and tasting strong of guilt.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 837.

8 Joy is a fruit that Americans eat green.
AMANDO ZECRI. (Golden Book, May, 1931.)

III—Joy: Its Praise

9 To-day, whatever may annoy,
The word for me is Joy, just simple Joy.
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, The Word.

10 Joy rises in me like a summer's morn.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Christmas Carol.

11 Sing out my soul, thy songs of joy;
Such as a happy bird will sing,
Beneath a rainbow's lovely arch,
In early spring.
W. H. DAVIES, Songs of Joy.

12 Gladness in every face express'd,
Their eyes before their tongues confess'd.
Men met each other with erected look,
The steps were higher that they took.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 122.

13 O close my hand upon Beatitude!
Not on her toys.
LOUISE IMOGEN GUINEY, Deo Optimo Maximo.

14 At Earth's great market where Joy is trafficked
in,
Buy while thy purse yet swells with golden
Youth.
ALAN SEEGER, Ode to Antares.

15 Make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 4, l. 47.

Every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

16 I have drunken deep of joy,
And I will taste no other wine to-night.
SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act i, sc. 3, l. 92.

IV—Joy: Its Evanescence

17 Seeks painted trifles and fantastic toys,
And eagerly pursues imaginary joys.
MARK AKENSIDE, The Virtuoso.

18 Joys Are bubble-like—what makes them bursts them too.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Library and Balcony,
l. 62.

In Folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epistle ii, l. 288.

19 He who bends to himself a Joy
Does the winged life destroy;
But he who kisses the Joy as it flies
Lives in Eternity's sunrise.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Eternity.

20 There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away.
BYRON, Stanzas for Music.

21 Joy of this world, for time will not abide;
From day to night it changeth as the tide.
CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 1035.

22 All human joys are swift of wing,
For heaven doth so allot it,
That when you get an easy thing,
You find you haven't got it.
EUGENE FIELD, Ways of Life.

23 There's a hope for every woe,
And a balm for every pain,
But the first joys o' our heart
Come never back again.
ROBERT GILFILLAN, The Exile's Song.

24 And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips,
Bidding adieu.
KEATS, Ode on Melancholy. St. 3.

25 Joys do not abide, but take wing and fly away. (Gaudia non remanent, sed fugitiva volant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 15.
But headlong joy is ever on the wing.
MILTON, The Passion, l. 5.

26 Joys too exquisite to last,
—And yet more exquisite when past.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud, l. 159.

Bliss in possession will not last;
Remember'd joys are never past;
At once the fountain, stream, and sea,
They were,—they are,—they yet shall be.
MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud. Conclusion.

1 Oh stay! oh stay!
Joy so seldom weaves a chain
Like this to-night, that oh 'tis pain
To break its links so soon.
THOMAS MOORE, Fly Not Yet.

2 How fading are the joys we dote upon!
Like apparitions seen and gone;
But those which soonest take their flight
Are the most exquisite and strong;
Like angels' visits, short and bright,
Mortality's too weak to bear them long.
JOHN NORRIS, The Parting.

3 Oh, had I but Aladdin's lamp
Tho' only for a day,
I'd try to find a link to bind
The joys that pass away.
CHARLES SWAIN, Oh, Had I.

4 But we are pressed by heavy laws;
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because
We have been glad of yore.
WORDSWORTH, The Fountain, l. 45.

5 Whate'er there be of Sorrow
I'll put off till To-morrow,
And when To-morrow comes, why then
'Twill be To-day and Joy again.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, The Word.

6 Man was born for joy and woe;
And, when this we rightly know,
Safely through the world we go.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

7 Joys impregnate. Sorrows bring forth.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Excess of sorrow laughs; excess of joy weeps.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Great joys weep, great sorrows laugh.
JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. v, No. 3.

To weep for joy is a kind of manna.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8 Joy which is crystallised for ever,
Or grief, an eternal petrification.
ROBERT BROWNING, Old Pictures in Florence.

9 For ever the latter end of joy is woe.
God wot that worldly joy is soon ago.
CHAUCER, The Nonne Preests Tale, l. 385.

Momentary joy breeds months of pain.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 99.

10 Poor human nature, so richly endowed with nerves of anguish, so splendidly organized for pain and sorrow, is but slenderly equipped for joy.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Peter Ibbetson.

11 We pick our own sorrows out of the joys of other men and from their sorrows likewise we derive our joys.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves. Pt. i.

12 Our present joys are sweeter for past pain;
To Love and Heaven by suffering we attain.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.
Act v, sc. 2.

18 Weeping may endure for a night, but joy
cometh in the morning.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxx, 5.

19 One inch of joy surmounts of grief a span,
Because to laugh is proper to the man.
RABELAIS, Works: To the Reader.

Every inch of joy has an ell of annoy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

1 A sorrow that's shared is but half a trouble,
But a joy that's shared is a joy made double.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Grief can take care of itself, but to get the full value of a joy you must have somebody to divide it with.

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Duabus Animabus. Ch. xiv, sec. 22.

16 The arbitrator has regard to equity and the judge to law. (Ὁ γὰρ διατηρῆς τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ὁρᾷ, ὁ δὲ δικαστὴς τὸν νόμον.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 19.

17 A judge were better a briber than a respecter of persons; for a corrupt judge offendeth not so highly as a facile. (Qui cognoscit in judicio famiem, non bene facit.)

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 16.

Judges ought to be more learned than witty, more reverend than plausible, and more advised than confident. Above all things, integrity is their portion and proper virtue.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

When he departs from the letter of the law, the judge becomes a law-maker. (Cum receditur a litera, iudex transit in legislatorem.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Verba Legis.

2 The cold neutrality of an impartial judge.

EDMUND BURKE, Preface to Brissot's Address.

3 He who has the judge for his father, goes into court with an easy mind.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

4 It is better that a judge should lean on the side of compassion than severity.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

Be this, ye rural magistrates, your plan,
Firm be your justice, but be friends to man.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 133.
See also JUSTICE AND MERCY.

5 The magistrate is a speaking law, but the law is a silent magistrate. (Magistratum legem esse loquentem, legem autem mutum magistratum.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 2.

It is always the business of a judge in a trial to find out the truth. (Judicis est semper in causis verum sequi.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 51.

6 The judge weighs the arguments, and puts a brave face on the matter, and, since there must be a decision, decides as he can, and hopes he has done justice.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

7 When the judges shall be obliged to go armed, it will be time for the courts to be closed.

JUDGE S. J. FIELD, of California, in 1889, when advised to arm himself.

8 I am as sober as a judge.

HENRY FIELDING, Don Quixote in England. Act iii, sc. 14.

Half as sober as a judge.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Mr. and Mrs. Moxon, August, 1833.

9 When a judge puts on his robes, he puts off his relations to any, and like Melchisedech, becomes without pedigree.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane State.

10 A justice with grave justices shall sit;
He praise their wisdom, they admire his wit.

JOHN GAY, The Birth of the Squire, l. 77.

11 Art thou a magistrate? then be severe:
If studious, copy fair what time hath blurr'd,
Redeem truth from his jaws.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 15.

12 A great judge, and a little judge,
The judges of a-size.

THOMAS HOOD, Tim Turpin.

13 A good and faithful judge prefers what is right to what is expedient. (Bonus atque fides iudex honestum prætulit utili.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 40.

A corrupt judge weighs truth badly. (Male verum examinat omnis Corruptus iudex.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 8.

14 He was knighted and made a Judge; but, his constitution being too weak for business, he retired before any disreputable compliances became necessary.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton. Referring to Milton's brother.

15 The duty of a judge is to administer justice, but his practice is to delay it. (Le devoir des Juges est de rendre la justice; leur métier de la différer.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 14.

16 He that judges without informing himself to the utmost that he is capable, cannot acquit himself of judging amiss.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 21.

17 Neither side is guiltless if its adversary is the judge. (Nulla manus, belli mutato iudice, pura est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 263.

18 There should be many judges, for a few will always be ruled by the few. (Bisogna che i giudici siano assai, perchè pochi sempre fanno a modo de' pochi.)

MACHIAVELLI, Dei Discorsi, i, 7.

19 Give your decisions, never your reasons; your decisions may be right, your reasons are sure to be wrong.

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Advice, to Judges.

20 It is a judge's duty to investigate both the circumstances and time of an act. (Judiciis officium est ut res, ita tempora rerum quæ-rere.)

OID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. i, l. 37.

'Tis but half a judge's task to know.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 2.

1 The discretion of a Judge is the law of tyrants:
it is always unknown. It is different in different men. It is casual, and depends upon constitution, temper, passion. In the best it is oftentimes caprice; in the worst it is every vice, folly and passion to which human nature is liable.

SIR CHARLES PRATT, EARL CAMDEN, Case of Hindson and Kersey, 1780. (8 How. St. Tr., 57)

2 That money is well lost which the guilty man gives to the judge. (Bene perdit nummos

The judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted. (Judex damnatur cum nocens absolvi-tur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 407.

When by a pardon'd murd'rer blood is spilt,
The judge that pardon'd hath the greatest guilt.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Justice, l. 81.

5 All men who deliberate upon difficult questions should be free from hatred and friendship, anger and pity. (Omnis homines qui de rebus dubiis consultant, ab odio, amicitia, ira atque misericordia vacuos esse decet.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. li, sec. 1.

6 The upright judge condemns the crime, but does not hate the criminal. (Bonus judex damnat improbanda, non odit.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 7.

7 If you judge, investigate; if you reign, command. (Si judicas, cognosce; si regnas, jube.)

8 And then the justice

In fair round belly with good capon lined.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 153.

9 A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 153.

Thieves for their robbery have authority
When judges steal themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 176.

10 He who the sword of heaven will bear
Should be as holy as severe;
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and virtue go.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 275.

11 To offend, and judge, are distinct offices
And of opposed natures.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 9, l. 61.

12 A Daniel come to judgement! yea, a Daniel!
O, wise young judge, how I do honour thee!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 223.

It doth appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law; your exposition
Hath been most sound.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 236.

The law,
Whereof you are a well deserving pillar.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 238.

An upright judge, a learned judge!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 233.

13 Judges are best at the beginning, and deteriorate toward the end. (Initia magistratum nostrorum meliora, ferme finis inclinat.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 21.

14 Fill the seats of justice
With good men, not so absolute in goodness

As to forget what human frailty is.

SIR THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, Ion. Act v.

15 If thou be a severe, sour-complexioned man, then I here disallow thee to be a competent judge.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: Preface.

16 He only judges right, who weighs, compares,
And, in the sternest sentence which his voice
Pronounces, ne'er abandons charity.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 1.

JUDGMENT

I—Judgment: Definitions

1 Fortune is for all; judgment is theirs who have won it for themselves. (Κοινὸν τύχην, γνώμη δὲ τῶν κεκτημένων.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 217.

2 "Mature" means neither "too soon" nor "too late." (Mature est, quod neque citius est neque serius.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. x, ch. 11, sec. 2.

3 Till, from its summit,
Judgment drops her damning plummet,
Pronouncing such a fatal space
Departed from the founder's base.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. ii.

4 We judge others according to results; how else?—not knowing the process by which results are arrived at.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. vii, ch. 2.

And purge me from all heresies of thought and speech and pen
That bid me judge him otherwise than I am judged. Amen!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

5 What of me when my judgment wars with itself, when it despises what it sought, and seeks what it lately cast aside? (Quid, mea cum pugnat sententia secum, Quod petiit spernit, repetit quod nuper omisit?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 97.

6 All wholesale judgments are loose and imperfect. (Touts jugements en gros sont lâches et imparfaits.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

7 We shall be judged, not by what we might have been, but what we have been.

REV. WILLIAM SEWELL, Passing Thoughts on Religion: Sympathy in Gladness.

I judge people by what they might be—not are, nor will be.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act ii.

8 Men's judgements are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward

Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 13, l. 31.

9 Men see and judge the affairs of other men better than their own. (Aliena ut melius vident et dijudicant, Quam sua.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 504. (Act iii, l. 94.)

II—Judgment: Apothegms

10 I bear no enmity to any human being; but, alas! as Mrs. Placid said to her friend, by which of thy good works wouldst thou be willing to be judged?

ABIGAIL ADAMS, Letters, p. 411.

11 Judge me by myself. (Σκόπει δέ με ἐξ ἑμαυτοῦ.)
BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 47.)

12 Woe to him . . . who has no court of appeal against the world's judgment.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Mirabeau.

13 Men's judgments sway on that side fortune leans.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Widow's Tears. Act ii, sc. 2.

14 Where men of judgment creep and feel their way,

The positive pronounce without dismay.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 145.

15 Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

Old Testament: Daniel, v, 27.

16 Who improves the lame must go upright.

SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War. Bk. iii, st. 10.

17 The chief good is the suspension of judgment, which tranquillity of mind follows like a shadow.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 107. Referring to the Sceptics.

18 Rawness of judgment.

JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act ii, sc. 2.

19 Where the fault springs, there let the judgment fall.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 608.

20 In my judgment. (Me judice.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 244.

21 Judge righteous judgment.

New Testament: John, vii, 24. (Justum iudicium iudicate.—Vulgate.)

22 With thumb turned. (Verso pollice.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 36. The sign of condemnation in the Roman arena. Prudentius (Contra Symmachum. Bk. ii, l. 1098) has, "Converso pollice."

23 We sometimes see a fool possessed of talent, but never of judgment. (On est quelquefois un sot avec de l'esprit; mais on ne l'est jamais avec du jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 456.

1 Still mark if vice or nature prompts the deed;
Still mark the strong temptation and the need.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 143.

2 Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee.
New Testament: Luke, xix, 22.

3 Judge not, that ye be not judged.
New Testament: Matthew, vii, 1; Luke, vi,
37. (Nolite judicare.—Vulgate.)

O mortal men, be wary how ye judge.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xx, l. 125. (Henry Francis Cary, tr.)

Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.
Close up his eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 32.

4 Remember, when the judgment's weak the prejudice is strong.
KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act i, sc. 4.

5 They have a right to censure, that have a heart to help.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude, p. 15.

6 You must stand afar off to judge St. Peter's.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 17 Feb., 1861.

7 None judge so wrong as those who think amiss.
POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 810.

8 'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 9.

But as when an authentic watch is shown,
Each man winds up and rectifies his own,
So in our very judgments.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Aglaure: Epilogue.
9 Haste in giving judgment is criminal. (In judicando criminosa est celeritas.)
PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 285.

Whoso giveth hasty judgement
Must be the first that shall repent.
UNKNOWN, Partonope, l. 9975. (c. 1450)

10 Weigh, not merely count, men's judgments.
(Æstimes judicium, non numeres.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec.
12.

11 Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 68.

12 Blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well com-mingled
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73.

13 Answer my life my judgement.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 153.

What judgement shall I dread, doing no wrong?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 89.

14 Though our works
Find righteous or unrighteous judgment, this
At least is ours, to make them righteous.
SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act iii, sc. 1.

15 From one crime judge them all. (Crimine ab uno Disce omnes.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 65.

16 One cool judgment is worth a thousand hasty councils.
WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh, 29 Jan., 1916.

III—Judgment: Its Fallibility

17 If I was as bad as they say I am,
And you were as good as you look,
I wonder which one would feel the worse
If each for the other was took?
GEORGE BARR BAKER, Good and Bad.

18 Cruel and cold is the judgment of man,
Cruel as winter, and cold as the snow;
But by-and-by will the deed and the plan
Be judged by the motive that lieth below.
LEWIS J. BATES, By-and-By.

19 No man can justly censure or condemn another, because indeed no man truly knows another.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 4.

Meanwhile "Black sheep, black sheep!" we cry,
Safe in the inner fold;
And maybe they hear, and wonder why,
And marvel, out in the cold.
RICHARD BURTON, Black Sheep.

20 Mad in the vulgar judgment, sane, perhaps, in yours. (Demens Judicio vulgi, sanus for-tasse tuo.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 97.

21 In men whom men condemn as ill
I find so much of goodness still,
In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I do not dare to draw a line
Between the two, where God has not.
JOAQUIN MILLER, Byron.

There is so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it hardly becomes any of us
To talk about the rest of us.
EDWARD WALLIS HOCH [?], Good and Bad.
Verses first printed in the Record, of Marion, Kansas, of which ex-Governor Hoch was editor. (Boston Transcript, 24 Apr., 1915. The Reader, 7 Sept., 1907.) It is said, however, that Governor Hoch disclaimed them. Attributed to Robert Louis Stevenson, but disclaimed by Lloyd Osbourne; ascribed to Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, but denied by her; also to Joaquin Miller, probably because of the somewhat similar stanza in his Byron. Has appeared in slightly differing versions. See also GOODNESS: GOOD AND EVIL.

QVMD, Fasti. Bk. v, l. 191.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 32.

<sup>3</sup> We should hesitate to pronounce judgment on the conduct of such eminent men, lest we fall into the common error of condemning what we do not understand. (Damnant quod non intelligunt.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x, ch. 1, sec. 26.

<sup>4</sup> Commonly we say a Judgment falls upon a Man for something in him we cannot abide.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Judgments.

<sup>5</sup> O judgement! thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 109.

<sup>6</sup> It's the bad that's in the best of us
Leaves the saint so like the rest of us!
It's the good in the darkest-curst of us
Redeems and saves the worst of us!
It's the muddle of hope and madness;
It's the tangle of good and badness;
It's the lunacy linked with sanity
Makes up, and mocks, humanity!

ARTHUR STRINGER, Humanity.

<sup>7</sup> Crime has its heroes, error has its martyrs:
Of true zeal and false, what vain judges we are!

(Le crime a ses héros; l'erreur a ses martyrs:
Du vrai zèle et du faux vaines juges que nous sommes!)

VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Bk. v.

<sup>8</sup> Man judges from a partial view,
None ever yet his brother knew;
The Eternal Eye that sees the whole
May better read the darkened soul,
And find, to outward sense denied,
The flower upon its inmost side!

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye, and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 3; Luke, vi, 41.

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 612. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

<sup>17</sup> Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;

And He that might the vantage best have took

Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgement, should
But judge you as you are?

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 73.

JUDGMENT DAY

<sup>18</sup> At the piping of all hands,
When the judgment-signal's spread—
When the islands and the lands
And the seas give up their dead,
And the South and North shall come;
When the sinner is dismayed,
And the just man is afraid,

Then Heaven be thy aid,
 Poor Tom.
 JOHN G. C. BRAINARD, Lament for Long Tom.
 The trumpet! the trumpet! the dead have all heard:
 Lo, the depths of the stone-cover'd charnels are stirr'd;
 From the sea, from the land, from the south and the north,
 The vast generations of man are come forth.
 H. H. MILMAN, Second Sunday in Advent.

 6
 The deeds we do, the words we say,
 Into still air they seem to fleet,
 We count them ever past;
 But they shall last,—
 In the dread judgement they
 And we shall meet.
 JOHN KEBLE, The Effect of Example.
 7
 I hope there is a resurrection day
 For bodies, as the ancient prophets say,
 When Helen's naked limbs again will gleam Regathered from the dust of death's long dream,—
 When those who thrilled the ages, being fair,
 Will take the singing angels unaware
 And make God's perfect meadows doubly sweet
 With rosy vagrancy of little feet.

 vi, l. 542.
 10
 If after death, love, comes a waking,
 And in their camp so dark and still
 The men of dust hear bugles, breaking
 Their halt upon the hill,
 To me the slow and silver pealing
 That then the last high trumpet pours
 Shall softer than the dawn come stealing,
 For, with its call, comes yours!
 HERBERT TRENCH, I Heard a Soldier.

 Flame-flowered, yellow-petalled June.
 DON BLANDING, Hawaiian June.
 14 June's twice June since she breathed it with
 me.
 ROBERT BROWNING, The Flower's Name.
 15
 The leafy month of June.
 S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. v.
 16
 What joy have I in June's return?
 My feet are parched—my eyeballs burn,
 I scent no flowery gust;
 But faint the flagging Zephyr springs,
 With dry Macadam on its wings,
 And turns me "dust to dust."
 THOMAS HOOD, Town and Country.

1 The fair
Tanned face of June, the nomad gipsy, laughs Above her widespread wares, the while she tells
The farmers' fortunes in the fields, and quaffs
The water from the spider-peopled wells.
FRANCIS LEDWIDGE, June.

2 And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries the earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.
J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i,
Prelude.

No price is set on the lavish summer;
June may be had by the poorest comer.
J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i,
Prelude.

3 The roses make the world so sweet,
The bees, the birds have such a tune,
There's such a light and such a heat
And such a joy in June.
GEORGE MACDONALD, To —.

4 How softly runs the afternoon
Beneath the billowy clouds of June!
CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, How Softly Runs.

5 O you poor folk in cities,
A thousand, thousand pities!
Heaping the fairy gold that withers and dies;
One field in the June weather
Is worth all the gold ye gather,
One field in June weather—one Paradise.
KATHERINE TYNAN, June Song.

6 It is the month of June,
The month of leaves and roses,
When pleasant sights salute the eyes
And pleasant scents the noses.
N. P. WILLIS, The Month of June.

JURY

7 Wise men plead causes, but fools decide them.
(Ἀέρονται μὲν οἱ σοφοὶ, κρίνουνται δὲ οἱ ἀμαθεῖς.)
ANACHARSIS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 5.)

8 In my mind, he was guilty of no error, he was chargeable with no exaggeration, he was betrayed by his fancy into no metaphor, who once said that all we see about us, kings, lords, and Commons, the whole machinery of the State, all the apparatus of the system, and its varied workings, end in simply bringing twelve good men into a box.

LORD BROUGHAM, Present State of the Law.
7 Feb., 1828.

9 Trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, shall be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

THOMAS, LORD DENMAN, Judgment, O'Connell vs. Queen, 4 Sept., 1894.

10 The high-minded and intelligent dozen of men whom he now saw in that box before him.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

11 A man should be tried by a jury of his peers.
GOETHE, Die Aufgeregten, iii, 1.

12 As harsh as a prejudiced jury.
THOMAS HOOD, For the New Year.

13 Since twelve honest men have decided the cause,
And were judges of fact, though not judges of laws.

SIR WILLIAM PULTENEY, The Honest Jury.
(See The Craftsman, v, 337.)

14 The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 19.

15 They have been grand-jurymen since before
Noah was a sailor.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 16.

16 The hungry judges soon the sentence sign,
And wretches hang that jurymen may dine.
POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 21.

If it's near dinner time, the foreman takes out his watch when the jury have retired, and says: "Dear me, gentlemen, ten minutes to five, I declare! I dine at five, gentlemen." "So do I," says everybody else except two men who ought to have dined at three, and seem more than half disposed to stand out in consequence.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Vol. ii, ch. 6.

Whin the case is all over, the jury'll pitch th' tistimony out iv the window, an' consider three questions: "Did Lootgert look as though he'd kill his wife? Did his wife look as though she ought to be kilt? Isn't it time we wint to supper?"

FINLEY PETER DUNN, On Expert Testimony.

Thou that goest upon Middlesex juries, and wilt make haste to give up thy verdict because thou wilt not lose thy dinner.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act iv, sc. 5.

17 Let the judges answer to the question of law, and the jurors to the matter of the fact. (Ad quæstionem juris respondeant judices ad quæstionem facti respondeant juratores.)

UNKNOWN. A law maxim.

JUSTICE

I—Justice: Definitions

18 Liberty, equality,—bad principles! The only true principle for humanity is justice, and justice towards the feeble becomes necessarily protection or kindness.

AMIEL, Journal, 4 Dec., 1863.

1 Justice is that virtue of the soul which is distributive according to desert.

ARISTOTLE, Metaphysics: On the Virtues and Vices: Justice.

2 There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

3 Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any eminent departure from it, under any circumstances, lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Those eternal laws of justice, which are our rule and our birthright.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 15 Feb., 1788.

A good parson once said that where mystery begins religion ends. Cannot I say, as truly at least, of human laws, that where mystery begins, justice ends?

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

4 Justice is one; it binds all human society, and is based on one law, which is right reason applied to command and prohibition.

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 42.

Justice is compliance with the written laws. (Justitia est obtemperatio scriptis legibus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 42. This is stated by Cicero only for the purpose of refutation.

5 Justice, in which is the crowning glory of the virtues. (Justitia, in qua virtutis est splendor maximus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 20.

Good faith is the foundation of justice. (Fundamentum autem est justitiæ fides.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 23.

Justice shines by its own light. (Æquitas enim lucet ipsa per se.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 9, sec. 30.

Let us remember that justice must be observed even to the lowest. (Meminerimus etiam adversus infimos justitiam esse servandam.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 41.

Nothing that lacks justice can be morally right. (Nihil honestum esse potest, quod justitia vacat.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 62.

It is the function of justice not to wrong one's fellow men. (Justitiæ partes sunt non violare homines.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 28, sec. 99.

Justice is indispensable for the conduct of business. Its importance is so great, that not even those who live by wickedness and crime can get on without some small share of justice.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 40.

6 Justice is the end of government.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman. Pt. ii, l. 368.

Justice is always violent to the party offending, for every man is innocent in his own eyes.

DANIEL DEFOE, Shortest Way with Dissenters.

7 Justice is truth in action.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1851. Referring to the saying, "Peace is beauty in action."

Justice is truth in action. (La justice est la vérité en action.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 203. (1838)

8 Justice without wisdom is impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

9 That justice is the highest quality in the moral hierarchy I do not say, but that it is the first. That which is above justice must be based on justice, and include justice, and be reached through justice.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 9.

10 Justice is the virtue that innocence rejoiceth in.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

11 Justice is the firm and continuous desire to render to everyone that which is his due. (Justitia est constans et perpetua voluntas jus suum cuique tribuendi.)

JUSTINIAN, Institutiones. Bk. i, sec. 1.

12 A man's vanity tells him what is honour; a man's conscience what is justice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Paty.

13 Justice indeed
Should ever be close-eared and open mouthed;
That is to hear a little, and speak much.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

14 Justice is what is established; and thus all our established laws will be regarded as just, without being examined, since they are established.

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. vii, No. 6.

15 A just man is not one who does no ill,
But he, who with the power, has not the will.

PHILEMON, Sententiæ.

16 Things which partake of justice are just; things which partake of beauty are beautiful.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Bk. iii, 13.)

All knowledge that is divorced from justice must be called cunning rather than wisdom.

PLATO. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 63.)

1 Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale,
Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,

And solid pudding against empty praise.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 52.

2 Truth is its [justice's] handmaid, freedom is its child, peace is its companion, safety walks in its steps, victory follows in its train;
it is the brightest emanation from the gospel;
it is the attribute of God.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. i, p. 29.)

3 Justice, sir, is the great interest of man on earth.

DANIEL WEBSTER, On Mr. Justice Story.

4 The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong.

WHITTIER, Mantle of St. John De Matha. St.
21.

5 Justice has nothing to do with expediency.
Justice has nothing to do with any temporary standard whatever. It is rooted and grounded in the fundamental instincts of humanity.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 26
Feb., 1916.

II—Justice: Apothegms

6 Justice discards party, friendship, kindred,
and is therefore always represented as blind.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99.

For justice, though she's painted blind,
Is to the weaker side inclined.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 709.

Justice is blind, he knows nobody.

DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act v, sc. 1.

Justice is lame as well as blind, amongst us.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1.

Justice is blind. Blind she is, an' deaf an' dumb an' has a wooden leg.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Cross-Examinations.

7 So justice while she winks at crimes,
Stumbles on innocence sometimes.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 1177.

Justice may wink a while, but see at last.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Mayor of Queen-borough. Act v, sc. 1.

8 Justice is too good for some people and not good enough for the rest.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, Good-bye to Western Culture.

9 Justice again our guide. (Astræa redux.)

DRYDEN. Title of poem. Astræa was the goddess of justice.

10 Every place is safe to him who lives in justice.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 102.

11 Only the just man enjoys peace of mind.

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 17.

12 All that is needed to remedy the evils of our time is to do justice and give freedom.

HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor.

13 As crimes do grow, justice should rouse itself.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 5.

14 There should be no sword in the hand of Justice. (Tractanda putabat inermi justicia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 80.

15 Live and let live is the rule of common justice.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables of Æsop, 127.

16 He reminds me of the man who murdered both his parents, and then, when sentence was about to be pronounced, pleaded for mercy on the grounds that he was an orphan.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 179.)

17 He who refuses justice surrenders everything to him who is armed. (Arma tenati Omnia dat qui justa negat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 348.

18 Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 21.

Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom;
fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 7.

Render unto all men their due, but remember thou art also a man.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, *Proverbial Philosophy:
Of Humility*.

19 Where justice reigns, 'tis freedom to obey.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Greenland.

20 There is no debt with so much prejudice put off as that of justice.

PLUTARCH, Of Those Whom God Is Slow to Punish.

21 If elected, I shall see to it that every man has a square deal, no less and no more.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, 4 Nov., 1904.

I stand for the square deal.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Ossawatomie,
31 Aug., 1910.

22 We love justice greatly, and just men but little.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. iv, No. 10.

23 Be just, and fear not.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 446.

He that is void of fear, may soon be just.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 2.

1 Liberty plucks justice by the nose.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 3, l. 29.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 168.

See also LAW: THE NET OF LAW.

2 Justice is pleasant, even when she destroys.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy: On Taste.

3 A sense of justice is a noble fancy.

TEGNÉR, Frithjof's Saga. Canto viii.

4 As soon as Justice returns, the golden age returns. (Jam redit et Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iv, l. 6.

Learn justice. (Discite justitiam.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 620.

5 To no one will we deny justice, to no one will we delay it. (Nulli negabimus, nulli differemus justitiam.)

UNKNOWN, Magna Carta, 12 June, 1215.

6 One hour in doing justice is worth a hundred in prayer.

UNKNOWN. A Mahometan proverb.

III—Justice: Its Virtues

7 There is no virtue so truly great and godlike as justice.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99.

8 Justice is the first of the virtues, for, unsupported by justice, valor is good for nothing; and if all men were just, there would be no need of valor.

AGESILAÛS II. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaüs. Ch. 22, sec. 5.)

9 It is due to Justice that man is a God to man and not a wolf. (Justitiæ debetur, quod homo homini sit Deus, non lupus.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Justitia.

The place of justice is a hallowed place.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

10 Justice does not descend from its pinnacle. (Cima di giudizio non s'avvalla.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vi, l. 37.

11 A prince's favours but on few can fall,
But justice is a virtue shar'd by all.

DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 337.

12

Justice is like the kingdom of God—it is not without us as a fact, it is within us as a great yearning.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 67.

13

Whoever fights, whoever falls,
Justice conquers evermore, . . .
And he who battles on her side,
God, though he were ten times slain,
Crowns him victor glorified,
Victor over death and pain.

R. W. EMERSON, Voluntaries. Pt. iv.

Fear not, then, thou child infirm,
There's no god dare wrong a worm;
Laurel crowns cleave to deserts,
And power to him who power exerts.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. Motto.

14

Above all other things is justice: success is a good thing; wealth is good also; honor is better, but justice excels them all.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: Law Reform, 18 March, 1876.

15

And Heav'n, that ev'ry virtue bears in mind,
Ev'n to the ashes of the just is kind.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 523. (Pope, tr.)

The bad man's death is horror: but the just Keeps something of his glory in the dust.

WILLIAM HABINGTON, Elegie. (c. 1650)

The memory of the just is blessed; but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 7.

16

But the sunshine aye shall light the sky,
As round and round we run;
And the Truth shall ever come uppermost,
And Justice shall be done.

CHARLES MACKAY, Eternal Justice.

17

Prompt sense of equity! to thee belongs
The swift redress of unexamined wrongs!
Eager to serve, the cause perhaps untried,
But always apt to choose the suffering side!

HANNAH MORE, Sensibility, l. 243.

18

The bright actions of the just
Survive unburied in the kindred dust.

(Κατακρύπτει δ' οὐ κόβει συγγόνων κεδνὰν χάριν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode viii, l. 103.
(Wheelwright, tr.)

Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in their dust.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Contention of Ajax and Ulysses. Sec iii, l. 23. (1659)

The sweet remembrance of the just Shall flourish when he sleeps in dust.

NAHUM TATE AND NICHOLAS BRADY, New Version of the Psalms, cxii, 6. (1696)

The memory of the just survives in Heaven.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 388.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 5, sec. 7. Referring to Aristides.

I don't know the fellow, but I am tired of hearing him everywhere called The Just.

The reply of a citizen to Aristides, when the latter asked why he was voting against him. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides, 7, 6.)

<sup>2</sup> The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18.

The spirits of just men made perfect.

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 23.

IV—Justice: Its Certainty

See also Punishment: Its Certainty

<sup>3</sup> Justice, voiceless, unseen, seeth thee when thou sleepest and when thou goest forth and when thou liest down. Continually doth she attend thee, now athwart thy course, now at a later time.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 253.

<sup>4</sup> God's justice, tardy though it prove perchance,

Rests never on the track until it reach Delinquency.

ROBERT BROWNING, Cenci.

<sup>5</sup> Murder may pass unpunish'd for a time, But tardy justice will o'ertake the crime.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 285.

<sup>6</sup> Justice, though moving slowly, seldom fails to overtake the wicked. (Raro antecedentem scelertum Deseruit pede pœna claudo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 31.

<sup>7</sup> Man is unjust, but God is just; and finally justice Triumphs.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3, l. 34.

<sup>8</sup> For though usurpers sway the rule a while, Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 76.

<sup>9</sup> As thou urgest justice, be assur'd Thou shalt have justice more than thou desir'st.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 315.

<sup>10</sup> Justice, even if slow, is sure. (Πάντως ὕστερον ἢ λθεῖ δίκη.)

SOLON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 2.)

V—Justice: Its Power

<sup>11</sup> Where might and justice are yoke-fellows— what pair is stronger than this?

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 209. See also MIGHT AND RIGHT.

<sup>12</sup> The humblest citizen of all the land, when clad in the armor of a righteous cause is stronger than all the hosts of Error.

W. J. BRYAN, Speech at the National Democratic Convention, Chicago, 1896.

<sup>13</sup> Let laurels, drench'd in pure Parnassian dew, Reward his mem'ry, dear to ev'ry muse, Who, with a courage of unshaken root, In honour's field advancing his firm foot, Plants it upon the line that justice draws, And will prevail or perish in her cause.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 13.

<sup>14</sup> I'm armed with more than complete steel,— The justice of my quarrel.

MARLOWE, Lust's Dominion. Act iii, sc. 4.

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just, And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 233.

"Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just"— And four times he who gets his fist in fust.

ARTEMUS WARD, Shakespeare Up-to-Date.

<sup>15</sup> The weakest arm is strong enough that strikes With the sword of justice.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act v, sc. 2.

VI—Justice: Let Justice Be Done

WILLIAM WATSON, Ten Quodlibeticall Questions Concerning Religion and State. (1601) The whole quotation is: "You go against that general maxim in the laws, which is, 'Fiat justitia et ruant cœli.'" This is the first appearance in English literature, so far as known, of what was apparently a maxim even in 1600. It was used by William Prynne (Fresh Discovery of Prodigious Wandering New-Blazing Stars, 1646), by Nathaniel Ward (Simple Cobbler of Agawam, 1647), and frequently thereafter, but was given its widest celebrity in 1768 when it was quoted by Lord Mansfield in Rex vs. Wilkes. The maxim is given in various forms: "Fiat justitia et ruant cœli" (William Watson); "Fiat justitia et cœlum ruat" (Manningham, Diary, 11 April, 1603); "Justitia fiat, ruat cœlum" (Lord Mansfield).

The constitution does not allow reasons of state to influence our judgement. God forbid it should! We must not regard political consequences, however formidable they might be; if rebellion was the certain consequence, we are bound to say, 'Justitia fiat, ruat cœlum.'

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Judg- ment, Rex vs. Wilkes. (BURROWS, Reports. Vol. iv, p. 2562.) In this judgment, Lord Mansfield reversed the sentence of outlawry passed upon John Wilkes for the publication of the North Briton.

<sup>1</sup> Let justice reign though the heaven fall.
(Regnet justitia et ruat cœlum.)

DUKE OF RICHMOND, Speech, House of Lords, 31 Jan., 1642. (Old Parliamentary History, Vol. x, p. 28.)

<sup>2</sup> Let justice be done though the world perish.
(Fiat justitia et ruat mundus.)

UNKNOWN, Egerton Papers, p. 52. (1552) (Aikin, Court and Times of James I, ii, 500. 1625.) Said to be the motto of Ferdinand I, Emperor of Germany. (JOHANNES MANLIUS, Loci Communes, ii.)

Let justice be done though the world perish.
(Fiat jus et pereat mundus.)

St. AUGUSTINE. (Attributed to him by Jeremy Taylor.)

Though the heaven falls, let thy will be done.
(Ruât cœlum, fiat voluntas tua.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 12.

<sup>3</sup> Do well and right, and let the world sink.

GEORGE HERBERT, Country Parson. Ch. 29.

<sup>4</sup> Where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 218.

This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 10.

VII—Justice and Mercy

<sup>5</sup> Hard is the task of justice, where distress
Excites our mercy, yet demands redress.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Heroic Daughter. Act iii.

<sup>6</sup> He who spares the bad seeks to corrupt the good.
(Parcit quisque malis, perdere vult bonos.)

CLEOBULUS (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 19.)

<sup>7</sup> When justice on offenders is not done,
Law, government, and commerce are o'er-thrown.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Justice, l. 85.

Our mercy is become our crime.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 734.

There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 59.

<sup>8</sup> Mercy and justice, marching cheek by jowl.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

<sup>10</sup> Ah, to be just, as well as kind,—
It costs so little and so much!

RICHARD HOVEY, Contemporaries.

<sup>11</sup> It is easier to be beneficent than to be just.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.)

<sup>12</sup> Justice, that in the rigid paths of law,
Would still some drops from Pity's fountain draw.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice: Introduction, l. 125.

<sup>13</sup> Exact justice is commonly more merciful in the long run than pity, for it tends to foster in men those stronger qualities which make them good citizens.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dante.

<sup>14</sup> I may mitigate their doom
On me deriv'd, yet I shall temper so Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 77.

<sup>15</sup> You yourself are guilty of a crime when you do not punish crime. (Injuriam ipse facias ubi non vindices.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 410.

Mercy as judge loosens the law. (Dissolvit legem iudex misericordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 168.

<sup>16</sup> Pardon one offense and you encourage the commission of many. (Qui culpæ ignoscit uni, suadet pluribus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ, No. 578.

Every unpunished delinquency has a family of delinquencies.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology: Postscript.

Every unpunished murder takes away something from the security of every man's life.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument, Salem, Mass., 3 Aug., 1830. The Murder of Capt. Joseph White.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 412.

He that's merciful
Unto the bad, is cruel to the good.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking Glass.

He harms the good that doth the evil spare.

UNKNOWN, The Times Whistle, l. 1350. (c. 1614)

1 It is impossible to be just if one is not generous.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 109.

Be just before you are generous.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 1.

2 Justice must tame, whom mercy cannot win.
GEORGE SAVILE, On the Death of Charles II.

3 And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 196.

4 Sparing justice feeds iniquity.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1687.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 202.

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 3.

5 One can not be just if one is not humane. (On ne peut être juste si on n'est pas humain.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 28.

6 He who is merely just is severe. (Qui n'est que juste est dur.)
VOLTAIRE, Letter to the King of Prussia, 1740.

VIII—Justice and Injustice

7 He's just, your cousin, ay, abhorrently;
He'd wash his hands in blood, to keep them clean.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 118.

8 One man's justice is another's injustice; one man's beauty another's ugliness; one man's wisdom another's folly.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

9 That which is unjust can really profit no one; that which is just can really harm no one.

HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question. Ch. 14.

10 I have loved justice and hated iniquity; therefore I die in exile. (Dilexi justitiam et odi iniquitatem, propterea morior in exilio.)

POPE GREGORY VII, HILDEBRAND. (BOWDEN, Life. Bk. iii, ch. 20.)

11 "A book," I observed, "might be written on the injustice of the just."

ANTHONY HOPE, Dolly Dialogues. No. 14.

12 Love of justice, with most men, is nothing but the fear of suffering injustice. (L'amour de la justice n'est, en la plupart des hommes, que la crainte de souffrir l'injustice.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 78.

13 Delay of justice is injustice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Paty.

14 The hour of justice does not strike
On the dials of this world.
(L'heure de la justice ne sonne pas Aux cadrans de ce monde.)

MAETERLINCK, Measure of the Hours.

15 Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices, Ser. iii, p. 101.

16 To entreat what is unjust from the just is wrong; but to seek what is just from the unjust is folly. (Injusta a justis impetrare non decet; Justa autem ab injustis petere, insipientia est.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 31.

17 O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 137.

18 There is a point at which even justice is unjust. ("Ἐστὶν ἐνθα καὶ δίκη βλάβην φέρει.")

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1042.

Injustice often arises through chicanery, that is, through an over-subtle and even fraudulent construction of the law. This it is that gave rise to the now familiar saw, "The more law, the less justice." (Summum jus, summa injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 33. The "tritum proverbium" is quoted by Cicero again in De Republica, v, 3, and may also be found in Columella (De Re Rustica, i, 7), Racine (La Thébaïde, iv, 3), and many other writers.

The strictest law is sometimes the greatest injustice. (Jus summum sæpe summast malitia.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 796.

The extremity of justice is extreme injustice.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicles. Vol. ii, p. 228.

There is one motto that ought to be put at the head of our penal code, "Summum jus, summa injuria."

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 139.

KATYDID

- 1
I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou art hid,
Thou testy little dogmatist,
Thou pretty Katydid!
Thou mindest me of gentlefolks,— Old gentlefolks are they,—
Thou say'st an undisputed thing
In such a solemn way.
O. W. HOLMES, To an Insect.

on the walnut-tree over the well.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 33.

KEATS, JOHN

- 3
And Keats the real
Adonis with the hymeneal
Fresh vernal buds half sunk between
His youthful curls, kissed straight and sheen
In his Rome-grave, by Venus queen.
E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 407.
- 4
Stand still, true poet that you are!
I know you; let me try and draw you.
Some night you'll fail us: when afar
You rise, remember one man saw you,
Knew you, and named a star!
ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.
Who fished the murex up?
What porridge had John Keats?
ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.
Dumb to Keats—him, even!
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More.
- 5
If you still behave in dancing rooms and other societies as I have seen you—I do not want to live—if you have done so, I wish this coming night may be my last. I cannot live without you, and not only you but chaste you; virtuous
you.
JOHN KEATS, Letter to Fanny Brawne, 1820.
- 6
It is a better and a wiser thing to be a starved apothecary than a starved poet; so back to the shop, Mr. John, back to "plasters, pills, and ointment boxes."
JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART [?], Review, of
Endymion in Blackwood.
A Mr. John Keats, a young man who had left a decent calling for the melancholy trade of Cockney-poetry, has lately died of a consumption, after having written two or three little books of verse, much neglected by the public.
LOCKHART or WILSON, Review, of Adonais in Blackwood.
The savage criticism on his Endymion, which appeared in the Quarterly Review, produced the most violent agitation on his susceptible mind;

the agitation thus originated ended in the rupture of a blood-vessel in the lungs; a rapid consumption ensued.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface.

John Keats, who was kill'd off by one critique,
Just as he really promised something great. . .
Poor fellow! his was an untoward fate:
'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
Should let itself be snuff'd out by an article.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 59.

7
But now thy youngest, dearest one has perished,
The nursling of thy widowhood, who grew
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,
And fed with true love tears instead of dew,
Most musical of mourners, weep anew!
SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 6.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not and torture not again.
SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 40.

I am borne darkly, fearfully afar;
Whilst, burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,
The soul of Adonais, like a star,
Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.
SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 55.

8
Yet thou hast won the gift Tithonus missed:
Never to feel the pain of growing old,
Nor lose the blissful sight of beauty's
truth,
But with the ardent lips Urania kissed
To breathe thy song, and, ere thy heart grew cold,
Become the Poet of Immortal Youth.
HENRY VAN DYKE, Keats.

9
This grave contains all that was mortal of a young English poet, who, on his death bed, in the bitterness of his heart at the malicious power of his enemies, desired these words to be graven on his tomb-stone, "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."
Epitaph, on tombstone of John Keats at Rome.

Among the many things he has requested of me tonight, this is the principal,—that on his gravestone shall be this inscription: Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Life of Keats:
Letter to Severn. Vol. ii, p. 91.

"Whose name was writ in water!" What large laughter
Among the immortals when that word was brought!
R. W. GILDER, Keats.

Lo! in the moonlight gleams a marble white,
On which I read: "Here lieth one whose name
Was writ in water." And was this the meed
Of his sweet singing? Rather let me write:
"The smoking flax before it burst to flame
Was quenched by death, and broken the bruised reed."
LONGFELLOW, Keats.

1
Below lies one whose name was traced in sand.
DAVID GRAY, His Own Epitaph.

Even Keats's epitaph—Here lies one whose name was writ in water—finds an echo in David Gray's
Below lies one whose name was traced in sand.
Poor Gray was at least the better prophet.
T. B. ALDRICH, Ponkapog Papers, p. 121.

2
Your fame shall (spite of proverbs) make it plain
To write in water's not to write in vain.
UNKNOWN, Lines. (SIR WILLIAM SANDERSON, Art of Painting in Water Colours: Preface.)

KENTUCKY

3
There are children lucky from dawn till dusk,
But never a child so lucky!
For I cut my teeth on "Money Musk"
In the Bloody Ground of Kentucky!
STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, The Ballad of William Sycamore.

4
She was bred in old Kentucky,
Where the meadow grass is blue,
There's the sunshine of the country
In her face and manner, too;
She was bred in old Kentucky,
Take her, boy, you're mighty lucky,
When you marry a girl like Sue.
HARRY BRAISTED, She Was Bred in Old Kentucky. (1898)

5
Yo' is mighty lucky, babe of old Kentucky.
RICHARD HENRY BUCK, Kentucky Babe.

6
Weep no more, my lady,
Oh! weep no more to-day!
We will sing one song for the old Kentucky
Home,
For the old Kentucky Home far away.
STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, *My Old Kentucky
Home*.

7
But I ran in Kentucky hills
Last week. They were hearth and home.
VACHEL LINDSAY, My Fathers Came from Kentucky.

8
The moonlight is the softest, in Kentucky;
Summer days come ofttest, in Kentucky;
Friendship is the strongest,
Love's fires glow the longest,

Yet a wrong is always wrongest,
In Kentucky.

JAMES H. MULLIGAN, In Kentucky.

Here's a health to old Kentucky,
Where the fathers, through the years,
Hand down the courtly graces
To the sons of cavaliers;
Where the golden age is regnant,
And each succeeding morn
Finds "the corn is full of kernels,
And the Colonels full of corn."
WILLIAM J. LAMPTON, To Old Kentucky. St. 7.

Here's to old Kentucky,
The State where I was born,
Where the corn is full of kernels,
And the Colonels full of "corn."
UNKNOWN, A Kentucky Toast. (COMBS, All That's Kentucky.)

Sons of the Dark and Bloody Ground.
THEODORE O'HARA, The Bivouac of the Dead.
That beautiful region which was soon to verify its Indian appellation of the dark and bloody ground.
C. J. LATROBE, Rambles in North America, i, 90. The Cherokee word "kentucke" meant simply a meadow or prairie.

KICK

10
It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.
New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 14.

If you beat goads with your fists, your hands suffer most. (Si stimulos pugnīs cædis, manibus plus dolet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 55.
See also under RESIGNATION.

11
It is human nature to kick a fallen man.
("Ὡστε σύγγονον βροτοῖσι τὸν πεσόντα λακτῖσαι πλέον.")
ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 884.

12
And out of the window he flew like a shot,
For the foot went up with a terrible thwack,
And caught the foul demon about the spot Where his tail joins on to the small of his back.
R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Nicholas.

13
But Hudibras gave him a twitch
As quick as lightning in the breech,
Just in the place where honour's lodg'd,
As wise philosophers have judg'd;
Because a kick in that part more
Hurts honour than deep wounds before.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 1065

14
A kick that scarce would move a horse,
May kill a sound divine.

COWPER, Yearly Distress. St. 16.

15
I am going to be an absolute wreck astern.
(Puppis pereunda est probe.)
PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 74. (Act i, sc. 1.)

1 I should kick, being kick'd.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 17.

2 Pitt kicked the bucket.
JOHN WOLCOT, Works, v, 242. (1796)
To kick the bucket, an unfeeling phrase for to die.
CARR, Craven Dialect, i, 55.
Dependency may make you kick the beam and the bucket both at once.
THOMAS HOOD, Hood's Own. Ser. i, No. 5.
(1838)

3 When late I attempted your pity to move,
Why seemed you so deaf to my prayers?
Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love,
But—why should you kick me downstairs?
UNKNOWN. Published anonymously in An Asylum for Fugitive Pieces. Vol. i, p. 15.
(1785) Quoted by John Philip Kemble, in his play, The Pencil. Act i, sc. 1. (1788)
He is sometimes credited with the authorship of the lines.

KINDNESS

I—Kindness: Apothegms

4 Kindness is wisdom. There is none in life
But needs it and may learn.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.
Both man and womankind belie their nature
When they are not kind.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.
5 'Twas her thinking of others made you think of her.
E. B. BROWNING, My Kate.
6 'Twas a thief said the last kind word to Christ:
Christ took the kindness and forgave the theft.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. vi, l. 869.

7 With the sweet milk of human kindness
bless'd.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to William Hogarth, l. 57. (1762)
Feels the same comfort while his acrid words
Turn the sweet milk of kindness into curds.
O. W. HOLMES, The Moral Bully.
But what the better are their pious saws
To ailing souls, than dry hee-haws,
Without the milk of human kindness?
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 494.
To rankling poison hast thou turned in me the milk of human kindness. (In gährend Drachengift hast du Die Milch der frommen Denkart mir verwandelt.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act iv, sc. 3.
Yet I do fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 17.
(1606)

8 Nothing is so popular as kindness. (Nihil est tam populare quam bonitas.)
CICERO, Pro Ligario. Sec. 12.

9 A kind heart loseth nought at last.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 45.
10 O wouldst thou be less killing, soft, and kind.
CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 1.
11 Good Will is the mightiest practical force in the universe.
C. F. DOLE, Cleveland Address.

12 Are you tender and scrupulous,—you must eat more mince-pie.
EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.
13 Enough, and more than enough, has your kindness enriched me. (Satis superque me benignitas tua Ditavit.)
HORACE, Epodes. No. i, l. 31.
For tho' the faults were thick as dust
In vacant chambers, I could trust
Your kindness.
TENNYSON, To the Queen. St. 5.

14 Kindness is the sunshine in which virtue grows.
R. G. INGERSOLL, A Lay Sermon.
15 Kindness consists in loving people more than they deserve. (Une partie de la bonté consiste peut-être à estimer et à aimer les gens plus qu'ils ne le méritent.)
JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 71.
16 Though he was rough, he was kindly.
LONGFELLOW, Courtship of Miles Standish.
Pt. iii.

17 I would resemble the ape, and kill it by culling it.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 215. (1579)
With kindness, lo, the ape doth kill her whelp.
GEOFFREY WHITNEY, Choice of Emblems, 188.
She killeth what she loveth by pressing it too
hard.
EDWARD TOPSELL, Four-footed Beasts.
This is the way to kill a wife with kindness.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

18 The greater the kindred is, the less the kindness.
JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 1.
A little more than kin, and less than kind.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 65.
19 Then within my bosom
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret;
Kindness is the word."
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, What Is Good?

1 Not always actions show the man: we find
Who does a kindness is not therefore kind.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 109.

2 In her tongue is the law of kindness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 26.

3 That tender education which we call kindness, destroys all the vigor of both mind and body.
(Mollis illa educatio quam indulgentiam vocamus, nervos omnes et mentis et corporis frangit.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutione de Oratoria. Bk. i,
ch. 2, sec. 6.

4 For your kindness I owe you a good turn.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 62.

A kind overflow of kindness.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 26.

5 Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 1,
l. 35.

Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here
for an hour.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 4, st. 5.

6 Kindness is ever the begetter of kindness.
(Χάρις χάριν γὰρ ἔστίη ἡ τίκτουσ' ἀέλ.)
SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 522.

Kindness is produced by kindness. (Benignitate benignitas tollitur.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 52.

7 And loving-kindness, that is pity's kin
And is most pitiless.

SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Life. St. 2.

8 Kindness is very indigestible. It disagrees with very proud stomachs.

THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

9 Animosities are mortal, but the Humanities live for ever.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 35.

II—Kindness: Its Virtues

10 Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are travelling the dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love, make haste to be kind!

AMIEL, Journal, 16 Dec., 1868.

11 The heart benevolent and kind
The most resembles God.

ROBERT BURNS, A Winter Night.

12 Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on;

'Twas not given for thee alone,
Pass it on;
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
'Till in Heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on.

HENRY BURTON, Pass It On.

13 Set not thy foot to make the blind to fall;
Nor wilfully offend thy weaker brother:
Nor wound the dead with thy tongue's bitter gall,

Neither rejoice thou in the fall of other.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4. A footnote states this is from "Pybrac in his Quadrant 37."

14 Thy Godlike crime was to be kind,
To render with thy precepts less
The sum of human wretchedness.

BYRON, Prometheus, l. 35.

15 Little deeds of kindness,
Little words of love,
Help to make earth happy
Like the Heaven above.

JULIA FLETCHER CARNEY, Little Things.

16 It is difficult to say how much men's minds are conciliated by a kind manner and gentle speech. (Sed tamen difficile dictu est, quantopere conciliet animos comitas affabilitasque sermonis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 48.

Kindness to the good is a better investment than kindness to the rich. (Quam ob rem melius apud bonos quam apud fortunatos beneficium collocari puto.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. xx, sec. 71.

17 If I can stop one heart from breaking,
I shall not live in vain;

If I can ease one life the aching,
Or cool one pain,

Or help one fainting robin
Unto his nest again,

I shall not live in vain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 6.

18 Yet still he fills affection's eye,
Obscurely wise, and coarsely kind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

19 There's no dearth of kindness
In this world of ours;

Only in our blindness

We gather thorns for flowers.

GERALD MASSEY, There's No Dearth of Kindness.

20 Persistent kindness conquers the ill-disposed.
(Vincit malos pertinax bonitas.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 31.

1 Kindness, nobler ever than revenge.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 129.

When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
The best I had, a princess wrought it me,
And I did never ask it you again;
And with my hand at midnight held your head,
And like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,
Saying "What lack you?" and "Where lies your grief?"

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 41.

2 The kindest man,
The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 295.

O do not slander him, for he is kind.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 247.

3 Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 41.

And thy despised disdain too late shall find
That none are fair but who are kind.
THOMAS STANLEY, The Deposition.

4 For he was kind and she was kind,
And who so blest as they?
SOUTHEY, Rudiger, l. 47.

5 Fierce for the right, he bore his part
In strife with many a valiant foe;
But Laughter winged his polished dart,
And kindness tempered every blow.
WILLIAM WINTER, I. H. Bromley.

Surely never did there live on earth
A man of kindlier nature.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. i, l. 414.

6 That best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 33.

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 130.

I—Kings: Apothegms

7 Our converse with kings should be either as rare, or as pleasing, as possible.
ÆSOP, to Solon, who had been banished by Cæsus. To which Solon replied, "No, indeed! as rare or as beneficial as possible."
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 28.)

8 For commonly it is said that a king without letter or cunning is compared to an ass crowned.

BERNERS, Huon, 730. (c. 1534)

An unlettered king is a crowned ass.

EDWARD FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. ii, p. 277.

9 God bless the King, I mean the faith's defender,
God bless (no harm in blessing) the Pretender,
But who pretender is or who is king,
God bless us all—that's quite another thing.

JOHN BYROM, Extempore to an Officer in the Army.

10 King is Kön-ning, Kan-ning, Man that knows or cans.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity.

11 The king's leavings are better than the lord's bounty.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 39.

Better to die a king than to live a prince.
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to his brother, Louis, when the latter urged his ill health against taking the crown of Holland.

For a King, death is better than dethronement and exile.

Attributed to THEODORA, wife of Justinian I.

12 To be a kingdom's bulwark, a king's glory,
Yet loved by both, and trusted and trust-worthy,
Is more than to be king.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Sc. i.

13 One who has given you more kingdoms than you had towns before.

CORTEZ, to Charles V., when the latter demanded who he was. (VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. Ch. 147.) Prescott calls it a "most improbable story." (Conquest of Mexico, vii, 5, note.)

14 I would not be a king to be belov'd
Causeless, and daub'd with undiscerning praise.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 359.

15 Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap: let children enjoy their rattle.

OLIVER CROMWELL, when rejecting the offer of the title of king, in 1658.

What shall we do with the bauble? Take it away!

OLIVER CROMWELL, picking up the mace, when dissolving the Long Parliament, 20 April, 1653. (CARLYLE, Cromwell.)

A prince, the moment he is crown'd,
Inherits every virtue sound,
As emblems of the sovereign power,
Like other baubles in the Tower:

Is generous, valiant, just, and wise,
And so continues till he dies.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 191.

1 A King's a King, do Fortune what she can.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Barons' War. Bk. v, st. 36.

2 Kind as kings upon their coronation day.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 271.

3 A man's a man,
But when you see a king, you see the work
Of many thousand men.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

4 If the king is in the palace, nobody looks at the walls.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

5 They are not kings who sit on thrones, but they who know how to govern.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

This 'tis to be a monarch when alone
He can command all, but is awed by none.

MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act i, sc. 4.

6 A king's favour is no inheritance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4618.

7 The sun has set; no night has followed. (Sol occubuit; nox nulla secuta est.)

GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS (GÉRALD DE BARRI), referring to the death and succession of a king. (c. 1200)

8 Beware, for dreadful is the wrath of kings.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 234. (Pope, tr.)

The wrath of kings is always heavy. (Gravis ira regum est semper.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 494.

9 There is no king who has not had a slave among his ancestors, and no slave who has not had a king among his.

HELEN KELLER, Story of My Life, p. 4.

10 Who knows not that the king is a name of dignity and office, not of person?

MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

11 King David and King Solomon
Led merry, merry lives,

With many, many lady friends,
And many, many wives;

But when old age crept over them,
With many, many qualms,

King Solomon wrote the Proverbs
And King David wrote the Psalms.

JAMES BALL NAYLOR, David and Solomon.

12 For the Island's sons the word still runs,
"The King, and the King's Highway."

HENRY NEWBOLT, The King's Highway.

13 Know you not that kings have long hands?

(An nescis longos regibus esse manus?)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 166.

Kings are commonly said to have long hands; I wish they had as long ears.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 Honour the king.

New Testament: I Peter, ii, 17.

15 The more regal king of kings. (Regum rex regior.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 825.

16 He that eats the king's goose shall be choked with his feathers.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 243.

17 The king is not the nation's representative,
but its clerk.

ROBESPIERRE, Speech, National Assembly, 17
May, 1790.

I am indeed the clerk (commis) and the explorer (voyageur) of democracy.

GAMBETTA, Speech, Havre, 18 April, 1872, accepting the nickname of "Commercial Traveler" (Commis-voyageur), which had been given him because of the rapidity of his movements during the war.

18 O Richard! O my king, the universe forsakes thee!

On earth there is none but I who cares for thy welfare.

(O Richard! O mon roy, l'univers t'aban-donne!)

Sur la terre il n'est que moy qui s'intéresse de tes affaires.)

MICHEL JEAN SEDAINÉ, Richard Cœur-de-Lion: Blondel's Song. The singing of this song at the dinner given at Versailles, 1 Oct., 1789, by the King and Marie Antoinette, was a famous episode in French history. (See CARLYLE, French Revolution.
Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 2.)

19 It is superior to all, monarch of all it surveys.
(Dominus omnium est, supra omnia est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, 24.

I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute;
From the center all round to the sea,
I am lord of the fowl and the brute.

COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

20 On alien soil, kingship stands not sure.
(Alieno in loco Haut stabile regnum est.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 344.

Stolen sceptres are held in anxious hands. (Rapta sed trepidu manu Sceptre obtinentur.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 341.

21 The king's a beggar, now the play is done.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well: Epilogue, l. 335.

In his borrowed plumage, this shallow cheat
Struts down the stage with a strange conceit;
But let him prosper while he may,—
The king's but a beggar, after the play.
BURTON STEVENSON, After the Play.

1
A king of shreds and patches.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 102.

A thing of shreds and patches.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

2
Proud setter up and puller down of kings!
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 157.

3
Ay, every inch a king.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 109.

4
O that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 260.

5
Hail, glorious edifice, stupendous work!
God bless the Regent, and the Duke of York!
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Loyal Effusion.

Kinquering Congs their titles take.
WILLIAM A. SPOONER, Warden of New College, Oxford, announcing the hymn, "Conquering Kings their titles take," early in 1879.
Hence, "spoonerisms," most of which were the inventions of Dr. Spooner's friends.

7
A brave man, were he seven times king,
Is but a brave man's peer.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 2.

8
He who knows not how to dissimulate knows not how to reign. (Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare.)

VINCENTIUS LUPANUS. (JUSTUS LIPSIUS, Polititica Sive Civilis Doctrina. Bk. iv, ch. 14.)
Sometimes given as a saying of Emperor
Frederick I (Barbarossa), Louis XII and Philip II of Spain. Tacitus (Annals. Bk. iv, ch. 71), speaking of Tiberius, says, "He was prouder of his dissimulation than of all his other virtues; for such he considered it."
One of the favorite maxims of Louis IX of France, and all the Latin he thought the Dauphin needed to learn. (DE THEOU, Hist.
Univ., iii, 293.)

He who knows not how to dissimulate, knows not how to reign.

LOUIS XI OF FRANCE. (ROCHE ET CHASLES, Histoire de France. Vol. ii, p. 30.)

To know how to dissimulate is the knowledge of kings. (Savoir dissimuler est le savoir des rois.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU, Miranne.

9
The first king was a successful soldier. (Le premier qui fut roi, fut un soldat heureux.)

VOLTAIRE, Méropole. Act i, sc. 3.

What can they see in the longest kingly line in Europe, save that it runs back to a successful soldier?

SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 37.

10
Every one is born a king, and most people die
in exile.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act iii.

11
The king reigns but does not govern. (Rex regnat sed non gubernat.)

JAN ZAMOISKA, Speech, at the Diet of 1605, alluding to King Sigismund III.

The king reigns but does not govern. (Der König herrscht aber regiert nicht.)

BISMARCK, Debate, Reichstag, 24 Jan., 1882.
Bismarck quoted this proverb in order to deny its application to Germany.

She governed but she did not reign. (Elle gouvernait, mais elle ne régnait pas.)

HÉNAULT, Memoirs, p. 161, referring to Madame des Ursins, the favorite of Philip
V of Spain.

The king reigns, but does not govern. (Le roi régne, il ne gouverne pas.)

LOUIS ADOLPHE THIERS, Editorial Article, in
Le Nationale, a newspaper of which he was editor, Paris, 18 January, 1830.

II—Kings: The Good King

12
'Tis clemency which is the surest mark
By which the world may know a true monarch.
(La clémence est la plus belle marque
Qui fasse à l'univers connaître un vrai mo-narque.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 4.

13
We, too, are friends to loyalty. We love
The king who loves the law, respects his bounds,

And reigns content within them. Him we serve

Freely and with delight, who leaves us free.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 331.

14
The clearest mark of a true king is that he is one whom all good men can praise without compunction not only during his life, but even afterwards.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 33.

15
A king so good, so just, so great,
That at his birth the heavenly council paused
And then at last cried out, This is a man!

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act i, sc. 1. See also under MAN.

16
A good king is a public servant.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

17
For therein stands the office of a king,
His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise,
That for the public all this weight he bears.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 463.

18
It is something to hold the scepter with a firm hand. (Est aliquid valida scepra tenere manu.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 480.

1 Nothing becomes a king so much as the administration of justice. War is a tyrant, as Timotheus expresses it, but Pindar says, Justice is the rightful sovereign of the world.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demetrius. Ch. 42, sec. 5.

2 'Twere good That kings should think withal,
When peace and wealth their land has blessed,
'Tis better to sit still at rest,
Than rise, perchance to fall.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 29.

3 A king is he who has no fear; a king is he who desires naught. (Rex est qui metuit nihil; Rex est qui cupiet nihil.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 388.

4 I made them lay their hands in mine and swear

To reverence the King, as if he were Their conscience, and their conscience as their King.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 463.

III—Kings: Their Virtues

5 These unhappy kings, of whom so much evil is said, have their good points sometimes. (Ces malheureux rois Dont on dit tant de mal, ont du bon quelquefois.)

ANDRIEUX, Meunier de Sans Souci.

6 To do well and be ill spoken of—'tis the lot of kings. (Βασιλικὸν μὲν εὖ πράττειν, κακῶς δὲ ἀκοῦειν.)

ANTISTHENES. (MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 36; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes. Sec. 3.) Sometimes translated: "It is a royal privilege to do well and be ill-spoken of." Alexander the Great quoted this apothegm. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 41, sec. 1.) Carlyle saw it written in Latin on the town-hall of Zittau, Germany: "Bene facere et male audire regium est."

(CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, xv, 13.)

'Tis the first art of kings, the power to suffer hate. (Ars prima regni est posse invidiam pati.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 353.

7 He is the fountain of honour.

FRANCIS BACON, Of a King.

8 And in the years he reigned, through all the country wide,
There was no cause for weeping, save when the good man died.

(Ce n'est que lorsqu'il expira Que le peuple, qui l'enterra, pleura.)

BÉRANGER, Le Roi Yvetot. (Thackeray, tr., The King of Brentford.)

So sit two kings of Brentford on one throne;

And so two citizens who take the air,
Close pack'd, and smiling, in a chaise and one.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 78.

9 He errs who thinks that life under a noble prince is slavery; never does liberty appear more fair than under a righteous king. (Fallitur egregio quisquis sub principe credit Servitium. Numquam libertas gratior extat Quam sub rege pio.)

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis. Bk. iii, l. 113.

10 Whoever is king, is also the father of his country.

CONGREVE, Love for Love: Dedication. See also under PATRIOTISM.

11 The king's word is more than another man's oath.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH. (ELLIS, Original Letters, Ser. ii, p. 255. 1554.) Cited as "this old saying."

A king's word must stand. (Verbum regis stet oportet.)

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, English Works, p. 230. (1509) Cited as "a common proverb."

A King's word should be a King's bond.

UNKNOWN, Sir Lancelot du Lake, l. 1673. (c. 1490)

12 If fidelity were lost, it should be found in the heart of a king.

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE. (L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, 113.)

Though good faith should be banished from the rest of the world, it should be found in the mouths of kings. (Si la bonne foi était bannie du reste du monde, il faudrait qu'on la trouvât dans la bouche des rois.)

JEAN II OF FRANCE, speaking to his council. (Biographie Universelle.)

13 There was a king of Thule,
Was faithful till the grave,
To whom his mistress dying,
A golden goblet gave.

(Es war ein König in Thule
Gar treu bis an das Grab,
Dem sterbend seine Buhle
Einen gold'nen Becher gab.)

GOETHE, Faust: The King of Thule. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

14 The virtue of kings seems to consist chiefly in justice. (La vertu royale semble consister le plus en la justice.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

15 The Monarch drank, that happy hour,
The sweetest, holiest draught of Power.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 28.

16 Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 133.

The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 91.

Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 68.

Not making his high place the lawless perch
Of wing'd ambitions, nor a vantage-ground
For pleasure; but thro' all this tract of years

Wearing the white flower of a blameless life,
Before a thousand peering littlenesses.

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication,
l. 21.

IV—Kings: Their Faults

For this is the true strength of guilty kings,
When they corrupt the souls of those they rule.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 1451.

Kings, that made laws, first broke them.

APHERA BEHN, The Golden Age. St. 4.

A king promises, but observes only when he pleases.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 292.

Kings are naturally lovers of low company.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 Feb., 1780.

The animal known as king is by nature carnivorous. (Ἀλλὰ φύσει τοῦτο τὸ ζῷον ὁ βασιλεὺς σαρκοφάγον ἐστίν.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus
Cato. Ch. viii, sec. 8.)

Kings climb to eminence
Over men's graves.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Before Sedan.

But though each court a jester lacks,
To laugh at monarchs to their face;

All mankind do behind their backs
Supply the honest jester's place.

ROBERT DODSLEY, The Kings of Europe.

Kings fight for kingdoms, madmen for applause.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 322.

And Tom the second reigns like Tom the first.
DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 48.

God said, "I am tired of kings,
I suffer them no more;

Up to my ear the morning brings
The outrage of the poor."

EMERSON, Boston Hymn.

The world is growing weary of that most costly of all luxuries, hereditary kings.

GEORGE BANCROFT, Letter, London, March, 1848.

And when Reason's voice,
Loud as the voice of Nature, shall have waked
The nations, . . . kingly glare
Will lose its power to dazzle; . . . whilst false-hood's trade
Shall be as hateful and unprofitable
As that of truth is now.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iii, l. 126.

The passing poor magnificence of kings.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iii, l. 555.

Kingship is passing down the yellow road,
And crowns are dangling from the willow tree;

Royalty flees to seek a last abode
With the other outcasts of eternity.

DONALD EVANS, Bonfire of Kings.

Kings govern by means of popular assemblies only when they cannot do without them.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, House of Commons, 31 Oct., 1776.

Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!
Confusion on thy banners wait;
Tho' fann'd by Conquest's crimson wing,
They mock the air with idle state.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 1.

As yourselves your empires fall,
And every kingdom hath a grave.

WILLIAM HABINGTON, Night.

Deceived for once, I trust not kings again.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 455. (Pope, tr.)

Whenever kings go mad, the people suffer.
(Quidquid delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 14.

Presently the kingly pile will leave but few acres to the plough. (Jam pauca aratro jugera regiæ Moles relinquēt.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 15, l. 1.

When kings are building, draymen have something to do. (Wenn die Könige bau'n, haben die Kärner zu thun.)

SCHILLER, Kant und Seine Ausleger.

If any of our countrymen wish for a king, give them Æsop's fable of the frogs who asked a King; if this does not cure them, send them to Europe. They will go back republicans.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 225.

The trappings of a monarchy would set up an ordinary republic.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.
Johnson places this sentence in quotation marks, but it is not found in Milton's works. It is, perhaps, a paraphrase of Milton's arguments in A Ready and Easy Way.

1 Step by step and word by word: who is ruled may read.

Suffer not the old Kings: for we know the breed.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Old Issue.

2 Ah! vainest of all things
Is the gratitude of kings.

LONGFELLOW, Belisarius. St. 8.

3 We hardly know any instance of the strength and weakness of human nature so striking and so grotesque as the character of this haughty, vigilant, resolute, sagacious blue-stockings, half Mithridates and half Trissotin, bearing up against a world in arms, with an ounce of poison in one pocket and a quire of bad verses in the other.

MACAULAY, Essays: Frederick the Great.

4 First Moloch, horrid King, besmear'd with blood.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 392.

5 Kings most commonly, though strong in legions, are but weak in arguments.

MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

6 Scratch a king and find a fool!

DOROTHY PARKER, Salome's Dancing Lesson.

7 Good men are always more suspected by kings than bad; and virtue in other men is always to them a terrible thing. (Regibus boni quam mali suspectiores sunt; semperque eis aliena virtus formidulosa est.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. vii, sec. 2.

8 No more pleasing blood has stained the altars
. . . than that of an unjust king. (Gratior nullus liquor Tinxisset aras . . . Quam rex iniquus.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 921.

It is impossible to reign innocently. (On ne peut régner innocemment.)

ANTOINE SAINT-JUST, beginning his speech on the sentence of Louis XVI.

A dead king is not a man less.

CAMILLE DESMOULINS, voting for the death of Louis XVI.

9 By blood a king, at heart a clown.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxi, st. 1.

10 All kings is mostly rapsallions.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 23.

V—Kings: Their Trials

Ten poor men sleep in peace on one straw
heap, as Saadi sings,

But the immensest empire is too narrow for two kings.

W. R. ALGER, Oriental Poetry: Elbow Room.

12 It is a miserable state of mind, to have few things to desire and many things to fear: and yet that commonly is the case of Kings.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

13 Ah, monarchs! could ye taste the mirth ye mar,

Not in the toils of Glory would ye fret;

The hoarse dull drum would sleep, and man be happy yet.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 47.

For a king

'Tis sometimes better to be fear'd than loved.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 3.

14 Whilst doubts assailed him o'er and o'er again,
If men were made for kings, or kings for men.

CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 164.

15 The vices of kings cannot remain hid, for the splendor of their lofty station permits naught to be concealed. (Nec posse dari regalibus usquam Secretum vitiis; nam lux altissima fati Occultum nihil est sinit.)

CLAUDIAN, *Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu
Honorii Augusti*, l. 272.

Kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 609.

'Tis so much to be a king, that he only is so by being so. The strange lustre that surrounds him conceals and shrouds him from us; our sight is there broken and dissipated, being stopped and filled by the prevailing light.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

In that fierce light which beats upon a throne
And blackens every blot.

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, 26.

16 If monarchy consists in such base things,
Sighing, I say again, I pity kings!

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 139.

God's pity on poor kings,

They know no gentle rest;

The North and South cry out,

Cries come from East and West—

"Come, open this new Dock, Building, Bazaar, or Fair."

Lord, what a wretched life

Such men must bear.

WILLIAM H. DAVIES, Poor Kings.

When in green lanes I muse,

Alone, and hear birds sing,

God's pity then, say I,

On some poor king.

WILLIAM H. DAVIES, Poor Kings.

If happy I and wretched he,

Perhaps the king would change with me.

CHARLES MACKAY, Differences.

17 The king is the least independent man in his dominions; the beggar the most so.

<sup>1</sup> The King's cheese goes three parts away in parings.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, 19. Referred to as a proverb.

I see it is impossible for the King to have things done as cheap as other men.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 21 July, 1662.

<sup>2</sup> On the king's gate the moss grew gray;

The king came not. They called him dead
And made his eldest son one day

Slave in his father's stead.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Coronation.

<sup>3</sup> The fortune which made you a king, forbade you to have a friend. It is a law of nature, which cannot be violated with impunity.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 35.

The halls of kings are full of men, but void of friends. (Atria regum hominibus plena sunt, amicis vacua.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium.

<sup>4</sup> Few kings and tyrants descend to Pluto without violence or bloodshed, or by a natural death.

<sup>8</sup> The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 4.

<sup>9</sup> What infinite heart's ease
Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy!
And what have kings, that privates have not
too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 253.

What art thou, thou idol ceremony?

What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers? . . .
Art thou aught else but place, degree and form,

Creating awe and fear in other men?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 256.

Ceremony keeps up all things.

JOHN SELDEN, Table Talk: Ceremony.

<sup>10</sup> It is the curse of kings to be attended

By slaves that take their humours for a warrant

To break within the bloody house of life.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 208.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground

And tell sad stories of the death of kings:

How some have been depos'd, some slain in war;

Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd;

Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping
kill'd;

All murder'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 155.

I give this heavy weight from off my head,

And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,

The pride of kingly sway from out my heart.

The King can do no wrong?

R. H. BARHAM, New-made Honour, l. 9.

<sup>15</sup> The king never dies.

BLACKSTONE, Commentaries. Bk. iv, p. 249.

The King is dead. Long live the King! (Le Roi est mort. Vive le Roi!)

The French form of announcement and proclamation, last used at the death of Louis XVIII.

The death of Louis XIV was announced by the captain of the body-guard from a window of the state apartment. Raising his truncheon above his head, he broke it in the centre, and throwing the pieces among the crowd, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Le Roi est mort!" Then seizing another staff, he flourished it in the air as he shouted, "Vive le Roi!"

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE, his form of assent.

(SULLY, Memoirs.) The formula by which his successors indicated their approval of legislative enactments.

The King wills it. (Le Roi le veut.)

Formula of royal assent as signified by the King to the British Parliament.

1 I am the State! (L'état, c'est moi!)

LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, to the President of Parliament, 22 Dec., 1655, at the age of seventeen. (DULAURE, Histoire de Paris, p. 387.) Other historians dispute the authenticity of the utterance. Years later, however, the first sentence of a course in public law which he caused to have written for his grandson was, "The nation is not corporate in France: it lives entirely in the person of the king." And Bossuet declared of the sovereign, "Tout l'état est en lui": "All the state is in him." (CHÉRUÉL, Histoire de l'Administration Monarchique en France, ii, 32.)

Homage is due to kings; they do what they like.

LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, when a boy. (MARTIN, History of France, xv, 95.)

It was said of Louis the Fourteenth that his gait was becoming enough in a king, but in a private man would have been an insufferable strut.

4 But methought it lessened my esteem of a king, that he should not be able to command the rain.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 July, 1662.

5 For sure if Dulness sees a grateful day,
'Tis in the shade of arbitrary sway.

O! if my sons may learn one earthly thing,
Teach but that one, sufficient for a King;
That which my priests, and mine alone, maintain,

Which, as it dies or lives, we fall or reign:
May you, may Cam and Isis, preach it long!

"The right divine of Kings to govern wrong."

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 181. Cam and Isis, the universities of Cambridge and Oxford. Though Pope encloses the last line in quotation marks, it is probably his own.

Divine right of kings means the divine right of anyone who can get uppermost.

8 Every monarch is subject to a mightier one. (Omne sub regno graviore regnum est.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 612.

9 There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 123.

Kings are earth's gods, in vice their law's their will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 103.

10 Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed King;

 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

2 When knaves fall out, true men come by their own.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

3 He that sweareth till no man trust him,
 He that lieth till no man believe him,
 He that borroweth till no man will lend him,
 Let him go where no man knoweth him.
 HUGH RHODES, Book of Nurture, 107. (c. 1530)

4 Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?
 SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 61.
 A poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.
Hamlet: There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark
 But he's an arrant knave.
Horatio: There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
 To tell us this.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 124.
 We are arrant knaves all.

 How absolute the knave is!
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 148.
 O royal knavery!
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 19.

5 Ah! whoreson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves!
 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 89.
 What a frosty-spirited rogue is this!
 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.
 Three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green.
 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 246.
 A rascally yea-forsooth knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 41.
 What an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is!
 SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 37.
 The rascally, scauld, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.
 A knave; a rascal; an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 14.
 Such smiling rogues as these,
 Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
 Which are too intrinse t' unloose.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 79.
 Filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 18.

Poor cuckoldy knave.

An arrant knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 330.

6 A crafty knave does need no broker.
 SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 100.

7 Though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 20.

8 Second Watchman: How if a' will not stand?
Dogberry: Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.
 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 28.
 Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly.
 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 30.

9 Whip me such honest knaves.
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 49.
 A slipper and subtle knave, a finder of occasions.
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 246.

10 Knavery's plain face is never seen till used.
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 321.
 A knave teach me my duty! I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle!
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 151.
 Some most villainous knave,
 Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
 O heaven, that such companions thou 'ldst unfold,
 And put in every honest hand a whip
 To lash the rascals naked through the world
 Even from the east to the west!
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 139.

11 'Tis the base knave that jars.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 47.
 A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave!
 SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 160.

12 'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate.
 SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 404.

13 Ay, knave, because thou strikest as a knight,
 Being but knave, I hate thee all the more.
 TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 994.

14 Knavery nowadays is its own reward. (Eis nunc praeiumst, qui recta prava faciunt.)

- 9
All our knowledge is symbolic.

GOETHE, Table-Talk. 1805.

In the world the important thing is not to know more than all men, but to know more at each moment than any particular man.

GOETHE, Table-Talk, 1808.

- 10
The tree of knowledge in your garden grows, Not single, but at every humble door.

O. W. HOLMES, Wind-Clouds and Star-Drifts: Pt. viii, Manhood, l. 46.

- 11
Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.

- 12
It is the peculiarity of knowledge that those who really thirst for it always get it.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Country Literature.

- 13
Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves or we know where we can find information upon it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

- 14
A desire of knowledge is the natural feeling of mankind; and every human being whose mind is not debauched, will be willing to give all that he has to get knowledge.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 30 July, 1763.)

- 15
Knowledge is the action of the soul.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Scientia.

- 16
History tells what man has done; art, what man has made; literature, what man has felt; religion, what man has believed; philosophy, what man has thought.

BENJAMIN C. LEEMING, Imagination.

- 17
What can give us more sure knowledge than our senses? How else can we distinguish between the true and the false? (Quid nobis certius ipsis Sensibus esse potest? qui vera ac falsa notemus?)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 700.

- 18
Knowledge advances by steps, and not by leaps.

MACAULAY, Essays: History.

- 19
Knowledge apart from justice is rather to be described as cunning than as knowledge. (Scientia, quæ est remota ab justitia, calliditas potius quam sapientia est appellanda.)

PLATO. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 63.)

- 20
It is one thing to remember, another to know. Remembering is merely safeguarding something entrusted to the memory; knowing means making everything your own. (Aliud autem est meminisse, aliud scire. Meminisse est rem commissam memoriæ custodire. At contra, scire est et sua facere.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxiii, 8. Nature has given us the seeds of knowledge, but not knowledge itself. (Natura . . . semina nobis scientiæ dedit, scientiam non dedit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, sec. 4.

1 The desire of knowledge, like the thirst of riches, increases ever with the acquisition of it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. ii, ch. 3.

Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell;
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 7.

Who loves not Knowledge? Who shall rail
Against her beauty? May she mix
With men and prosper! Who shall fix
Her pillars? Let her work prevail.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxiv, st. 1.

2 Knowledge is now no more a fountain seal'd:
Drink deep, until the habits of the slave,
The sins of emptiness, gossip and spite
And slander, die.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 76.

A Fountain Sealed.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK. Title of novel.

Knowledge is the only fountain, both of the love and the principles of human liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, at dedication of Bunker Hill Monument, 17 June, 1843.

3 Knowledge, in truth, is the great sun in the firmament. Life and power are scattered with all its beams.

III—Knowledge: Its Value

<sup>1</sup> Knowledge is, indeed, that which, next to virtue, truly and essentially raises one man above another.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 111.

<sup>2</sup> There is no power on earth which setteth up a throne, or chair of state, in the spirits and souls of men, and in their cogitations, imaginations, opinions, and beliefs, but knowledge and learning.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

The knowledge of man is as the waters, some descending from above, and some springing up from beneath; the one informed by the light of nature, the other inspired by divine revelation.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>3</sup> The sovereignty of man lieth hid in knowledge; wherein many things are reserved that kings with their treasure cannot buy, nor with their force command.

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.

It is no less true in this human kingdom of knowledge, than in God's kingdom of heaven, that no man shall enter into it, "except he become first as a little child."

BACON, Of the Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 1.

<sup>4</sup> There is no knowledge which is not valuable.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation.

<sup>5</sup> Knowledge is a comfortable and necessary retreat and shelter for us in an advanced age; and if we do not plant it while young, it will give us no shade when we grow old.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 11 Dec., 1747.

One of the most agreeable consequences of knowledge is the respect and importance which it communicates to old age.

SYDNEY SMITH, Female Education.

<sup>6</sup> Let the fools talk, knowledge has its value. (Laissez dire les sots, le savoir a son prix.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

Let fools the studious despise,
There's nothing lost by being wise.

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

<sup>7</sup> Deeper, deeper let us toil
In the mines of knowledge.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Aspirations of Youth.

<sup>8</sup> A learned man has always riches in himself. (Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 22.

Knowledge of itself is riches.

SADI, The Gulistan. Tale ii. Of the Effects of Education.

<sup>9</sup> O what a brave thing it is, in every case and circumstance of a matter, to be thoroughly well informed!

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

<sup>10</sup> For the more a man knows, the more worthy he is.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Rhyming Chronicle of the History of England. (1270)

Crowns have their compass—length of days their date—

Triumphs their tomb—felicity, her fate—

Of nought but earth can earth make us partaker,
But knowledge makes a king most like his Maker.

SHAKESPEARE, Epigram on King James I.
(PAYNE COLLIER, Life of Shakespeare.)

<sup>11</sup> Sweet food of sweetly uttered knowledge.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Defence of Poesy.

<sup>12</sup> A life of knowledge is not often a life of injury and crime.

SYDNEY SMITH, Pleasures of Knowledge.

A man who dedicates his life to knowledge becomes habituated to pleasure which carries with it no reproach.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.
Lecture 19.

<sup>13</sup> He who binds
His soul to knowledge, steals the key of heaven.

N. P. WILLIS, The Scholar of Thibèt Ben Khorat. Pt. ii, l. 6 fr. end.

<sup>14</sup> Oh, be wiser, Thou!

Instructed that true knowledge leads to love.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Left upon a seat in a Yew-tree. l. 59.

IV—Knowledge and Power

<sup>15</sup> For knowledge, too, is itself a power. (Nam et ipsa scientia potestas est.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Hæresibus.

Knowledge and human power are synonymous, since the ignorance of the cause frustrates the effect.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary.
Pt. ii, aph. 3.

<sup>16</sup> There is no knowledge that is not power.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

<sup>17</sup> Knowledge is power.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 9.

They say that "Knowledge is power." I used to think so.

BYRON, Letter to Prothero.

<sup>18</sup> Knowledge is more than equivalent to force.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 13.

<sup>19</sup> Simple as it seems, it was a great discovery that the key of knowledge could turn both ways, that it could open, as well as lock, the door of power to the many.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

1 Every addition to true knowledge is an addition to human power.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. No. 1.

2 A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 5.

V—Knowledge and Wisdom

3 There is no great concurrence between learning and wisdom.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 4.

Knowledge and Wisdom, far from being one, Have oftentimes no connexion. Knowledge dwells In heads replete with thoughts of other men; Wisdom in minds attentive to their own. Knowledge, a rude unprofitable mass, The mere materials with which Wisdom builds; . . .

Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much; Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 88.

4 The greatest clerks be not the wisest men.

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 4051.

I counsel all creatures no clerk to despise.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xv, l. 64.

5 I've studied now Philosophy
And Jurisprudence, Medicine
And even, alas, Theology
From end to end with labor keen;
And here, poor fool, with all my lore
I stand no wiser than before.

GOETHE, Faust: Night. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

6 It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

7 Deign on the passing world to turn thine eyes, And pause awhile from letters, to be wise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 155.

8 Knowledge is as food, and needs no less Her temperance over appetite, to know In measure what the mind may well contain, Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 126.

9 We live and learn, but not the wiser grow.

JOHN POMFRET, Reason, l. 112.

10 Knowledge, when wisdom is too weak to guide her,

Is like a headstrong horse, that throws the rider.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Miscellanies. Sometimes attributed to Robert Robinson, Vicar of Harlow. (c. 1580) See Notes and Queries, 25 June, 1910.

11 No man is the wiser for his learning.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wit.

12 Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 141.

13 But you are learn'd; in volumes, deep you sit; In wisdom, shallow: Pompous ignorance!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 735.

VI—Knowledge: Its Limitations

14 Our knowledge, compared with Thine, is ignorance. (Scientia nostra, scientiæ tuæ comparata, ignorantia est.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. xi, sec. 4.

Before God we are all equally wise—equally foolish.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 105.

15 There's lots of people—this town wouldn't hold them—

Who don't know much excepting what's told them.

WILL CARLETON, City Ballads, p. 143.

All I know is what I read in the papers.

WILL ROGERS.

16 And yet, alas! when all our lamps are burned,
Our bodies wasted, and our spirits spent,
When we have all the learned volumes turned,
Which yield men's wits both help and ornament,

What can we know or what can we discern?

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum: Introduction. Sec. i, st. 14.

17 We know accurately only when we know little; with knowledge doubt increases. (Eigentlich weiss man nur wenn man wenig weiss; mit dem Wissen wächst der Zweifel.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

18 Knowledge is folly except grace guide it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

19 This world, where much is to be done and little to be known.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Prayers and Meditations.

20 Now learn too late
How few sometimes may know, when thousands err.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 148.

21 Do they not show by too much knowledge that they know nothing? (Faciuntne intellegendo ut nihil intellegant?)

TERENCE, Andria: Prologue, l. 17.

Too much to know is to know nought but fame.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 92.

1
The more we study, we the more discover our ignorance.

SHELLEY, Scenes from the Magico Prodigioso of Calderon. Sc. 1.

2
And no man knows distinctly anything, and no man ever will. (Kai tò mén oûn saφές oûtis ânhr íden oúdé tis êstai eídós.)

XENOPHANES, Fragment. No. 34. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Sec. 12.)

We know nothing rightly, for want of perspective.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

We don't know one millionth of one per cent
about anything.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

We can do interesting mechanical things . . .
but we know nothing important. In the essentials we are still as wholly a mystery to ourselves as Adam was to himself.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 34.

3
Still we say as we go,—

"Strange to think by the way

Whatever there is to know,
That shall we know one day."

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Cloud Confines.

VII—Knowledge: Its Futility

4
What is all our knowledge? We do not even know what weather it will be tomorrow.

BERTHOLD AUERBACH, On the Heights.

5
The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness.

6
Men are called fools in one age for not knowing what they were called fools for averring in the age before.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

7
They who know the most
Must mourn the deepest o'er the fatal truth,
The Tree of Knowledge is not that of life.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

8
Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.
New Testament: I Corinthians, viii, 1.

Knowledge bloweth up, but charity buildeth up.
BACON, Rendering of I Corinthians, viii, 1.

9
He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 18.

10 Metaphysics may be, after all, only the art of being sure of something that is not so, and logic only the art of going wrong with confidence.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 228.

11
He who knows has many cares. (Wer viel weiss Hat viel zu sorgen.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act iv, sc. 2.

12
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, O World.

13
We know what we are, but know not what we may be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 42.

14
When a man's knowledge is not in order, the more of it he has the greater will be his confusion.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology.
Ch. 15.

15
There are many things, the knowledge of which is of little or no profit to the soul.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Ch. 2.

VIII—Knowledge and Ignorance

16
A seeming ignorance is often a most necessary part of worldly knowledge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

17 Ignorance seldom vaults into knowledge, but passes into it through an intermediate state of obscurity, even as night into day through twilight.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Essays. No. 16.

18
True knowledge is modest and wary; 'tis ignorance that is bold and presuming.

JOSEPH GLANVIL, Scepsis Scientifica.

19
But Knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'er unroll.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*. St. 13.

20
Better be ignorant of a matter than half know it.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 865.

He that knows little often repents it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2209.

Not well understood, as good not known.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 437.

I wish I had not known so much of this affair, added my Uncle Toby, or that I had known more of it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vi, ch. 7.

21
It is better, of course, to know useless things than to know nothing. (Satiush est supervacua scire quam nihil.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 45.

1

Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to
heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 78.

2

There is only one good, that is knowledge;
there is only one evil, that is ignorance.
(Μόνον ἀγαθὸν εἶναι, τὴν ἐπιστήμην, καὶ ἓν μόνον κακόν, τὴν ἀμαθίαν.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates.

3

It is necessary to fathom one's ignorance on one subject to discover how little one knows on other subjects.

J. A. SPENDER, The Comments of Bagshot.
Ch. 11.

4

Knowledge is sympathy, charity, kindness,
Ignorance only is maker of hell.

WILLIAM WATSON, England to Ireland.

There are four sorts of men:

He who knows not and knows not he knows not: he is a fool—shun him;

He who knows not and knows he knows not:
he is simple—teach him;

He who knows and knows not he knows: he is asleep—wake him;

He who knows and knows he knows: he is wise—follow him.

LADY BURTON, Life of Sir Richard Burton.
Quoted as an Arabian proverb. (See Specta- tor, 11 Aug., 1894, p. 176.) Sometimes attributed to Darius the Persian.

We think so because other people all think so;
Or because—or because—after all, we do think so;

Or because we were told so, and think we must think so;

Or because we once thought so, and think we still
think so;

Or because, having thought so, we think we will think so.

HENRY SIDGWICK, Lines Composed in His Sleep. (WILLIAM OSLER, Harveian Oration, in South Place Magazine, Feb., 1907.)

Sæpe ego audiui, milites, eum primum esse virum, qui ipse consultat quid in rem sit; secundum eum, qui bene monenti oboediat; qui nec ipse consulere nec alteri parere sciat, eum extremi ingenii esse.

The wisest saying of all was that the only true wisdom lay in not thinking that one knew what one did not know.

CICERO, Academicarum Quæstionum. Bk. i, ch.
4, sec. 16.

7

When you know a thing, to hold that you know it; and when you do not know a thing, to allow that you do not know it: this is knowledge.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (Legge, tr.)

To know that we know what we know, and that we do not know what we do not know, that is true knowledge.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. Quoting Confucius.

To be conscious that you are ignorant is a great step to knowledge.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 5.

8

Knowledge is the knowing that we cannot know.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

9

To know one's ignorance is the best part of knowledge.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 71.

10

All things I thought I knew; but now confess
The more I know I know, I know the less.

ROBERT OWEN, Works. Bk. vi, ch. 39.

11

What I do not know I do not think I know.
("Ὅτι ἂν μὴ οἶδα, οὐδὲ οἶμαι εἰδέναι.")

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 21.

12

The only thing that we never know is to ignore what we cannot know. (La seule chose que nous ne savons point, est d'ignorer ce que nous ne pouvons savoir.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv.

13

As for me, all I know is that I know nothing.
(Συνειδὼς ἐμὰντῷ ἀμαθίαν.)

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Phædrus. Sec. 235.)

I know nothing except the fact of my ignorance.
(Εἰδέναι μὲν μηδὲν πλὴν αὐτὸ τοῦτο [εἰδέναι].)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 32.)

Well didst thou speak, Athena's wisest son!

"All that we know is, nothing can be known."

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 7.

IV—Labor: To Labor is to Pray

2 To labor is to pray. (Laborare est orare.)

The ancient motto of the Benedictine monks. A variation of this, "Qui laborat, orat," "Who labors, prays," is attributed to St. Augustine.

3 Who prays and works lifts up to God his heart with his hands. (Qui orat et laborat, cor levat ad Deus cum manibus.)

ST. BERNARD, Works. Vol. ii, p. 866. A version of Lamentations, iii, 41: "Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens."

4 Even in the meanest sorts of Labour, the whole soul of a man is composed into a kind of real harmony the instant he sets himself to work.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15.

What worship, for example, is there not in mere washing!

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15. Referring to "Work is prayer."

5 Lo! all life this truth declares,
Laborare est orare;
And the whole earth rings with prayers.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Labour is Prayer.

6 Labour as long lived; pray as ever dying.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 To labor rightly and earnestly is to walk in the golden track that leads to God.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks: Work and Play.

8 For he that is true of his tongue, and of his two hands,

And doth his work therewith, and willeth no man ill,

He is a god by the gospel.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ii, l. 82.

Work as though work alone thine end could gain;

But pray to God as though all work were vain.
D'ARCY W. THOMPSON, Labor and Prayer. Paraphrasing Euripides.

9 Great thoughts hallow any labor. . . . If the ditcher muse the while how he may live up-rightly, the ditching spade and turf knife may be engraved on the coat-of-arms of his posterity.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 20 April, 1841.

10 Ah, little recks the laborer,
How near his work is holding him to God,
The loving Laborer through space and time.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 107.

<sup>3</sup> Labor is life! 'Tis the still water faileth;
Idleness ever despaireth, bewaileth;
Keep the watch wound, for the dark rust assailleth.

FRANCES S. OSGOOD, To Labor Is to Pray.

Labor is rest—from the sorrows that greet us;
Rest from all petty vexations that meet us,
Rest from sin-promptings that ever entreat us,

Rest from world-sirens that lure us to ill.

Work—and pure slumbers shall wait on thy pillow;

Work—thou shalt ride over Care's coming billow;

Lie not down wearied 'neath Woe's weeping willow!

Work with a stout heart and resolute will!

FRANCES S. OSGOOD, To Labor Is to Pray.

<sup>4</sup> The man who by his labour gets

LAMB

11 Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow,

And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go. . . .

"What makes the lamb love Mary so?"
The eager children cry.

"Oh, Mary loves the lamb, you know,"
The teacher did reply.

And licks the hand just rais'd to shed his blood.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 81.

15 But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up . . . and was unto him as a daughter.

Old Testament: II Samuel, xii, 3.

1 The ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes will never answer a calf when he bleats.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 75.

2 In peace was never gentle lamb more mild.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 174.

3 Lions in the field and lambs in chamber.

ADAM USK, Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

We say it is comely for a man to be a lamb in the house, and a lion in the field.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, English Poesie, 299.
(1589)

Though lions to their enemies they were lambs to their friends.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Infernal Marriage.
Pt. ii, ch. 4.

4 Abroad in the meadows to see the young lambs

Run sporting about by the side of their dams
With fleeces so clean and so white.

ISAAC WATTS, Innocent Play.

I—Language: Definitions

5 Examine Language; what, if you except some few primitive elements (of natural sound), what is it all but Metaphors, recognized as such, or no longer recognized?

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 11.

All slang is metaphor, and all metaphor is poetry.

G. K. CHESTERTON, A Defence of Slang.

I hate to hunt down a tired metaphor.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 36.

6 Language is the archives of history. . . .
Language is fossil poetry.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

Language is a city to the building of which every human being brought a stone.

EMERSON, *Letters and Social Aims: Quotation
and Originality*.

7 Language,—human language,—after all is but little better than the croak and cackle of fowls, and other utterances of brute nature,— sometimes not so adequate.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 14 July, 1850.

8 Every language is a temple, in which the soul of those who speak it is enshrined.

9 Languages are the pedigrees of nations.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, v, 224.)

Language is the only instrument of science, and words are but the signs of ideas.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Preface to His Dictionary.

Languages are no more than the keys of Sciences.
He who despises one, slights the other.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 12.

10 Language is the dress of thought.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley.

See also CHESTERFIELD under WORD.

Language is called the Garment of Thought:
however, it should rather be, Language is the Flesh-Garment, the Body, of Thought.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 11.

Language is the picture and counterpart of thought.

MARK HOPKINS, Address, 1 Dec., 1841.

11 Accent is the soul of a language; it gives the feeling and truth to it. (L'accent est l'âme du discours, il lui donne le sentiment et la vérité.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. i.

The accent of one's country dwells in the mind and the heart, as well as on the tongue. (L'accent du pays où l'on est né demeure dans l'esprit et dans le cœur, comme dans le langage.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 342.

My dialect, which you discommend so much.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 115.

12 Language is the memory of the human race.
It is as a thread or nerve of life running through all the ages, connecting them into one common, prolonged and advancing existence.

WILLIAM SMITH, Thorndale. Pt. i, sec. 11.

13 Language is but a poor bull's-eye lantern wherewith to show off the vast cathedral of the world.

R. L. STEVENSON, Walt Whitman.

14 Language is the amber in which a thousand precious and subtle thoughts have been safely imbedded and preserved.

R. C. TRENCH, The Study of Words: Introductory Lecture.

15 Language, as well as the faculty of speech, was the immediate gift of God.

NOAH WEBSTER, Preface to His Dictionary.

Language is the expression of ideas, and if the people of one country cannot preserve an identity of ideas they cannot retain an identity of language.

NOAH WEBSTER, Preface to His Dictionary.

II—Language: Apothegms

16 Speak the language of the company that you are in; speak it purely, and unlarded with any other.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

What progress do you make in the language

[Italian] in which Charles the Fifth said that he would choose to speak to his mistress? . . . You already possess, and, I hope, take care not to forget, that language [English] which he reserved for his horse. You are absolutely master, too, of that language [French] in which he said he would converse with men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

1 The language of the street is always strong. What can describe the folly and emptiness of scolding like the word jawing?

EMERSON, Journals, 1840.

His language is painful and free.

BRET HARTE, His Answer.

2 We shall never understand one another until we reduce the language to seven words.

KAHLIL GIBRAN, Sand and Foam.

That is not good language that all understand not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3 Custom is the most certain mistress of language, as the public stamp makes the current money.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo.

He strikes no coin, 'tis true, but coins new phrases,

And vends them forth as knaves vend gilded counters,

Which wise men scorn and fools accept in payment.

UNKNOWN. (Quoted by SCOTT, The Monastery, as from an old play.)

4 The Turkish language is like that: it says a lot in few words. (La langue turque est comme cela, elle dit beaucoup en peu de paroles.)

MOIËRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 4.

5 I find sufficient store of stuff in our language, but some defect of fashion.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

6 I am a barbarian here, because I am understood by no one. (Barbarus hic ego sum, quia non intelligor ulli.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 10, l. 37.

7 Similes are like songs in love:

They much describe; they nothing prove.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 314.

Thou hast the most unsavoury similes.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 88.

Off on the dappled turf at ease

I sit, and play with similes,

Loose type of things through all degrees.

WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy. No. 2.

No simile runs on all fours. (Nullum simile quatuor pedibus currit.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, quoted by SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes.

Allegory dwells in a transparent palace. (L' allégorie habite un palais diaphane.)

LEMIERRE, Peinture. Sec. 3.

8 Moth: They have been at a great feast of languages, and have stolen the scraps.

Costard: O, they have lived long in the alms-basket of words.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 40.

9 There is not chastity enough in language Without offence to utter them.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. i, l. 98.

Language was not powerful enough to describe the infant phenomenon.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 23.

10 Sure, if I reprehend anything in this world, it is the use of my oracular tongue, and a nice derangement of epitaphs!

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3.

III—Language: Greek and Latin

11 Beside 'tis known he could speak Greek As naturally as pigs squeak;

That Latin was no more difficile

Than to a blackbird 'tis to whistle.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 51.

A Babylonish dialect

Which learned pedants much affect.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 93.

He that is but able to express

No sense at all in several languages,

Will pass for learner than he that's known

To speak the strongest reason in his own.

BUTLER, Satire Upon the Abuse of Learning. Pt. i, l. 65.

For though to smatter ends of Greek

Or Latin be the rhetoric

Of pedants counted, and vain-glorious,

To smatter French is meritorious.

BUTLER, Satire Upon Our Ridiculous Imitation of the French, l. 127.

12 He Greek and Latin speaks with greater ease Than hogs eat acorns, and tame pigeons peas.

LIONEL CRANFIELD, Panegyric on Tom Coriate.

13 The ancient languages are the scabbard which holds the mind's sword.

GOETHE, Table-Talk, 1814. A paraphrase from Luther.

He who is ignorant of foreign languages knows not his own.

GOETHE, Kunst und Alterthum.

The knowledge of the ancient languages is mainly a luxury.

JOHN BRIGHT, Letter to J. Churton Collins, 1886.

1 And though thou hadst small Latin and less Greek.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of My Beloved Master, William Shakespeare.

Small skill in Latin, and still less in Greek,
Is more than adequate to all I seek.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 385.

2 Everything is Greek, when it is more shameful
To be ignorant of Latin. (Omnia Græce!
Cum sit turpe magis nostris nescire Latine.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 187. The concluding phrase is said to be spurious.

3 A laudation in Greek is of marvelous efficacy at the beginning of a book. (Une louange en grec est d'une merveilleuse efficace à la tête d'un livre.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules: Préface.

4 This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 264.

Speaks three or four languages word for word without book.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 27.

5 Cassius: Did Cicero say anything?

Casca: Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cassius: To what effect?

Casca: Nay, an I tell you that I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 281.

Hum, I think this is heathen Greek; I'm sure 'tis so to me.

APHERA BEHN, The False Count. Act iv, sc. 1.

All this to the husbandman was heathen Greek.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19.

It is Greek, it cannot be read. (Græcum est, non potest legi.)

FRANCIS ACCURSIUS. There is a fable that a scholar of Queen's College, Oxon, strolling in Bagley Wood some centuries ago, encountered a wild boar, which attacked him. The student thrust the volume of Aristotle he was reading into the boar's jaws, crying out, "Græcum est," and so choked the brute. In commemoration of this exploit, a boar's head is still served every Christmas at the college.

It is Hebrew to me. (C'est de l'hebreu pour moi.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Étourdi. Act iii, sc. 3.

6 Learn Greek; it is the language of wisdom.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

7 Lord, they'd have taught me Latin in pure waste!

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

Lash'd into Latin by the tingling rod.

JOHN GAY, The Birth of the Squire, l. 46.

8 Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 62.

O! good my lord, no Latin;

I'm not such a truant since my coming,

As not to know the language I have liv'd in.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 42.

9 Egad, I think the interpreter is the hardest to be understood of the two!

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 2.

IV—Language: English

10 God save the king, that is lord of this language.

CHAUCER, The Astrolabe: Prologue, l. 63. (c. 1380)

My dear ma'am how do you clack away,

King George's English hack away.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, The Farmer. Act i, sc. 3. (1787)

Here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 4, l. 5. (1600)

If a man should charge them for counterfeiting
the king's English.

THOMAS WILSON, Rhetorique, 162. (1560)

11 Praise enough
To fill th' ambition of a private man,
That Chatham's language was his mother-tongue.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 235. (1783)

12 Sydneian showers
Of sweet discourse, whose powers

Can crown old Winter's head with flowers.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed) Mistress.

13 And who in time knows whither we may vent
The treasure of our tongue? To what strange shores

This gain of our best glory shall be sent,

T' enrich unknowing nations with our stores?

What worlds in th' yet unformed Occident
May come refin'd with th' accents that are ours?

SAMUEL DANIEL, Musophilus.

Well-languag'd Daniel.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk. ii, song 2, l. 303. Referring to Samuel Daniel.

14 I trade both with the living and the dead for the enrichment of our native language.

DRYDEN, Æneid: Dedication to Translation.

15 I like to be beholden to the great metropolitan English speech, the sea which receives tributaries from every region under heaven. I should as soon think of swimming across Charles River when I wish to go to Boston, as of reading all my books in originals, when I have them rendered for me in my mother tongue.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

There is no more welcome gift to men than a new symbol. . . . Greek mythology called the sea "the tear of Saturn." The return of the soul to God was described as "a flask of water broken into the sea." St. John gave us the Christian figure of "souls passing in the blood of Christ." The aged Michel Angelo indicates his perpetual study as in boyhood,—"I carry my satchel still." Machiavel described the papacy as "a stone inserted in the body of Italy to keep the wound open." To the Parliament debating how to tax America, Burke exclaimed, "Shear the wolf." Our Kentuckian orator said of his dissent from his companion, "I showed him the back of my hand."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

1 Let foreign nations of their language boast,
What fine variety each tongue affords;
I like our language, as our men and coast;
Who cannot dress it well, want wit, not words.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sun.

2 The American language differs from English in that it seeks the top of expression while English seeks its lowly valleys.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, Americans Are Boys.

3 Thou whoreson Zed! thou unnecessary letter!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 69.

4 Dan Chaucer, well of English undefiled.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto ii, st. 32.
From purest wells of English undefiled
None deeper drank than he, the New World's Child.

WHITTIER, James Russell Lowell.

5 Oh, but the heavenly grammar did I hold
Of that high speech which angels' tongues turn gold! . . .

Or if that language yet with us abode
Which Adam in the garden talked with God!
But our untempered speech descends—poor heirs!

Grimy and rough-cast still from Babel's brick-layers:

Curse on the brutish jargon we inherit,
Strong but to damn, not memorise, a spirit!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait.

6 English as She is Spoke.

ANDREW WHITE TIER. Title of a reprint (1883) of the English part of a book first issued in 1855 at Paris, entitled O novo guia da conversacao en Portuguez e Inglez (A Guide to English Conversation for the Use of Portuguese Students). "English as she is spoke" does not occur in the original, but the specimens of English given there were so grotesque as to suggest the title to the English publisher, Mr. Tuer.

Under the tropic is our language spoke.

EDMUND WALLER, Upon the Death of the Lord Protector.

LARK

I—Lark: Apothegms

7 A skylark wounded on the wing
Doth make a cherub cease to sing.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

8 To rise with the lark, and go to bed with the lamb.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Court and County, p. 183.

Rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed.

JAMES HURDIS, The Village Curate.

Goe to bed with the Lamb, and rise with the Lark.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 229.

9 Near all the birds
Will sing at dawn—and yet we do not take
The chaffering swallow for the holy lark.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 951.

10 The busy lark, the messenger of day.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 1493.

It was the lark, the herald of the morn.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 6.

Up springs the lark,
Shrill-voic'd, and loud, the messenger of morn.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 590.

11 When the sky falleth we shall have Larks.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4.

By robbing Peter he paid Paul . . . and hoped to catch larks if ever the heavens should fall.
(Si les nues tomboyent esperoyt prendre les alouettes tous rousties.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

12 He thinks that roasted larks will fall into his mouth.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 3. Of a sluggard.

13 The sunrise wakes the lark to sing.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Bird Raptures.

14 Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phœbus 'gins arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

How at heaven's gates she claps her wings,
The morn not waking till she sings.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v, sc. i.

15 Merry larks are ploughmen's clocks.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 914.

Then my dial goes not true; I took this lark for a bunting.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 5.

1
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 27.

2
Larikie, Larikie lee!

Wha'll gang up the heaven wi' me?

No the lout that lies in his bed,

No the doolfu' that dreeps his head.

UNKNOWN, The Lark's Song.

II—Lark: Its Loveliness

3
The music soars within the little lark,
And the lark soars.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 155.

4
Who loves not music, still may pause to hark
Nature's free gladness hymning in the lark.

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iii,
canto ii, l. 13.

5
Oh, stay, sweet warbling woodlark, stay,
Nor quit for me the trembling spray!

A hapless lover courts thy lay,

Thy soothing, fond complaining.

BURNS, Address to the Woodlark.

6
'Tis sweet to hear the merry lark,
That bids a blithe good-morrow.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

The merry lark he soars on high,
No worldly thought o'ertakes him.

He sings aloud to the clear blue sky,

And the daylight that awakes him.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

7
But the Lark is so brimful of gladness and
love,

The green fields below him, the blue sky
above,

That he sings, and he sings, and for ever sings
he—

"I love my Love, and my Love loves me!"

S. T. COLERIDGE, Answer to a Child's Question.

And so, his senses gradually wrapt
In a half sleep, he dreams of better worlds,
And dreaming, hears thee still, O singing lark,
That singest like an angel in the clouds.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fears in Solitude, l. 25.

8
I said to the sky-poised Lark:
"Hark—hark!

Thy note is more loud and free

Because there lies safe for thee

A little nest on the ground."

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Rhyme About Birds.

9
The lark now leaves his watery nest,

And climbing, shakes his dewy wings.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Morning Song.

10

The pretty Lark, climbing the welkin clear, Chants with a cheer, Heer peer, I near my

Dear;

Then stooping thence (seeming her fall to rue)

Adieu, she saith, adieu, dear Dear, adieu.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes.

Week i, day 5. (Sylvester, tr.)

11

Over the cloudlet dim,

Over the rainbow's rim,

Musical cherub, soar, singing, away!

Then, when the gloaming comes,

Low in the heather blooms

Sweet will thy welcome and bed of love be!

Emblem of happiness,

Blest is thy dwelling-place—

O, to abide in the desert with thee!

JAMES HOGG, The Skylark.

The shrill sweet lark.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

12

For singing till his heaven fills,

'Tis love of earth that he instils.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Lark Ascending.

13

To hear the lark begin his flight,

And singing, startle the dull night,

From his watch-tower in the skies,

Till the dappled Dawn doth rise;

Then to come, in spite of sorrow,

And at my window bid good morrow.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 41.

And now the herald lark

Left his ground-nest, high tow'ring to descry

The morn's approach, and greet her with his song.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 279.

14

No more the mounting larks, while Daphne sings,

Shall, list'ning, in mid-air suspend their wings.

POPE, Pastorals: Winter, l. 53.

15

Oh, far, far, far,

As any spire or star,

Beyond the cloistered wall!

Oh, high, high, high,

A heart-throb in the sky—

Then not at all!

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, The Lark.

16

The lark whose notes do beat

The vaulty heaven, so high above our heads.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 21.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,

From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,

And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast

The sun ariseth in his majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 853.

The lark, that tirra-lyra chants.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 9.

<sup>1</sup> Hail to thee, blithe Spirit!—

Bird thou never wert!—

That from Heaven, or near it,

Pourest thy full heart

In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 1.

All the earth and air

With thy voice is loud,

As, when Night is bare,

From one lonely cloud,

The moon rains out her beams, and Heaven is overflowed.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 6.

Like a glow-worm golden

In a dell of dew,

Scattering unbeholden

Its ærial hue

Among the flowers and grass which screen it from the view.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 10.

Teach us, Sprite or Bird,

What sweet thoughts are thine;

I have never heard

Praise of love or wine

That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 13.

Better than all measures

Of delightful sound—

Better than all treasures

That in books are found,

Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground!

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 20.

Teach me half the gladness

That thy brain must know,

Such harmonious madness

From my lips would flow,

The world should listen then—as I am listening now.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 21.

<sup>2</sup> Now rings the woodland loud and long,

The distance takes a lovelier hue,

And drown'd in yonder living blue

The lark becomes a sightless song.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxv.

<sup>3</sup> How the blithe Lark runs up the golden stair
That leans through cloudy gates from Heaven to Earth.

FREDERICK TENNYSON, The Skylark.

<sup>4</sup> Not loftiest bard of mightiest mind

Shall ever chant a note so pure,

Till he can cast the earth behind,

And breathe in heaven secure.

WILLIAM WATSON, The First Skylark of Spring.

<sup>5</sup> But He is risen, a later star of dawn,
Glittering and twinkling near yon rosy cloud;
Bright gem instinct with music, vocal spark;

The happiest bird that sprang out of the Ark!

WORDSWORTH, A Morning Exercise, l. 27.

Ethereal minstrel! pilgrim of the sky!

Dost thou despise the earth where cares abound?

Or, while the wings aspire, are heart and eye

Both with thy nest upon the dewy ground?

Thy nest which thou canst drop into at will,

Those quivering wings composed, that music
still!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

Leave to the nightingale her shady wood;

A privacy of glorious light is thine:

Whence thou dost pour upon the world a flood

Of harmony, with instinct more divine:

Type of the wise who soar, but never roam:

True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

The bird that soars on highest wing,

Builds on the ground her lowly nest;

And she that doth most sweetly sing,

Sings in the shade when all things rest:

—In lark and nightingale we see

What honour hath humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

The lark, that shuns on lofty boughs to build

Her humble nest, lies silent in the field.

EDMUND WALLER, Of the Queen.

LATENESS

See also Delay

<sup>6</sup> Five minutes—Zounds! I have been five minutes too late all my lifetime.

HANNAH COWLEY, The Belle's Stratagem. Act
i, sc. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Better late than never. (Potius sero, quam nunquam.)

LIVY, History. Bk. iv, sec. 23. The French form of the proverb is, "Il vaut mieux tard que
jamais." (VEPRIE, Les Proverbes Communs.)

HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 10; MATTHEW

HENRY, Commentaries: Matthew, xxi; BUN-

YAN, Pilgrim's Progress, pt. i; etc.

For better than never is late.

CHAUCER, The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l.
857. (c. 1386)

Better late than never, but better never late.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

Better now than never.

PEPYS, Diary, 17 March, 1667.

IT IS NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND, see under REFOR-MATION.

<sup>8</sup> Often that which has come latest on the scene seems to have accomplished the whole matter. (Semper enim quod postremum adjectum sit, id rem totam, videtur traxisse.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxvii, ch. 45.

<sup>9</sup> Ah! nothing is too late

Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus. St. 24.

1 Too late you look back to the land when, the rope being loosed, the curved keel rushes into the deep. (Sero respicitur tellus, ubi fune soluto, Currit in immensum panda carina salum.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 11, l. 23.

Too late I grasp my shield after my wounds. (Sero clypeum post vulnera sumo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 3, l. 35.

There is an old adage about gladiators, that they plan their fight in the ring. (Vetus proverbium est gladiatorem in harena capere consilium.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, 1.

To call a counsel when the enemy is under the very walls. (Cogere consilium, cum muros obsidet hostis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 304.

It is na time to stoop when the head is off.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The bird cries out too late when it is taken. (A tard crie l'oiseau quant il est pris.)

J. DE LA VEPRIE, Les Proverbes Communs.

2 My name is Might-have-been;

I am also called No-more, Too-late,

Farewell.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Sonnets. No. 97.

3 You come late, yet you come! (Spät kommt ihr—doch ihr kommt!)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

4 And all too late the advantage came.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 16.

5 Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 141.

6 Ah, "all things come to those who wait,"

(I say these words to make me glad),

But something answers soft and sad,

"They come, but often come too late."

MARY MONTGOMERY SINGLETON, Tout Vient à Qui Sait Attendre.

While we send for the napkin the soup gets cold,
While the bonnet is trimming the face grows old,
When we've matched our buttons the pattern is sold,

And everything comes too late—too late.

FITZ HUGH LUDLOW, Too Late.

7 Late, late, so late! but we can enter still.

Too late, too late! ye cannot enter now.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 167.

8 He was always late on principle, his principle being that punctuality is the thief of time.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3.

If you're there before it's over, you're on time.

JAMES J. WALKER, Remark, to reporters, on arriving late at a dinner, Oct., 1931.

I—Laughter: Apothegms

9 Where is the laughter that shook the rafter?
Where is the rafter, by the way?

T. B. ALDRICH, An Old Castile.

10 Laffing iz the sensation ov pheeling good all over, and showing it principally in one spot.

JOSH BILLINGS, Laffing.

11 Laughter's never an end, it's a by-product.

STRUTHERS BURT, Festival. Ch. 13.

12 How much lies in Laughter: the cipher-key, wherewith we decipher the whole man.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 4.

Men show their characters in nothing more clearly than in what they think laughable.

GOETHE, Maxims.

Men have been wise in very different modes, but they have always laughed the same way.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, ii, 45.

13 'Tis fair lie down and laugh.

ANTHONY COPLEY, A Fig for Fortune, l. 24. (1596)

14 Laugh and be fat.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax, 68. (1596)

Laugh and be fat, sir, your penance is known.

BEN JONSON, The Penates. (1604)

I'll laugh and be fat, for care kills a cat.

UNKNOWN. (Roxburghe Ballads, i, 476. 1610)

Laugh and be well.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 93. (1737)

Laugh and be fat all the world over.

DAVID GARRICK, Letters. Vol. i, p. 201. (1765)

15 He laugheth that winneth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

So, so, so, so. They laugh that win.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 125.

Let them laugh that win.

DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue to Colman's English Merchant.

16 You laugh, and you are quite right,
For yours is the dawn of the morning,
For me is the solemn good night.

THEODORE EDWARD HOOK, Impromptu at Fulham. There are other versions of this famous impromptu in allusion to young Stopford, who had laughed heartily at the previous verse, but this is the best. J. R. Planché, who was present, asserts that the last line should be, "And God send you a good night."

17 Laughter holding both his sides.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 31.

<sup>1</sup> He laugheth but from the lips forward.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutation of Tyndale's Answer, p. 148.

<sup>2</sup> To laugh, if but for an instant only, has never been granted to man before the fortieth day from his birth, and then it is looked upon as a miracle of precocity.
PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

<sup>3</sup> Is he gone to a land of no laughter,
The man who made mirth for us all?
JAMES RHODES, On the Death of Artemus Ward.

<sup>4</sup> My lungs began to crow like chanticleer, . . .
And I did laugh sans intermission
An hour by his dial.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 30.

I will laugh like a hyen.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 158.

With his eyes in flood with laughter.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 6, l. 74.

O, I am stabb'd with laughter.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 79.

Laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 3, l. 18.

<sup>5</sup> A sight to shake
The midriff of despair with laughter.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 197.

<sup>6</sup> Now you can laugh but on one side of your mouth, friend.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 173. (1666)

If you provoke me, I'll make you laugh on the wrong side o' your mouth.
JOHN OZELL, Molière, iv, 36. (1714)

<sup>7</sup> He laughs best that laughs last.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Country House. Act ii, sc. 5. (1706) Vanbrugh is quoting an old proverb, common to all languages.

Your Grace knows the French proverb, "He laughs best who laughs last."
SCOTT, Peveil of the Peak. Ch. 38.

Better the last smile than the first laughter.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>8</sup> The laughter of man is the contentment of God.
JOHN WEISS, Wit, Humor, and Shakspeare.

<sup>9</sup> I canna be angry for lauchin.
JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 35.

II—Laughter: Its Virtue

<sup>10</sup> When the green woods laugh with the voice of joy,
And the dimpling stream runs laughing by;
When the air does laugh with our merry wit,
And the green hill laughs with the noise of it.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Laughing Song.

<sup>11</sup> And yet methinks the older that one grows
Inclines us more to laugh than scold, though laughter
Leaves us so doubly serious shortly after.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 79.

<sup>12</sup> The man who cannot laugh is not only fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils, but his whole life is already a treason and a stratum-gem.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 4.

<sup>13</sup> The most completely lost of all days is that on which one has not laughed. (La plus perdue de toutes les journées est celle où l'on n'a pas rit.)

CHAMFORT, Maximes.

<sup>14</sup> 'Tis a good thing to laugh at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness.

JOHN DRYDEN, Essays. Vol. ii, p. 133.

<sup>15</sup> I am the laughter of the new-born child
On whose soft-breathing sleep an angel smiled.

R. W. GILDER, Ode.

Very sound of very light,
Heard from morning's rosiest height,
When the soul of all delight,
Fills a child's clear laughter.

SWINBURNE, A Child's Laughter.

<sup>16</sup> I can't say whether we had more wit amongst us than usual, but I am certain we had more laughing, which answered the end as well.
GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 32.

<sup>17</sup> I'd rather laugh, a bright-haired boy,
Than reign, a gray-beard king.

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Man Dreams.

You hear that boy laughing?—You think he's all fun;

But the angels laugh, too, at the good he has done;

The children laugh loud as they troop to his call,

And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all!

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys.

<sup>18</sup> Without love and laughter there is no joy; live amid love and laughter. (Sine amore jocusque Nil est jucundum; vivas in amore jocusque.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 65.

- 1 Laugh, if you are wise. (Ride, si sapis.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 41.
One inch of joy surmounts of grief a span,
Because to laugh is proper to the man.
RABELAIS, Works: To the Reader.
- 2 To be born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world is mad.
RAFAEL SABATINI, Scaramouche. Ch. 1. Prize-winning answer to the question, "What makes life worth living?"
- 3 A good laugh is sunshine in a house.
THACKERAY, Sketches: Love, Marriage.
- 4 Earnest, sombre-browed, we follow after
You, who fly a-mocking from the ruck;
O we have a desperate need of laughter!
Give us laughter, Puck!
BEATRICE LLEWELLYN THOMAS, To Puck.

III—Laughter: Its Folly

- 5 Nothing is more silly than a silly laugh. (Nam risu inepto res ineptior nullast.)
CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 39, l. 16.
And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 122.
The Horse-Laugh is a distinguishing characteristic of the rural hoyden.
RICHARD STEELE, The Guardian, No. 29.
The landlord's laugh was ready chorus.
BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.
- 6 Having mentioned laughing, I must particularly warn you against it; and I could heartily wish that you may often be seen to smile, but never heard to laugh, while you live. Frequent and loud laughter is the characteristic of folly and ill manners: it is the manner in which the mob express their silly joy at silly things, and they call it being merry. In my mind there is nothing so illiberal and so ill-bred as audible laughter.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.
How low and unbecoming a thing laughter is,
not to mention the disagreeable noise that it makes, and the shocking distortion of the face that it occasions. . . . I am neither of a melancholy nor a cynical disposition, and am as willing and as apt to be pleased as anybody; but I am sure that, since I have had the full use of my reason, nobody has ever heard me laugh.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.
The vulgar often laugh, but never smile; whereas well-bred people often smile, but seldom laugh.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.
I hate scarce smiles; I love laughing.
WILLIAM BLAKE. (GILCHRIST, Life, i, 62.)
- 7 There is nothing more unbecoming a man of quality than to laugh.
CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 2.

- 8 If in these hallow'd times, when sober, sad,
All gentlemen are melancholy mad,
When 'tis not deem'd so great a crime by half
To violate a vestal as to laugh.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 461.
- 9 As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 6.
The more one is a fool, the more one laughs.
(Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.)
DANCOURT, Maison de Campagne. Sc. 11.
- 10 Beware you don't laugh, for then you show
all your faults.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.
- 11 Do not laugh much, nor at many things, nor boisterously. (Γέλως μὴ πολλὸς ἔστω μηδὲ ἐπὶ πολλοῖς μηδὲ ἀναιμένους.)
EPICTETUS [?], Encheiridion, Sec. 33.
- 12 I believe they talked of me, for they laughed consumedly.
FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 1.
- 13 He who laugheth too much hath the nature of a fool; he that laugheth not at all hath the nature of an old cat.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.
- 14 Laugh not too much; the witty man laughs least.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 39.
The giggler is a milk-maid.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 42.
Besides, my prospects—don't you know that people won't employ
A man that wrongs his manliness by laughing
like a boy,
And suspect the azure blossom that unfolds upon
a shoot,
As if wisdom's old potato could not flourish at its root?
O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatica. St. 7.
- 15 Ill-timed laughter is a dangerous evil. (Γέλως ἄκαιρος ἐν βροτοῖς δεινὸν κακόν.)
MENANDER, Monastikoi. No. 88.
The fool will laugh though there be nought to laugh at.
MENANDER, Monastikoi. No. 108. See also under FOOL.
- 16 The sense of humour has other things to do than to make itself conspicuous in the act of laughter.
ALICE MEYNELL, Laughter.
- 17 The price of a laugh is too high, if it is raised at the expense of propriety. (Nimium risus pretium est, si probitatis impendio constat.)
QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. vi,
ch. 3, sec. 34.

- 1
Theirs was the glee of martial breast,
And laughter theirs at little jest.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iii, st. 4.
- 2
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 52.
- 3
Laughter almost ever cometh of things most disproportioned to ourselves and nature: delight hath a joy in it either permanent or present; laughter hath only a scornful tickling.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Defence of Poesie.
- 4
There are not many things cheaper than supposing and laughing.
SWIFT, On Sleeping in Church.

IV—Laughter and Tears

- 5
I hasten to laugh at everything, for fear of being obliged to weep. (Je me hâte de me moquer de tous, de peur d'être obligé d'en pleurer.)
BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act i, sc. 2.
- And if I laugh at any mortal thing,
'Tis that I may not weep.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 4.
- I struggle and struggle, and try to buffet down my cruel reflections as they rise; and when I cannot, I am forced to try to make myself laugh that I may not cry; for one or other I must do;
and is it not philosophy carried to the highest pitch for a man to conquer such tumults of soul as I am sometimes agitated by, and in the very height of the storm to quaver out a horse-laugh?
RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe. Letter 84.
- 6
Some things are of that nature as to make One's fancy chuckle, while his heart doth ache.
BUNYAN, *The Author's Way of Sending Forth
His Second Part of the Pilgrim*, l. 126.
- 7
For God hath not granted to woeful mortals even laughter without tears. (Ἐπεὶ θεὸς οὐδὲ γελᾶσαι ἀκλαυτὶ μερόπεςσιν διζυρρίσιν ἔδωκε.)
CALLIMACHUS, Fragmenta Incertæ. No. 117.
- 8
Ill may a sad mind forge a merry face;
Nor hath constrained laughter any grace.
CHAPMAN, Hero and Leander. Sestiad v, l. 57.
- 9
On this hapless earth
There's small sincerity of mirth,
And laughter oft is but an art
To drown the outcry of the heart.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Address to Certain Gold-fishes.

- 10
She can laugh and cry both in a wind.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4120.
- 11
Learn weeping and then thou shalt laugh gaining.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 12
Laughter and tears are meant to turn the wheels of the same sensibility; one is wind-power and the other water-power, that is all.
O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
- 13
As men's faces smile on those who smile, so they respond to those who weep. (Ut ridentib-us arident, ita flentibus adsunt Humani vultus.)
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 101.
- If you smile, he splits his sides with laughter;
if he sees a friend drop a tear, he weeps; if you call for a bit of fire in winter-time, he puts on his cloak; if you say, "I am hot," he breaks into a sweat. (Si dixeris "æstuo," sudat.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 100.
- Joy has its friends, but grief its loneliness.
ROBERT NATHAN, A Cedar Box.
- Laugh and the world laughs with you,
Weep and you weep alone,
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Solitude. Fraudulently claimed by John A. Joyce. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)
- It takes two for a kiss
Only one for a sigh,
Twain by twain we marry
One by one we die.
- Joy is a partnership,
Grief weeps alone,
Many guests had Cana;
Gethsemane but one.
FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, Grief and Joy.
- 14
We must laugh before we are happy, for fear
we die before we laugh at all.
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.
- 15
Take it, girl! And fear no after,
Take your fill of all this laughter,
Laugh or not, the tears will fall,
Take the laughter first of all.
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.
- 16
Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful; and the end of mirth is heaviness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 13. Extrema gaudii luctus occupat.—Vulgate.
- 17
Better to write of laughter than of tears,
Because to laugh is proper to the man.
(Mieux est de ris que de larmes écrire, Pour ce que rire est le propre de l'homme.)
RABELAIS, Works: To the Reader.

To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 124.

1 He who laughs on Friday will weep on Sunday.
(Tel qui rit vendredi, dimanche pleurera.)

RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1.

2 No one is more profoundly sad than he who laughs too much.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus.

3 I have asked to be left a few tears
And some laughter.

CARL SANDBURG, Bundles.

4 When laughter is humble, when it is not based on self-esteem, it is wiser than tears. . . . There is no cure for birth and death save to enjoy the interval. The dark background which death supplies brings out the tender colours of life in all their purity.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Soliloquies in England.

5 All things are cause for either laughter or weeping. (Aut ridenda omnia aut flenda sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 10.

6 I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am by seeming otherwise.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 123.

7 Our sincerest laughter
With some pain is fraught.

SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 18.

8 If life were always merry,
Our souls would seek relief
And rest from weary laughter
In the quiet arms of grief.

HENRY VAN DYKE, If All the Skies Were Sunshine.

9 The house of laughter makes a house of woe.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 757.

10 An onion can make people cry, but there has never been a vegetable invented to make them laugh.

UNKNOWN. May Irwin's favorite quotation.
(Sat. Eve. Post, 25 Apr., 1931.)

LAW

I—Law: Definitions

5 Law is a form of order. and good law must necessarily mean good order.

ARISTOTLE, Politica. Bk. vii, ch. 4, sec. 5.

6 There are two, and only two, foundations of law, . . . equity and utility.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Pt. i, ch. 3.

Laws, like houses, lean on one another.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Pt. i, ch. 3.

7 Law is whatever is boldly asserted and plausibly maintained.

AARON BURR. (PARTON, Life and Times of Aaron Burr. Vol. i, p. 149.)

8 The absolute justice of the State, enlightened by the perfect reason of the State: that is law.

RUFUS CHOATE, Conservative Force of the American Bar.

9 The laws place the safety of all before the safety of individuals. (Leges omnium salutem singulorum salutem anteponunt.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 19, sec. 64.

The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 3. Derived by tradition from the Twelve Tables of Roman law.

Judges ought above all to remember the Conclusion of the Roman Twelve Tables: Salus populi suprema lex; and to know that laws, except they be in order to that end, are but things captious, and oracles not well inspired.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

10 Law is founded not on theory but upon nature. (Neque opinione sed natura constitutum esse jus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 28.

Law is nothing but a correct principle drawn from the inspiration of the gods, commanding what is honest, and forbidding the contrary.

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xi, sec. 12.

11 Reason is the life of the law; nay, the common law itself is nothing but reason. . . . The law, which is perfection of reason.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. i.

How long soever it hath continued, if it be against reason, it is of no force in law.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. i.

Law governs man and reason the law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3149.

Let us consider the reason of the case. For nothing is law that is not reason.

SIR JOHN POWELL, Coggs vs. Bernard (2 Ld. Raym. Rep. p. 911.)

12 The law is for the protection of the weak more than the strong.

SIR WILLIAM ERLE, Reg. v. Woolley. (4 Cox, C.C. 196)

13 The law groweth of sin, and doth punish it.
JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578)

The law's made to take care of raskills.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

14 The law, in its majestic equality, forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 27.)

15 The Law is what it is—a majestic edifice, sheltering all of us, each stone of which rests on another.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Justice. Act ii. It is the Judge speaking.

16 Law, licensed breaking of the peace.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 286.

Law, grown a forest, where perplex
The mazes, and the brambles vex.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 292.

17 Laws spring from the instinct of self-preservation.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Some Mistakes of Moses.

18 The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, i, 223.

Laws are not made for particular cases, but for men in general.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

1 No law can possibly meet the convenience of every one: we must be satisfied if it be beneficial on the whole and to the majority.

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 3.

The law is blind, and speaks in general terms; She cannot pity where occasion serves.

THOMAS MAY, The Heir. Act iv. (1620)

2 The Habeas Corpus Act . . . the most stringent curb that ever legislation imposed on tyranny.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 6.

3 The man who does no wrong needs no law. ('Ο μηδὲν ἀδικῶν οὐδενὸς δεῖται νόμου.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 845.

All laws are useless, for good men do not need them and bad men are made no better by them.

DEMONAX. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

When men are pure, laws are useless; when men are corrupt, laws are broken.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good, for the good man desires nothing which a just law will interfere with.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Reciprocal Duties of State and Subject.

It is only rogues who feel the restraint of law.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Perfect Liberty.

The good needs fear no law, It is his safety and the bad man's awe.

MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

4 Virtue alone is not sufficient for the exercise of government; laws alone carry themselves into practice.

MENCIUS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 1, sec. 3.

5 Law can discover sin, but not remove, Save by those shadowy expiations weak.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 290.

So many laws argue so many sins.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 283.

6 Laws were made that the stronger might not in all things have his way. (Inde datæ leges, ne firmitior omnia posset.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 279.

7 The laws obey custom. (Leges mori serviunt.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 36.

With customs we live well, but laws undo us.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8 A law should be a voice, as it were, sent down from heaven; it should command, not discuss. (Velut emissa divinitus vox sit; jubeat, non disputet.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 38.)

A law should be brief in order that the unlearned may grasp it more easily. (Legem enim brevem esse oportet, quo facilius ab imperitis teneatur.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 38.)

9 Law, in a free country, is, or ought to be, the determination of the majority of those who have property in land.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

10 Law is the crystallization of the habit and thought of society.

II—Law: Apothegms

11 The law is open.

New Testament: Acts, xix, 38.

12 The devil hath eleven points of the law against you, that is, possession.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 97. (1630)

Possession is nine points of the law.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 29.

Both these proverbs were in frequent use.

Possession is eleven points of the law and there are but twelve.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

That possession was the strongest tenure of the law.

PILPAY, Fables: The Cat and the Two Birds.

Eight points of the law: 1. A good cause; 2. A good purse; 3. An honest and skilful attorney; 4. Good evidence; 5. Able counsel; 6. An upright judge; 7. An intelligent jury; 8. Good luck.

Attributed to GEORGE AUGUSTUS SELWYN, when a candidate for Chamberlain of the City of London, c. 1750.

13 Law Is a Bottomless Pit.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Title of Pamphlet, 1712.

He that goes to law (as the proverb is) holds a wolf by the ears.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

The worst of law is that one suit breeds twenty.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Lawsuits consume time, and money, and rest and friends.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Whoso loves law dies either mad or poor.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix.

14 There is no magic in parchment or in wax.

WILLIAM HENRY ASHURST, Master v. Miller, 1763. (4 T. R. 320.)

The mysterious virtue of wax and parchment.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment; that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 86.

1 Nowadays the law is ended as a man is friended.

HENRY BRINKELOW, Complaint of Roderick Mors. Ch. 11. (c. 1542)

Matters be ended as they be friended.

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. i, ch. 3.

A friend in court is worth a penny in a man's purse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Bon fait avoir ami en cour,
Car le procès en est plus court.

A French variant of the proverb.
See also under COURT.

2 Law and arbitrary power are in eternal enmity.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

3 That which is a law to-day is none to-morrow.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

The law is not the same at morning and at night.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

New lords, new laws.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

And he that gives us in these days

New Lords may give us new laws.

GEORGE WITHER, Contented Man's Morrice.

4 Arms and laws do not flourish together. (Τὸν αὐτὸν ὅπλων καὶ νόμων καιρὸν εἶναι.)

JULIUS CÆSAR. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Cæsar. Ch. 35, sec. 3.)

The law speaks too softly to be heard amid the din of arms. (Τοῦ νόμου διὰ τὸν τῶν ὅπλων ψόφον οὐ κατακούσκειν.)

GAIUS MARIUS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Gaius Marius. Ch. 28, sec. 2.)

Laws are dumb in the midst of arms. (Silent enim leges inter arma.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 4, sec. 11.

The clatter of arms drowns the voice of the law.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

5 Agree, for the law is costly.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)

Agree, agree, says the old saw, the law is costly.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables of Æsop. (1692)

Come, agree, the law's costly.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

6 Who stood to gain? (Cui bono fuerit?)

LUCIUS CASSIUS LONGINUS, the judge, who used it as a maxim in instructing a jury to seek for the motive of a crime. (CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. xii, sec. 32.)

For whose good? (Cui bono?)

CICERO, quoting from Lucius Cassius in the Second Philippic. "These two words," says

Forsyth (Life), "have perhaps been oftener misapplied than any in the Latin language. They are constantly translated or used in the sense of, 'What good is it?' 'To what end does it serve?' Their real meaning is, 'Who gains by it?' 'To whom is it an advantage?'" Forsyth goes on to explain that in a trial for murder Lucius Cassius instructed the jury to inquire who had a motive for the crime, who would gain by the death, in other words, "cui bono fuerit?"

There was an ancient Roman lawyer, of great fame in the history of Roman jurisprudence, whom they called Cui Bono, from his having first introduced into judicial proceedings the argument, "What end or object could the party have had in the act with which he is accused."

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings.

7 Laws go as kings like. (Allá van leyes do quieren Reyes.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 45.

She made what pleased her lawful. (Libito fe' licito.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 56. From the Latin, "Si libet, licet."

8 Who to himself is law, no law doth need,
Offends no law, and is a king indeed.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act ii, sc. 1.

9 After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message, 1 March, 1886.

I used those words and thought they would please the Western taxpayers, who are fond of such things.

GROVER CLEVELAND, referring to "innocuous desuetude." (Interview, New York Herald, 9 June, 1886.)

The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept.

12 All things by Law. (Πάντα νομιστῇ.)

DEMOCRITUS. (MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 31.)

13 A delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

SIR THOMAS DENMAN, an English judge, in his judgment in O'Connell vs. the Queen (11 Clarke and Finnely, 351): "If it is possible that such a practice as that which has taken place in the present instance should be allowed to pass without a remedy, trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, will be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare." (4 Sept., 1894)

9 Taken in flagrant violation of the law. (In flagranti crimine comprehensi.)

JUSTINIAN, Corpus Juris Civilis Romani. Codex ix, tit. 13, sec. 1. Usually quoted, "In flagrante delicto." Its English equivalent, "Caught red-handed," referred originally only to murderers.

10 The law is a sort of hocus-pocus science, that smiles in yer face while it picks yer pocket; and the glorious uncertainty of it is of mair use to the professors than the justice of it.

CHARLES MACKLIN, Love à la Mode. Act ii, sc. 1. (1759) This is probably the origin of the phrase, "The glorious uncertainty of the law," though there is a legend that it was used as a toast by a lawyer named Wilbraham at a dinner given to Lord Mansfield in London, in 1756. (See Gentleman's Magazine, August, 1830.)

11 Good laws are produced by bad manners. (Leges bonæ malis ex moribus procreantur.)

Divine Law

11 There is but one law for all, namely, that law which governs all law, the law of our Creator, the law of humanity, justice, equity

—the law of nature and of nations.

EDMUND BURKE, *Impeachment of Warren
Hastings*, 28 May, 1794.

12 The ultimate, angels' law,
Indulging every instinct of the soul
There where law, life, joy, impulse are one thing!

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert.

13 Our human laws are but the copies, more or less imperfect, of the eternal laws, so far as we can read them.

to the law of gravitation.

18 On a divine law divination rests.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act i, sc. 9.

19 In the corrupted currents of this world
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: but 'tis not so above;
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 57.

20 God is law, say the wise; O Soul, and let us rejoice,

For if He thunder by law the thunder is yet
His voice.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism. St. 7.

1
Foul shame and scorn be on ye all
Who turn the good to evil,
And steal the Bible from the Lord,
To give it to the Devil!

The bond of union is closer between those who belong to the same nation, and closer still between those who are citizens of the same state. It is for this reason that our forefathers chose to understand one thing by the law of nations (jus gentium), and another by the civil or common law (jus civile).

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 17, sec. 69.

In every matter the consensus of opinion among all nations is to be regarded as the law of nature.
(Omni autem in re consensio omnium gentium lex naturæ putanda est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 13, sec. 30.

That which natural reason has established amongst all men is called the law of nations.

<sup>1</sup> Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 386.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63.

<sup>3</sup> In vain thy reason finer webs will draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law,
And right, too rigid, harden into wrong,
Still for the strong too weak, the weak too strong.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 191.

<sup>4</sup> The net of law is spread so wide,
No sinner from its sweep may hide.
Its meshes are so fine and strong,
They take in every child of wrong.
O wondrous web of mystery!
Big fish alone escape from thee!

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, The Net of Law.

<sup>5</sup> Petty sacrilege is punished, but sacrilege on a grand scale is honored by a triumphal procession. (Nam sacrilegia minuta puniuntur, magna in triumphis feruntur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 24.

All, look up with reverential awe,
At crimes that 'scape, or triumph o'er the law.
POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. i, l. 167.

<sup>6</sup> Laws are generally found to be nets of such a texture, as the little creep through, the great break through, and the middle-sized alone are entangled in.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Politics.

<sup>7</sup> Laws are spiders' webs, which stand firm when any light and yielding object falls upon them, while a larger thing breaks through them and escapes.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 14.)

One of the Seven [Wise Men of Greece] was wont to say: "That laws were like cobwebs; where the small flies were caught, and the great brake through."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 181.

Should I sigh, because I see
Laws like spider-webs to be?
Lesser flies are quickly ta'en

While the great break out again.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Care's Cure.

Laws like to cobwebs, catch small flies,
Great ones break them before your eyes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

For the most part, laws are but like spiders' webs, taking the small gnats, or perhaps sometimes the fat flesh flies, but hornets that have sharp stings and greater strength, break through them.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. 32.

Laws are like cobwebs, which may catch small flies, but let wasps and hornets break through.

SWIFT, Essay on the Faculties of the Mind.

<sup>8</sup> The net's not spread to catch the hawk or kite
Who do us wrong, but for the innocent birds
Who do us none at all.

(Quia non rete accipitri tennitur neque milvo, Qui male faciunt nobis: illis qui nihil faciunt tennitur.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 330. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

<sup>9</sup> The law doth punish man or woman
That steals the goose from off the common,
But lets the greater felon loose,
That steals the common from the goose.

UNKNOWN. An 18th century epigram. (See Notes and Queries. Ser. vii, 6, 469; 7, 98. Ser. viii, 10, 273.) There are various versions, all prompted by the Enclosure Acts. The version given above was written when Sir Charles Pratt, First Earl of Camden, enclosed a common strip of land in front of Camden House, 7 Oct., 1764.

<sup>10</sup> There is no law without a loophole for him who can find it. (Es giebt kein Gesetz was hat nicht ein Loch, wer's finden kann.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

V—Law: Its Tyranny

<sup>11</sup> Law is king of all.

HENRY ALFORD, School of the Heart. Lesson 6.

Law is King. (Lex Rex.)

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD. Title of book published 1644.

<sup>12</sup> There is no worse torture than the torture of laws.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

It is a hard thing to torture the laws so that they torture men.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. viii, aph. 13.

<sup>13</sup> We, like the eagles, were born to be free. Yet we are obliged, in order to live at all, to make a cage of laws for ourselves and to stand on the perch.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Introduction.

As soon as laws are necessary for men, men are no longer fit for freedom.

PYTHAGORAS.

1 People crushed by law have no hopes but from power. If laws are their enemies, they will be enemies to laws; and those who have much to hope and nothing to lose will always be dangerous.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Hon. C. J. Fox, 8 Oct., 1777.

Bad laws are the worst sort of tyranny.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bristol.

2 Extreme law, extreme injustice. (Summum jus, summa injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 10. See under JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE.

3 Our sense of private dignity can survive the most oppressive man-despot, but the despotism of law corrodes it.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, Good-bye to Western Culture.

4 Shall free-born men, in humble awe,
Submit to servile shame;

Who from consent and custom draw
The same right to be ruled by law,
Which kings pretend to reign?

DRYDEN, On the Young Statesman.

5 All rights and laws are still transmitted,
Like an eternal sickness to the race.
(Es erben sich Gesetz und Rechte Wie eine ew'ge Krankheit fort.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 449.

6 O wearisome condition of humanity!
Born under one law, to another bound.

FULKE GREVILLE, Mustapha. Act v, sc. 4.

7 Law is the tyrant of mankind, and often compels us to do many things which are against nature.

HIPPIAS. (PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 337.)

8 The law is laid down to you. (Dicta tibi est lex.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 18.

9 Then too [in law] there are a thousand causes of disgust, a thousand delays to be endured. (Tunc quoque mille ferenda Tædia, mille moræ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xvi, l. 43.

10 The law is so lordly and loth to maken end.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus iv, l. 199.

11 We have strict statutes and most biting laws.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 3, l. 19.

12 God's blood! is law for man's sake made, or man

For law's sake only, to be held in bonds?

SWINBURNE, Mary Stuart. Act i, sc. 1.

VI—Law: Letter and Spirit

13 No man has ever yet been hanged for breaking the spirit of a law.

GROVER CLEVELAND. (RHODES, History of the United States, viii, 403; HIBBEN, Peerless Leader, p. 155.)

14 The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.
New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 6. (Litera enim occidit, Spiritus autem vivificat.
—Vulgate.)

Legality kills us. (La légalité nous tue.)

VIENNET, Épîtres.

15 We are lost by what is lawful. (Perimus licitis.)

SIR MATTHEW HALE, quoted from St. Gregory, Morals. Bk. v, homily 35, meaning, "We are demoralised by indulgence in things which are not contrary to law."

16 To the law and to the testimony.

Old Testament: Isaiah, viii, 20.

17 Exact laws, like all the other ultimates and absolutes, are as fabulous as the crock of gold at the rainbow's end.

G. N. LEWIS, The Anatomy of Science, p. 154.

18 But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

New Testament: Romans, vii, 6.

19 Let him have all the rigour of the law.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 199.

He . . . follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 4, l. 66.

Is it so nominated in the bond?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 259.

20

The bloody book of law

You shall yourself read in the bitter letter.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 67.

21 In bondage to the letter still,
We give it power to cramp and kill,—
To tax God's fulness with a scheme
Narrower than Peter's house-top dream,
His wisdom and his love with plans
Poor and inadequate as man's.

WHITTIER, Miriam, l. 97.

VII—Law: Precedent

See also Precedent

22

An argument derived from authority is of the greatest force in law. (Argumentum ab auctoritate fortissimum est in lege.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, On Littleton, 144.

1 The mere repetition of the Cantilena of the lawyers cannot make it law.

SIR THOMAS DENMAN, O'Connell v. The Queen.

2 The acts of today may become the precedents of tomorrow.

FARRER HERSCHELL, Lord Chancellor, Speech, 23 May, 1878.

3 All the sentences of precedent judges that have ever been cannot altogether make a law contrary to natural equity.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 26.

4 One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and become law.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication.

5 A precedent embalms a principle.

WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL, Opinion, while Advocate-General, 1788. (WILLIAM SCOTT, Lord Stowell.) BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1848; Endymion. Ch. 9.

6 It must not be; there is no power in Venice Can alter a decree established:

'Twill be recorded for a precedent,
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 218.

7 Every law which originated in ignorance and malice, and gratifies the passions from which it sprang, we call the wisdom of our ancestors.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5.

8 Mastering the lawless science of our law,
That codeless myriad of precedent,
That wilderness of single instances,
Through which a few, by wit or fortune led,
May beat a pathway out to wealth and fame.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 436.

VIII—Law: Obedience to Law

9 Where there are laws, he who has not broken them need not tremble. (Ove son leggi, Tremar non dee chi leggi non infranse.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Sc. 2.

Who breaks no law is subject to no king.

CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iv, sc. 1.

Fear God, and offend not the Prince nor his laws,

And keep thyself out of the magistrate's claws.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry.

10 Laws are not masters but servants, and he rules them who obeys them.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit: Political.

11 Law will never be strong or respected unless it has the sentiment of the people behind it. If the people of a State make bad laws, they will suffer for it. They will be the first to suffer. Let them suffer. Suffering, and nothing else, will implant that sentiment of responsibility which is the first step to reform.

JAMES BRYCE, American Commonwealth. Vol. i, p. 352.

I know no method to secure the repeal of bad or obnoxious laws so effective as their stringent execution.

U. S. GRANT, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1869.

12 He who holds no laws in awe,
He must perish by the law.

BYRON, A Very Mournful Ballad on the Siege and Conquest of Alhama. St. 12.

13 Let a man keep the law,—any law,—and his way will be strewn with satisfactions.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

14 Good men must not obey the laws too well.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

No law can be sacred to me but that of my nature. Good and bad are but names very readily transferable to that or this; the only right is what is after my own constitution; the only wrong what is against it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

15 For the bond of all men's states is this,
When they with honor hold by law.

(Τὸ γὰρ τοι συνέχον ἀνθρώπων πόλεις τοῦτ' ἔσθ', ὅταν τις τοὺς νόμους σώζη καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 313.

16 The laws of God, the laws of man,
He may keep that will and can;
Not I: let God and man decree
Laws for themselves and not for me.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Laws.

17 A strict observance of the written laws is doubtless one of the high virtues of a good citizen, but it is not the highest. The laws of necessity, of self-preservation, of saving our country when in danger, are of higher obligation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 418.

18 Without a notion of a law-maker, it is impossible to have a notion of a law, and an obligation to observe it.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. i, ch. iv, sec. 8.

1
A law observed is merely law; broken, it is law and executioner.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 700.

2
It is the rule of rules and the general law of laws that everyone should observe that of the place where he is. (C'est la règle des règles, et générale loi des loix, que chacun observe celle du lieu où il est.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. See also under ROME.

3
The atrocity of the laws prevents their execution. (L'atrocité des lois en empêche l'exécution.)

MONTESQUIEU, Esprit des Loix.

Whenever the offence inspires less horror than the punishment, the rigour of penal law is obliged to give way to the common feelings of mankind.

GIBBON, Decline and Fall. Vol. i, ch. 14.

Laws that do not embody public opinion can never be enforced.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

4
For you'll ne'er mend your fortunes, nor help the just cause,
By breaking of windows, or breaking of laws.

HANNAH MORE, Address to the Meeting in Spa Fields.

5
The parish makes the Constable, and when the Constable is made he governs the Parish.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People.

6
Laws do not persuade just because they threaten. (Ob hoc illæ non persuadent, quia minantur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 37.

7
He hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 267.

Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 7.

8
We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

9
The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 19.

10
Laws were made to be broken.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 24.

To the States or any one of them, or any city of the States, Resist much, obey little,
Once unquestioning obedience, once fully enslaved,

Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty.

WALT WHITMAN, To the States.

IX—Law: Law-makers and Law-breakers

11
What is a law, if those who make it
Become the forwardest to break it?

JAMES BEATTIE, The Wolf and the Shepherds, l. 71.

It becometh a law-maker not to be a law-breaker.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 95. (1669)

I impeach Warren Hastings of high crimes and misdemeanours. I impeach him in the name of the Commons House of Parliament, whose trust he has betrayed. I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden underfoot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all.

EDMUND BURKE, Trial of Warren Hastings, conclusion of speech, as condensed by Macaulay.

12
No power should be above the laws. (Nulla potentia supra leges esse debet.)

CICERO. (See Pro Domo Sua, xvii, 43.)

Be you never so high the law is above you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

13
A people shows more respect for justice, nor refuses submission, when it has seen their author obedient to his own laws. (Tunc observantior æqui Fit populus nec ferre negat, cum viderit ipsum Auctorem parere sibi.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 297.

14
Magna Charta is such a fellow that he will have no sovereign.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Debate, House of Commons, 17 May, 1628.

15
Laws are vain, by which we right enjoy,
If kings unquestion'd can those laws destroy.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 763.

16
For such law as man giveth other wight,
He should him-selven usen it by right.

CHAUCER, Man of Law's Prologue, l. 43.

17
And sovereign Law, that State's collected will,

O'er thrones and globes elate,

Sits Empress, crowning good, repressing ill.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Ode in Imitation of Alcæus.

<sup>1</sup> Obey the law, whoever you be that made the law. (Pareto legi, quisque legem sanxeris.)

PITTACUS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 12.)

<sup>2</sup> The prince is not above the laws, but the laws above the prince. (Non est princeps super leges, sed leges supra principem.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyricus Trajanus, 67.

<sup>3</sup> No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Message, Jan., 1904.

Him, the same laws, the same protection yields, Who ploughs the furrow, or who owns the field.

RICHAUD SAVAGE, Of Public Spirit, l. 41.

<sup>4</sup> He gives laws to the peoples, and makes for himself a way to the heavens. (Per populos dat jura, viamque affectat Olympo.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 562.

X—Laws, Good and Bad

<sup>5</sup> I am of his mind that said, "Better it is to live where nothing is lawful, than where all things are lawful."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 69.

<sup>6</sup> Laws and institutions are constantly tending to gravitate. Like clocks, they must be occasionally cleansed, and wound up, and set to true time.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

<sup>7</sup> "Whatever is, is not," is the maxim of the anarchist, as often as anything comes across him in the shape of a law which he happens not to like.

RICHAUD BENTLEY, Declaration of Rights.

<sup>8</sup> It was the boast of Augustus . . . that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble; . . . but how much nobler will be the sovereign's boast when he shall have it to say that he found law dear, and left it cheap; found it a sealed book, left it a living letter; found it the patrimony of the rich, left it the inheritance of the poor; found it the two-edged sword of craft and oppression, left it the staff of honesty and the shield of innocence!

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech on Law Reform, House of Commons, Feb., 1828.

<sup>9</sup> The law of England is the greatest grievance of the nation, very expensive and dilatory.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Times. (1723)

The law can take a purse in open court, Whilst it condemns a less delinquent for 't. . .

Old laws have not been suffer'd to be pointed,
To leave the sense at large the more disjointed,
And furnish lawyers, with the greater ease,
To turn and wind them any way they please.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 535.

<sup>10</sup> Men would be great criminals did they need as many laws as they make.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

<sup>11</sup> No written laws can be so plain, so pure,
But wit may gloss, and malice may obscure.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 318.

<sup>12</sup> The wise know that foolish legislation is a rope of sand which perishes in the twisting. . . . The law is only a memorandum. . . . Our statute is a currency which we stamp with our own portrait.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

<sup>13</sup> The Law is the true embodiment Of everything that's excellent.
It has no kind of fault or flaw,
And I, my Lords, embody the Law.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

<sup>14</sup> You cannot imagine the beauty of an intricate, mazy law process, embodying the doubts and subtleties of generations of men.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Unnecessary laws are not good laws, but traps for money.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 30.

<sup>16</sup> He who can stand within that holy door,
With soul unbowed by that pure spirit-level,
And frame unequal laws for rich and poor,—
Might sit for Hell and represent the Devil!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 144.

<sup>17</sup> Of what use are laws nullified by immorality?
(Quid leges sine moribus Vanæ proficiunt?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 24, l. 35.

<sup>18</sup> How lightly do we sanction a law unjust to ourselves. (Quam temere in nosmet legem sancimus iniquam!)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 67.

<sup>19</sup> It is safer that a bad man should not be accused, than that he should be acquitted. (Hominem improbum non accusari tutius est quam absolvi.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 4.

<sup>20</sup> I am further of opinion that it would be better for us to have [no laws] at all than to have them in such prodigious numbers.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

Were it made a question whether no law, as among the savage Americans, or too much law, as among the civilized Europeans, submits man to the greatest evil, one who has seen both conditions of existence would pronounce it to be the last; and that the sheep are happier of themselves, than under the care of wolves.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 128.

Petty laws breed great crimes.

OUIDA, Wisdom, Wit and Pathos: Pipistrello.

The best use of good laws is to teach men to trample bad laws under their feet.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 12 April, 1852.

Laws are always useful to those who possess and vexatious to those who have nothing. (Les lois sont toujours utiles à ceux qui possèdent, et nuisibles à ceux qui n'ont rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. i, ch. 9, note.

"That sounds like nonsense, my dear."
"Maybe so, my dear; but it may be very good law for all that."

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 9.

Equity, in law, is the same that the spirit is in religion: what everyone pleases to make it.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Equity is a roguish thing: for law we have a measure, know what to trust to; equity is according to the conscience of him that is chancellor, and as that is larger or narrower, so is equity. 'Tis all one as if they should make the standard for the measure we call a foot, a chancellor's foot; what an uncertain measure would this be! One chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot. 'Tis the same thing in the chancellor's conscience.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Law and equity are two things which God hath joined, but which man hath put asunder.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

A state with defective laws will have defective morals. (Itaque malis moribus uti videbis civitates usas malis legibus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 39.

The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws. (Corruptissima republica, plurimæ leges.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 27.

Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,—

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgement;

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act. ii, sc. 4, l. 11.

When law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 185.

No laws, however stringent, can make the idle industrious, the thriftless provident, or the drunken sober.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 1.

Who ever knew an honest brute,
At law his neighbour prosecute?

SWIFT, The Logicians Refuted.

O great and sane and simple race of brutes
That own no lust because they have no law.

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 471.

The best laws, the noblest examples, are produced for the benefit of the good from the crimes of other men. (Leges egregias, exempla honesta, apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gigni.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 20.

The law is good, if a man use it lawfully.

New Testament: I Timothy, i, 8.

Where is there any book of the law so clear to each man as that written in his heart?

LEO TOLSTOY, The Chinese Pilot.

When a people lose respect for one bad law, it is but a short step before they include the good laws with the bad and are shortly in rebellion against all law.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party Politics, p. 42.

He it was that first gave to the law the air of a science. He found it a skeleton, and clothed it with life, colour, and complexion; he embraced the cold statue, and by his touch it grew into youth, health and beauty.

BARRY YELVERTON, LORD AVONMORE, On Blackstone.

LAWYERS

I—Lawyers: Apothegms

Lawyers' gowns are lined with the wilfulness of their clients.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 439.

Lawyers' houses are built on the heads of fools.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Court fool: the plaintiff.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

No use pounding on the log. The coon's out.

SILAS BRYAN. To lawyers pleading their cases before him on the Circuit Bench. (HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader, p. 6.)

But what his common sense came short,
He eked out wi' law, man.

BURNS, Extempore in the Court of Session.

1 When you have no basis for an argument, abuse the plaintiff. (In hominem dicendum est igitur, quum oratio argumentationem non habet.)

CICERO, Pro Flacco. Sec. 10.

When facts were weak, his native cheek Brought him serenely through.

C. H. SPURGEON. Quoted as being said of an "eminent lawyer."

Bluster, sputter, question, cavil; but be sure your argument be intricate enough to confound the court.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act iii, sc. 1.

2 If there were no bad people, there would be no good lawyers.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 56.

3 Battledore and shuttlecock's a very good game, when you a'n't the shuttlecock and two lawyers the battledores, in which case it gets too excitin' to be pleasant.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

4 Oh Sammy, Sammy, vy worn't there a al-leybi?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

5 This house, where once a lawyer dwelt, Is now a smith's. Alas!

How rapidly the iron age Succeeds the age of brass!

WILLIAM ERSKINE, Epigram.

6 Of three things the devil makes his mess: Of lawyers' tongues, of scriveners' fingers, you the third may guess.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 179. (1591)

7 Necessity has no law; I know some attorneys of the same.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734. See also under NECESSITY.

8 A good lawyer, a bad neighbor.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1737. Franklin was quoting the French maxim, "Bon avocat, mauvais voisin."

9 God works wonders now and then; Behold! a lawyer, an honest man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

"An Honest Lawyer"—book just out—What can the author have to say?

Reprint perhaps of ancient tome—A work of fiction any way.

GRACE HIBBARD, Books Received.

10 Commonly physicians, like beer, are best when they are old; and lawyers, like bread, when they are young and new.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State, 50.

11 The charge is prepar'd, the lawyers are met, The judges all ranged,—a terrible show!

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act iii, sc. 11.

12 And many a burglar I've restored To his friends and his relations.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

And whether you're an honest man or whether you're a thief

Depends on whose solicitor has given me my brief.

W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited. Act i.

13 If the laws could speak for themselves, they would complain of the lawyers in the first place.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, 224.

14 When lawyers take what they would give And doctors give what they would take.

O. W. HOLMES, Latter-Day Warnings.

15 Clergymen can marry you, but if you find you have made a mistake, in order to get unmarried, you have to hire a lawyer.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xxv, 158.

16 I would be loath to speak ill of any person who I do not know deserves it, but I am afraid he is an attorney.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.)

17 Law, Logic, and Switzers may be hired to fight for anybody.

THOMAS NASH, Christ's Tears.

18 The good have no need of an advocate. (Μὴ δεῖσθαι βοηθείας.)

PHOCION, when criticized for appearing in behalf of an unworthy client. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. 10, sec. 5.)

19 Fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

20 A lawyer without history or literature is a mechanic, a mere working mason; if he possesses some knowledge of these, he may venture to call himself an architect.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 37.

21 Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quilllets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 107.

22 The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 83.

23 That litigious pettifogger.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

24 The New England folks have a saying that three Philadelphia lawyers are a match for the very devil himself.

UNKNOWN, Salem Observer, 13 March, 1824.

1 For lawyers and their pleading,
They 'steem it not a straw;
They think that honest meaning
Is of itself a law.
UNKNOWN, The Herdman's Happy Life. (Sonnets and Pastorals, 1588.)

II—Lawyers: Their Fees

2 With books and money plac'd, for show,
Like nest-eggs, to make clients lay,
And for his false opinion pay.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 624.

3 Asebia: We never valued right and wrong
But as they serve our cause.
Zelota: Our business was to please the throng
And court their wild applause.
Asebia: For this we brib'd the lawyer's tongue
And then destroy'd the laws.

4 DRYDEN, Albion and Anbanias. Act iii, sc. 1.
My learned profession I'll never disgrace,
By taking a fee with a grin on my face,
When I haven't been there to attend to the case.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

5 A man may as well open an oyster without a knife, as a lawyer's mouth without a fee.
BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia, ii, 5.

Once (says an author, where I need not say)
Two travellers found an Oyster in their way:
Both fierce, both hungry, the dispute grew strong,
While, scale in hand, Dame Justice pass'd along.
Before her each with clamour pleads the laws,
Explain'd the matter, and would win the cause.
Dame Justice, weighing long the doubtful right,
Takes, opens, swallows it before their sight.
The cause of strife remov'd so rarely well,
"There take (says Justice), take ye each a shell.

We thrive at Westminster on fools like you:
'Twas a fat Oyster—Live in peace—Adieu."
POPE, Verbatim from Boileau.

6 So wise, so grave, of so perplex'd a tongue,
And loud withal, that would not wag, nor scarce

Lie still without a fee.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act i, sc. 1.

7 What is the price of your voice? (Quod vocis pretium?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 119. Referring to a lawyer's fee.

8 They put off hearings wilfully,
To finger the refreshing fee.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, Fable of the Bees.

9 There is no law for restitution of fees, sir.
MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act i, sc. 1. (1656)

10 Litigious terms, fat contentions, and flowing fees.

MILTON, Tractate on Education.

11 Law has bread and butter in it. (Aliquid de jure gustare. Habet hæc res panem.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46.

12 Trafficking in the mad wrangles of the noisy court, he lets out for hire his anger and his speech. (Clamosi rabiosa fori Jurgia vendens improbis iras Et verba locat.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 172. Referring to a lawyer.

13 'Tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 142.

III—Lawyers: Their Virtues

14 The good lawyer is not the man who has an eye to every side and angle of contingency, and qualifies all his qualifications, but who throws himself on your part so heartily, that he can get you out of a scrape.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

15 One that will not plead that cause wherein his tongue must be confuted by his conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, *Holy and Profane State:
The Good Advocate*.

16 The study of the law is useful in a variety of points of view. It qualifies a man to be useful to himself, to his neighbors and to the public. It is the most certain stepping-stone in a political line.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 17.

The only road to the highest stations in this country is that of the law.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Letter to C. Reviciski, 17
March, 1771.

All lawyers, be they knaves or fools,
Know that a seat is worth the earning,
Since Parliament's astounding rules
Vouch for their honour and their learning.

J. E. T. ROGERS, On the Eagerness of Lawyers to Obtain Seats in the House.

17 The best and most blameless interpreter of the laws. (Optimus atque Interpres legum sanctissimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 78. Referring to Pegasus.

18 Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can. . . .
As a peacemaker a lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will still be business enough.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address on Legal Ethics, 1850.

1
I went into the temple, there to hear
The teachers of our law, and to propose What might improve my knowledge or their own.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 211.

2
The man of law who never saw
The ways to buy and sell,
Weening to rise by merchandise,
I pray God speed him well!

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Merry Jest. (c. 1500)
Lines to similar effect, but concluding,
"God never speeds him well," are attributed to Sir John Fortescue, Chief Justice (1422-1476).

3
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc.
1, l. 28.

4
The profession of the law is the only aristocratic element which can be amalgamated without violence with the natural elements of democracy. . . . I cannot believe that a republic could subsist if the influence of lawyers in public business did not increase in proportion to the power of the people.

DE TOCQUEVILLE, Democracy in America. Vol.
i, ch. 16.

IV—Lawyers: Their Faults

5
Our wrangling lawyers . . . are so litigious and busy here on earth, that I think they will plead their clients' causes hereafter, some of them in hell.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader.

6
Your pettifoggers damn their souls,
To share with knaves in cheating fools.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 515.

Is not the winding up witnesses,
And nicking, more than half the bus'ness?
For witnesses, like watches, go
Just as they're set, too fast or slow;
And where in Conscience they're strait-lac'd,
'Tis ten to one that side is cast.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 359.

Make law and equity as dear
As plunder and free-quarter were;
And fierce encounters at the bar
Undo as fast as those in war;
Enrich bawds, whores, and usurers,
Pimps, scriv'ners, silenc'd ministers,
That get estates by being undone
For tender conscience, and have none.

BUTLER, Satire upon the Weakness and
Misery of Man, l. 127.

7
He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill hard by his own stable;
And the Devil smiled, for it put him in mind

Of Cain and his brother Abel.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 4.

He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill beside his stable;
Ho! quoth he, thou put'st me in mind
Of the story of Cain and Abel.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. St. 6. An expansion of Coleridge's poem.

8
Then shifting his side (as a lawyer knows how).

COWPER, Report of an Adjudged Case.

9
Next bring some lawyers to thy bar,
By innuendo they might all stand there;
There let them expiate that guilt,
And pay for all that blood their tongues have spilt.

These are the mountebanks of state,
Who by the sleight of tongues can crimes create,

And dress up trifles in the robes of fate,
The mastiffs of a Government,
To worry and run down the innocent.

DANIEL DEFOE, A Hymn to the Pillory. St. 16.

10
The lawyer has spoiled the statesman.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. v,
ch. 6. Referring to Lord Brougham.

11
I know you lawyers can, with ease,
Twist words and meanings as you please.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, No. 1.

12
Lawyers are always more ready to get a man into troubles than out of them.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act iii.

13
Come, you of the law, who can talk, if you
please,

Till the man in the moon will allow it's a cheese.

O. W. HOLMES, Lines Recited at the Berk- shire Jubilee.

14
That one hundred and fifty lawyers should do business together is not to be expected.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 86.
Referring to Congress.

How can expedition be expected from a body which we have saddled with an hundred lawyers, whose trade is talking?

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 310.

15
I oft have heard him say how he admir'd Men of your large profession, that could speak

To every cause, and things mere contraries,
Till they were hoarse again, yet all be law.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act i, sc. 1.

16
Ye who plead for the poor, and take money at their hands, Ye lawyers, ye advocates, be sure of this:

When ye draw near to death, and pray for pardon,
Your pardon at your parting hence will be but small.

Saint Matthew bids me tell you this, and if I lie, blame him.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: God's Bull of Pardon.

And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers, for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 46.

1 My suit has nothing to do with the assault, or battery, or poisoning, but is about three goats, which, I complain, have been stolen by my neighbor. This the judge desires to have proved to him; but you, with swelling words and extravagant gestures, dilate on the Battle of Cannæ, the Mithridatic war, and the perjuries of the insensate Carthaginians, the Syllæ, the Marii, and the Mucii. It is time, Postumus, to say something about my three goats.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 19.

You wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejoin the controversy of three pence to a second day of audience.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 77.

2 The law the lawyers know about
Is property and land, . . .

Why Faith is more than what one sees,
And Hope survives the worst disease,
And Charity is more than these,
They do not understand.

H. D. C. PEPLER, The Law the Lawyers Know.

3 Piecemeal they win this acre first, then that,
Glean on, and gather up the whole estate;
Then strongly fencing ill-got wealth by law,
Indentures, cov'nants, articles, they draw,
Large as the fields themselves, and larger far
Than civil codes, with all their glosses, are.

POPE, Satires of Dr. Donne. Sat. ii, l. 91.

4 Why is there always a secret singing
When a lawyer cashes in?
Why does a hearse horse snicker
Hauling a lawyer away?

CARL SANDBURG, The Lawyers Know Too Much.

5 O perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approof;
Bidding the law make court'sy to their will;
Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,

To follow as it draws.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 172.

In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 75.

6 And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 277.

7 You have clearly proved that ignorance, idleness, and vice, are the proper ingredients for qualifying a legislator; that laws are best explained, interpreted and applied, by those whose interest and abilities lie in perverting, confounding and eluding them.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag.

8 These
Ensnare the wretched in the toils of law,
Fomenting discord, and perplexing right;
An iron race!

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1291.

The toils of law—what dark insidious men
Have cumbrous added to perplex the truth,
And lengthen simple justice into trade.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 384.

9 A Lawyer art thou?—draw not nigh!
Go, carry to some fitter place
The keenness of that practised eye,
The hardness of that fallow face.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph.

LEADER

10 And when we think we lead we most are led.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.

11 An uninforming piece of wood;
Like other guides, as some folks say;
Who neither lead, nor tell the way.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto ii.

12 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?
New Testament: I Corinthians, xiv, 8.

13 Lights of the world and stars of human race.
COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 97.

14 Either I am
The foremost horse in the team, or I am none.
JOHN FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 2.

An two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 40.

He that rides behind another must not think to guide.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. The forerunner of "back-seat driver."

1 There is no reason to despair with Teucer as our leader. (Nil desperandum Teucro duce.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 7.

Be it your care to follow; you shall be safe with me as your leader. (Sit tua cura sequi; me duce tutus eris.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 58.

With me as leader, ye men, control your ruinous anxieties; under my guidance, let ship and crew run straight. (Me duce damnosas, homines, conspescite curas; Rectaque cum sociis me duce navis est.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 69.

2 O wretched madness of the leader! (O rabies miseranda ducis!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 544.

What pilot so expert but needs must wreck, Embark'd with such a steers-mate at the helm?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1044.

3 They say that in his love affairs he was petted by the beauties, who always followed him as long as he walked before them.

(On dit que dans ses amours

Il fut caressé des belles,

Qui le suivrent toujours,

Tant qu'il marcha devant elles.)

BERNARD DE LA MONNOYE, Chanson sur le Fameux Palisse.

The king himself has follow'd her

When she has walk'd before.

GOLDSMITH, Elegy on Madam Blaise.

Pandarus: Do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

Servant: Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.

4 The deeds of the leader shall live, and the hard-won glory of his exploits; this endures, this alone escapes the greedy destruction of death. (Facta ducis vivent, operosaque gloria rerum; Hæc manet, hæc avidos effugit una rogos.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 265.

He was leader of leaders. (Dux erat ille ducum.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. viii, l. 46.

The fire of God

Fills him. I never saw his like; there lives No greater leader.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 314.

5 O for a living man to lead!

That will not babble when we bleed;

O for the silent doer of the deed!

One that is happy in his height,

And one that in a nation's night

Hath solitary certitude of light.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, A Man.

6 Whoever is foremost, leads the herd. (Und wer der Vorderste ist, führt die Heerde.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 10.

7 Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 42.

8 Reason and calm judgment, the qualities specially belonging to a leader. (Ratione et consilio, propriis ducis artibus.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 20.

LEARNING

I—Learning: Definitions

9 Learning hath his infancy, when it is but beginning and almost childish; then his youth, when it is luxuriant and juvenile; then his strength of years, when it is solid and reduced; and lastly his old age, when it waxeth dry and exhaust.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Vicissitude of Things.

10 The languages, especially the dead,

The sciences, and most of all the abstruse, The arts, at least all such as could be said

To be the most remote from common use, In all these he was much and deeply read.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 40.

11 Learning is the eye of the mind.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca Scholastica Instructissima, iii. (1633)

12 Learning by study must be won;

'Twas ne'er entail'd from son to son.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Pack Horse and Carrier, l. 41.

13 This is the highest learning,

The hardest and the best:

From self to keep still turning,

And honour all the rest.

GEORGE MACDONALD, After Thomas à Kempis.

14 Learned men are the cisterns of knowledge, not the fountain-heads.

JAMES NORTHCOTE, Table-Talk.

15 Learning is but an adjunct to ourself

And where we are our learning likewise is.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 314.

II—Learning: Apothegms

16 To unlearn what is nought.

ANTISTHENES, when asked what learning was most necessary for man's life. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 177.)

Child of Nature, learn to unlearn.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 1.

It is the worst of madness to learn what has to be unlearned. (Extremæ est dementia discere dediscenda.)

ERASMUS, De Ratione Studii.

The mind is slow in unlearning what it has been long in learning. (Dediscit animus sero qui didicit diu.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 633.

1 Learning will be cast into the mire and trodden down under the hoofs of a swinish multitude.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

2 Wear your learning like your watch, in a private pocket; and do not pull it out, and strike it, merely to show that you have one.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

Swallow all your learning in the morning, but digest it in company in the evenings.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1751.

3 The food of study and learning. (Pabulum studii atque doctrinæ.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 49.

4 When a great learned man (who is long in making) dieth, much learning dieth with him.

SIR EDWARD COKE, The Institutes: Preface.

5 All learned and all drunk!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 478.

6 In the shady walks of the divine Hecademus. ('Εν εὐσκόλοις δρόμοισιν Ἑκαδήμου θεοῦ.)

EUPOLIS, Shirkers. Act ii, l. 437. Diogenes Laertius explains (Plato, sec. 7) that Plato lived in the Academy, "which is a gymnasium outside the walls, in a grove named after a certain hero, Hecademus."

The green retreats Of Academus.

MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of the Imagination. Canto i, l. 591.

7 Learning makes a good man better and an ill man worse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3162.

8 And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,

That one small head should carry all it knew.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 215.

9 Learn not and know not.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 26. (1659) See also under IGNORANCE.

10 Few men make themselves Masters of the things they write or speak. (Delle belle eruditissima, delle erudite bellissima.)

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Learning.

11 Find time to be learning somewhat good, and give up being desultory.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 7.

12 Hated not learning worse than toad or asp.

MILTON, Sonnets: On the Detraction, etc.

13 Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 176.

14 Some people will never learn anything, for this reason, because they understand everything too soon.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

15 Learning makes the wise wiser, and the fool more foolish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM.

16 Take away from our learned men the pleasure of making themselves heard, learning would then be nothing to them. (Ôtez à nos savants le plaisir de se faire écouter, le savoir ne sera rien pour eux.)

ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. i, letter 12.

17 All the learned and authentic fellows.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 14.

O this learning, what a thing it is!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 160.

18 A prodigy in learning.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 45.

I would by no means wish a daughter of mine to be a progeny of learning.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2.

19 He has more learning than appears

On the scroll of twice three thousand years.

E. C. STEDMAN, The Discoverer.

20 Intelligence and learning are more easily stamped out than revived. (Ingenia studiaque oppresseris facilius quam revocaveris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3.

21 Wearing all that weight

Of learning lightly like a flower.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Conclusion. St. 10.

III—Learning: Its Value

22 Learning teacheth more in one year than experience in twenty.

ROGER ASCHEAM, The Scholemaster.

23 The learned eye is still the loving one.

ROBERT BROWNING, Red Cotton Night-cap Country. Bk. i.

- 1
In mathematics he was greater Than Tycho Brahe, or Erra Pater;
For he, by geometric scale,
Could take the size of pots of ale.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 119.
- And wisely tell what hour o' th' day
The clock does strike by Algebra.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 125.
- 2
As a field, however fertile, cannot be fruitful without cultivation, neither can a mind without learning. (Ut ager, quamvis fertilis, sine cultura fructuosus esse non potest, sic sine doctrina animus.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 13.
- 3
When Honour's sun declines, and Wealth takes wings,
Then Learning shines, the best of precious things.
EDWARD COCKER, Urania. (1670)
- When house and land are gone and spent,
Then learning is most excellent.
SAMUEL FOOTE, Taste.
- When ign'rance enters, folly is at hand;
Learning is better far than house and land.
DAVID GARRICK, She Stoops to Conquer:
Prologue.
- 4
Yet, he was kind; or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault;
The village all declar'd how much he knew,
'Twas certain he could write and cipher too.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 205.
- 5
The true knight of Learning, the world holds him dear—
Love bless him, Joy crown him, God speed
his career.
O. W. HOLMES, A Parting Health: To J. L. Motley.
- 6
Let ignorance talk as it will, learning has its value.

The Lord of Learning who upraised mankind
From being silent brutes to singing men.
C. G. LELAND, The Music-lesson of Confucius.
- 8
Thou art an heir to fair living, but that is nothing if thou be disinherited of learning.
... Far more seemly were it for thee to have thy study full of books than thy purse full of money.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues: Letter to Alcibiades.
- 9
A learned man has always wealth in himself.
(Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)
PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 21.

- 10
A single day among the learned lasts longer than the longest life of the ignorant.
POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium, lxxviii, 29.)
- 11
As the rough diamond from the mine,
In breakings only shews its light,
Till polishing has made it shine:
Thus learning makes the genius bright.
ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd.
- IV—Learning: Its Emptiness
- 12
Much learning doth make thee mad.
New Testament: Acts, xxvi, 24.
- Out of too much learning become mad.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 2.
- We know that you are mad with much learning.
(Scimus te præ litteras fatuum esse.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45.
- 13
Then grew the learning of the schoolmen to be utterly despised as barbarous.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.
- 14
Learning, that cobweb of the brain,
Profane, erroneous, and vain.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1339.
- 15
Learning without thought is labor lost;
thought without learning is perilous.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 15.
- There is the love of knowing without the love of learning—a beclouding which leads to dissipation of mind.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 8.
- 16
Learning itself, receiv'd into a mind
By nature weak, or viciously inclin'd,
Serves but to lead philosophers astray,
Where children would with ease discern the
way.
COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 431.
- Learning unrefin'd,
That oft enlightens to corrupt the mind.
WILLIAM FALCONER, Shipwreck. Canto i, l. 166.
- 17
A learned blockhead is a greater blockhead
than an ignorant one.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.
- 18
Whence is thy learning? Hath thy toil
O'er books consum'd the midnight oil?
JOHN GAY, Fables: Shepherd and Philosopher,
l. 15. See also STUDY: THE MIDNIGHT OIL.
- 19
My foolish parents taught me to read and write. (Me litterulas stulti docuere parentes.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, ep. 73, l. 7.
- Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 17.

1 A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring:
There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
And drinking largely sobers us again.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 15.

Next these learn'd Jonson in this list I bring
Who had drunk deep of the Pierian Spring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Of Poets and Poesie.

If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?

T. H. HUXLEY, Science and Culture: On Elementary Instruction in Physiology.

One must give the mind, not a slight tincture, but a thorough and perfect dye. (Il ne l'en faut pas arroser, il l'en faut teindre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

2 Ask of the Learn'd the way? The Learn'd are blind;

This bids to serve, and that to shun mankind:
Some place the bliss in Action, some in Ease,
Those call it Pleasure, and Contentment these.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 19.

So by false learning is good sense defaced:
Some are bewildered in the maze of schools,
And some made coxcombs Nature meant but fools.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 25.

3 How vain is learning unless intelligence go with it! (Ὅς οὐδὲν ἢ μάθησις, εἴ μὴ νοῦς παρῇ.)

STOBÆUS, Florilegium.

Whereto serveth learning, if understanding be not joined to it?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

4 How many perish in the world through vain learning.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 3.

5 A learned man is an idler who kills time with study. Beware of his false knowledge: it is more dangerous than ignorance.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

6 Much learning shows how little mortals know;
Much wealth, how little worldlings can enjoy.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 520.

V—Learning: Never too Late to Learn

7 Learning is ever in the freshness of its youth, even for the old. (Ἄελ γὰρ ἡβη τοῖς γέρονσιν εὖ μαθεῖν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 584.

If I should not be learning now, when should I be?

LACYDES, when asked, in extreme age, why he was studying geometry. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lacydes. Sec. 5.)

8 It is well to live that one may learn. (Bueno es Vivir para ver.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32.

A man may live and learn.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 80. (c. 1620)

I was innocent myself once, but live and learn.

GARRICK, Miss in Her Teens. Act i, sc. 2. (1747)

The longer one lives the more he learns.

THOMAS MOORE, Dream of Hindoostan.

Learn to live, and live to learn,

Ignorance like a fire doth burn,

Little tasks make large return.

BAYARD TAYLOR, To My Daughter.

9 A zeal for learning, which, in the case of wise and well-trained men, advances in even pace with age. (Studia doctrinæ, quæ quidem prudentibus et bene institutis pariter cum ætate crescunt.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 50.

10 Better learn late than never. (Ὁψιμαθῆ ἢ ἀμαθῆ.)

CLEOBULUS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. iii, l. 79.)

11 Cease not to learn until thou cease to live; Think that day lost wherein thou draw'st no letter

To make thyself more learned, wiser, better. (Jusqu'au cercueil (mon fils) veuilles apprendre,

Et tien perdu le jour qui s'est passe,

Si tu n'y as quelque chose ammasse,

Pour plus scavant et plus sage te rendre.)

GUY DE FAUR PIBRAC, Collection of Quatrains. (Joshua Sylvester, tr., c. 1608.)

It is better to learn late than never.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 864.

Learn young, learn fair; learn auld, learn mair.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

12 I grow old learning something new every day. (Γηράσκω δ' αἰεὶ πολλὰ διδασκόμενος.)

SOLON. (VALERIUS MAXIMUS. Bk. viii, ch. 7, sec. 14.)

Valerius translates the phrase into Latin: "Quotidie aliquid addiscentem senescere."

Still I am learning. (Ancora imparo.)

The favorite maxim of Michelangelo.

13 Were man to live coeval with the sun,

The patriarch-pupil would be learning still.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 86.

LEG

14 Stop where I may, the snake Sensualism spits its venom upon me. . . . It has penetrated into the very sweetshops; and there, among the commoner sorts of confectionery, may be seen this year models of the female Leg, the whole definite and elegant article as far as the thigh, with a fringe of paper cut in imitation of the female drawers and embroidered in the female fashion!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Fleshly School of Poetry.

Down flow'd her robe, a tartan sheen,
Till half a leg was scrimply seen;
And such a leg! my bonny Jean
Could only peer it;

Sae straught, sae taper, tight an' clean,
Nane else cam near it.

ROBERT BURNS, The Vision. Duan i, st. 11.

2
A leg and foot, to speak more plain,
Rests here of one commanding;
Who though his wits he might retain,
Lost half his understanding.

GEORGE CANNING, Epitaph for the Tombstone Erected over the Marquis of Anglesea's Leg, Lost at Waterloo.

The leg wounded in his country's service should be embalmed in memory, while the dishonored body rots, forgotten, in the dust.

UNKNOWN, Epigram on Benedict Arnold. His monument on the battlefield of Saratoga shows the leg which was wounded there.

Lose a leg rather than life.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3278.

3
Then I shall be able to pull the leg of that chap. . . . He is always trying to do me.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Blackbirding, 216. (1563)

4
They took leg-bail and ran awa.

ROBERT FERGUSON, Poems, p. 234. (1774)

I'll give him leg-bail for my honesty.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, Positive Man. Act ii, sc. 2.

5
The human knee is a joint and not an entertainment.

PERCY HAMMOND. (SULLIVAN, Our Times. Vol. iii, p. 338.)

6
For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Gray.

7
Since your legs resemble the horns of the moon, you could bathe your feet, Phœbus, in a drinking-horn. (Cum sint crura tibi simulent quæ cornua lunæ, In rhytio poteris, Phœbe, lavare pedes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 35.

8
On his last legs.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1. (1656)

9
Though his face be better than any man's,
yet his leg excels all men's.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 40.

10
Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 7.

11
Taste your legs, sir; put them in motion.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 87.

LEGACY, see Inheritance

LEISURE

See also Idleness

12
When a man's busy, why, leisure
Strikes him as wonderful pleasure;
'Faith, and at leisure once is he?
Straightway he wants to be busy.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Glove, l. 3.

13
He was never less at leisure than when at leisure. (Numquam se minus otiosum esse quam cum otiosus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 1. Quoted as a saying of Scipio Africanus.

14
Ease (or leisure), with dignity. (Cum dignitate otium.)

CICERO, Pro Publio Sestio. Sec. 45. Usually quoted, "Otium cum dignitate." Described by Cicero as the supremely desirable object to all sane and good men.

What is more delightful than lettered ease? (Quid est enim dulcius otio litterato?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 36, sec. 105.

O Granta! sweet Granta! where studious of ease,

I slumbered seven years, and then lost my de-grees.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEE, New Bath Guide: Epilogue.

15
Is there no road now to Leisurely Lane? We traveled it long ago!

A place for the lagging of leisurely steps, sweet and shady and slow.

VIRGINIA WOODWARD CLOUD, Leisurely Lane.

16
Like a coy maiden, Ease, when courted most,
Farthest retires.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 409.

17
Me, therefore, studious of laborious ease.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 361.

Studious of elegance and ease.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, No. 8.

Studious of ease, and fond of humble things.

AMBROSE PHILIPS, Epistles from Holland, to a Friend in England, l. 21.

18
A poor life this if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.
WILLIAM H. DAVIES, Leisure.

1 Increased means and increased leisure are the two civilisers of man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, to the Conservatives of Manchester, 3 April, 1872.

To be able to fill leisure intelligently is the last product of civilization.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Conquest of Happiness, p. 210.

2 Bankrupt of life, yet prodigal of ease.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 168.

3 Sweet is the pleasure itself cannot spoil.
Is not true leisure one with true toil?

JOHN S. DWIGHT, True Rest.

4 The wisdom of a learned man cometh by opportunity of leisure; and he that hath little business shall become wise.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 24.

5 That man, in truth, who knows not leisure's use,
More trouble has than one by tasks pursued.

(Otio qui nescit uti
Plus negoti habet quam cum negotium in negotio.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia. (Quoted by Aulus Gellius, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12.)

6 How came he to have the leisure to die, when there is so much stirring?

EPAMINODAS, of a man who died at the time of the battle of Leuctra. (PLUTARCH, Rules for the Preservation of Health.)

Sounds! how has he leisure to be sick,
In such a justling time?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 17.

7 A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Employ thy time well if thou meanest to gain leisure.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Idle folks have the least leisure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

8 Leisure is the mother of Philosophy.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. iv, ch. 46.

9 No blessed leisure for love or hope,
But only time for grief.

THOMAS HOOD, The Song of the Shirt. St. 10.

10 Leisure is the time for doing something useful.

NATHIEL HOWE, A Chapter of Proverbs.

11 For Solomon, he liv'd at ease, and full
Of honour, wealth, high fare, aim'd not beyond
Higher design than to enjoy his state.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 201.

12 Leisure nourishes the body and the mind.
(Otia corpus alunt, animus quoque pascitur illis.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 21.

13 Give time to your friends, leisure to your wife, relax your mind, give rest to your body, so that you may the better fulfil your accustomed occupation.

PHÆDRUS, Fables: Bk. iii, Prol., l. 12.

14 You will soon break the bow if you keep it always stretched. (Cito rumpes arcum, semper si tensum habueris.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 14, l. 10; PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 388.

15 Leisure is the reward of labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

16 There's no music in a rest, Katie, that I know of; but there's the making of music in it. And people are always missing that part of the life melody; and scrambling on without counting—not that it's easy to count; but nothing on which so much depends ever is easy.

JOHN RUSKIN, Ethics of the Dust. Lecture 4,

17 Leisure without study is death; it is a tomb for the living man. (Otium sine litteris mors est et hominis vivi sepultura.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxii, 3.

Nor should I regard leisure and freedom from trouble as a good; for what has more leisure than a worm? (Ne quietem quidem et molestia vacare bonum dicam; quid est otiosius verme?)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, 19.

18 His life was . . . an illustration of the truth of the saying that those who have most to do, and are willing to work, will find the most time.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 1.

19 Leisure is the best of all possessions. ('Επὶ ἡγεῖα σχολὴν ὡς κάλλιστον κτημάτων.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 30.)

20 He enjoys true leisure who has time to improve his soul's estate.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 Feb., 1840.

A broad margin of leisure is as beautiful in a man's life as in a book.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 28 Dec., 1852.

21 Rejoicing in the pursuits of an inglorious ease. (Studiis florentem ignobilis oti.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 564.

Thus Belial, with words cloth'd in reason's garb, Counsel'd ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 226.

1
Leisure is pain; takes off our chariot wheels;
How heavily we drag the load of life!
Blest leisure is our curse; like that of Cain,
It makes us wander, wander earth around
To fly that tyrant, thought.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 125.

LETTERS

2
I knew one, that when he wrote a letter, he would put that which was most material, in the Post-script, as if it had been a by-matter.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

His sayings are usually like women's letters: all the pith is in the postscript.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Boswell Redivivus. Referring to Charles Lamb.

Jove and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l.
187.

A woman seldom writes her Mind, but in her Postscript.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 79.

3
The earth has nothing like a she epistle.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 105.

4
A letter does not blush. (Epistola enim non erubescit.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 12.

5
For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

New Testament: II Corinthians, x, 10.

6
He whistles as he goes, light-hearted wretch,
Cold and yet cheerful; messenger of grief
Perhaps to thousands, and of joy to some.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 12. Referring to the postman.

Belshazzar had a letter,—
He never had but one;
Belshazzar's correspondent
Concluded and begun
In that immortal copy
The conscience of us all
Can read without its glasses
On revelation's wall.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 25.

9
More than kisses, letters mingle souls;
For, thus friends absent speak.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton.

10
The welcome news is in the letter found;

The carrier's not commission'd to expound;
It speaks itself, and what it does contain,
In all things needful to be known, is plain.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 366.

11
Carrier of news and knowledge,
Instrument of trade and industry,
Promoter of mutual acquaintance,
Of peace and good-will
Among men and nations.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, on south-east corner of post-office, Washington, D. C.

Messenger of sympathy and love,
Servant of parted friends,
Consoler of the lonely,
Bond of the scattered family,
Enlarger of the common life.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, on south-west
corner of post-office, Washington, D. C.

Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds.

office.

12
Every day brings a ship,
Every ship brings a word;
Well for those who have no fear,
Looking seaward well assured
That the word the vessel brings
Is the word they wish to hear.

EMERSON, Letters.

13
The tongue is prone to lose the way,
Not so the pen, for in a letter
We have not better things to say,
But surely say them better.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

In writing a letter to a friend we may find that we rise to thought and to a cordial power of expression that costs no effort.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

The power of a wafer or a drop of wax or gluten to guard a letter, as it flies over sea, over land, and comes to its address as if a battalion of artillery brought it, I look upon as a fine meter of civilization.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

14
Sent letters by posts.

Old Testament: Esther, viii, 10.

15
Letters, from absent friends, extinguish fear,
Unite division, and draw distance near;
Their magic force each silent wish conveys,
And wafts embodied thought, a thousand ways:

Could souls to bodies write, death's pow'r were mean,
For minds could then meet minds with heav'n between.

AARON HILL, Verses Written on a Window in a Journey to Scotland.

1 Friendship is the great chain of human society, and intercourse of letters is one of the chiefest links of that chain.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters: To Dr. Pritchard.

2 A strange volume of real life in the daily packet of the postman. Eternal love and instant payment!

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Postman's Budget.

A piece of simple goodness—a letter gushing from the heart; a beautiful unstudied vindication of the worth and untiring sweetness of human nature—a record of the invulnerability of man, armed with high purpose, sanctified by truth.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Postman's Budget.

3 A wordy and grandiloquent letter. (Verbosa et grandis epistola.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 71.

I have made this letter rather long only because I have not had time to make it shorter. (Je n'ai fait celle-ci plus longue que parceque je n'ai pas eu le loisir de la faire plus courte.)

PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales, 14 Dec., 1656.

Thy letter sent to prove me,
Inflicts no sense of wrong;

No longer wilt thou love me,—

Thy letter, though, is long.

HEINE, Book of Songs. No. 34.

The letter is too long by half a mile.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 54.

4 Kind messages, that pass from land to land;
Kind letters, that betray the heart's deep history,

In which we feel the pressure of a hand,—

One touch of fire,—and all the rest is mystery!

LONGFELLOW, The Seaside and Fireside: Dedication. St. 5.

5 Never read over your old letters.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Suicides.

6 Good-bye—my paper's out so nearly,
I've only room for, Yours sincerely.

7 Letter-writing, that most delightful way of wasting time.

JOHN MORLEY, Life of George Eliot.

8 Letters of Bellerophon. (Bellorophontem . . . tabellas.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 810. Bellerophon carried a letter to the king of Lycia, which, unknown to the bearer, contained a request that the king should put him to death.

9 I write many letters, but letters, alas, of the most unlettered kind! (Scribo plurimas, sed illiteratissimas litteras.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10. There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this—that there is nothing to write about. ("Nihil est," inquis, "quod scribam." At hoc ipse scribe, nihil est, quod scribas, vel solum illud.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11. You will say you had no news to write me; and that probably may be true; but, without news, one has always something to say to those with whom one desires to have anything to do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

Let me hear from thee by letters.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 1, l. 57.

10 Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news.

II—Letters: Love-Letters

13 Lay it by in some sacred deposit
For relics—we all have a few!

Love, some day they'll print it, because it
Was written to You.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Nice Correspondent.

If She have written a letter, delay not an instant,
but burn it.

Tear it in pieces, O Fool, and the wind to her mate shall return it!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafiz.

14 Love is the marrow of friendship, and letters are the elixir of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1.

Love is the life of friendship; letters are
The life of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Touching the Vertue and Use of Familiar Letters, l. 1.

15 Great love-letters are written only to great women.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

16 Soon as thy letters trembling I unclose,
That well-known name awakens all my woes.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 29.

Line after line my gushing eyes o'erflow,
Lest thro' a safe variety of woe:
Now warm in love, now with'ring in my bloom,
Lost in a convent's solitary gloom!

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 35.

1 Heav'n first taught letters for some wretch's aid,

Some banish'd lover, or some captive maid;
They live, they speak, they breathe what love inspires,

Warm from the soul, and faithful to its fires;
The virgin's wish without her fears impart,
Excuse the blush, and pour out all the heart,
Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 51.

And oft the pangs of absence to remove
By letters, soft interpreters of love.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 147.

2 What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

I—Liberty: Definitions

3 Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot long exist.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

Liberty, too, must be limited in order to be possessed.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

The only liberty I mean, is a liberty connected with order; that not only exists along with order and virtue, but which cannot exist at all without them.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol, 13 Oct., 1774.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

4 Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 17.

5 Man's liberty ends, and it ought to end, when that liberty becomes the curse of his neighbours.

FREDERIC WILLIAM FARRAR, Ideals of Nations.

6 Liberty is always dangerous, but it is the safest thing we have.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Liberty.

7 Only in fetters is liberty:

Without its banks could a river be?

LOUIS GINSBERG, Fetters.

8 The love of liberty is the love of others; the love of power is the love of ourselves.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Connection Between Toad-Eaters and Tyrants.

9 Liberty is the breath of progress.

R. G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

10 The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Summary View of the Rights of British America.

There can be no prescription old enough to supersede the Law of Nature and the grant of God Almighty, who has given to all men a natural right to be free, and they have it ordinarily in their power to make themselves so, if they please.

JAMES OTIS, Rights of the British Colonies,
p. 14.

11 Liberty in the lowest rank of every nation is little more than the choice of working or starving.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Works, vi, 151.)

Ask this man what country and liberty mean, and he will reply that he wants money, and nothing to do. (Demandez à cet homme ce que c'est que la patrie et la liberté, il vous répondra qu'il veut de l'argent et ne rien faire.)

PAUL DE KOCK, L'Homme aux Trois Culottes.
Ch. 4.

12 The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty.

LINCOLN, Address, Baltimore, 18 April, 1864.

13 All that makes existence valuable to anyone depends on the enforcement of restraints upon the actions of other people.

J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 1.

The liberty of the individual must be thus far limited; he must not make himself a nuisance to other people.

J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

14 The Mountain Nymph, sweet Liberty.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 36.

15 God makes no man a slave, no doubter free;
Abiding faith alone wins liberty.

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, Washington.

16 That treacherous phantom which men call Liberty.

RUSKIN, Seven Lamps of Architecture. Ch.
viii, sec. 10.

17 Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

<sup>1</sup> The supremacy of the people tends to liberty. (Populi imperium juxta libertatem.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

Liberty is given by nature even to mute animals. (Libertatem natura etiam mutis animalibus datam.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 17.

<sup>2</sup> Liberty, when it begins to take root, is a plant of rapid growth.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Maxims of Washington.

If the true spark of religious and civil liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time; the ocean may overwhelm it; mountains may press it down; but its inherent and unconquerable force will heave both the ocean and the land, and at some time or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame up to heaven.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, 17 June, 1825, at Bunker Hill Monument.

<sup>3</sup> Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint; the more restraint on others to keep off from us, the more liberty we have.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech. 10 May, 1847.

A liberty to do that only which is good, just, and honest.

JOHN WINTHROP, Life and Letters. Vol. ii, p. 341.

<sup>4</sup> Liberty has never come from the government. Liberty has always come from the subjects of it. The history of liberty is a history of resistance. The history of liberty is a history of limitations of governmental power, not the increase of it.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York Press Club, 9 Sept., 1912.

II—Liberty: Apothegms

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, in the Convention, 1792. (CARLYLE, French Revolution.)

The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of tyrants. It is its natural manure.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Judge Tyler, 1804.

<sup>6</sup> I pardon something to the spirit of liberty.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

The people never give up their liberties except under some delusion.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bucks, 1784.

<sup>7</sup> Liberty's in every blow! Let us do or die.

BURNS, Bruce to His Men at Bannockburn.

"Make way for liberty!" he cried,

Made way for liberty, and died.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word, l. 1.

Fair Liberty was all his cry;

For her he stood prepared to die.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 411.

This hand, the tyrant smiting, ne'er will sword release,

Till liberty assure the quietude of peace.

A translation by John D. Long, formerly governor of Massachusetts, of the Latin lines by Algernon Sidney, the last of which, "Ense petit placidam sub libertate quietam," is the motto on the arms of Massachusetts.

CICERO, In Verrem. No. v, sec. 63.

O liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name! (O liberté! que de crimes on com-mêt dans ton nom!)

MADAME ROLAND, Mémoires: Appendix. This sentence has been ascribed to her as she stood on the scaffold, but it was really uttered as she stood before a statue of liberty, and what she actually said was, "O liberté, comme on t'a jouée!"—"O liberty, how thou hast been trifled with!"

<sup>9</sup> Strangers to liberty, 'tis true;
But that delight they never knew
And therefore never missed.

COWPER, The Caged Linnets.

<sup>10</sup> To those the truth makes free,
Sacred as truth itself is lawful liberty.

AUBREY DE VERE, Liberty.

<sup>11</sup> The sun of liberty is set; you must light up the candle of industry and economy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (attr.). Said to be in his correspondence.

<sup>12</sup> Where liberty dwells there is my country.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to B. Vaughan, 14 March, 1785. Franklin, consciously or unconsciously, was quoting the motto of Algernon Sidney.

Where liberty is, there is my home.

Attributed to THOMAS JEFFERSON and to THOMAS PAINE.

<sup>13</sup> Liberty, thy thousand tongues
None silence, who design no wrongs.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 418.

<sup>14</sup> The boisterous sea of liberty is never without a wave.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 283.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 10. By an odd coincidence, in a letter written by a committee of the Pennsylvania Provincial Assembly, 1 Nov., 1751, ordering a bell for the tower of the new State House, it was directed that this quotation from the Bible should be inscribed around it "well-shaped in large letters." It was this bell, so tradition says, which announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence, 4 July, 1776, and it is still preserved in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

1 Whether in chains or in laurels, liberty knows nothing but victories.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, 1 Nov., 1859.

2 I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind
To blow on whom I please.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 47.

So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 132.

3 With empty praise of liberty. (Inani jactatione libertatis.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 42.

4 Liberty . . . came after a long time. (Libertas . . . longo post tempore venit.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 27.

5 I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open, on golden hinges, to lovers of Union as well as of Liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Letter, April, 1851. Webster had been refused the use of the hall after his speech of 7 March, 1850, on the Missouri Compromise, which cost him his seat in the Senate. The Aldermen, however, later reversed their decision, and Webster began his speech, "This is Faneuil Hall—open!"

III—Liberty: Its Virtues

6 When Liberty is gone,
Life grows insipid, and has lost its relish.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 3.

'Tis liberty alone that gives the flower
Of fleeting life its lustre and perfume.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 446.

Oh! remember life can be
No charm for him who lives not free.

THOMAS MOORE, Before the Battle.

7 But little do or can the best of us:
That little is achieved through Liberty.

ROBERT BROWNING, Why I Am a Liberal.

8 Liberty . . . is one of the greatest blessings that Heaven has bestowed upon mankind.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58.

9 Thou rising Sun! thou blue rejoicing Sky!
Yea, every thing that is and will be free!

Bear witness for me, wheresoe'er ye be,
With what deep worship I have still adored
The spirit of divinest Liberty.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 1.

Yes, while I stood and gazed, my temples bare,
And shot my being through earth, sea, and air,
Possessing all things with intensest love,
O Liberty! my spirit felt thee there.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 5.

Liberty, like day,
Breaks on the soul, and by a flash from Heav'n
Fires all the faculties with glorious joy.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 883.

10 The love of liberty with life is giv'n,
And life itself th' inferior gift of Heav'n.

JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 291.

11 Liberty is worth whatever the best civilization is worth.

HENRY GILES, The Worth of Liberty.

12 For ever in thine eyes, O Liberty, Shines that high light whereby the world is saved,

And though thou slay us, we will trust to
thee!

JOHN HAY, Liberty.

13 What light is to the eyes—what air is to the lungs—what love is to the heart, liberty is to the soul of man. Without liberty, the brain is a dungeon, where the chained thoughts die with their pinions pressed against the hingeless doors.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Progress.

14 I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 260. See also under PRISON.

15 Deep in the frozen regions of the north,
A goddess violated brought thee forth,
Immortal Liberty!

SMOLLETT, Ode to Independence, l. 5.

16 Behold in Liberty's unclouded blaze
We lift our heads, a race of other days.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Centennial Ode. St. 22.

17 I tell you, liberty is the best of all things; never live beneath the noose of a servile halter. (Dico tibi verum, libertas optima rerum; Nunquam servili sub nexa vivito fili.)

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE, quoting a medieval proverb.

18 And, best beloved of best men, liberty,
Free lives and lips, free hands of men free-
born.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althæa.

19 If but the least and frailest, let me be

Evermore numbered with the truly free
Who find Thy service perfect liberty!

WHITTIER, What of the Day? l. 13.

1 I would rather belong to a poor nation that was free than to a rich nation that had ceased to be in love with liberty. We shall not be poor if we love liberty.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Mobile, Ala., 27
Oct., 1912.

IV—Liberty: Its Defense

2 It is the common fate of the indolent to see their rights become a prey to the active. The condition upon which God has given liberty to man is eternal vigilance.

JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN, Speech upon the Right of Election, 10 July, 1790.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. (Quoted as by Jefferson by Wendell Phillips, in his speech, Public Opinion, 28 Jan., 1852.) Attributed also to Patrick Henry.

3 Liberty can neither be got, nor kept, but by so much care, that mankind are generally unwilling to give the price for it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 62.

4 The ground of liberty must be gained by inches.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 3.

We are not to expect to be translated from despotism to liberty in a feather bed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p.
13.

5 By no sword save her own falls Liberty.

R. U. JOHNSON, Hands Across Sea.

6 Unless that liberty, which is of such a kind as arms can neither procure nor take away, which alone is the fruit of piety, of justice, of temperance, and unadulterated virtue, shall have taken deep root in your minds and hearts, there will not long be wanting one who will snatch from you by treachery what you have acquired by arms.

MILTON, The Second Defence of the People of England.

7 The manna of popular liberty must be gathered each day, or it is rotten. . . . Only by uninterrupted agitation can a people be kept sufficiently awake to principle not to let liberty be smothered by material prosperity. Republics exist only on tenure of being agitated.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address: Public Opinion,
Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

8 Our liberties and our lives are in danger.
(Libertas et anima nostra in dubio est.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 52.

9 God grants liberty only to those who love it,
and are always ready to guard and defend it.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 3 June, 1834.

V—Liberty and Bondage

10 A day, an hour, of virtuous liberty
Is worth a whole eternity in bondage.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 1.

11 Chains or conquest, liberty or death.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 4, last line.

Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.)

12 The Athenians will not sell their liberties for all the gold either above or under ground.

ARISTIDES, to the Lacedæmonians. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Sec. 10.)

We sell our birthright whenever we sell our liberty for any price of gold or honor.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Outlooks on Society: Literature and Politics.

13 Eternal Spirit of the chainless Mind!

Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou art,
For there thy habitation is the heart—

The heart which love of thee alone can bind.
BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon: Introductory Sonnet.

14 He who, through fear of poverty, forfeits liberty, which is better than mines of wealth, will . . . be a slave forever. (Sic qui pau-periem veritus potiore metallis libertate caret, . . . serviet æternum.)

CICERO, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 39.

They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Historical Review of Pennsylvania: Motto. (1759)

This sentence was much used in the Revolutionary period. It occurs even so early as November, 1755, in an answer by the Assembly of Pennsylvania to the Governor.

FROTHINGHAM, Rise of the Republic of the United States.

15 Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

New Testament: Galatians, v, 1.

16 A bean in liberty is better than a comfit in prison.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Lean liberty is better than fat slavery.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

1 Preferring
Hard liberty before the easy yoke
Of servile pomp.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 255.

2 Oh! if there be, on this earthly sphere,
A boon, an offering Heaven holds dear,
'Tis the last libation Liberty draws
From the heart that bleeds and breaks in her cause!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri. St. 11.

The tribute most high to a head that is royal,
Is love from a heart that loves liberty too.
THOMAS MOORE, The Prince's Day.

3 "An 't please Your Honour," quoth the peasant,
"This same dessert is not so pleasant:

Give me again my hollow tree,
A crust of bread and Liberty!"

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 218.

No use have I for such a life, and so farewell:
my wood and hole, secure from alarms, will solace me with homely vetch. (Haud mihi vita Est opus hac, et valeas: me silva cavusque Tutus ab insidiis tenui solabitur, ervo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 115. Horace is telling the story of a peasant who tried to live in a palace.

4 He that roars for liberty
Faster binds a tyrant's power,
And the tyrant's cruel glee
Forces on the freer hour.
TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 17.

VI—Liberty and Licence

5 What is liberty without wisdom and without virtue? It is the greatest of all possible evils; for it is folly, vice, and madness, without tuition or restraint.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

More liberty begets desire of more;
The hunger still increases with the store.
DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 519.

6 Liberty in the wild and freakish hands of fanatics has once more, as frequently in the past, proved the effective helpmate of autocracy and the twin-brother of tyranny.

OTTO KAHN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
14 Jan., 1918.

The deadliest foe of democracy is not autocracy but liberty frenzied. Liberty is not fool-proof.
For its beneficent working it demands self-restraint.

OTTO KAHN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
14 Jan., 1918.

7 It is not good to have too much liberty. It is not good to have all one wants.
BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. No. 379.

8 What in some is called liberty, in others is called licence. (Quæ in aliis libertas est, in aliis licentia vocatur.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. iii,
ch. 8, sec. 48.

Foster-child of licence, which fools call liberty.
(Alumna licentiæ, quam stulti libertatem voca-bant.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 40.

License they mean when they cry, Liberty!
For who loves that, must first be wise and good.

MILTON, On the Detraction Which Followed upon My Writing Certain Treatises.

9 Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe;
There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 15.

And liberty plucks justice by the nose.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc.
3, l. 29.

10 Liberty, guest amiable,
Plants both elbows on the table.
(La liberté, convive aimable, Met les deux coudes sur la table.)
VOLTAIRE.

11 The weight of too much liberty.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 1.

I—Libraries: Their Virtues

12 Libraries, which are as the shrines where all the relics of the ancient saints, full of true virtue, and that without delusion or imposture, are preserved and reposed.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

13 These are the tombs of such as cannot die.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Library.

Shelved around us lie The mummied authors.
BAYARD TAYLOR, The Poet's Journal: Third Evening.

Thou can'st not die. Here thou art more than safe

Where every book is thy epitaph.

lection of Books.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

1 A great library contains the diary of the human race.

REV. GEORGE DAWSON, Address on Opening the Birmingham Free Library, 26 Oct., 1866.

2 A sanatorium for the mind. (Ψυχῆς ἰατρείον.)
DIODORUS SICULUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 49.
The inscription on the portal of the library at Alexandria, Egypt. The phrase is usually translated as "Medicine for the mind," or "Nourishment for the soul," but ἰατρείον means a surgery, or hospital, or sanatorium—a place which one visits to be cured—and the reference is plainly to the library as a whole.

Food for the soul. (Nutritum spiritus.)
UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the Royal Library, Berlin.

Let no profane person enter! (Μὴ τις βέβηλος εἰσέλτω.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the old library at Berne.

3 Consider what you have in the smallest chosen library. A company of the wisest and wittiest men that could be picked out of all civil countries, in a thousand years, have set in best order the results of their learning and wisdom. The men themselves were hid and inaccessible, solitary, impatient of interruption, fenced by etiquette; but the thought which they did not uncover to their bosom friend is here written out in transparent words to us, the strangers of another age.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

4 He that revels in a well-chosen library, has innumerable dishes, and all of admirable flavour.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

5 This is my world! within these narrow walls, I own a princely service.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, My Study.

6 Every library should try to be complete on something, if it were only the history of pin-heads.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8.

7 I have often thought that nothing would do more extensive good at small expense than the establishment of a small circulating library in every county, to consist of a few well-chosen books, to be lent to the people of the county, under such regulations as would secure their safe return in due time.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 282.

8 What a place to be in is an old library! It seems as though all the souls of all the writers, that have bequeathed their labours to these Bodleians, were reposing here, as in some dormitory, or middle state. I do not want to handle, to profane the leaves, their winding-sheets. I could as soon dislodge a shade. I seem to inhale learning, walking amid their foliage; and the odour of their old moth-scented coverings is fragrant as the first bloom of those scintial apples which grew amid the happy orchard.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

9 My library Was dukedom large enough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 109.

Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 34.

10 I go into my library, and all history rolls before me. I breathe the morning air of the world while the scent of Eden's roses yet lingers in it. . . . I see the pyramids building; I hear the shoutings of the armies of Alexander. . . . I sit as in a theatre—the stage is time, the play is the play of the world.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Books and Gardens.

II—Libraries: Their Faults

11 The richest minds need not large libraries.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning-Books.

12 A library is but the soul's burial-ground. It is the land of shadows.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: Oxford: The Bodleian Library.

13 Meek young men grow up in libraries.

MACAULAY, Essays: On Milton.

16 Burn the libraries, for their value is in this book.

OMAR. Referring to the Koran.

17 I love vast libraries; yet there is a doubt
If one be better with them or without,—
Unless he use them wisely, and, indeed,
Knows the high art of what and how to read.
At Learning's fountain it is sweet to drink,
But 'tis a nobler privilege to think;
And oft, from books apart, the thirsting mind

May make the nectar which it cannot find.
'Tis well to borrow from the good and great;
'Tis wise to learn; 'tis godlike to create!
J. G. SAXE, The Library.

1 Since you cannot read all the books which you may possess, it is enough to possess only as many books as you can read. (Cum legere non possis, quantum habueris, satis est habere, quantum legas.)

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 4.

2 A circulating library in a town is as an evergreen tree of diabolical knowledge.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2.

3 Unlearned men of books assume the care,
As eunuchs are the guardians of the fair.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 83.

It is not observed that . . . librarians are wiser men than others.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Spiritual Laws.

<sup>20</sup> If a man had the art of the second sight for seeing lies, as they have in Scotland for seeing spirits, how admirably he might entertain himself in this town by observing the different shapes, sizes and colours of those swarms of lies which buzz about the heads of some people.

SWIFT, The Examiner. No. 15.

<sup>21</sup> Magnanimous lie! and when was truth so beautiful that it could be preferred to thee?

(Magnanima menzogna! or quando è il vero
Si bello che si possa a te preporre?)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 22. Sophronisba, a Christian virgin, falsely took upon herself the guilt of having secreted a statue of the Virgin from heathen profanation.

1 There are 869 different forms of lying, but only one of them has been squarely forbidden. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

III—Lies: Condemnation

2 It is not the lie that passeth through the mind, but the lie that sinketh in, and settleteth in it, that doth the hurt.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

3 The beginning of all is to have done with Falsity; to eschew Falsity as Death Eternal. THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 23 June, 1870.

Man everywhere is the born enemy of lies. CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 1.

4 It is the nature of a scoundrel to deceive by lying. (Improbi hominis est mendacio fallere.) CICERO, Pro Murena. Ch. 39, sec. 62.

5 He neither uttered falsehood nor could endure it. (Mendacium neque dicebat, neque pati poterat.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus.

6 Every violation of truth is not only a sort of suicide in the liar, but is a stab at the health of human society.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

7 As ten millions of circles can never make a square, so the united voice of myriads cannot lend the smallest foundation to falsehood.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.

8 Dare to be true: nothing can need a lie; A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch.

9 Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6, l. 1.

10 It is better to be lied about than to lie.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 48.

11 There is no vice so mean, so pitiful, so contemptible; and he who permits himself to tell a lie once, finds it much easier to do it a second and third time, till at length it becomes habitual.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 83.

12 Men lie, who lack courage to tell truth.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Ina. Sc. 3.

13 Equivocation is half-way to lying, as lying the whole way to hell.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, p. 36.

The mouth that lies slays the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

14 To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 12.

15 You told a lie, an odious, damned lie:

Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 180.

Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 743.

16 One falsehood treads on the heels of another. (Fallacia Alia aliam trudit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 779.

It is a true saying that one falsehood leads easily to another.

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. i, sec. 33.

17 The silent colossal National Lie that is the support and confederate of all the tyrannies and shams and inequalities and unfairnesses that afflict the peoples—that is the one to throw bricks and sermons at.

MARK TWAIN, My First Lie.

18 He shall not prosper who deviseth lies.

The Koran. Ch. 20.

IV—Lies: Condonation

19 A little inaccuracy saves a world of explanation.

C. E. AYRES, Science, the False Messiah.

20 A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

Untruths . . . such as are wittily contrived, and are not merely gross and palpable.

FRANCIS BACON, Observations on a Libel.

21 For breaking of an oath, and lying,

Is but a kind of self-denying,

A saint-like virtue; and from hence

Some have broke oaths by Providence.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 133.

22 A good portion of speaking well consists in knowing how to lie. (Bona pars bene dicendi est scite mentiri.)

ERASMUS, Philetymus et Pseudocheus.

23 Merely corroborative detail, intended to give artistic verisimilitude to a bald and unconvincing narrative.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

No mere veracity robs your sagacity
Or perspicacity, Barney McGee.

RICHARD HOVEY, Barney McGee.

1 Yet to so gentle lies, pardon is due.
A lie, well told, to some tastes is restorative;
Besides, we Poets lie by good authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No. 184. See also POETRY: POETIC LICENSE.

2 A good lie for its own sake is ever pleasing to honest men, but a patched up record never.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. i, p. 88.

3 What do you not know, relate as if you knew it well. (Quæ nescieris, ut bene nota refer.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 98.

4 Parables are not lies because they describe events which never happened.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. ii.

V—Lies and Statistics

5 You may prove anything by figures.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Chartism. No. 2. Quoted as the saying of "a witty statesman."

6 Figures won't lie, but liars will figure.

GENERAL CHARLES H. GROSVENOR, Representative from Ohio, who for many years was famous for his prognostications of the vote
at Presidential elections.

7 Round numbers are always false.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAWKINS, Johnsoniana, 235.)

8 Statistics are like alienists—they will testify for either side.

F. H. LA GUARDIA, The Banking Investigations.
(Liberty, 13 May, 1933.)

9 Figures often beguile me, particularly when I have the arranging of them myself; in which case the remark attributed to Disraeli would often apply with justice and force: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies, and statistics."

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. i, p. 246.

This phrase has also been attributed to Henry Labouchère, Abraham Hewitt and Commander Holloway R. Frost.

VI—Lies and the Memory

10 A good memory is needed after one has lied.
(Il faut bonne mémoire après qu'on a menti.)

CORNILLE, Le Menteur. Act iv, sc. 5.

11 There is nothing so pathetic as a forgetful liar.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

12 He who is not sure of his memory should not undertake the trade of lying. (Qui ne sent point assez ferme de mémoire, ne se doit pas mêler d'être menteur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9.

13 He who tells a lie, is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 A liar needs a good memory. (Mendacem memorem esse oportere.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. iv,
ch. 2, sec. 91.

This shows that liars ought to have good memories.

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government.
Ch. ii, sec. 15.

Indeed, a very rational saying, that a liar ought to have a good memory.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon on the Concealment of Sin.

VII—Liars

15 Liars are always most disposed to swear.
(A giurar presti i mentitor son sempre.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Act ii, sc. 3.

A liar is always lavish of oaths. (Un menteur est tousjours prodigue de serments.)

CORNILLE, Le Menteur. Act iii, sc. 5.

16 When they speak truth they are not believed.

ARISTOTLE, when asked what liars gain by lying. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec.
11.)

A liar is not believed even when he tells the truth.
(Mendaci homini ne verum quidem dicenti cre-dere solemus.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 71, sec. 146.

But liars can never trust,
Though they should speak the thing that's true.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Lying.

17 None speaks false, where there is none to hear.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, st. 24.

18 The greater fool, the greater liar.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Miscellaneous Epigrams.
No. 6.

Do not tell everything, but never lie. . . . You may always observe that the greatest fools are the greatest liars.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

19 It isn't every fool that's fit
To make a real good lie, that 'll sit

On her keel, and answer the helm.

THOMAS EDWARD BROWN, The Doctor.

20 There's a real love of a lie,
Liars find ready made for lies they make.
ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

1 He lied with such a fervour of intention,
There was no doubt he earned his laureate pension.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 80.

2 With death doomed to grapple
Beneath this cold slab, he
Who lied in the Chapel
Now lies in the Abbey.

BYRON, Epitaph for William Pitt.

Some lie beneath the churchyard stone,
And some before the Speaker.

W. M. PRAED, School and School-fellows. St. 5.

3 It is the man who tells and who acts the lie who is guilty, and not he who honestly and sincerely believes the lie.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

4 Thou liar of the first magnitude!

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

You licked not your lips since you lied last.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5931.

5 Even then the liar in you woke,
The traitor grew!

JOHN ERSKINE, Dialogue.

6 Show me a liar, and I will show you a thief.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 A splendid liar. (Splendide mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode. 11, l. 34. Hypernestra alone, of all the fifty daughters of Danaus who had sworn to them to kill their husbands, broke her oath and was imprisoned, but declared innocent by the people.

One only, true to Hymen's flame,
Was traitress to her sire forsworn:
That splendid falsehood lights her name
Through times unborn.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 11, l. 33.

To lie magnificently. (Mentiri splendide.)

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies.

8 He is a liar, and the father of it.

New Testament: John, viii, 44.

These lies are like the father that begets them:
gross as a mountain, open, palpable.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 249.

9 A man who has never been within the tropics does not know what a thunderstorm means; a man who has never looked on Niagara has but a faint idea of a cataract; and he who has not read Barère's Memoirs may be said not to know what it is to lie.

MACAULAY, Review, of Mémoires de Bertrand Barère.

10 Talkin' tall an' tactless, as saints hadn't orter.

DON MARQUIS, *Noah an' Jonah an' Cap'n
John Smith*.

11 The thing that is not, Bassa's wont to say.
(Istud quod non est, dicere Bassa solet.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 45.

12 Thou liest in thy throat. (Mentiris in gut-ture.)

TITUS OATES, On Jude, p. 247.

He strode to Gauthier, in his throat
Gave him the lie. . . . The lie was dead,
And damned, and truth stood up instead.

ROBERT BROWNING, Count Gismond. St. 13.

But thou liest in thy throat.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l.
172.

13 I said in my haste, All men are liars.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, 11. (Omnis homo mendax.—Vulgate.)

Whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

New Testament: Revelation, xxii, 15.

14 I have no use for liars, national, international, or those found in private life.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Arlington Cemetery.

15 He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 283.

He will lie as fast as a dog will trot.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, *Lesclarissement de la Langue
Françoise*, 610. (1530)

Thou canst cog, face and lie as fast as a dog can trot.

UNKNOWN, Hay Any Worke for Cooper, 65.
(1589)

She will lie as fast as a dog will lick a dish.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

16 Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 103.

A heart for falsehood framed.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 5.

17 Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to the vice of lying!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 325.

Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 149.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 175.

18 If thou deny'st it, twenty times thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 38.

19

Like one

Who having into truth, by telling of it,

Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 99.

A phrase which has puzzled the commentators. Boswell explains it: "Who having made his memory such a sinner as to credit his own lie by telling of it."

It was generally believed that he was indeed Duke Richard. Nay, himself with long and continual counterfeiting and with oft telling a lie, was turned by habit almost into the thing he seemed to be, and from a liar into a believer.

FRANCIS BACON, History of Henry VII.

1 An egg is not so full of meat as she is full of lies.

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2. (1565)

Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 24. (1595)

2 An experienced, industrious, ambitious, and often quite picturesque liar.

MARK TWAIN, My Military Campaign.

LIFE

I—Life: Definitions: The Optimists

3 Life's but a means unto an end—that end, Beginning, mean and end to all things—God.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

4 I am convinced that the world is not a mere bog in which men and women trample themselves in the mire and die. Something magnificent is taking place here amid the cruelties and tragedies, and the supreme challenge to intelligence is that of making the noblest and best in our curious heritage prevail.

CHARLES A. BEARD. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 43.)

5 For life is the mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what we are and do;

Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

MADELEINE BRIDGES, Life's Mirror.

6 Life is a pure flame, and we live by an invisible sun within us.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

7 I count life just a stuff
To try the soul's strength on.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

Life is probation, and the earth no goal
But starting-point of man.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. x, l. 1436.

8 Life is a ladder infinite-stepped, that hides its rungs from human eyes;

Planted its foot in chaos gloom, its head soars
high above the skies.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. vii, st. 7.

9 Life is but thought.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age. See also THOUGHT AND LIFE.

Life consists in what man is thinking of all day.
EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 319.

10 Life is a boundless privilege, and when you pay for your ticket, and get into the car, you have no guess what good company you will find there.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Life is an ecstasy.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Life is a series of surprises, and would not be worth taking or keeping if it were not.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

All life is an experiment. The more experiments you make the better.

EMERSON, Journals.

Life is a perpetual instruction in cause and effect.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

11 Life is a preparation for the future; and the best preparation for the future is to live as if there were none.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 46.

12 Life is a loom, weaving illusion.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

Life is the west-going dream-storms' breath,
Life is a dream, the sigh of the skies,
The breath of the stars, that nod on their pillows
With their golden hair mussed over their eyes.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Ghost of the Buffaloes.

13 Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance upon many points, all agree in this, that every existence is an aim.

MAZZINI, Life and Writings. Ch. 5.

14 Life is a flame that is always burning itself out, but it catches fire again every time a child is born.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

Life is a flame whose splendor hides its base.

GEORGE TUFTS, in letter to Emerson. (See Journal, 1868.)

15 Life is an arrow—therefore you must know
What mark to aim at, how to use the bow—
Then draw it to the head, and let it go!

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Arrow.

Life is an archer, fashioning an arrow
With anxious care, for in it life must trust;

A single flash across the earthly spaces
Straight to the throat of death—one conquering thrust!

CATHERINE CATE COBLENTZ, Life.

1 Yet I know that I dwell in the midst of the roar of the Cosmic Wheel
In the hot collision of Forces, and the clan-gour of boundless Strife, Mid the sound of the speed of worlds, the rushing worlds, and the peal
Of the thunder of Life.

WILLIAM WATSON, Dawn on the Headland.

2 Our lives are albums written through
With good or ill, with false or true;
And as the blessed angels turn
The pages of our years,
God grant they read the good with smiles,
And blot the ill with tears!

WHITTIER, Written in a Lady's Album.

3 Our lives are songs; God writes the words
And we set them to music at pleasure;
And the song grows glad, or sweet or sad,
As we choose to fashion the measure.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Our Lives. Wrongfully claimed for Rev. Thomas Gibbons. (See Notes and Queries, 1 April, 1905, p. 249.)

II—Life: Definitions: The Pessimists

4 Life is the apprenticeship to progressive renunciation, to the steady diminution of our claims, of our hopes, of our powers, of our liberty.

AMTEL, Journal, 22 Oct., 1856.

Life is only a document to be interpreted.

AMTEL, Journal, 9 Sept., 1880.

5 Life is a school of probability.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. ii, p.
257.

6 Life, Crichton, is like a cup of tea; the more heartily we drink the sooner we reach the dregs.

J. M. BARRIE, The Admirable Crichton. Act i.

Life is a long lesson in humility.

J. M. BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 3.

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story, and writes another, and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with what he vowed to make it.
J. M. BARRIE. (Golden Book, Jan., 1931.)

7 Life is a bumper filled by fate.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Epigram on Punch.

8 Do what you will, this life's a fiction,
And is made up of contradiction.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomic Verses. No. 23.

9 Life is all a variorum.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

10

Life is like playing a violin solo in public and learning the instrument as one goes on.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, *Collected
Essays*. Vol. ii, p. 93.

Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 10.

Life is one long process of getting tired.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 11.

To live is like to love—all reason is against it,
and all healthy instinct for it.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 227.

11

Life is a dusty corridor, I say,
Shut at both ends.

ROY CAMPBELL, The Flaming Terrapin. Pt. i.

How could life annoy me Any more?

Life: a lighted window And a closed door.

CLEMENT WOOD, I Pass a Lighted Window.

12

Ask what is human life—the sage replies,
With disappointment low'ring in his eyes,
"A painful passage o'er a restless flood,
A vain pursuit of fugitive false good,
A sense of fancied bliss and heartfelt care,
Closing at last in darkness and despair."

COWPER, Hope, l. 1.

To most, man's life but showed
A bridge of groans across a stream of tears.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus. Sc. 15.

13

Life is one demd horrid grind!

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 64. Mr.
Mantolini speaking.

14

Life's a tumble-about thing of ups and downs.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 8.

The teeter-board of life goes up,

The teeter-board of life goes down,

The sweetest face must learn to frown;

The biggest dog has been a pup.

JOAQUIN MILLER, William Brown of Oregon.

15

Life is a jest, and all things show it:

I thought so once, but now I know it.

JOHN GAY, My Own Epitaph.

Ah! Matt, old age has brought to me
Thy wisdom, less thy certainty;

The world's a jest, and joy's a trinket;

I knew that once, but now I think it.

J. K. STEPHEN, Senex to Matt Prior.

16

Life is made up of interruptions.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i.

17

Who but knows How it goes!—

Life's a last year's Nightingale,

Love a last year's Rose.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 45.

Life is (I think) a blunder and a shame.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: Waiting.

Life is a smoke that curls—

Curls in a flickering skein,
That winds and whisks and whirls,
A figment thin and vain,
Into the vast inane.

W. E. HENLEY, Of the Nothingness of Things.

Life is made up of sobs, sniffles, and smiles,
with sniffles predominating.

O. HENRY, Gifts of the Magi.

Life is a great bundle of little things.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

Life is not to be bought with heaps of gold;
Not all Apollo's Pythian treasures hold,
Or Troy once held, in peace and pride of sway,
Can bribe the poor possession of a day!

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 524. (Pope, tr.)

Life is not to be purchased at any price. (Non omni pretio vita emenda est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 7.

Life is just one damned thing after another.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 137. (1911) Attributed to Frank Ward O'Malley, in United Press story of his death, 19 Oct., 1932, and in Literary Digest, 5 Nov., 1932.

As I allays says to my brother,
If it isn't one thing it's the tother.

H. L. C. PEMBERTON, Geese: A Dialogue.

"I expect," he said, "I was thinking jest what a Rum Go everything is. I expect it was something like that."

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 8.

Life is a progress from want to want, not from enjoyment to enjoyment.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. iii, p. 53.)

Life is a leaf of paper white
Whereon each one of us may write
His word or two, and then comes night.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 2.

Life is like a scrambled egg.

DON MARQUIS, Frustration.

Life's a long headache in a noisy street.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

Life is a waste of wearisome hours,
Which seldom the rose of enjoyment
adorns,
And the heart that is soonest awake to the flowers,
Is always the first to be touch'd by the thorns.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh! Think Not My Spirits.

This life is all chequer'd with pleasures and woes.

THOMAS MOORE, This Life Is All Chequer'd.

Our life is but a pilgrimage of blasts,
And every blast brings forth a fear;
And every fear, a death.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyph, iii, 4.

Real life is, to most men, a long second-best,
a perpetual compromise between the ideal and the possible.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Study of Mathematics.

Life is not a spectacle or a feast; it is a predicament.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Articles and Essays.

Life is a sorry mélange of gold and silver and stubble,
Of roses and wormwood and weeds, of rubies and rubble.

R. H. SCHAUFFLER, Nonsense.

Life is a shuttle.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 25. Quoting a proverb.

Does not our life consist of the four elements?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 10.
Referring to fire, water, earth, and air.

What is the life of man! Is it not to shift from side to side?—from sorrow to sorrow?
—to button up one cause of vexation, and unbutton another?

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iv, ch. 31.

When all is done, human life is, at the greatest and best, but like a froward child, that must be played with and humoured a little to keep it quiet till it falls asleep, and then the care is over.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Discourse of Poetry.
Last sentence. (1680)

Life at the greatest and best is but a froward child, that must be humoured and coaxed a little till it falls asleep, and then all the care is over.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i.
(1768) Goldsmith gives no indication that he is quoting.

Life is simply a mauvais quart d'heure made up of exquisite moments.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act ii.

III—Life: Definitions: The Philosophers

Life does not proceed by the association and addition of elements, but by dissociation and division.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.

For life is tendency, and the essence of a tendency is to develop in the form of a sheaf, creating, by its very growth, divergent directions among which its impetus is divided.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 2.

Life appears as a wave which rises, and which is opposed by the descending movement of matter. At one point alone it passes freely, dragging with it the obstacle which will weigh on its progress but will not stop it. At this point is humanity.

HENRI BERGSON. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 117.)

<sup>1</sup> Life is like a library owned by an author. In it are a few books which he wrote himself, but most of them were written for him.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Sermon: Life.

<sup>2</sup> This Being of mine, whatever it really is, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the ruling Reason.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 2.

Deem not life a thing of consequence; look at the infinite void of the future, and the limitless space of the past.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 50.

<sup>3</sup> Our life consisteth partly in folly, and partly in wisdom.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

<sup>4</sup> Life is a fortress which neither you nor I know anything about.

NAPOLEON, Remark, to Dr. Antonomarchi, at St. Helena.

<sup>5</sup> Life is that which holds matter together.

PORPHYRY. (EMERSON, Considerations by the Way.)

<sup>6</sup> Life is neither a good nor an evil; it is simply the place where good and evil exist. (Vita nec bonum nec malum est; boni ac mali locus est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, 12.

HERBERT SPENCER, A Theory of Population. (Westminster Review, April, 1852.) Repeated in Principles of Biology. Ch. 4, sec. 24.

A living thing is distinguished from a dead thing by the multiplicity of the changes at any moment taking place in it.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. i, ch. 4, sec. 25.

<sup>8</sup> Then, what is life? I cried.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY, The Triumph of Life, l. 544. The first line of the last stanza written by Shelley the day before his death.

No power of genius has ever yet had the smallest success in explaining existence. The perfect enigma remains.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

The mystery of life is not a problem to be solved, it is a reality to be experienced.

VAN DER LEEUW, The Conquest of Illusion, 11.

<sup>9</sup> Life's a very funny proposition you can bet,

And no one's solved the problem properly as yet;

Young for a day, then old and gray, . . .

Life's a very funny proposition after all.

GEORGE M. COHAN, Life's a Funny Proposition. (From Little Johnny Jones, 1907.)

IV—Life: Apothegms

<sup>10</sup> The less of routine, the more of life.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Habits.

Who but the learned and dull moral fool
Could gravely have foreseen man ought to live by rule?

APHRA BEHN, The Golden Age. St. 7.

<sup>11</sup> Life is short to the fortunate, long to the unfortunate. (Βραχὺς ὁ βίος ἀνθρώπῳ εὐ πράσσοντι, δυστυχοῦντι δὲ μακρός.)

APOLLONIUS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. cxxi, l. 34.)

O life! an age to the miserable, a moment to the happy. (O vita! misero longa, felici brevis.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 36.

How short this Life, how long withal; how false its weal, how true its woes,

This fever-fit with paroxysms to mark its opening and its close.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 23.

For men who are fortunate all life is short, but for the unfortunate one night is infinite time.

LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 28.)

<sup>12</sup> Who saw life steadily and saw it whole.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To a Friend. Referring to Sophocles.

<sup>13</sup> Weariness of life. (Tædium vitæ.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. vi, ch. 18, sec. 11.

<sup>14</sup> Life, like poverty, makes strange bedfellows.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. iv, ch. 4.

<sup>15</sup> On the Rampage, Pip, and off the Rampage, Pip; such is life.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 15.

"Sairey," said Mrs. Harris, "sech is life. Vich likewise is the hend of all things."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 29. Mrs. Gamp speaking.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 17.

<sup>17</sup> Man's life is but seventy salads long.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Life is eating us up. We shall be fables presently.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

Life's well enough, but we shall be glad to get out of it, and they will all be glad to have us.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

We live ruins amid ruins.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Domestic Life.

1 The life worth living. (Vita vitalis.)

ENNIUS. (CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. vi, sec. 20.)

Is life worth living? Yes, so long

As there is wrong to right.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Is Life Worth Living?

So long as faith in freedom reigns

And loyal hope survives,

And gracious charity remains

To heaven lowly lives;

While there is one untrodden tract

For intellect or will,

And men are free to think and act,

Life is worth living still.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Is Life Worth Living?

Is life worth living?

Aye, with the best of us—

Heights of us, depths of us—

Life is the test of us!

CORINNE ROOSEVELT ROBINSON, Life, A Question.

Is life worth living? That depends on the liver!

UNKNOWN, Is Life Worth Living?

2 We live merely on the crust or rind of things.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Lucian.

We live amid surfaces, and the true art of life is to skate well on them.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

You cannot learn to skate without being ridiculous. . . . The ice of life is slippery.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction.

3 A merry life and a short.

EDMUND GAYTON, Festivous Notes on Don Quixote, 101. (1654)

A short life and a merry life, I cry. Happy man be his dole.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act i. (1660)

4 Yes, my love, whosoever lives, loses, . . . but he also wins. (Ja, meine Liebe, wer lebt, verliert . . . aber er gewinnt auch.)

GOETHE, Stella. Act i.

5 There is more to life than increasing its speed.

MAHATMA GANDHI.

6 Life is short and the art is long. (Ὁ βίος βραχύς, ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρή.)

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. No. 1. Hippocrates is speaking of the art of healing. See also ART: ART IS LONG.

7 Life isn't all beer and skittles.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's Schooldays. Ch. 2. (1857)

Life is with such all beer and skittles;

They are not difficult to please about their victuals.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Contentment.

They don't mind it: it's a reg'lar holiday to them—all porter and skittles.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 40.

Life ain't all beer and skittles, and more's the pity; but what's the odds, so long as you're happy?

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 25.

8 We now demand to be personally conducted through life, all risks to be taken by someone else.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 109.)

9 All that a man hath will he give for his life.

Old Testament: Job, ii, 4.

10 The land of the living.

Old Testament: Job, xxviii, 13.

There is always life for the living.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 The business of life is to go forward.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 72.

Life, to be worthy of a rational being, must always be in progression.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Piozzi.

Life can only be understood backwards; but it must be lived forwards.

SÖREN KIERKEGAARD, Life.

12 The hope of life returns with the sun. (Spes vitæ cum sole redit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 70. WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE: see under HOPE.

13 There is nothing of which men are so fond, and withal so careless, as life.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 10.

Most men employ the earlier part of life to make the other part miserable. (La plupart des hommes emploient la meilleure partie de leur vie à rendre l'autre misérable.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 11.

14 Love is sunshine, hate is shadow, Life is checkered shade and sunshine.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha's Wooing, l. 265.

Oh thou child of many prayers!

Life hath quicksands,—life hath snares!

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

15 We live, not as we wish, but as we can. (Ζῶμεν γὰρ οὐχ ὡς θέλομεν, ἀλλ' ὡς δυνάμεθα.)

MENANDER, Andria. Frag. 50.

16 To destroy life is a power which the vilest of earth possess;

To bestow it belongs to gods and kings alone.

(Il torre altrui la vita È facoltà commune

Al più vil della terra; il darla è solo

De Numi, e de' Regnanti.)

METASTASIO, La Clemenza di Tito. Act iii, sc. 7.

1 The great business of life is, to be, to do, to do without, and to depart.

JOHN MORLEY, Address on Aphorisms, Edinburgh, 1887.

2 Nor on one string are all life's jewels strung.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xvii, l. 1170.

3 How light the touches are that kiss
The music from the chords of life!
COVENTRY PATMORE, By the Sea.

4 Twenty years a boy, twenty years a youth, twenty years a man, twenty years an old man.
PYTHAGORAS, the four quarters of life.
(DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 10.)

5 And there I began to think, that it is very true which is commonly said, that one half of the world knoweth not how the other half liveth. (Et là commençay à penser, qu'il est bien vray ce que l'on dit, que la moitié du monde ne sçait comment l'autre vit.)
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 32. (1532)

One half of the world knows not how the other half lives.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

How the Other Half Lives.
JACOB A. RUS. Title of book.

6 We must not look for a golden life in an iron age.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 I wish to preach, not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Hamilton Club, Chicago, 10 April, 1899.

The poorest way to face life is to face it with a sneer.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, University of Paris.

In life as in a football game, the principle to follow is: Hit the line hard.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Strenuous Life: The American Boy.

8 How many illustrious and noble heroes have lived too long by one day! (Combien de héros, glorieux, magnanimes, ont vécu trop d'un jour!)

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU.

9 Live and let live. (Leben und leben lassen.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager. Act vi, l. 106.

10 He who lives for no one does not necessarily live for himself. (Non continuo sibi vivit, qui nemini.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lv, sec. 5.

It gives proof of a great heart to return to life for the sake of others, and noble men have often done this. (Ingentis animi est aliena causa ad vitam reverti, quod magni viri sæpe fecerunt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 4.

11 There is one reason why we cannot complain of life: it keeps no one against his will. (Hoc est unum, cur de vita non possimus queri: neminem tenet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 15.

12 The greatest flaw in life is that it is always imperfect. (Maximum vitæ vitium est, quod imperfecta semper est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 8.

13 The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 83.

14 I bear a charmed life.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 12.

15 If you choose to represent the various parts in life by holes upon a table, of different shapes,—some circular, some triangular, some square, some oblong,—and the persons acting these parts by bits of wood of similar shapes, we shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular, and a square person has squeezed himself into the round hole. The officer and the office, the doer and the thing done, seldom fit so exactly that we can say they were almost made for each other.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.

The world is like a board with holes in it, and the square men have got into the round holes, and the round into the square.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY. (Punch is responsible for the attribution. The quotation has not been found in Berkeley's works.)

A round man cannot be expected to fit a square hole right away. He must have time to modify his shape.

MARK TWAIN, More Tramps Abroad. Ch. 71.

16 One's real life is so often the life that one does not lead.

OSCAR WILDE, Rose-Leaf and Apple-Leaf: Envoi.

17 Life is far too important a thing ever to talk seriously about.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i.

Lord Illingworth: The Book of Life begins with a man and a woman in a garden.

Mrs. Allonby: It ends with Revelations.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

The secret of life is never to have an emotion that is unbecoming.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

1 Life is most enjoy'd,
When courted least; most worth, when disesteem'd.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 410.

V—Life: A Battle

2 Life is a battle, sojourning in a strange land;
and the fame that comes after is oblivion.
(Ὁ δὲ βίος πόλεμος καὶ ξένον ἐπιδημία.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 17.

3 Life, Lucilius, is a battle. (Vivere, Lucili, militare est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 5.

My life is a battle. (Ma vie est un combat.)

VOLTAIRE, Mahomet. Act ii, sc. 4. Adopted by Beaumarchais as his motto.

4 Who in Life's battle firm doth stand
Shall bear Hope's tender blossoms
Into the Silent Land!

J. G. VON SALIS-SEEWIS, *Song of the Silent
Land*. (Longfellow, tr.)

5 Man's life on earth is a warfare. (Militia est vita hominis super terram.)

VULGATE: Job, vii, 1.

6 Life is war;
Eternal war with woe; who bears it best,
Deserves it least.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 9.

VI—Life, A Bubble

See also Man: A Bubble; World: A Bubble

7 The world's a bubble, and the life of man less than a span;

In his conception wretched, from the womb
so to the tomb:

Curst from his cradle, and brought up to years with cares and fears.

Who then to frail mortality shall trust,
But limns on water, or but writes in dust.

SIR FRANCIS BACON, The World. A paraphrase of a Greek epigram by Posidippus. Sometimes wrongly attributed to Sir Henry Wot-ton. Izaak Walton, a friend of Wotton, definitely ascribed it to Bacon. (Reliquae Wottonianae, p. 513. 1651.) Positively ascribed to Bacon by Thomas Farnaby, a contemporary and a scholar. (Florilegium Epigrammatum. 1629.)

What life shall a man choose? In court and mart
Are quarrels and hard dealing; cares at home;
Labors by land; terrors at sea; abroad,
Either the fear of losing what thou hast,
Or worse, nought left to lose; if wedded, much Discomfort; comfortless unwed; a life
With children troubled, incomplete without:
Youth foolish, age outworn. Of these two choose then;

Or never to be born, or straight to die.
POSIDIPPUS (or PLATO, the Comic Poet).
(Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 359.)

8 How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be! The eternal surge

Of time and tide rolls on, and bears afar
Our bubbles.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 99.

9 This life's a hollow bubble,
Don't you know?

Just a painted piece of trouble,
Don't you know?

We come to earth to cwy,
We grow oldeh and we sigh,
Oldeh still and then we die,

Don't you know?

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Fin de Siècle. Referring to "Harvard indifference." See under INDIFFERENCE.

10 Life is mostly froth and bubble;
Two things stand like stone:

KINDNESS in another's trouble,
COURAGE in your own.

A. L. GORDON, Ye Weary Wayfarer. Fytte viii.

11 If Life an empty bubble be,
How sad for those who cannot see
The rainbow in the bubble!

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, Bramble-Rise.

12 And fear not lest Existence closing your Account and mine, should know the like no
more:

The Eternal Sáki from that Bowl has poured

Millions of Bubbles like us, and will pour.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 46. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

13 Man's life is but a jest,
A dream, a shadow, bubble, air, a vapour at the best.

G. W. THORNBURY, The Jester's Sermon.

For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,
But bubbles on the rapid stream of time,
That rise, and fall, that swell, and are no more,
Born, and forgot, ten thousand in an hour?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285.

VII—Life: A Disease

14 This strange disease of modern life,
With its sick hurry, its divided aims.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Scholar Gipsy. St.
21.

15 Why do not you look at this miserable little life, with all its ups and downs, as I do? At the very worst, 'tis but a scratch, a temporary ill, to be soon cured by that dear old doctor, Death.

EDWIN BOOTH, Letter to William Winter, 1886.

1
Let Nature and let Art do what they please,
When all is done, Life's an incurable disease.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Ode to Dr. Scarborough.

That long and cruel malady which one calls life.
(Cette longue et cruelle maladie qu'on appelle la vie.)

DESCHAMPS.

2
Life is a fatal complaint, and an eminently contagious one.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Poet at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 12.

3
This long disease, my life.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 132.

4
Own riches gather'd trouble, fame a breath,
And life an ill whose only cure is death.

PRIOR, Epistle to Dr. Sherlock, l. 26.

All covet life, yet call it pain:
All feel the ill, yet shun the cure.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epigram Written in Mezeray's History of France.

5
It is silliness to live when to live is torment;
and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 309.

VIII—Life: A Dream

6
Now that I've come
To this place—alone—
Life is a spent dream
And a gray stone.

VERNE BRIGHT, Gray Stone.

7
We shall start up, at last awake
From Life, that insane dream we take
For waking now, because it seems.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Sec. 14.

Life is an empty dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. ii.

Life and love are all a dream.
BURNS, Lament.

Life is a dream. (La vida es sueño.)
CALDERON. Title of Comedy.

8
Now the summer prime is her blithest rhyme
In the being and the seeming,
And they that have heard the overword
Know life's a dream worth dreaming.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 33.

9
Life is a kind of Sleep: old men sleep longest,
nor begin to wake but when they are to die.
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

Love to his soul gave eyes; he knew things are not as they seem,

The dream is his real life: the world around him
is the dream.

F. T. PALGRAVE, Dream of Maxim Wledig.

10
To treat the whole spectacle as a dream within a dream, from which it is still possible that death may awaken us.

JOHN COWPER POWYS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 47.)

11
Waking life is a dream controlled.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 146.

12
Peace, peace! he is not dead, he doth not sleep—

He hath awakened from the dream of life.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 39.

13
For life is but a dream whose shapes return,
Some frequently, some seldom.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. i, st. 3.

Life a dream in Death's eternal sleep.

JAMES THOMSON, Philosophy.

14
Life, believe, is not a dream,
So dark as sages say;

Oft a little morning rain
Foretells a pleasant day!

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Life.

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,

Life is but an empty dream!—

For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. St. 1.

Sing it not in mournful numbers. (Singet nicht in Trauertönen.)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister: Philine.

IX—Life: A Game

15
The heroes of ancient and modern fame . . .
have treated life and fortune as a game to be well and skilfully played, but the stake not to be so valued but that any time it could be held a trifle light as air, and thrown up.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

As a rule, the game of life is worth playing, but the struggle is the prize.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 199.)

16
But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days;

Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,

And one by one back in the Closet lays.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyât. St. 69. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The chess-board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of Nature. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is always fair, just, and patient. But also we know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance.

HUXLEY, Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews: A Liberal Education.

While we least think it he prepares his Mate.
Mate, and the King's pawn played, it never ceases,

Though all the earth is dust of taken pieces.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. i, last lines.

We are puppets, Man in his pride, and Beauty fair in her flower;

Do we move ourselves, or are moved by an unseen hand at a game

That pushes us off from the board, and others ever succeed?

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 126.

1
I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

Life will always remain a gamble, with prizes sometimes for the imprudent, and blanks so often to the wise.

JEROME K. JEROME.

2
We are in the world like men playing at tables; the chance is not in our power, but to play it is; and when it is fallen, we must manage it as we can.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying: Of Contentedness. Sec. 2.

3
The life of man is like a game with dice: if you don't get the throw you want, you must show your skill in making the best of the throw you do get. (Ita vitast hominum quasi quom ludas tesseris: Si illud quod maxume opus est jacta non cadit, Illud quod cecidit forte, id arte ut corrigas.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 739.

Life is a game of whist. From unseen sources
The cards are shuffled, and the hands are dealt.

Blind are our efforts to control the forces
That, though unseen, are no less strongly felt.

I do not like the way the cards are shuffled,
But yet I like the game and want to play;
And through the long, long night will I, unruffled,

Play what I get, until the break of day.

EUGENE F. WARE, Whist.

Life is a game of whist
Between Man and Nature
In which Nature knows all Man's cards.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Handicapped.

X—Life: An Inn

4
We are all but Fellow-Travelers,
Along Life's weary way;
If any man can play the pipes,

In God's name, let him play.

JOHN BENNETT, Fellow-Travelers.

Away with funeral music—set

The pipe to powerful lips—

The cup of life's for him that drinks
And not for him that sips.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Cup of Life.

5
A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay;

An inn, where travellers bait, then post away.

ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, The Immortality of the Soul. (Tr. from the Latin by Soame Jenyns.)

6
For the world I count it not an inn, but an hospital, and a place not to live, but to die in.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 12.

Archbishop Leighton used often to say that if he were to choose a place to die in, it should be an inn; it looking like a pilgrim's going home, to whom this world was all as an inn, and who was weary with the noise and confusion in it. . . . And he obtained what he desired, for he died at the Bell Inn in Warwick Lane.

GILBERT BURNET, History of My Own Times.

This world is but a thoroughfare full of woe,
And we but pilgrims passing to and fro.

Death is an end of every worldly sore.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 1989.

Like pilgrims to th' appointed place we tend;
The world's an inn, and death the journey's end.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 887.

8
I depart from life as from an inn, and not as from my home. (Ex vita discedo, tamquam ex hospitio, non tamquam e domo.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 23, sec. 84.

9
We are in this life as it were in another man's house. . . . In heaven is our home, in the world is our Inn: do not so entertain thyself in the Inn of this world for a day as to have thy mind withdrawn from longing after thy heavenly home.

PAUL GERHARDT, Meditations. No. 38. (c. 1630)

One doth but breakfast here, another dine;
he that lives longest does but sup; we must all go to bed in another World.

JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, Horæ Succissivæ, p. 80. (1631)

Man's life is like unto a winter's day,—
Some break their fast and so depart away;
Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed.
O reader, then behold and see

As we are now, so must you be.

Attributed to Bishop Henshawe, but probably an elaboration by an unknown hand of the quotation from Horæ Succissivæ given above. Variations of the stanza were used frequently as epitaphs.

Our Life is nothing but a Winter's day;
Some only break their Fast, and so away:
Others stay to Dinner, and depart full fed:
The deepest Age but Sups, and goes to Bed:
He's most in debt that lingers out the Day:
Who dies betime, has less, and less to pay.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies: On the Life of Man. (1633)

The life of man is a winter's day, and a winter's way.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Man's life is like a Winter's day:
Some only breakfast and away;
Others to dinner stay and are full fed,
The oldest man but sups and goes to bed.
Long is his life who lingers out the day,
Who goes the soonest has the least to pay;
Death is the Waiter, some few run on tick,
And some alas! must pay the bill to Nick!
Tho' I owed much, I hope long trust is given,
And truly mean to pay all bills in Heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Barnwell Churchyard, near Cambridge, England.

1
This life at best is but an inn,
And we the passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, A Fit of Mortification.

Nor is this lower world but a huge inn,
And men the rambling passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, The Vote. (Prefixed to his Familiar Letters.)

2
I came at morn; 'twas spring, I smiled,
The fields with green were clad;
I walked abroad at noon, and lo!
'Twas summer—I was glad;
I sate me down; 'twas autumn eve,
And I with sadness wept;
I laid me down at night, and then
'Twas winter, and I slept.

MARY PYPER, Epitaph: A Life.

3
Many mortals given up to the belly and to sleep, uninstructed and uncultured, have passed through life like sojourners in strange lands; whose bodies indeed have been given up to pleasure, and their souls to a heavy burden. (Multi mortales dediti ventri atque somno, indocti, incultique vitam sicuti peregrinantes transiere; quibus profecto contra naturam corpus voluptati, anima oneri.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 2, sec. 8.

4
This body is not a home but an inn, and that only for a short time. (Nec domum esse hoc corpus, sed hospitium, et quidem breve hospitium.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Luciliū. Epis. cxx, 14.

Born for a very brief space of time, we regard this life as an inn which we are soon to quit that it may be made ready for the coming guest.

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 21.

XI—Life: An Isthmus

5
Many witty authors compare the present time to an isthmus, or narrow neck of land, that rises in the midst of an ocean, immeasurably diffused on either side of it.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 590.

There is an eternity behind and an eternity before, and this little speck in the center, however long, is comparatively but a minute.

JOHN BROWN, after his arrest at Harper's Ferry, in October, 1859.

6
The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two Eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past and flow onwards into the remotest Future.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times.

One life;—a little gleam of Time between two Eternities.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 5.

7
As stand we perchd on point of Time, betwixt the two Eternities,

Whose awful secrets gathering round with black profound oppress our eyes.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 4.

8
Life is a fragment, a moment between two eternities, influenced by all that has preceded, and to influence all that follows. The only way to illumine it is by extent of view.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Note-book: Life.

9
Vain, weak-built isthmus, which dost proudly rise

Up between two eternities!

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Life and Fame, l. 18.

10
Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights.

R. G. INGERSOLL, At His Brother's Grave.

What shall we call this undetermin'd state,
This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless oceans,

That whence we came, and that to which we tend?

GEORGE LILLO, Arden of Feversham. Act iii, sc. 2.

Life, as we call it, is nothing but the edge of the boundless ocean of existence where it comes on soundings.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

12
Remember that man's life lies all within this present, as 't were but a hair's breadth of time; as for the rest, the past is gone, the future may never be. Short, therefore, is man's life, and narrow is the corner of the earth wherein he dwells.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 10.

1 This speck of life in time's great wilderness
This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas,

The past, the future, two eternities!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan. St. 42.

2 Placed on this isthmus of a middle state.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 3.

3 Amid two seas, on one small point of land,
Wearied, uncertain, and amaz'd we stand.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of Human Wishes. Pt. iii, l. 616.

Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
'Twixt two unbounded seas, I stand.
CHARLES WESLEY, O God Mine Inmost Soul Convert.

4 I desire to have both heaven and hell ever in my eye, while I stand on this isthmus of life, between two boundless oceans.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Charles Wesley, 1747.

XII—Life: A Medley

5 From fibers of pain and hope and trouble
And toil and happiness,—one by one,—
Twisted together, or single or double,
The varying thread of our life is spun.
Hope shall cheer though the chain be galling;
Light shall come though the gloom be falling;
Faith will list for the Master calling
Our hearts to his rest,—when the day is done.

A. B. BRAGDON, When the Day Is Done.

6 He fixed thee 'mid this dance
Of plastic circumstance.
ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra.

7 How many lives we live in one,
And how much less than one, in all!
ALICE CARY, Life's Mysteries.

8 What is it but a map of busy life,
Its fluctuations, and its vast concerns?
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 55.

9 In real life serious things and mere trifles, laughable things and things that cause pain, are wont to be mixed in strangest medley. It is necessary, then, that Tragedy, as being a mirror of life, must leave room for an element of comic humour.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

10 Half my life is full of sorrow,
Half of joy, still fresh and new;
One of these lives is a fancy,
But the other one is true.
ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Dream-Life.

11 The Fates and Furies, as well as the Graces and Sirens, glide with linked hands over life.

(Die Parzen und Furien ziehen auch mit verbundenen Händen um das Leben, wie die Grazien und die Sirenen.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 140.

12 Twist ye, twine ye! even so
Mingle shades of joy and woe,
Hope and fear, and peace, and strife,
In the thread of human life.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 4.

13 We have two lives:
The soul of man is like the rolling world,
One half in day, the other dipt in night;
The one has music and the flying cloud,
The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Horton, l. 76.

14 Emblem of man, who, after all his moaning
And strain of dire immeasurable strife,
Has yet this consolation, all atoning—
Life, as a windmill, grinds the bread of Life.

LORD DE TABLEY, The Windmill.

15 Through all the changing scenes of life,
In trouble and in joy.

TATE AND BRADY, Psalms xxxiv.

16 Our life contains a thousand springs,
And dies if one be gone.
Strange! that a harp of thousand strings
Should keep in tune so long.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Bk. ii, No. 19.

XIII—Life: A Play

See also World: A Stage

17 Since well I've played my part, all clap your hands
And from the stage dismiss me with applause.
(Ἐπεὶ δὲ πάνυ καλῶς πέπαισται, δότε κρότον καὶ πάντες ἡμᾶς μετὰ χαρᾶς προπέμψατε.)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS, Epigram, as he lay dying.
The Emperor had called in his friends, and asked them whether it seemed to them that he had played the comedy of life fitly (ecquid iis videretur mimum vitæ com-mode transigisse), and then spoke the epigram given above, sent them away, and died shortly afterwards. (SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Augustus. Ch. 99, sec. 1.)

18 The human comedy. (La comédie humaine.) HONORÉ DE BALZAC. The general title of his novels, adopted in 1842.

Sit the comedy out, and that done,
When the Play's at an end, let the Curtain fall down.

THOMAS FLATMAN, The Whim.

19 Remember that you are an actor in a play, the character of which is determined by the Playwright: if He wishes the play to be short, it is short; if long, it is long; if He wishes you to play the part of a beggar, remember to act even this role adroitly. For this is your business: to play admirably the role assigned to you; but the selection of that role is Another's.

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Sec. 17.

1 So likewise all this life of mortal man, what is it but a kind of stage play, where men come forth, disguised one in one array, and another in another, each playing his part?

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly.

For though the most be players, some must be spectators.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

Life is a tragedy wherein we sit as spectators for a while, and then act out our part in it.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2 The endless mime goes on; new faces come,
New mummers babble in each other's ears;
And some wear masks of woe, of laughter some,
Nor know they play Life's Comedy of Tears.

JAMES B. KENYON, The Play.

3 Life has its heroes and its villains, its sou-brettes and its ingenues, and all roles may be acted well.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper.

4 Life is a stage, so learn to play your part,
Laying gravity aside, or learn to bear its griefs.
(Σκηνῇ πᾶς ὁ βίος καὶ παλῖνιον· ἢ μάθε παλῖν, τῇ σπουδῇ μεταβέλς, ἢ φέρε τὰς ὁδύνας.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 72.)

This life a theatre we well may call,
Where every actor must perform with art,
Or laugh it through, and make a farce of all,
Or learn to bear with grace his tragic part.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology, x, 72. Bland, tr.)

If character be fate, no need to ask
Who set the stage, who cast you for the role;
Put on what man you are, put off the mask,
Put on the tragic pattern of your soul. . . .
Let him who plays the monarch be a king,
Who plays the rogue, be perfect in his part.

JOHN ERSKINE, At the Front. Sonnet iv.

5 My soul, sit thou a patient looker-on;
Judge not the play before the play is done:
Her plot hath many changes; every day
Speaks a new scene; the last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respite Finem.

6 Draw the curtain, the farce is played out.
(Tirez le rideau, la farce est jouée.)

RABELAIS, dying words, as he expired in a fit of laughter. (Works. Vol. i, p. 17. Dupont, ed., Paris, 1865.)

7 There is no incidental music to the dramas of real life.

SAX ROHMER, Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu. Ch. 9.

8 It is with life as with a play—it matters not how long the action is spun out, but how good the acting is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvii, 20.

'Tis not the mere stage of life but the part we play thereon that gives the value. (Nicht der Tummelplatz des Lebens—sein Gehalt bestimmt seinen Werth.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act iii, sc. 2.

9 Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 23.

10 Life's a long tragedy; this globe the stage,
Well fix'd and well adorn'd with strong machines,
Gay fields, and skies, and seas; the actors many:
The plot immense.

ISAAC WATTS, Epistle to Mitio. Pt. i, l. 1.

For they are blest that have not much to rue—
That have not oft misheard the prompter's cue,
Stammered and stumbled, and the wrong parts played,

And life a Tragedy of Errors made.

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Friend.

Fate has written a tragedy; its name is "The Human Heart,"

The Theatre is the House of Life, Woman the mummer's part;

The Devil enters the prompter's box and the play is ready to start.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Harpy.

XIV—Life: A Tale

11 Every man's life is a fairy-tale written by God's fingers.

HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN, Works: Preface.

12 Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 109.

13 Life . . . is a tale

Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 26.

14 Life's but a span, or a tale, or a word,
That in a trice, or sudden, is rehearsed.

UNKNOWN, A Friend's Advice. (Roxburghe Ballads, ii.)

XV—Life: A Voyage

15 We mortals cross the ocean of this world
Each in his average cabin of a life;

The best's not big, the worst yields elbow-room.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Most men make the voyage of life as if they carried sealed orders which they were not to open till they were fairly in mid-ocean.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dante.

Life hath set No landmarks before us.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto v, sec. 14.

Life's a voyage that's homeward bound.

HERMAN MELVILLE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 87.)

Life is a perilous voyage. (Πλοῦς σφαλερὸς τὸ ἔνν.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, No. 65.)

Humble voyagers are we,
O'er Life's dim, unsounded sea,
Seeking only some calm clime;—
Touch us gently, gentle Time.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Middle Age.

O'er Ocean, with a thousand masts, sails forth
the stripling bold—

One boat, hard rescued from the deep, draws into port the old!

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: Expectation and Fulfilment.

Life's uncertain voyage.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 205.

Life is a voyage. The winds of life come strong
From every point; yet each will speed thy course along;

If thou with steady hand when tempests blow Canst keep thy course aright and never once let go.

THEODORE WILLIAMS, The Voyage of Life.

Old and young we are all on our last cruise.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

XVI—Life: The Conduct of Life

Whilst I yet live, let me not live in vain.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

One must have lived greatly whose record would bear the full light of day from beginning to its close.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning.

From fields of sense, and mines of thought,
Threads of life are twisted and wrought:
We are weaving Character, weaving Fate,
And Human History, little and great.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

Let us be patient, tender, wise, forgiving,
In this strange task of living;

For if we fail each other, each will be
Grey driftwood lapsing to the bitter sea.

MARTIN ARMSTRONG, Body and Spirit.

For like a child, sent with a fluttering light
To feel his way along a gusty night,
Man walks the world. Again, and yet again,
The lamp shall be by fits of passion slain;
But shall not He who sent him from the door
Relight the lamp once more, and yet once more?

ATTAR, Mantik-ut-Tair. (Fitzgerald, tr.) See
Letters and Literary Remains of Edward Fitzgerald. Vol. ii, p. 457.

I live for those who love me, for those who know me true;

For the heaven that smiles above me, and awaits my spirit too;

For the cause that lacks assistance, for the wrong that needs resistance,

For the future in the distance, and the good that I can do.

G. LINNÆUS BANKS, My Aim.

Only a life lived for others is a life worth while.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, defining success. (Youth,
June, 1932)

Man always knows his life will shortly cease,
Yet madly lives as if he knew it not.

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocrisy.

For yet I lived like one not born to die;
A thriftless prodigal of smiles and tears,

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Long Time a Child.

Men deal with life as children with their play,
Who first misuse, then cast their toys away.

COWPER, Hope, l. 127.

God asks no man whether he will accept life.
That is not the choice. You must take it. The only choice is how.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

HORATIUS BONAR, Be True.

Do what thy manhood bids thee do, from none
but self expect applause;

He noblest lives and noblest dies who makes and keeps his self-made laws.

All other life is living Death, a world where none but Phantoms dwell,

A breath, a wind, a sound, a voice, a tinkling of the camel-bell.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii,
sts. 37-8.

To seek the True, to glad the heart, such is of life the Higher Law.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st.
28.

All is concentrated in a life intense,
Where not a beam, nor air, nor leaf is lost,
But hath a part of being.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 89.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasion, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common: this is to be my symphony.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, My Symphony.

1 Nature has granted the use of life like a loan, without fixing any day for repayment. (Natura . . . dedit usuram vitæ tamquam pecuniæ nulla præstituta die.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 93.

Life is given to all, not to be disposed of, but to be used. (Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, omnibus usu.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 971.

Man has been lent, not given, to life. (Homo vitæ commodatus, non donatus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 249.

2 For the conduct of life, we need right reason or a halter.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, 24.)

3 Children of life are we, as we stand With our lives uncarved before us.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, Life-Sculpture.

To each is given a bag of tools,
A shapeless mass and a book of rules,
And each must make, ere life is flown,
A stumbling-block or a stepping-stone.

R. L. SHARPE, Stumbling-Block or Stepping-Stone.

4 Trust flattering life no more, redeem time past,
And live each day as if it were thy last.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Death's Last Will.

To execute great things, one should live as though one would never die. (Pour exécuter de grandes choses, il faut vivre comme si on ne devait jamais mourir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 142.

Study as if you were to live forever. Live as if you were to die tomorrow.

ISIDORE OF SEVILLE.

5 Aimless we drift, we live but more or less. (Incerte errat animus, præterpropter vitam vivitur.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia. (Aulus Gellius, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12.)
Aulus Gellius is recording a discussion of the meaning of præterpropter, more or less.

Life without a plan,
As useless as the moment it began,
Serves merely as a soil for discontent
To thrive in.

COWPER, Hope, l. 95.

6 Choose the best life, habit will make it pleasant.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 144.

7 Though we sometimes speak of a primrose path, we all know that a bad life is just as difficult, just as full of obstacles and hardships, as a good one. . . . The only choice is in the kind of life one would care to spend one's efforts on.

JOHN ERSKINE. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 41.)

8 A noble life, crowned with heroic death, rises above and outlives the pride and pomp and glory of the mightiest empire of the earth.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Speech, House of Representatives, 9 Dec., 1858.

9 He lives who lives to virtue; men who cast Their ends for pleasure, do not live, but last.

ROBERT HERRICK, On Himself.

10 In the morning of life, work, in the midday give counsel, in the evening pray. ("Ἔργα νέων, βουλαὶ δὲ μέσων, εὐχαὶ δὲ γερόντων.")

HESIOD, Harpocration. Frag. 19.

In seed time learn, in harvest teach, in winter enjoy.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

11 Do you wish to live well? Who does not? (Vis recte vivere: quis non?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 29.

If live you cannot as befits a man,
Make room, at least you may, for those who can.
(Vivere si rectis nescis, decede peritis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 213. (Conington, tr.)

Learn to live well, or fairly make your will;
You've play'd, and lov'd, and ate and drank,
your fill.

Walk sober off, before a sprightlier age
Comes titt'ring on, and shoves you from the stage.

POPE, Imitations of Horace Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 322.

12 The rules for a happy life. (Vitæ præcepta beatæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 95.

Amid hopes and cares, amid fears and passions, believe every day that dawns to be your last.
Welcome will come to you another hour un-hoped for. (Inter spem curamque, timores inter et iras, Omnem crede diem tibi diluxisse supremum. Grata superveniet, quæ non sperabitur hora.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 12.

13 You'll see that, since our fate is ruled by chance,

Each man, unknowing, great,
Should frame life so that at some future hour
Fact and his dreamings meet.

VICTOR HUGO, To His Orphan Grandchildren.

14 Life must be filled up, and the man who is not capable of intellectual pleasures must content himself with such as his senses can afford.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Mrs. Piozzi, Johnsoniana.)

That kind of life is most happy which affords us the most opportunities of gaining our own esteem.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 114.

1 What a deal of cold business doth a man mispend the better part of life in! in scattering compliments, tendering visits, gathering and venting news, following feasts and plays, making a little winter-love in a dark corner.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Jactura Vitæ.

2 A sacred burden is this life ye bear:
Look on it, lift it, bear it solemnly,
Stand up and walk beneath it steadfastly.
Fail not for sorrow, falter not for sin,
But onward, upward, till the goal ye win.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Lines Addressed to the Young Gentlemen Leaving the Lenox Academy, Mass.

3 Who laughs in motley to the crowded court,
And makes for idle days an idle sport,
May teach us yet, in life's impartial school,
'Tis we wear asses' ears and play the fool.

JAMES B. KENYON, The Harlequin.

4 Measure thy life by loss instead of gain;
Not by the wine drunk, but by the wine poured forth;
For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice;
And whoso suffers most hath most to give.

HARRIET ELEANOR KING, The Disciples.

5 Life's all getting and giving,
I've only myself to give.
What shall I do for a living?
I've only one life to live.
End it? I'll not find another.
Spend it? But how shall I best?
Sure the wise plan is to live like a man
And Luck may look after the rest!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps.

6 Children of yesterday, heirs of tomorrow,
What are you weaving? Labor and sorrow?
Look to your looms again. Faster and faster
Fly the great shuttles prepared by the Master.
Life's in the loom! Room for it, room!

MARY A. LATHBURY, Song of Hope.

The years of men are the looms of God, let down from the place of the sun
Wherein we are weaving alway, till the mystic web is done—

Weaving blindly, but weaving surely, each for himself his fate.

We may not see how the right side looks: we can only weave and wait.

ANTON G. CHESTER, The Tapestry Weavers.

7 And in the wreck of noble lives
Something immortal still survives.

LONGFELLOW, Building of the Ship, l. 375.

What else remains for me?

Youth, hope and love;

To build a new life on a ruined life.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora: In the Garden. Pt. viii.

Thus at the flaming forge of life

Our fortunes must be wrought;

Thus on its sounding anvil shaped

Each burning deed and thought.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith. St. 8.

8

The freer step, the fuller breath,

The wide horizon's grander view,

The sense of life that knows no death—

The life that maketh all things new.

SAMUEL LONGFELLOW, The Horizon's View.

9

Life may be given in many ways,

And loyalty to Truth be sealed

As bravely in the closet as the field,

So bountiful is fate.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

We spend our lives in learning pilotage,

And grow good steersmen when the vessel's crank!

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Wisdom of Eld.

12

To measure life, learn thou betimes, and
know,

Toward solid good what leads the nearest
way;

For other things mild Heav'n a time ordains,

And disapproves that care, though wise in show,

That with superfluous burden loads the day,

And when God sends a cheerful hour, refrains.

MILTON, Sonnets: To Cyriac Skinner.

My business and my art is to live. (Mon métier et mon art, c'est vivre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

Life and good living—what do we want beside?
(Le vivre et le couvert, que faut-il davantage?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables.

Living is an art; and, to practise it well, men need, not only acquired skill, but also a native tact and taste.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Texts and Pretexts, p. 129.

The finest art, the most difficult to learn, is the art of living.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 122.

The art of life is to be so well known at a good restaurant that you can pay with a cheque.

E. V. LUCAS, Over Bemerton's.

1 It is "to live happily" and not, as Antisthenes declares, "to die happily," which makes human felicity. (C'est "le vivre heureusement," non, comme disoit Antisthenes, "le mourir heureusement," qui fait l'humaine félicité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

2 How mean we seem when we look back into our lives!

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 81.

3 To live as fully, as completely as possible, to be happy, and again to be happy is the true aim and end of life. "Ripeness is all."

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 94.

It is better to live recklessly and dangerously and even disastrously than not to live at all.

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 95.

Make no doubt of it, to have had an unhappy life is to have failed in life. It is the one consummate error, and around the death-bed of such a one the very angels weep.

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 98.

The essential thing is that in this brief interval between darkness and darkness, we should be thrillingly and passionately amused.

JOHN COWPER POWYS.

4 Since the span of life which we enjoy is short, let us make the memory of our lives as long as possible. (Quoniam vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est, memoriam nostri quam maxime longam efficere.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 1.

That man alone lives and makes the most of life who devotes himself to some occupation, courting the fame of a glorious deed or a noble career.

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

5 Nothing can be meaner than the anxiety to live on, to live on anyhow and in any shape; a spirit with any honour is not willing to live except in its own way, and a spirit with any wisdom is not over-eager to live at all.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 164.

6 The largest portion of life passes while we are doing ill, a goodly share while we are doing nothing, and the whole while we are doing that which is not to the purpose.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 1.

We break up life into little bits and fritter it away. (Diducimus illam in particulas ac lancinamus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxii, 2.

7 O gentlemen, the time of life is short! To spend that shortness basely were too long, If life did ride upon a dial's point,

Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
And if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 82.

Life is too short to waste

In critic peep or cynic bark,

Quarrel or reprimand;

'Twill soon be dark;

Up! mind thine own aim and

God save the mark!

EMERSON, To J. W.

Life is too short for mean anxieties.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 9.

8 Reason thus with life:
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing

That none but fools would keep.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 6.

9 To suffer woes which Hope thinks infinite;
To forgive wrongs darker than death or night;
To defy Power, which seems omnipotent;
To love, and bear, to hope till Hope creates
From its own wreck the thing it contemplates;
Neither to change, nor falter, nor repent;
This, this thy glory, Titan, is to be Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free;
This is alone Life, Joy, Empire, Victory!

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iv, l. 570.

10 There are two things to aim at in life: first, to get what you want; and, after that, to enjoy it. Only the wisest of mankind achieve the second.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

11 To be honest, to be kind—to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not be embittered, to keep a few friends but these without capitulation—above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

To love playthings well as a child, to lead an adventurous and honourable youth, and to settle, when the time arrives, into a green and smiling age, is to be a good artist in life and deserve well of yourself and your neighbour.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

12 Not what we would but what we must Makes up the sum of living;

Heaven is both more and less than just
In taking and in giving.

R. H. STODDARD, The Country Life.

The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to like that which one has to do.

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK.

Let us live then while it goes well with us. (Ergo vivamus, dum licet esse bene.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 34.

The whole life of man is but a point of time;
let us enjoy it, therefore, while it lasts, and not spend it to no purpose.

PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.

12
Flavia's a wit, has too much sense to pray;
To toast our wants and wishes is her way;
Nor asks of God, but of her stars, to give
The mighty blessing "while we live to live."

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 87.

With too much quickness ever to be taught;
With too much thinking to have common
thought:

You purchase pain with all that joy can give,
And die of nothing but a rage to live.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 97.

13
We, we live! ours are the hours,
And the living have their claims.
(Wir, wir leben! Unser sind die Stunden Und der Lebende hat Recht.)

SCHILLER, An die Freude. St. 1.

14
As long as you live, keep learning how to live.
(Quemadmodum vivas, quamdiu vivas.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 3. Quoted as a proverb.

Even in the longest life real living is the least portion thereof. (Etiam in longissima vita minimum esse, quod vivitur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, 12.

Let us balance life's account every day. (Cotidie cum vita paria faciamus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 8.

Begin at once to live, and count each separate day as a separate life. (Ideo propera vivere et singulos dies singulas vitas puta.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 10.

1 Gonzalo: Here is everything advantageous to life.

Antonio: True; save means to live.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 49.

2 May you live all the days of your life.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

3 A short life and a merry life, I cry.
JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act i. (1660)

4 I cannot rest from travel: I will drink Life to the lees.
TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 6.

5 We live not in our moments or our years:
The present we fling from us like the rind
Of some sweet future, which we after find Bitter to taste.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, To —.

6 Enjoy your own lot. (Utere sorte tua.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 932.
Somehow the grace, the bloom of things has flown,

And of all men we are most wretched, who Must live each other's lives and not our own.
OSCAR WILDE, Humanity. St. 68.

7 Set forth the wine and the dice, and perish who thinks of tomorrow!
Here's Death twitching my ear, "Live," says
he, "for I'm coming!"
(Pone merum et talos. Pereat, qui crastina curat!)

Mors aurem vellens, "vivite," ait, "venio."
VERGIL, Copa, l. 37. (Helen Waddell, tr.)
Quoted by Justice O. W. Holmes in radio address on his 90th birthday, 8 March, 1931.

8 Since the bounty of Providence is new every day,
As we journey through life let us live by the
way.

WALTER WATSON, Sit Down, My Crony.

9 Let us live, then, and be glad,
While young life's before us;
After youthful pastime had,
After old age, hard and sad,
Earth will slumber o'er us.
(*Gaudeamus igitur dum juvenes sumus;
Post jucundam juventutem,
Post molestam senectutem,
Nos habebit humus.*)

UNKNOWN, Gaudeamus Igitur. (Symonds, tr.)

10 While we live, let us live. (Dum vivimus, vivamus.)

UNKNOWN. The earliest known appearance of this familiar Latin phrase is in Inscriptiones Grutuli, a medieval collection of proverbs.

Live while you live, the epicure would say,
And seize the pleasures of the present day;

Live while you live, the sacred preacher cries,
And give to God each moment as it flies.
Lord, in my view let both united be;
I live in pleasure when I live to Thee.

DR. PHILIP DODDRIDGE, Epigram on His Family Arms. The motto attached to the arms was "Dum Vivimus, Vivamus."

Others mistrust and say, "But time escapes:
Live now or never!"

He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!

Man has Forever."

ROBERT BROWNING, A Grammarian's Funeral.

11 The pleasures of youth are flowers but of
May;

Our Life's but a Vapour, our body's but clay.
Oh, let me live well though I live but one day.

UNKNOWN, The Old Woman's Wishes.
(D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy. 1661.)

XVIII—Life: I Have Lived!

12 I die,—but first I have possess'd,
And come what may, I have been bless'd.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1114.

13 However, as far as I am concerned, I have lived my time. (Sed mihi quidem βεβιωται.)
CICERO, Epistulae ad Atticum. Epis. xiv, sec. 21.

To-morrow let my sun his beams display,
Or in clouds hide them: I have lived to-day.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Vote.

14 Fill my hour, ye gods, so that I may not say, whilst I have done this, "Behold, also, an hour of my life is gone,"—but rather, "I have lived an hour."

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

15 We are the masters of the days that were:
We have lived, we have loved, we have suffered . . . even so.
W. E. HENLEY, What Is to Come.

16 That man lives happy and in command of himself, who from day to day can say, "I have lived!" (Ille potens sui Lætusque deget, cui licet in diem Dixisse Vixi!)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 41.

Happy the man, and happy he alone,
He, who can call to-day his own:
He who, secure within, can say:
"To-morrow do thy worst, for I have liv'd today."

HORACE, Odes, iii, 29. (Dryden, tr., l. 65.)

Not Heav'n itself upon the past has pow'r;
But what has been, has been, and I have had my hour.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 29. (Dryden, tr., l. 71.)

17 I have fought my fight, I have lived my life,
I have drunk my share of wine;
From Trier to Coln there was never a knight

Led a merrier life than mine.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Knight's Leap. A similar inscription appears under the painting by Frans Hals called "The Laughing Cavalier."

1
I have lived; nor shall maligner fortune ever
Take from me what an earlier hour once gave.
(Pervixi: neque enim fortuna malignior unquam Erepiet nobis quod prior hora dedit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 84.

2
I have enjoyed earthly happiness,
I have lived and loved.
(Ich habe genossen das irdische Glück,
Ich habe gelebt und geliebet.)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 9.

I have lived and I have loved;
I have waked and I have slept;
I have sung and I have danced;
I have smiled and I have wept.

CHARLES MACKAY, Vixi.

3
When a man has said, "I have lived," every morning he arises he receives a bonus. (Quisquis dixit "vixi" cotidie ad lucrum surgit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xii, sec. 9.

4
What expiating agony
May for him, damned to poesy,
Shut in that little sentence be—
What deep austerities of strife—
He "lived his life." "He lived his life."

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Judgement in Heaven: Epilogue.

5
I have lived; I have run the course Fortune
allotted me;
Now my shade shall descend illustrious to the grave.
(Vixi, et quem dederat cursum Fortuna, peregi:

Et nunc magna mei sub terras currit imago.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 653.

XIX—Life: Living Life Over

6
Yet for my own part I would not live over my hours past, or begin again the thread of my days, not upon Cicero's ground, because I have lived them well, but for fear I should live them worse.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 49.

Few men would be content to cradle it once again; except a man can lead his second life better than the first, a man may be doubly condemned for living evilly twice.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 13.

7
If I were to live my life over again, I would do all that I have done. (Si je recommençais ma carrière, je ferais tout ce que j'ai fait.)

FONTANELLE, Dialogues des Morts.

Were I to live my life over again, I should live it just as I have done. I neither complain of the past, nor fear the future.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

Vain was the man, and false as vain,
Who said, were he ordained to run
His long career of life again

He would do all that he had done.

THOMAS MOORE, My Birthday.

8
I should have no objection to a repetition of the same life from its beginning, only asking the advantages authors have in a second edition to correct some faults of the first.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.
See also under FRANKLIN.

9
I would live the same life over if I had to live again.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Sick Stockrider.

10
Who that hath ever been

Could bear to be no more?

Yet who would tread again the scene

He trod through life before?

MONTGOMERY, The Falling Leaf. St. 7.

XX—Life: Quality, Not Quantity

11
It matters not how long we live, but how.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

12
A short space of life is long enough for living well and honorably. (Breve tempus ætatis satis longum est ad bene honesteque vivendum.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 70.

Who well lives, long lives; for this age of ours Should not be numbered by years, days, and hours.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

13
The life given us by nature is short; but the memory of a well-spent life is eternal. (Brevis a natura nobis vita data est; at memoria bene reditæ vitæ sempiterna.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xiv, sec. 12.

No one has lived too short a life who has performed its duties with unblemished character.
(Nemo parum diu vixit, qui virtutis perfectæ perfecto functus est munere.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 45, sec. 109.

14
Life is not measured by the time we live.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. ii.

Life is not dated merely by years. Events are sometimes the best calendars.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Venetia. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

15
So that my life be brave, what though not long?

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets. No. xii.

I have lived enough, for I die unconquered.
(Satis vixi, invictus enim morior.)

EPAMINONDAS. (CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Epaminondas.)

1 It is the depth at which we live and not at all the surface extension that imports.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

2 To live long is almost everyone's wish, but to live well is the ambition of a few.

JOHN HUGHES, The Lay Monk. No. 18.

3 It is not a great thing to have been to Jerusalem, but to have lived well is a great thing. (Non magnum est Hierosolymis fuisse, sed bene vixisse magnum est.)

St. JEROME. (ERASMUS, De Colloquiorum Utilitate.)

4 Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou livest

Live well; how long or short permit to heaven.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 549.

5 I have lived to a riper age than years can show. 'Tis deeds make old: these must thou number: with these was my life fulfilled, not with idle years.

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 448.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;

In feelings, not in figures on a dial.

We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives

Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

He, who grown aged in this world of woe,
In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life,
So that no wonder waits him.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 5.

A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line,—by deeds, not years.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Think'st thou existence doth depend on time?
It doth; but actions are our epochs.

BYRON, Manfred. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 54.

6 It is no happiness to live long, nor unhappiness to die soon; happy is he that hath lived long enough to die well.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. ii, No. 84.

7 The measure of a man's life is the well-spending of it, and not the length.

PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium.

8 No parent would wish for his children that they might live forever, but rather that their lives might be noble and honored. (Neque quisquam parens liberis uti æterni forent optavit, magis uti boni honestique vitam exigerent.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 50.

9 Life, if thou knowest how to use it, is long enough. (Vita, si scias uti, longa est.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. ii.

10 Mere living is not a good, but living well. (Non enim vivere bonum est, sed bene vivere.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 4.

We should strive, not to live long, but to live rightly. (Non ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed ut satis.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 2.

The point is, not how long you live, but how nobly you live. (Quam bene vivas refert, non quam diu.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 15.

He liveth long who liveth well!

All other life is short and vain;

He liveth longest who can tell

Of living most for heavenly gain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well.

Wish not so much to live long as to live well.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

They only have lived long who have lived virtuously.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Desire not to live long, but to live well;

How long we live not years, but actions, tell.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma sine Fumo: The Hour Glass.

For they lived long enough, that have lived well enough.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, 83. (1560)

11 The wise man will live as long as he ought, not as long as he can. . . . He always reflects concerning the quality, and not the quantity, of his life. (Itaque sapiens vivit, quantum debet, non quantum potest. . . . Cogitat semper, qualis vita, non quanta sit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 4.

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The good man should not live as long as it pleases him, but as long as he ought. (Cum bono viro vivendum sit non quamdiu juvat sed quamdiu oportet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, 3.

It is with life as with a play: what matters is not how long it is, but how good it is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita: non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvii, 20.

Life is long if it is full. (Longa est vita, si plena est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 2.

Let us see to it that our lives, like jewels of great price, be noteworthy not because of their width, but because of their weight.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 4.

Just as one of small stature can be a perfect man, so a life of small compass can be a perfect life.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 7. Circles are praised, not that abound in largeness, but the exactly round: So life we praise that does excel Not in much time, but acting well.

EDMUND WALLER, Long and Short Life.

1 The measure of a happy life is not from the fewer or more suns we behold, the fewer or more breaths we draw, or meals we repeat, but from the having once lived well, acted our part handsomely, and made our exit cheerfully.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, p. 316.

2 The life of a man of virtue and talent, who should die in his thirtieth year, is, with regard to his own feelings, longer than that of a miserable priest-ridden slave who dreams out a century of goodness.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

Perhaps the perishing ephemeron enjoys a longer life than the tortoise.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

3 That life is long, which answers life's great end.

The time that bears no fruit, deserves no name;

The man of wisdom is the man of years.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 773.

XXI—Life: The Simple Life: Its Virtues

See also Simplicity

4 Remote from busy life's bewildered way.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. 2, l. 91.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;

Along the cool, sequester'd vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 73. (1751) Last line often misquoted "even tenor." "Far From the Madding Crowd" used by Thomas Hardy as the title of a novel.

Through the sequester'd vale of rural life

The venerable patriarch guileless held

The tenor of his way.

BELBY PORTEUS, Death, l. 109. (c. 1775)

5 The supreme Good they believed to be the thing which . . . they expressed by the formula, "Life according to nature." (Secundum naturam vivere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk: iv, ch. 10, sec. 26.

CICERO is speaking of the Stoics.

I sought the simple life that Nature yields.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. i.

A child has beaten me in simplicity of living. (Παιδίον με νενίκηκεν εὐτελείᾳ.)

DIOGENES, throwing away his only utensil, a shell from which to drink, when he saw a boy drinking from his hands. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 37.)

6 If you live according to nature, you will never be poor; if according to the world's opinion, you will never be rich. (Si ad naturam vives, numquam eris pauper; si ad opiniones, numquam eris dives.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 201. (SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xvi, sec. 7.)

7 We have learned the lesson of Time, and we know three things of worth;

Only to sow and sing and reap in the land of our birth.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Cry of the Little Peoples.

8 Anything for a quiet life!

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Title of play. (1662)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

Anythin' for a quiet life, as the man said wen he took the sitation at the lighthouse.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 37.

9 Taught to live The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts To interrupt the sweet of life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 182.

His life

Private, unactive, calm, contemplative.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 80.

His life is neither tossed in boisterous seas

Of troublous world, nor lost in slothful ease.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Happiness of the Shepherd's Life.

10 Among good things, I prove and find The quiet life doth most abound.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

What sweet delight a quiet life affords.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnet.

11 The happy life, which flows along with steady course, completely under the soul's control. (Beata vita, secundo defluens cursu, arbitrii sui tota.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, 11.

12 A loving little life of sweet small works.

SWINBURNE, Bothwell. Act i, sc. 1.

13 So passed their life, a clear united stream, By care unruffled.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1189.

So his life has flowed From its mysterious urn a sacred stream, In whose calm depth the beautiful and pure Alone are mirrored.

THOMAS N. TALFOURD, Ion. Act i, sc. 1, l. 138.

A life that leads melodious days.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. xxxiii, st. 2.

Whose life was like the violet sweet,

As climbing jasmine pure.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

1

An elegant sufficiency, content,
Retirement, rural quiet, friendship, books,
Ease and alternate labour, useful life,
Progressive virtue, and approving Heaven!

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1161.

2

I love a life whose plot is simple,
And does not thicken with every pimple.

H. D. THOREAU, Conscience.

My life is like a stroll upon the beach,
As near the ocean's edge as I can go.

H. D. THOREAU, The Fisher's Boy.

3

What is the simple life? . . . It is a form of life described by pastoral poets, or the
New Testament, but not livable today.

CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch. 7.

Humanity lives and always has lived on certain elemental provisions.

CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch. 3.

4

For all her quiet life flowed on
As meadow streamlets flow,
Where fresher green reveals alone
The noiseless ways they go.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Friend's Burial. St. 9.

So didst thou travel on life's common way
In cheerful godliness.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. i, No. 14.

5

Plain living and high thinking are no more:
The homely beauty of the good old cause
Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence,
And pure religion breathing household laws.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. i, No. 13.

A conspicuous example of plain living and high thinking.

THOMAS HAWES, Evenings for the People: George Herbert.

I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 2, l. 3.

6

Who God doth late and early pray
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day
With a religious book or friend.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, The Character of a Happy Life.

Oh, for the simple life,
For tents and starry skies!

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Aspiration.

XXII—Life: The Simple Life: Its Faults

8

They do not live but linger.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 10.

A quiet life, which was not life at all.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 289.

To live a life half dead, a living death.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 100.

A life both dull and dignified.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 1.

9

Born with a monocle he stares at life,
And sends his soul on pensive promenades.

DONALD EVANS, En Monocle.

10

Was it for this I uttered prayers,
And sobbed and cursed and kicked the stairs,
That now, domestic as a plate,
I should retire at half-past eight?

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Grown-Up.

11

For to live at ease is not to live.

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 226. (Dryden, tr.)

12

Fix'd like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 63.

See dying vegetables life sustain,
See life dissolving vegetate again.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 15.

One really lives nowhere; one does but vegetate and wish it all at an end.

FANNY BURNEY, Cecilia. Bk. iv, ch. 7.

13

Degenerate sons and daughters,
Life is too strong for you—
It takes life to love Life.

EDGAR LEE MASTERS, Lucinda Matlock.

XXIII—Life: A Little Work, A Little Play

14

We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest and rest can never find;

Lo! as the wind is so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. iii, l. 23.

15

I've played a little, And I've worked a lot,
I've loved and I've hated, As who would not?
I've had some fun And I've had some sorrow,
I've had to steal And I've had to borrow,
I've sinned a little, But all in all
I've hardly tasted Life at all.
But Death just smiled as he beckoned ahead—
"That was life," He gently said.

MILT BRONSTON, Merry-Go-'Round.

16

A little sun, a little rain,
A soft wind blowing from the west,
And woods and fields are sweet again,
And warmth within the mountain's breast.

A little love, a little trust,
A soft impulse, a sudden dream,
And life as dry as desert dust,
Is fresher than a mountain stream.
STOPFORD A. BROOKE, Earth and Man.

1
The king commands us, and the doctor quacks
us,

The priest instructs, and so our life exhales,
A little breath, love, wine, ambition, fame,
Fighting, devotion, dust—perhaps a name.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 4.

2
We come, we cry, and that is life;
We yawn, we go, and that is death.
(On entre, on crie, et c'est la vie!
On bâille, on sort, et c'est la mort!)

AUSONE DE CHANCEL, Lines in an Album.
(1836)

We are born, then cry,
We know not for why,
And all our lives long
Still but the same song.

NATHANIEL CROUCH, attr., Life. (Appeared originally in Bristol Drollery, 1674.)

3
That he was born, it cannot be denied,
He ate, drank, slept, talked politics, and died.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, On an Alderman.

4
They are not long, the weeping and the
laughter,

Love and desire and hate:

I think they have no portion in us after
We pass the gate.

ERNEST DOWSON, Vitæ Summa Brevis.

They are not long, the days of wine and roses:
Out of a misty dream
Our path emerges for a while, then closes
Within a dream.

ERNEST DOWSON, Vitæ Summa Brevis.

5
A little rule, a little sway,
A sunbeam in a winter's day,
Is all the proud and mighty have
Between the cradle and the grave.

JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 89.

6
He lives not who can refuse me;
All my force saith, Come and use me:
A gleam of sun, a summer rain,
And all the zone is green again.

EMERSON, Fragments: Nature. Frag. 28.

A train of gay and clouded days
Dappled with joy and grief and praise,
Beauty to fire us, saints to save,
Escort us to a little grave.

EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 1.

7
A little season of love and laughter,
Of light and life, and pleasure and pain,
And a horror of outer darkness after,
And the dust returneth to dust again.
Then the lesser life shall be as the greater,
And the lover of life shall join the hater,
And the one thing cometh, sooner or later,
And no one knoweth the loss or gain.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Swimmer. St. 10.

8
Life has given me of its best—
Laughter and weeping, labour and rest,
Little of gold, but lots of fun;
Shall I then sigh that all is done?
No, not I; while the new road lies
All untrodden, before my eyes.

NORAH M. HOLLAND, Life.

9
None knoweth a better thing than this:
The Sword, Love, Song, Honour, Sleep.
None knoweth a surer thing than this:
Birth, Sorrow, Pain, Weariness, Death.

WILLIAM SHARP, The Chant of Ardan the Pict.

10
A little while the tears and laughter,
The willow and the rose;
A little while, and what comes after
No man knows.

An hour to sing, to love and linger,
Then lutanist and lute
Will fall on silence, song and singer
Both be mute.

DON MARQUIS, A Little While.

11
A little time for laughter,
A little time to sing,
A little time to kiss and cling,
And no more kissing after.

PHILIP BOURKE MARSTON, After.

12
A little work, a little sweating, a few brief, flying years; a little joy, a little fretting, some smiles and then some tears; a little resting in the shadow, a struggle to the height, a futile search for El Dorado, and then we say Good Night.

WALT MASON, The Journey.

13
Life is vain; a little love, a little hate, and then—Good-day! Life is short; a little hoping, a little dreaming, and then—Good-night!
Life is whatever God wills it; and, such as it is, it's enough!

(La vie est vaine: Un peu d'amour,
Un peu de haine . . . Et puis—bon jour!
La vie est brève: Un peu d'espoir,
Un peu de rêve . . . Et puis—bon soir!
La vie est telle Que dieu la fit;
Et, telle qu'elle, Elle suffit!)

LÉON VON MONTENÆKEN, Peu de Chose et Presque Trop.

Life is but jest: a dream, a doom,
A gleam, a gloom—and then, good rest!
Life is but play; a throb, a tear,
A sob, a sneer—and then, good day.

LÉON VON MONTENÆKEN, Nothing and Too Much. His English version of Peu de Chose.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so, good-day!
A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so, good-night!

A little fun, to match the sorrow
Of each day's gowing—and so, good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so, good-bye!

GEORGE DU MAURIER. Paraphrase of Peu de Chose by Montenaken, used as conclusion for Trilby. The last two lines are inscribed on the Du Maurier memorial tablet, in Hampstead churchyard.

Enough! or Too much.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

1

A little pain, a little pleasure,
A little heaping up of treasure;
Then no more gazing upon the sun.
All things must end that have begun.

JOHN PAYNE, Kyrielle.

2

A sudden wakin', a sudden weepin',
A li'l suckin', a li'l sleepin';
A cheel's full joys an' a cheel's short sorrows,
Wi' a power o' faith in gert tomorrows.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Man's Days.

3

One wakes, rises, dresses, goes out;
One comes home, dines, sups, goes to bed,
sleeps.
(On s'éveille, on se lève, on s'habille, et on sort;
On rentre, on dine, on soupe, on se couche,
on dort.)

DE PIIS, C'Est la Vie!

To get the whole world out of bed
And washed, and dressed, and warmed, and fed,
To work, and back to bed again,
Believe me, Saul, costs worlds of pain.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.

4

Man has here two and a half minutes—one to smile, one to sigh, and a half to love: for in the midst of this minute he dies. (Der Mensch hat hier dritthalb Minuten, eine zu lächeln—eine zu seufzen—und eine halbe zu lieben: denn mitten in dieser Minute stirbt er.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 4.

5

Say, what is life? 'Tis to be born,
A helpless Babe, to greet the light
With a sharp wail, as if the morn
Foretold a cloudy noon and night;
To weep, to sleep, and weep again,
With sunny smiles between; and then?

J. G. SAXE, The Story of Life.

6

A little gain, a little pain,
A laugh, lest you may moan;
A little blame, a little fame,
A star-gleam on a stone.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, Just Think.

7

Forenoon and afternoon and night—Forenoon

And afternoon and night—forenoon, and what!

The empty song repeats itself. No more?
Yea, that is life: Make this forenoon sublime,
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered and thy crown is won.

E. R. SELL, Life.

A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

A little sorrow, a little pleasure,
Fate metes us from the dusty measure
That holds the date of all of us;
We are born with travail and strong crying,
And from the birth-day to the dying
The likeness of our life is thus.

SWINBURNE, Ilicet. St. 18.

9

What is this passing scene?

A peevish April day!

A little sun—a little rain,
And then night sweeps along the plain,
And all things fade away.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, On Disappointment.

10

This is the height of our deserts:

A little pity for life's hurts;
A little rain, a little sun,
A little sleep when work is done.

UNKNOWN, Deservings.

XXIV—Life: Whence and Whither

11

I was born some time ago, but I know not
why:

I have lived—I hardly know either how or where:

Some time or another, I suppose, I shall die;
But where, how, or when, I neither know nor care!

GEORGE ARNOLD, An Autobiography.

12

What endless questions vex the thought, of Whence and Whither, When and How.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 3.

Between two worlds, life hovers like a star
'Twixt night and morn, upon the horizon's verge.

How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 99.

13

Seek not the wherefore, race of human kind.
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 35.

14

You hail from Dream-land, Dragon-fly?
A stranger hither? So am I,
And (sooth to say) I wonder why

We either of us came!

AGNES M. F. R. DARMESTER, To a Dragon-fly.

15

A man's ingress into the world is naked and bare,

His progress through the world is trouble and care;

And lastly, his egress out of the world, is nobody knows where.

If we do well here, we shall do well there; I can tell you no more if I preach a whole year.

JOHN EDWIN, The Eccentricities of John Edwin. Vol. i, p. 74.

Our ingress into the world

Was naked and bare;

Our progress through the world

Is trouble and care;

Our egress from the world

Will be nobody knows where:

But if we do well here,

We shall do well there.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. ii, The Cobbler of Hagenau. Quoted as "a familiar tune."

1 Not whence, but why and whither are the vital questions.

A. W. GREELY, Reminiscences, p. 338.

2 I think, oftentimes, that lives of men may be Likened to wandering winds that come and go

Not knowing whence they rise, whither they blow

O'er the vast globe, voiceful of grief or glee.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, A Comparison.

Our life is but a dark and stormy night,
To which sense yields a weak and glimmering light,

While wandering man thinks he discerneth all
By that which makes him but mistake, and fall.

EDWARD HERBERT, To His Mistress, For Her Picture.

3 Every cradle asks us "Whence?" and every coffin "Whither?"

R. G. INGERSOLL, Oration at a Child's Grave.

4 For men to tell how human life began
Is hard; for who himself beginning knew?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 250.

5 Life have we loved, through green leaf and through sere,
Though still the less we knew of its intent.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: L'Envoi.

6 Into this Universe, and Why not knowing
Nor Whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing;

And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
I know not Whither, willy-nilly blowing.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 29. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

7 Like following life thro' creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 29.

8 Our past is clean forgot,
Our present is and is not,
Our future's a sealed seedplot,
And what betwixt them are we?

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Cloud Confines. St. 5.

9 If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,

We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

MARY LOUISE SMITH, Sometime.

10 What use to brood? This life of mingled pains

And joys to me

Despite of every Faith and Creed, remains
The Mystery.

TENNYSON, To Mary Boyle.

11 Never had anyone so correct an estimate of life but that circumstances, time and experience ever bring him something new and ever instruct him. (Numquam ita quisquam bene subducta ratione ad vitam fuit, Quin res, ætas usus semper aliquid apportet novi, Aliquid moneat.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 855. (Act v, sc. 4.)

12 Life is arched with changing skies:

Rarely are they what they seem:

Children we of smiles and sighs—

Much we know, but more we dream.

WILLIAM WINTER, Light and Shadow.

13 Here are we, in a bright and breathing world:
Our origin, what matters it?

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 237.

XXV—Life: Its Shortness and Uncertainty

14 Why should there be such turmoil and such strife,

To spin in length this feeble line of life?

FRANCIS BACON, Translation of Certain Psalms. Psalm 90.

15 The changes and chances of this mortal life.

Book of Common Prayer, Communion: Collect.

16 Life is short and time is swift;
Roses fade and shadows shift.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Epigrams.

17 The King in a carriage may ride,
And the Beggar may crawl at his side;

But in the general race,
They are travelling all the same pace.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Chrononoros.

18 How short is life! how frail is human trust!

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 235.

Our life is short, and our days run
As fast away as does the sun.

ROBERT HERRICK, Corinna's Going a-Maying.
Those who complain of the shortness of life, let it slide by them without wishing to seize and make the most of its golden minutes.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Spirit of the Age, p. 336.
1
It is pleasant to know that if one is now and then ingenious and fifty per cent lucky, he may hope to live out his three score years and ten although intellectually honest and self-respecting.

FRANKLIN H. GIDDINGS, The Mighty Medicine.
2
There are three wicks, you know, to the lamp of a man's life: brain, blood, and breath.
Press the brain a little, its light goes out, followed by both the others. Stop the heart
a minute, and out go all three of the wicks.
Choke the air out of the lungs, and presently the fluid ceases to supply the other centers of flame, and all is soon stagnation, cold, and darkness.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 11.

3
As leaves on the trees, such is the life of man.
(Ὅτι περ φύλλον γενεή, τοίν δὲ καὶ ἀνδρῶν.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 146.

Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
Now green in youth, now with'ring on the
ground:

Another race the foll'wing spring supplies,
They fall successive, and successive rise.
HOMER, The Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 181. (Pope, tr.)

Like phantoms painted on the magic slide,
Forth from the darkness of the past we glide,
As living shadows for a moment seen
In airy pageant on the eternal screen,
Traced by a ray from one unchanging flame,
Then seek the dust and stillness whence we came.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 73.
There, like the wind through woods in riot,
Through him the gale of life blew high;
The tree of man was never quiet:
Then 'twas the Roman, now 'tis I.
A. E. HOUSMAN, On Wenlock Edge.

4
Who knows whether the gods will add tomorrow to the present hour? (Quis scit, an adijunct hodiernæ crastina summæ Tempora di superbi?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 17.
How foolish it is to set out one's life, when one is not even owner of the morrow!

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 4.
No man has been so favored of the gods
That he could pledge himself another day.
(Nemo tam divos habuit faventes, Crastinum ut possit sibi polliceri.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 619.
Learn that the present hour alone is man's.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 33.

5
For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

New Testament: James, iv, 14.

6
I would not live alway: let me alone; for my days are vanity.

Old Testament: Job, vii, 16.

I would not live alway; I ask not to stay
Where storm after storm rises dark o'er the way.
WILLIAM A. MUHLENBERG, *I Would Not Live
Alway*. St. 2.

They live ill who think they will live for ever.
(Male vivunt qui se semper victuros putant.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 364.

He that lives longest lives but a little while.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 71.

7
The short bloom of our brief and narrow life flies fast away. While we are calling for flowers and wine and women, age is upon us.
(Festinat enim decurrere velox
Flosculus angustæ miseræque brevissima vitæ
Portio; dum bibimus, dum sarta unguenta puellas

Poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 126.

See how the autumn leaves float by decaying,
Down the red swirls of the rain-swollen
stream;

So fleet the works of men, back to their earth
again;

Another and holy things fade like a dream.
Nay! see the spring-blossoms steal forth a-maying,

Clothing with tender hues orchard and glen;
So, though old forms go by, ne'er shall their spirit die.

Look! England's bare boughs show green leaf
again.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Old and New: A Parable.
Kingsley's only poetical contribution to
Politics for the People, published 13 May, 1848, signed "Parson Lot." Omitted from many editions of his poems. The third and fourth lines were on the curtain of the famous opera house of Senator Tabor, Denver, Colorado, 1880.

8
Time fleeteth on, youth soon is gone,
Naught earthly may abide;
Life seemeth fast, but may not last—
It runs as runs the tide.

C. G. LELAND, Many in One. Pt. ii, st. 21.

Ah! love, the world is fading,
Flower by flower,
Each has his little house,
And each his hour.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, A Ballad of Kind Little Creatures.

9
Take them, O great Eternity!
Our little life is but a gust
That bends the branches of thy tree,

And trails its blossoms in the dust!
LONGFELLOW, Suspira.

1
There's nothing certain in man's life but this:
That he must lose it.

OWEN MEREDITH, Clytemnestra. Pt. xx.

2
From golden dawn to purple dusk,
Piled high with bales of smiles and tears,
The caravans are dropping down
Across the desert-sands of years.
J. CORSON MILLER, The March of Humanity.

3
Life is too short for any distant aim;
And cold the dull reward of future fame.

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Epistle to the Earl of Burlington.

4
How short is human life! the very breath
Which frames my words accelerates my death.

HANNAH MORE, King Hezekiah.

5
Between us and hell or heaven there is nothing but life, which of all things is the frailest.

PASCAL, Thoughts. Sec. iii, No. 213.

6
Nature has given man no better thing than shortness of life. (Natura vero nihil hominibus brevitæ vitæ præstitit melius.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
ch. 51, sec. 3.

7 Creatures of such an extempore being that the whole term of their life is confined within the space of a day; for they are brought forth in the morning, are in the prime of their existence at noon, grow old at night,
and then die.

PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium.

Life is but a day at most.

BURNS, Lines Written in Friars' Carse Hermitage.

Alas, the moral brings a tear!
'Tis all a transient hour below;
And we that would detain thee here,
Ourselves as fleetly go!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to J. P. Kemble.

Even so our life like to this fading flower
Doth spring, bud, blossom, wither in an hour.
Each stealing moment on it makes a prey,
Steals away part, till all is stole away.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1664.

8
Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 4.

The days of our years are three-score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away.

Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 10.

As for man his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 15.

The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 16.

You know how little while we have to stay,
And, once departed, may return no more.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyât. St. 3. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

9
The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyât. St. 8. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai
Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultán after Sultán with his Pomp
Abode his destin'd Hour and went his way.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyât. St. 17. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

I came like Water, and like Wind I go.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyât. St. 28. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

A Moment's Halt—a momentary taste
Of Being from the Well amid the Waste—

And Lo! the phantom Caravan has reach'd
The Nothing it set out from. Oh, make haste!

The very life which we enjoy is short. (Vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. i, sec. 3.

The part of life which we really live is short.
(Exigua pars est vitæ quam nos vivimus.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. ii.

Life speeds on with hurried step. (Properat cursu Vita citato.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 178.

11
And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot;
And thereby hangs a tale.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 26.

And a man's life's no more than to say "One."
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 74.

We are such stuff

As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 156.

12
The sands are number'd that make up my
life;

Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 25.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled
shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. lx.

The wise man warns me that life is but a dew-drop on the lotus leaf.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 46.

Our life is scarce the twinkle of a star
In God's eternal day.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Autumnal Vespers.

1
Poor little life that toddles half an hour Crown'd with a flower or two, and there an end.

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 228.

My life is like a summer rose
That opens to the morning sky,
But ere the shades of evening close,
Is scattered on the ground—to die.

RICHARD HENRY WILDE, My Life. Fraudulently claimed by Patrick O'Kelly.

My life is like the autumn leaf
That trembles in the moon's pale ray;
Its hold is frail—its date is brief,
Restless,—and soon to pass away.

RICHARD HENRY WILDE, My Life.

XXVI—Life: Its Sweetness

3
"Life is sweet, brother." "Do you think so?"
"Think so!—There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon, and stars,
brother, all sweet things; there's likewise
a wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother; who would wish to die?"

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 25.

So precious life is! Even to the old
The hours are as a miser's coins!

T. B. ALDRICHE, Broken Music.

4
Have you found your life distasteful?
My life did, and does, smack sweet.
Was your youth of pleasure wasteful?
Mine I saved and hold complete.

Do your joys with age diminish?
When mine fail me, I'll complain.
Must in death your daylight finish?
My sun sets to rise again.

ROBERT BROWNING, At the "Mermaid." St. 10.

How good is man's life, the mere living! how fit to employ
All the heart and the soul and the senses forever in joy.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. Sec. 9.

5
The life of man, says our friend Herr Sauerteig, the life even of the meanest man, it were good to remember, is a Poem.

CARLYLE, Count Cagliostro: Flight First.

6
Life is not void or stuff for scorners:
We have laughed loud and kept our love,
We have heard singers in tavern corners
And not forgotten the birds above:
We have known smiters and sons of thunder
And not unworthily walked with them,
We have grown wiser and lost not wonder;
And we have seen Jerusalem.

G. K. CHESTERTON, To F. C.

7
Life to the last enjoy'd, here Churchill lies.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 152.

8
Of divers voices is sweet music made:
So in our life the different degrees
Render sweet harmony among these wheels.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto vi, l. 127. (Cary, tr.)

9
By the Lord of Ludgate it's a mad life to be lord mayor; it's a stirring life, a fine life,
a velvet life, a careful life.

DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act v, sc. 1.

10
'Tis not for nothing that we life pursue;
It pays our hopes with something still that's new.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iv, sc. 1.

11
The life of man is the true romance, which,
when it is valiantly conducted, will yield the imagination a higher joy than any fiction.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: New England Reformers.

Life is a festival only to the wise. Seen from the nook and chimney-side of prudence, it wears a ragged and dangerous front.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

Life is good only when it is magical and musical,
a perfect timing and consent, and when we do not anatomize it. . . . You must hear the bird's song without attempting to render it into nouns and verbs.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

12
When life is true to the poles of nature, the streams of truth will roll through us in song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Sooner or later that which is now life shall be poetry, and every fair and manly trait shall add a richer strain to the song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

13
Chance cannot touch me! Time cannot hush
me!

Fear, hope, and longing, at strife,
Sink as I rise, on, on, upward forever,
Gathering strength, gaining breath—naught can sever

Me from the Spirit of Life!

MARGARET FULLER, Dryad Song. St. 4.

When life leaps in the veins, when it beats in the heart,
When it thrills as it fills every animate part,
Where lurks it? how works it? . . . we scarcely detect it.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto i, sec. 5.

14
Life's a pudding full of plums,
Care's a canker than benums,
Wherefore waste our elocution
On impossible solution?

Life's a pleasant institution,
Let us take it as it comes!

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act i.

1 My worthy friend, all theories are gray,
And green alone Life's golden tree.

(Grau, theurer Freund, ist alle Theorie Und grün des Lebens goldner Baum.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 515.

2 Late may you return to the skies, and long may you be happily present to your people.
(Serus in cœlum redeas, diuque Lætus intersis populo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 45. To Cæsar Augustus.

Happy long life, with honor at the close,
Friends' painless tears, the softened thought of foes!

J. R. LOWELL, Memoriæ Positum: R. G. S.

Just Fate, prolong his life, well spent,

Whose indefatigable hours

Have been as gayly innocent

And fragrant as his flowers.

J. R. LOWELL, To Asa Gray, on His Seventy-Fifth Birthday.

May he live, life, pipe, drink. (Vivat, fifat, pipat, bibat.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 53.

3 Like thee, noble river, like thee,
Let our lives in beginning and ending,
Fair in their gathering be,
And great in the time of their spending.

ISA CRAIG KNOX, The Thames.

4 But life is sweet, though all that makes it
sweet

Lessen like sound of friends' departing feet.

J. R. LOWELL, *Epistle to George William
Curtis: Postscript*, l. 49.

5 It is good for us to be here.

New Testament: Matthew, xvii, 4.

6 When I fail to cherish it [life] in every fibre
the fires within are waning.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 1.

They may rail at this life—from the hour I began it,

I found it a life full of kindness and bliss;

And until they can show me some happier planet,

More social and bright, I'll content me with this.

THOMAS MOORE, They May Rail.

7 This also, that I live, I consider a gift of God. (Id quoque, quod vivam, munus habere dei.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 20.

8 Life is delight; away, dull care. (Τρυφή βλος, ἔρρη' ἀνία.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. v, No. 72.)

For be man's load never so heavy, the life is aye sweet.

UNKNOWN, Patience, l. 156. (c. 1350)

But now our fearful prelate saith, The life is sweet.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, v, 1861.
(1390)

Life is sweet to everyone.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 45. (1576)

How good it is to live, even at the worst!

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Christ in Hades, l. 103.

And I thought to myself, How nice it is

For me to live in a world like this,
Where things can happen, and clocks can strike,
And none of the people are made alike.

W. B. RANDS, I Saw a New World.

9 And up from the pits when these shiver, and up from the heights when those shine, Twin voices and shadows swim starward, and the essence of life is divine.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

10

From a boy

I gloated on existence. Earth to me

Seemed all-sufficient and my sojourn there
One trembling opportunity for joy.

ALAN SEEGER, Sonnet: I Loved.

11

O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 32.

O, our lives' sweetness!

That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 184.

12

The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;

Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity.

SHELLEY, Adonais.

A Dome of Many-Coloured Glass.

AMY LOWELL. Title of book of poems.

13

I know I am—that simplest bliss

That millions of my brothers miss.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Prince Deukalion. Act iv.

14

Life is a sweet and joyful thing for one who has some one to love and a pure conscience.

LEO TOLSTOY, Two Hussars. Ch. 9.

15

Ah! somehow life is bigger after all

Than any painted Angel could we see

The God that is within us!

OSCAR WILDE, Humanitad. St. 60.

16

The pleasure which there is in life itself.

WORDSWORTH, Michael. l. 77.

XXVII—Life: Its Bitterness

17

Gosh! I feel like a real good cry!

Life, he says, is a cheat, a fake.
Well, I agree with the grouchy guy—
The best you get is an even break.
F. P. ADAMS, Ballade of Schopenhauer's Philosophy.

1 When life ceases to be a promise it does not cease to be a task; its true name even is trial.

AMIEL, Journal, 29 Jan., 1866.

2 Ah, love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain
Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,

Where ignorant armies clash by night.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Dover Beach. l. 29.

Wandering between two worlds, one dead,
The other powerless to be born,
With nowhere yet to rest my head,
Like these, on earth I wait forlorn.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Grande Chartreuse, l. 85.

What shelter to grow ripe is ours?

What leisure to grow wise? . . .

Too fast we live, too much are tried,
Too harass'd, to attain

Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide
And luminous view to gain.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, In Memory of the Author of Obermann, l. 71.

How many noble thoughts,
How many precious feelings of man's heart,
How many loves, how many gratuities,
Do twenty years wear out, and see expire!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 177.

3 With aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the long day, and wish 'twere done.
Not till the hours of light return,
All we have built do we discern.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Mortality. St. 2.

For most men in a brazen prison live,
Where, in the sun's hot eye,
With heads bent o'er their toil, they languidly
Their lives to some unmeaning taskwork give.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Summer Night, l. 37.

4 Every life, even the most selfish and the most frivolous, is a tragedy at last, because it ends with death.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Savonarola: Preface.

I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Hymn to Death.

5 It is a misery to be born, a pain to live, a trouble to die. (Nasci miserum, vivere poena, angustia mori.)

ST. BERNARD, De Consideratione. Ch. 3.

6 There is so much trouble in coming into the world, and so much more, as well as meanness, in going out of it, that 'tis hardly worth while to be here at all.

LORD BOLINGBROKE. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.)

7 My life is read all backward, and the charm of life undone.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
Life treads on life, and heart on heart;
We press too close in church and mart
To keep a dream or grave apart.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets; l. 820.

8 O Life! thou art a galling load,
Along a rough, a weary road.

BURNS, Despondency.

9 Desolate—Life is so dreary and desolate—
Women and men in the crowd meet and mingle,

Yet with itself every soul standeth single,
. . . Fighting its terrible conflicts alone.

ALICE CARY, Life. St. 2.

10 Tell me, all-judging Jove, if this be fair,
To make so short a life so full of care?

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, On Human Life.

11 I took one draught of life,
I'll tell you what I paid,
Precisely an existence—
The market-price, they said.

EMILY DICKINSON, Further Poems, cxx.

12 Ah, life could be so beautiful, Yet never is.
CARLETON DREWRY, Father and Son.

13 When I consider life, 'tis all a cheat.
Yet fool'd with hope, men favour the deceit;
Trust on, and think tomorrow will repay.
Tomorrow's falsar than the former day; . . .
Strange cozenage! none would live past years again,

Yet all hope pleasure in what yet remain;
And from the dregs of life think to receive
What the first sprightly running could not give.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iv, sc. 1.

When I consider Life and its few years—
A wisp of fog betwixt us and the sun;
A call to battle, and the battle done
Ere the last echo dies within our ears;
A rose choked in the grass; an hour of fears;
The gusts that past a darkening shore do beat;
The burst of music down an unlistening street—
I wonder at the idleness of tears.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Life.

14 Once I supposed that only my manner of living was superficial; that all other men's was solid. Now I find we are all alike shallow.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 198.

1 All the bloomy flush of life is fled.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 128. (1770)

Life's bloomy flush was lost.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii, l. 453. (1807)

2 Nothing can exceed the vanity of our existence but the folly of our pursuits.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i, sc. 1.

As a desolate bird that through darkness its lost way is winging,

As a hand that is helplessly raised when Death's sickle is swinging,

So is life! Ay, the life that lends passion and breath to my singing.

H. RIDER HAGGARD, Sorais's Song. (Allan Quartermain. Ch. 15.)

3 For Life I had never cared greatly,

As worth a man's while.

THOMAS HARDY, For Life I Had Never Cared Greatly.

4 To what a point of insignificance may not human life dwindle! To what fine, agonizing threads will it not cling!

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Literary Remains. Vol. ii, p. 246.

For Fate has wove the thread of life with pain!
And twins, ev'n from the birth, are Misery and Man!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 263. (Pope, tr.)

I say that I am myself, but what is this Self of mine

But a knot in the tangled skein of things where chance and chance combine?

DON MARQUIS, Heir and Serf.

5 Oh! take, young seraph, take thy harp,

And play to me so cheerily;

For grief is dark, and care is sharp,

And life wears on so wearily.

THOMAS HOOD, To Hope.

6 When I meet the morning beam,
Or lay me down at night to dream,

I hear my bones within me say,

"Another night, another day."

A. E. HOUSMAN, The Immortal Part.

7 Life is a pill which none of us can bear to swallow without gilding.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Piozzi, Johnsoniana.)

Life is to most a nauseous pill,

A treat for which they dearly pay:

Let's take the good, avoid the ill,

Discharge the debt, and walk away.

PHILIP FRENEAU, Human Frailty.

8 Life is barren enough surely with all her trappings; let us therefore be cautious how we strip her.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 345.

Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured, and little to be enjoyed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 11.

Condemn'd to Hope's delusive mine,

As on we toil from day to day,

By sudden blasts, or slow decline,

Our social comforts drop away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

9 "Enlarge my life with multitude of days!"
In health, in sickness, thus the suppliant prays:

Hides from himself his state, and shuns to know

That life protracted is protracted woe.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 253.

The weariness, the fever, and the fret

Here, where men sit and hear each other groan.

KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale. St. 3.

10 For men must work, and women must weep,
And the sooner it's over, the sooner to sleep;

And good-bye to the bar and its moaning.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers.

11 Life can be bitter to the very bone

When one is poor, and woman, and alone.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

12 The basic fact about human existence is not that it is a tragedy, but that it is a bore.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices.

Our civilization promises to make the question of a living easier and easier; and meanwhile living becomes emptier and emptier.

FRANK K. NOTCH, King Mob, p. 224.

13 In tragic life, God wot,

No villain need be! Passions spin the plot:
We are betrayed by what is false within.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 43.

Passions Spin the Plot.

VARDIS FISHER. Title of novel.

14 Life is a parting and not a meeting,

A comradeship of the lonely mile,

Only an hour for a passing greeting,

Only a friendship for a while.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, A Day.

15 A bitter life 'twixt pain and nothing tost.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Hill of Venus.

16 Moan, moan, ye dying gales!

The saddest of your tales

Is not so sad as life.

HENRY NEELE, Moan, Moan, Ye Dying Gales.

1 The life of man is the plaything of Fortune, a wretched life and a vagrant, tossed between riches and poverty.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 80.)

The wretch, at summing up his misspent days,
Found nothing left, but poverty and praise.

JOHN OLDHAM, *A Satire: Spenser Dissuading
the Author*, l. 182.

The life of man, solitary, poor, nasty, brutish, and short.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan: Of Man.

2 O life! is all thy song, "Endure and—die?"

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Life.

3 Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.

Will the day's journey take the whole long
day?

From morn to night, my friend.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Up-Hill.

4 Life did not present its sunny side to thee.
(Nicht seine Freudenseite kehrte dir Das Leben zu.)

SCHILLER, Marie Stuart. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 136.

5 This is the state of man: today he puts forth

The tender leaves of hopes; tomorrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon
him:

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 352.

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 100.

6 To live I find it deadly dolorous,
For life draws care, and care continual woe.

EDMUND SPENSER, Daphnida, l. 450.

7 The long mechanic pacings to and fro,
The set, grey life, and apathetic end.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 17.

8 Life holds more disappointment than satisfaction. (Τὸ δὲ κενὸν τοῦ βίου πλέον τοῦ συμφέροντος.)

THEOPHRASTUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Theophrastus. Bk. v, sec. 41.)

9 It is truly a misery to live upon earth. . . .
For to eat, drink, watch, sleep, rest, labor,
and to be subject to other necessities of nature, is truly a great misery and affliction.

. . . And therefore the prophet devoutly prays to be freed from them, saying, "From my necessities, deliver me, O Lord."

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Ch. 22.

10 I tell you we're in a blessed drain-pipe, and we've got to crawl along it till we die.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. i, ch. 2.

To climb life's worn, heavy wheel,
Which draws up nothing new.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 331.

11 Not life itself, but living ill, is evil. (Οὐ τὸ ζῆν, ἀλλὰ τὸ κακῶς ζῆν.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 55.)

XXVIII—Life and Death

See also Death: The Good Death

12 The Angel of Death is the invisible Angel of Life.

HENRY MILLS ALDEN, A Study of Death.

13 Ofttimes the test of courage becomes rather to live than to die. (Spesso è da forte, Più che il morire, il vivere.)

ALFIERI, Oreste. Act iv, sc. 2.

But where life is more terrible than death, it is then the truest valour to dare to live.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Sec. 51.

'Tis more brave To live, than to die.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, st. 11.

14 I strain too much this string of life, belike, Meaning to make such music as shall save. . . .

Would that I had such help as man must have,

For I shall die, whose life was all men's hope.

EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of Asia. Bk. vi, l.
107.

15 Life hath more awe than death.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

16 Life! we've been long together
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;

'Tis hard to part when friends are dear,—
Perhaps 't will cost a sigh, a tear;

Then steal away, give little warning,

Choose thine own time;

Say not "Good-night," but in some brighter
clime

Bid me "Good-morning."

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Life. St. 2. Wordsworth said of this stanza: "I am not in the habit of grudging people their good things, but I wish I had written those lines."

1 They that yet never learn'd to live and die,
Will scarcely teach it others feelingly.

RICHARD BAXTER, Love Breathing Thanks and Praise. Pt. ii. (c. 1650)

2 The mere habit of living makes mere men more hardly to part with life.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 28.

Mr. Wopsle's great-aunt conquered a confirmed habit of living into which she had fallen.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 16.

While some no other cause for life can give
But a dull habitude to live.

JOHN OLDHAM, To the Memory of Norwent.

No particular motive for living, except the custom and habit of it.

THACKERAY. (Quoted in an article in Black-wood's Magazine, Jan., 1854.)

3 Knowledge by suffering entereth;
And Life is perfected by Death.

Live your own life, for you will die your own death. (Vive tibi, nam moriere tibi.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

11 She'll bargain with them, and will give Them God; teach them how to live
In Him; or, if they this deny,
For Him she'll teach them how to die.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Hymn to the Name and Honour of St. Theresa, l. 51. (1646)

He who should teach men to die, would at the same time teach them to live.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19.

There taught us how to live; and (oh, too high
The price for knowledge!) taught us how to die.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, On the Death of Mr. Addison, l. 81. (1719)

Thou,

Whom soft-eyed Pity once led down from
Heaven

To bleed for Man, to teach him how to live,
And oh! still harder lesson, how to die!

BISHOP BEILBY PORTEUS, Death, l. 316. (c.
1770)

12 One should never think of death. One should think of life. That is real piety.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 27.

13 Thales said there was no difference between life and death. "Why, then," said some one to him, "do you not die?" "Because," said he, "it does make no difference."

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lives: Thales. Sec. ix.

14 As life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

MARY MAPES DODGE, The Two Mysteries.

Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;
Yet oh, how dear it is to us, this life we live and see!

MARY MAPES DODGE, The Two Mysteries.

15 Who knoweth if to die be but to live,
And that called life by mortals be but death?

4 A stranger into life I'm come,
Dying may be our going home.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 788.

5 I have subdued at last the will to live,
Expelling nature from my weary heart;
And now my life, so calm, contemplative,
No longer selfish, freely may depart.
The vital flame is burning less and less;
And memory fuses to forgetfulness.

P. G. HAMERTON, The Sanyassi.

6 Yet saw he something in the lives
Of those who ceased to live

That rounded them with majesty,
Which living failed to give.

THOMAS HARDY, The Casterbridge Captains.

7 For all may have,
If they dare try, a glorious life, or grave.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 15.

8 Life evermore is fed by death,
In earth and sea and sky;

And, that a rose may breathe its breath,
Something must die.

J. G. HOLLAND, Bitter-Sweet. Epis. i.

9 Content with his past life, let him take leave of life like a satiated guest. (Exacto contentus tempore vita cedat uti conviva satur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 118.

10 It matters not how a man dies, but how he lives.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 4.)

11 The lordliest of all things,—
Life only lends us feet, Death gives us wings!
FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, Laus Mortis.

12 There are but three general events that happen to mankind: birth, life, and death. Of their birth they are insensible, they suffer when they die, and neglect to live.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. 10.

13 What is our life but a succession of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is sounded by Death?

LAMARTINE, Méditations Poétiques. Used by

Liszt as a heading for his tone poem, Les Preludes.

14 Various the roads of life; in one
All terminate, one lonely way.

We go; and "Is he gone?"

Is all our best friends say.

W. S. LANDOR, Various the Roads of Life.

15 Is Love a lie, and fame indeed a breath;
And is there no sure thing in life—but death?

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, R. L. S., l. 76.

16 Live I, so live I,
To my Lord heartily,
To my Prince faithfully,
To my Neighbor honestly,
Die I, so die I.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinngedichte. (Longfellow, tr.)

17 Our life must once have end; in vain we fly
From following Fate; e'en now, e'en now, we die.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 1081. (Creech, tr.)

18 Why seek ye the living among the dead?
New Testament: Luke, xxiv, 5.

The earth belongs to the living, not the dead.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 269.

Mem.—To think more of the living and less of the dead, for the dead have a world of their own.

THOMAS TYERS, Resolutions.

19 'Tis not the whole of life to live,
Nor all of death to die.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Issues of Life and Death. St. 1.

20 This life is a fleeting breath,
And whither and how shall I go,
When I wander away with Death
By a path that I do not know?

LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON, When I Wander Away with Death.

21 Life should never cease to unfold, and it will be time enough for Death to lower the banner when the last stitch of canvas is reached.

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 178.

22 Live righteously; you shall die righteously.
(Vive pius; moriere pius.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 37.

No one has died miserably who has lived well.
(Nec misere quisquam, qui bene vixit obit.)

ERASMUS, Apotheosis Capnionis. Quoted.

The name of death was never terrible
To him that knew to live.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Immortality. Quoted.

Whoso lives the holiest life

Is fittest far to die.

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Ready.

1 A good death does honor to a whole life.

PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Canz. xvi, st. 5.

2 To live is Christ, and to die is gain.

New Testament: Philippians, i, 21.

3 To me 'twas given to die: to thee 'tis given
To live: alas! one moment sets us even.

Mark! how impartial is the will of Heaven!

MATTHEW PRIOR, For His Own Tomb-stone.

So vanishes our state; so pass our days;

So life but opens now, and now decays;

The cradle and the tomb, alas! how nigh;

To live is scarce distinguish'd from to die.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World. Bk. iii, l. 527.

4 He rightly lives, That nobly dies: . . .
He that (in case) despises

Life, earns it best; but he that overprizes

His dearest blood, when honour bids him die,

Steals but a life, and lives by robbery.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Esther. Sec. xv, 15.

5 As a tree falls, so shall it lie;

As a man lives, so shall he die.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

As the life is, so is the end. (Qualis vita, finis ita.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

6 The long sleep of death closes our scars, and the short sleep of life our wounds. (Der lange Schlaf des Todes schliesst unsere Narben zu, und der kutze des Lebens unsere Wunden.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 20.

7 They will not live, and do not know how to die. (Vivere nolunt, mori nesciunt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec. 6.

If anything forbids you to live nobly, nothing forbids you to die nobly. (Si quid te vetat bene vivere, bene mori non vetat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xvii, sec. 6.

He who does not wish to die cannot have wished to live. (Vivere noluit qui mori non vult.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxx, 10.

Before I was old, I tried to live well; now that I am old, I shall try to die well; but dying well means dying gladly. (*Ante senectutem curavi, ut bene viverem; in senectute, ut bene moriar;
bene autem mori est libenter mori.*)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi, sec. 2.

8 Every man should make his life acceptable to others, but his death to himself alone. The best form of death is the one we like.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 12.

9 What's yet in this

That bears the name of life? Yet in this life

Lie hid moe thousand deaths: yet death we fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 38.

10 Let life burn down, and dream it is not death.

SWINBURNE, Anactoria.

From too much love of living,

From hope and fear set free,

We thank with brief thanksgiving

Whatever gods may be,

That no life lives forever;

That dead men rise up never;

That even the weariest river

Winds somewhere safe to sea.

SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine. St. 11.

For if we live, we die not,

And if we die, we live.

SWINBURNE, Jacobite Song. St. 9.

11 Some come, some go; This life is so.

THOMAS TUSSEY, *Hundred Points of Good
Husbandry: August's Abstract*.

Some laugh, while others mourn;

Some toil, while others pray;

One dies, and one is born:

So runs the world away.

SAMUEL WESLEY, The Way of the World.

12 All say, "How hard it is to die"—a strange complaint from people who have had to live. Pity is for the living, envy for the dead.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

A myriad of men are born; they labor and sweat and struggle for bread; they squabble and scold and fight; they scramble for little mean advantages over each other. Age creeps upon them; . . . ambition is dead; pride is dead; vanity is dead; longing for release is in their place. It comes at last—the only unpoisoned gift earth ever had for them—and they vanish from a world where they were of no consequence.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. ii, p. 37.

13 Many people are so afraid to die that they never begin to live.

HENRY VAN DYKE, *Counsels by the Way:
Courage*.

14 Who die of having lived too much

In their large hours.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Tomb of Burns.

15 Why do we then shun Death with anxious strife?

If Light can thus deceive, wherefore not Life?

BLANCO WHITE, Sonnet: Night.

16 O I see now that life cannot exhibit all to me, as day cannot,

I see that I am to wait for what will be exhibited by death.

WALT WHITMAN, Night on the Prairies.

17 And the wild regrets and the bloody sweats

None knew so well as I:
For he who lives more lives than one
More deaths than one must die.
OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. iii, st. 37.

1
Life is much flatter'd, Death is much traduc'd.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 444.

Life makes the soul dependent on the dust;
Death gives her wings to mount above the spheres. . . .

Death but entombs the body; life the soul.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 448.

2
Be happy while ye'er leevin,
For y'er a lang time deid.

XXIX—Life: A Journey to Death

3
And I still onward haste to my last night;
Time's fatal wings do ever forward fly:
So every day we live, a day we die.

CAMPION, Divine and Moral Songs. No. 17.

4
We do not die wholly at our deaths: we have mouldered away gradually long before. . . .
Death only consigns the last fragment of what we were to the grave.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Winterslow, p. 76.

5
For life is nearer every day to death. (Nam vita mortis propior est quotidie.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25, l. 10.

Every moment of life is a step toward the grave.
(Chaque instant de la vie est un pas vers la mort.)

CRÉBILLON, Tite et Bérénice. Act i, sc. 5.

6
He that begins to live begins to die.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics. Epig. 1.

Our life's a clock, and every gasp of breath Breathes forth a warning grief, till Time shall strike a death.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics, ix, 6.

7
What new thing then is it for a man to die, whose whole life is nothing but a journey to death? (Quid est enim novi hominem mori, cujus tota vita nihil aliud quam ad mortem iter est?)

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 30.

What man can you show me who places any value on his time, who reckons the worth of every day, who understands that he is dying daily?

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 2.

The hour which gives us life begins to take it away. (Prima quæ vitam dedit hora, carpit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 874.

8
While man is growing, life is in decrease;
And cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.
Our birth is nothing but our death begun;

As tapers waste, that instant they take fire.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 717.

Our life is but a chain of many deaths.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iv, sc. 1.

9
Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not its goal.
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

XXX—Life: A Preparation for Death

10
May we so live we dread not here to die;
So die, we dread not afterward to live.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Waters.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.
WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

11
Made ev'ry day he had to live
To his last minute a preparative.
SAMUEL BUTLER, To the Memory of Duval.
Sec. 2.

12
Learn to live well, that thou may'st die so
too;

To live and die is all we have to do.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 93.

13
Live so, that, when you come to die,
You will have wished to live.
(Lebe, wie Du, wenn du stirbst, Wünschen wirst, gelebt zu haben.)

C. F. GELLERT, *Geistliche Oden und Lieder:
Vom Tode*.

14
Let all live as they would die.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

15
Teach me to live that I may dread
The grave as little as my bed.
BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Evening Hymn.

16
Then, like a thankful guest,
Rise cheerfully from life's abundant feast
And with a quiet mind go take thy rest.
LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 95.
(Creech, tr.)

17
So may'st thou live, till like ripe fruit thou drop

Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gather'd, not harshly pluck'd, for death mature.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 532.

18
Light, even though it passes through pollution, is not polluted. (Lux, etsi per immunda transeat, non inquinatur.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Johannis Evang. Ch. i, tr. 5, sec. 15. See also SUN: UNPOLLUTED.

<sup>1</sup> The first creature of God, in the works of the days, was the light of the sense, the last was the light of reason.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

God's first creature, which was light.

FRANCIS BACON, New Atlantis. Sec. 14. Quoted by Ruskin, Crown of Wild Olive. Lecture 4.

Light,—God's eldest daughter.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Building.

Hail, holy light, offspring of Heav'n firstborn!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 1.

Light, the prime work of God.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 70.

<sup>2</sup> Light that makes things seen, makes some things invisible; were it not for darkness and the shadow of the earth the noblest part of the creation had remained unseen and the stars in heaven as invisible as on the fourth day when they were created above the horizon with the sun and there was not an eye to behold them.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Garden of Cyrus. Ch. 4.

The rising sun to mortal sight reveals This earthly globe, but yet the stars conceal.

So may the sense discover natural things, Divine above the reach of human wings.

C. B., To the Memory of Sir Thomas Overbury.

Then sorrow, touch'd by Thee, grows bright With more than rapture's ray;

As darkness shows us worlds of light

We never saw by day.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Thou Who Dry'st the Mourner's Tear.

'Twas a light that made

Darkness itself appear A thing of comfort.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. 23, l. 28.

<sup>3</sup> I feel and seek the light I cannot see.

S. T. COLERIDGE, II Zapholya. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> I saw myself the lambent easy light Gild the brown horror, and dispel the night.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. ii, l. 1230.

<sup>5</sup> Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 7.

<sup>6</sup> Light is the first of painters. There is no object so foul that intense light will not make it beautiful.

EMERSON, Nature. Ch. 3, par. 2.

<sup>7</sup> And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 3.

Let there be Light, said God, and forthwith Light Ethereal, first of things, quintessence pure, Sprung from the deep; and, from her native east, To journey through the aery gloom began, Spher'd in a radiant cloud.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 243.

If the light is

It is because God said "Let there be light."

D. G. ROSSETTI, At Sunrise.

<sup>8</sup> Through love to light! O wonderful the way That leads from darkness to the perfect day!

R. W. GILDER, After-song.

Against the darkness outer

God's light his likeness takes,

And he from the mighty doubter

The great believer makes.

R. W. GILDER, The New Day. Pt. iv. Song 15.

<sup>9</sup> Where there is much light, the shadows are deepest. (Wo viel Licht ist, ist starker Schatten.)

GOETHE, Götz von Berlichingen, i, 24.

Every light has its shadow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>10</sup> Lamps make oil-spots, and candles need snuffing; it is only the light of heaven that shines pure and leaves no stain.

<sup>11</sup> Blasted with excess of light.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 101.

He's blind with too much light.

After light's term, a term of cecity.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Westminster Abbey.

The Light that Failed.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of novel.

<sup>12</sup> You stand in your own light.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Do we stand in our own light, wherever we go, And fight our own shadows forever?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto ii, sec. 5.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 729. (Pope, tr.)

The prayer of Ajax was for light; Through all that dark and desperate fight, The blackness of that noonday night.

LONGFELLOW, The Goblet of Life. St. 9.

Father Zeus, deliver thou from darkness the sons of the Achæans, and make clear sky, and grant us to see with our eyes. In the light do thou e'en slay us, seeing such is thy good pleasure. (Ἐν δὲ φάει καὶ ἄλυσσον, ἐπεὶ νύ τοι εὐαδεν οὕτως.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 645. The prayer of Ajax.

Thy prayer was "Light—more Light—while Time shall last!"

Thou sawest a glory growing on the night, But not the shadows which that light would cast,

Till shadows vanish in the Light of Light.

TENNYSON, Inscription on the Window in Memory of Caxton. St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, London. Caxton's motto was "Fiat Lux."

More light! (Mehr Licht!)

GOETHE. Last words.

1 He seeks to produce not smoke from light, but light from smoke. (Non fumum ex fulgore, sed ex fumo dare lucem.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 143.

2 Like our dawn, merely a sob of light.

VICTOR HUGO, La Légende des Siècles.

3 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

New Testament: John, i, 5. (Lux in tenebris.—Vulgate.)

The true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

New Testament: John, i, 9.

And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

New Testament: John, iii, 19.

The shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18.

4 He was a burning and a shining light.

New Testament: John, v, 35.

I am the light of the world.

New Testament: John, viii, 12. (Lux mundi.—Vulgate.)

Ye are the light of the world.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 14.

5 Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you.

New Testament: John, xii, 35.

6 The great world of light, that lies Behind all human destinies.

LONGFELLOW, To a Child.

7 Medicinal as light.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

8 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

New Testament: Luke, i, 79.

9 The tolerance and equity of light That gives as freely to the shrinking flower As to the great oak flaring to the wind.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

10 In the dark a glimmering light often suffices for the pilot to find the pole star and set his course.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 79.

12 He that has light within his own clear breast May sit i' the center and enjoy bright day; But he that hides a dark soul and foul thoughts

Benighted walks under the mid-day sun.

MILTON, Comus, l. 381.

Not always right in all men's eyes, But faithful to the light within.

O. W. HOLMES, A Birthday Tribute.

13 Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 380. Often misquoted "dark with excessive light."

14 Shut the windows that the house may be lighted. (Claude fenestras, ut luceat domus.)

DR. HENRY MORE, his motto. (WARD, Life. Ch. 12.)

15 Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,

Lead Thou me on!

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Pillar of the Cloud.

16 And this I know: whether the one True Light

Kindle to Love, or Wrath consume me quite, One flash of It within the Tavern caught Better than in the Temple lost outright.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 77. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

17 Where art thou, beam of light? Hunters from the mossy rock, saw ye the blue-eyed fair?

OSSIAN, Temora. Bk. vi.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 34.

18 Merciful Heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt

Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
Than the soft myrtle.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 114.

19
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,

That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,

And ere a man hath power to say "Behold!"
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 145.

It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which does cease to be Ere one can say "It lightens."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 118.

1
Thunder crumples the sky,
Lightning tears at it.

LEONORA SPEYER, The Squall.

2
We saw the large white stars rise one by one,

Or, from the darken'd glen,
Saw God divide the night with flying flame,
And thunder on the everlasting hills.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 223.

The lightnings flash a larger curve, and more
The noise astounds; till overhead a sheet
Of livid flame discloses wide, then shuts
And opens wider; shuts and opens still Expansive, wrapping ether in a blaze.
Follows the loosen'd aggravated roar,
Enlarging, deepening, mingling, peal on peal,
Crush'd horrible, convulsing heaven and earth.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1136.

3
Knowledge hath clipped the lightning's wings, and mewed it up for a purpose.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Hidden Uses. See also under FRANKLIN.

4
The heavens thundered and the air shone with frequent fire; and all things threatened men with instant death. (Intonuere poli, et crebris micat ignibus æther; Præsentemque viris intantant omnia mortem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 90.

5
Never from a cloudless sky fell more lightnings. (Non alias cælo ceciderunt plura sereno Fulgura.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 487.

For though it is the clouds that Jove is wont to cleave with his flashing bolts, this time he drove his thundering steeds through a cloudless sky.
(Per purum tonantes.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 34, l. 7.

Arrestment, sudden really as a bolt out of the blue has hit strange victims.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol.
iii, p. 347.

6
Reach the bays—
I'll tie a garland here about his head;
'Twill keep my boy from lightning.

JOHN WEBSTER, Vittoria Corombona, v, 1. The bay was supposed by the Romans to protect against lightning because it was the tree of Apollo; hence, according to Pliny, Tiberius and other Roman emperors wore a wreath of bay as an amulet, especially in thunder storms.

LIKENESS

7
Our houses . . . are so like to another, that ye can less discern an egg from an egg.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 90. (1542)

They say we are Almost as like as eggs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 129. (1610)

He is as like one, as one egg is like another.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 27. (1615)

Not eggs to eggs are liker.

10
He answered the description the page gave to a T, sir.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act iv,
sc. 3. (1699)

They'd have fitted him to a T.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Bishop Warburton, and quoting the following lines:
Here Learning, blinded first and then beguiled,
Looks dark as Ignorance, as Frenzy wild.

RICHARD SAVAGE, The Wanderer. (BOSWELL,
Life, 1784.)

Which was performed to a T.

lactucam.)

HEIRONYMUS, Epistles, vii, 5. A saying of Marcus Crassus when he saw an ass eating thistles.

Such lips, such lettuce.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

There's other lettuce for your coarse lips.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act ii, sc. 3.

13
As like as fig to fig. (Σύκον εἰκόσαι σύκω.)

HERODAS, Sententia, vi, 60. (c. 250 B. C.)

14
As alike to compare in taste, chalk and
cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. iv. (1546)

Differ as much as chalk and cheese.

SHERLOCKE, Hatcher of Heresies. (1565)

They take chalk for cheese.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Cicero: Preface.

No more like together than is chalk to coals.

SIR THOMAS MORE, English Works, p. 674.

1 Like father, like son. (Qualis pater, talis filius.)

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ii, 28. (1377)

Off the son in manner like will be unto the father.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folyis, i, 236. (1509)

Such a father, such a son.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 331. (1605)

Yet in my lineaments they trace

Some features of my father's face.

BYRON, Parisina. St. 13.

2 No more like than an apple to an oyster.

SIR THOMAS MORE, English Works, p. 724.

Tranio: He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say, In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Biondello: As much as an apple doth an oyster.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 99.

She's as like this as a crab's like an apple.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15.

3 Like people like priest.

THOMAS NASHE, Works, i, 121. (1589)

4 Not altogether the same features, nor yet different; but such as would be natural in sisters. (Facies non omnibus una, Non diversa tamen, qualem decet esse sororum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 13.

5 Like master, like man. (Plane qualis dominus, talis est servus.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. See also MASTER: LIKE MASTER, LIKE MAN.

6 One drop of milk is no more like another than I is like me. (Neque lac lactis magis est simile quam ille ego similest mei.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 601. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

As much alike as two drops of milk. (Tam similem, quam lacte lacti est.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 240. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

7 Looking as like . . . as one pea does like another.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 2. (1532)

As like as one pea is to another.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 215. (1580)

8 The one so like the other As could not be distinguish'd but by names.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act i, sc. 1, l. 52.

These hands are not more like.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 212.

To show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 25.

Blood hath bought blood and blows have answer'd blows;

Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power:

Both are alike; and both alike we like.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 329.

9 If you have known one, you have known them all. (Unum cognoris, omnes noris.)

TERENCE, Phormio. Act i, sc. 5, l. 35.

LILAC

10 O lilac, whiter than swan's down,

Among your soft-green leaves,

Purer than snow new-fallen on the boughs.

F. S. FLINT, Lilac.

11 Lilacs, False blue, White, Purple,

Colour of lilac,

Your great puffs of flowers

Are everywhere in this my New England. . . .

Lilacs in dooryards

Holding quiet conversation with an early moon;

Lilacs watching a deserted house; . . .

Lilacs, wind-beaten, staggering under a lopsided shock of bloom, . . .

You are everywhere.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

Now you are a very decent flower,

A reticent flower,

A curiously clear-cut, candid flower,

Standing beside clean doorways,

Friendly to a house-cat and a pair of spectacles,

Making poetry out of a bit of moonlight

And a hundred or two sharp blossoms.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

12 Go down to Kew in lilac-time, in lilac-time, in lilac-time;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

And you shall wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

13 The purple clusters load the lilac-bushes.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Hopeless Love.

14 Warble me now for joy of lilac-time.

WALT WHITMAN, Warble for Lilac-Time.

When lilacs last in the dooryard bloom'd, And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the night,

I mourn'd, and yet shall mourn with ever-returning spring.

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd. St. 1.

The lilac-bush tall-growing with heart-shaped leaves of rich green,

With many a pointed blossom rising delicate, with the perfume strong I love,

With every leaf a miracle.

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd. St. 3.

1
Who thought of the lilac? "I," dew said,
"I made the lilac out of my head."
"She made the lilac? Pooh!" trilled a linnet,
And each dew-note had a lilac in it.

HUMBERT WOLFE, The Lilac.

LILY

2
I like the chaliced lilies,
The heavy Eastern lilies,
The gorgeous tiger-lilies,
That in our garden grow.

T. B. ALDRICH, Tiger-Lilies.

3
And lilies are still lilies, pulled By smutty hands, though spotted from their white.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 741.

And lilies white, prepared to touch
The whitest thought, nor soil it much.

E. B. BROWNING, A Flower in a Letter.

4
Dante's purple lilies, which he blew
To a larger bubble with his prophet breath.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 935.

5
Very whitely still
The lilies of our lives may reassure
Their blossoms from their roots, accessible
Alone to heavenly dews that drop not fewer,
Growing straight, out of man's reach, on the hill.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxiv.

6
And every rose and lily there did stand
Better attired by Nature's hand.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden.

The lilies
Contending with the roses in her cheeks,
Who most shall set them off.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3.

7
And the stately lilies stand
Fair in the silvery light,
Like saintly vestals, pale in prayer;
Their pure breath sanctifies the air,
As its fragrance fills the night.

JULIA C. R. DORR, A Red Rose.

8
Lilies are whitest in a blackamoor's hand.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3244.

9
By cool Siloam's shady rill
How sweet the lily grows!

REGINALD HEBER, First Sunday After Epiphany.

10
The lily is all in white, like a saint,
And so is no mate for me.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

11
We are Lilies fair,
The flower of virgin light;
Nature held us forth, and said,
"Lo! my thoughts of white."
LEIGH HUNT, Lilies.

12
Like these cool lilies may our loves remain,
Perfect and pure, and know not any stain.

ANDREW LANG, A Vow to Heavenly Venus.

13
Go bow thy head in gentle spite,
Thou lily white,
For she who spies thee waving here,
With thee in beauty can compare
As day with night.

J. M. LEGARÉ, To a Lily.

14
O lovely lily clean,
O lily springing green,
O lily bursting white,
Dear lily of delight,
Spring in my heart agen
That I may flower to men.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.
Last st.

15
Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:
And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 28, 29; Luke, xii, 27.

Yet neither spins nor cards, nor cares nor frets,
But to her mother Nature all her care she lets.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vi, st. 16.

"Look to the lilies how they grow!"

'Twas thus the Saviour said, that we,
Even in the simplest flowers that blow,
God's ever-watchful care might see.

DAVID MOIR, Lilies.

"Thou wert not, Solomon! in all thy glory
Array'd," the lilies cry, "in robes like ours;
How vain your grandeur! Ah, how transitory
Are human flowers!"

HORACE SMITH, Hymn to the Flowers. St. 10.

16
Is not this lily pure?
What fuller can procure
A white so perfect, spotless clear
As in this flower, doth appear?

FRANCIS QUARLES, School of the Heart. Ode 30.

17
How bravely thou becomest thy bed, fresh
lily.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 15.

Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 151.

18
And the wand-like lily, which lifted up,
As a Mænad, its moonlight-coloured cup,

Till the fiery star, which is its eye,
Gazed through clear dew on the tender sky.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 33.

1
Now folds the lily all her sweetness up,
And slips into the bosom of the lake.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 171.

2
But lilies, stolen from grassy mold,
No more curlèd state unfold,
Translated to a vase of gold;
In burning throne though they keep still Serenities unthawed and chill.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Gilded Gold.

3
White as any lily flower.
UNKNOWN, King Horn, l. 15. (c. 1310)
Her cheeks round, white as the flour de lys.
WILLIAM CAXTON, Charles the Great. (1485)

II—Lily-of-the-Valley

4
The lily of the vale, of flowers the queen,
Puts on the robe she neither sew'd nor spun.
MICHAEL BRUCE, Elegy.

5
White bud! that in meek beauty dost lean
Thy cloistered cheek as pale as moonlight snow,
Thou seem'st, beneath thy huge, high leaf of
green,
An Eremite beneath his mountain's brow.
GEORGE CROLY, The Lily of the Valley.

6
And the Naiad-like lily of the vale,
Whom youth makes so fair and passion so pale,
That the light of its tremulous bells is seen,
Through their pavilions of tender green.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 21.

7
Where scattered wild the Lily of the Vale
Its balmy essence breathes.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 445.

8
That shy plant . . . the lily of the vale,
That loves the ground, and from the sun withholds
Her pensive beauty.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 540.

LIMERICKS

A few famous ones

9
Un marin naufragé (de Doncastre)
Pour prière, au milieu du désastre,
Repetait à genoux
Ces mots simples et doux:—
"Scintellez, scintellez, petits astres!"
GEORGE DU MAURIER, Vers Nonsensiques.

10
There was a small boy of Quebec
Who was buried in snow to the neck;
When they said, "Are you friz?"

He replied, "Yes, I is—
But we don't call this cold in Quebec."
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Boy of Quebec.

11
There was an Old Man with a beard,
Who said, "It is just what I feared!
Two Owls and a Hen,
Four Larks and a Wren,
Have all built their nests in my beard!"
EDWARD LEAR, Nonsense Verses.

12
There was a young lady of Niger
Who smiled as she rode on a tiger;
They returned from the ride
With the lady inside,
And the smile on the face of the tiger.
COSMO MONKHOUSE, Young Lady of Niger.

13
There once was a guy named Othello,
A dark, disagreeable fellow;
After croaking his wife,
Then he took his own life—
That bird wasn't black, he was yellow!
E. M. ROBINSON, Limericised Classics.

14
A canner, exceedingly canny,
One morning remarked to his granny,
"A canner can can
Anything that he can,
But a canner can't can a can, can he?"
CAROLYN WELLS, The Canner.

15
A tutor who tooted the flute
Tried to tutor two tutors to toot.
Said the two to the tutor,
"Is it harder to toot or
To tutor two tutors to toot?"
CAROLYN WELLS, The Tutor.

16
There's a Portuguese person called Howell
Who lays on his lies with a trowel;
Should he get over lying
'Twill be when he's done dying
For living is lying to Howell.
J. McNEILL WHISTLER. Referring to Charles Augustus Howell, an adventurer of the period. It was Howell who, in 1869, exhumed the body of D. G. Rossetti's first wife, in order to recover the manuscripts which Rossetti had impulsively placed in the coffin nine years previously.

17
There was an old man of Nantucket
Who kept all his cash in a bucket;
But his daughter, named Nan,
Ran away with a man—
And as for the bucket, Nantucket.
UNKNOWN. First published in the Princeton Tiger.

18
A fly and a flea in a flue
Were imprisoned, so what could they do?
Said the fly, "Let us flee!"
"Let us fly!" said the flea,

So they flew through a flaw in the flue.

UNKNOWN, Flight.

Oh, won't you come up, come all the way up,
Come all the way up to Limerick?

UNKNOWN, Won't You Come Up to Limerick?

The chorus following the singing of an extemporized nonsense verse at convivial parties, the reference being to the town of Limerick, Ireland. The first instance of a limerick occurs in the anonymous History of Sixteen Wonderful Old Women, published in 1820.

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM

Abraham wore a stovepipe hat
That brushed the stars down where he walked;

His eyes were terrible to look at,
His eyes were black pools when he talked.

JOSEPH AUSLANDER, Abraham Lincoln.

3
Some opulent force of genius, soul, and race,
Some deep life-current from far centuries
Flowed to his mind and lighted his sad eyes,
And gave his name, among great names, high place.

JOEL BENTON, Another Washington.

4
Into his heart's great jar Truth's brother poured
Strong love for men and freedom—fatal deed!

Some liked the wine, and some its making scored;
One broke the jar that held his own life's need.

CHARLES GRANGER BLANDEN, Lincoln.

5
No king this man, by grace of God's intent;

No, something better, freeman,—President!
A nature, modeled on a higher plan,
Lord of himself, an inborn gentleman!

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.

Read before Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard, 20 July, 1865, one of the earliest and most discriminating tributes to Lincoln.

Great in his goodness, humble in his state,
Firm in his purpose, yet not passionate,
He led his people with a tender hand,
And won by love a sway beyond command.

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.

Oh, slow to smite and swift to spare,
Gentle and merciful and just!

Who, in the fear of God, didst bear
The sword of power, a nation's trust!
W. C. BRYANT, Abraham Lincoln.

7
Our pastoral captain, skilled to crook
The spear into the pruning hook,
The simple, kindly man,
Lincoln, American.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

To set the stones back in the wall
Lest the divided house should fall.
The beams of peace he laid,
While kings looked on, afraid.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

Unheralded, God's captain came
As one that answers to his name;
Nor dreamed how high his charge,
His privilege how large.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

If so men's memories not a monument be,
None shalt thou have. Warm hearts, and not cold stone,
Must mark thy grave, or thou shalt lie, unknown.
Marbles keep not themselves; how then, keep thee?

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Thy Monument.

8
O Uncommon Commoner! may your name
Forever lead like a living flame!

Unschool'd scholar! how did you learn
The wisdom a lifetime may not earn?

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, The Uncommon Commoner.

9
Great Nature's forces, unrestrained and free,
Produced, by chance, this giant of mankind,
And challenged man to solve his mystery.

REMBRANDT W. B. DITMARS, Lincoln.

Spontaneous! Inspired! The perfect flower
Of chance, he was by liberal Nature sent
To lead men nobly with unconscious power,
And justify the law of accident.

REMBRANDT W. B. DITMARS, Lincoln.

10
Hail, Lincoln! As the swift years lengthen
Still more majestic grows thy fame;
The ties that bind us to thee strengthen;
Starlike-immortal shines thy name.

NATHAN HASKELL DOLE, Lincoln's Birthday.

11
His heart was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

12
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

J. S. GIBBONS, We Are Coming, Father Abraham. (New York Evening Post, 16 July, 1862.)

13
A martyr to the cause of man,
His blood is freedom's eucharist,
And in the world's great hero list
His name shall lead the van.

CHARLES G. HALPIN, The Death of Lincoln.

14
Lincoln had faith in time, and time has justified his faith.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, Lincoln Day Address, Chicago, 1898.

15
Strange mingling of mirth and tears, of the tragic and grotesque, of cap and crown, of Socrates and Rabelais, of Æsop and Marcus Aurelius—Lincoln, the gentlest memory of the world.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Lincoln was not a type. He stands alone—no ancestors, no fellows, no successors.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

<sup>1</sup> Hundreds of people are now engaged in smoothing out the lines on Lincoln's face—forcing all features to the common mold—so that he may be known, not as he really was, but, according to their poor standard, as he should have been.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Another expense we didn' used to have wuz buyin' an entirely new life of Lincoln ever' month or so.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 21.

<sup>2</sup> If the good people in their wisdom shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointment to be much chagrined.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Communication, Sangamon Journal, when first a candidate for the Illinois State Legislature, 1832.

<sup>3</sup> Nobody ever expected me to be President. In my poor, lean, lank face nobody has ever seen that any cabbages were sprouting.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

They have seen in his [Douglas's] round, jolly, fruitful face, post-offices, land-offices, marshalships and cabinet-appointments, charg -ships and foreign missions, bursting out in wonderful exuberance.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

<sup>4</sup> His head is bowed. He thinks of men and kings.

Yea, when the sick world cries, how can he sleep?

Too many peasants fight, they know not why;

Too many homesteads in black terror weep.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight.

<sup>5</sup> That nation has not lived in vain which has given the world Washington and Lincoln, the best great men and the greatest good men whom history can show.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Lincoln. Address before Massachusetts Legislature, 12 Feb., 1909.

<sup>6</sup> Great captains, with their guns and drums,
Disturb our judgment for the hour,
But at last silence comes;
These are all gone, and, standing like a tower,
Our children shall behold his fame,

The kindly-earnest, brave, foreseeing man,
Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,
New birth of our new soil, the first American.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

Nature, they say, doth dote,

And cannot make a man

Save on some worn-out plan

Repeating us by rote:

For him her Old World moulds aside she threw

And, choosing sweet clay from the breast

Of the unexhausted West,

With stuff untainted shaped a hero new.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

<sup>7</sup> A blend of mirth and sadness, smiles and tears;

A quaint knight-errant of the pioneers;

A homely hero, born of star and sod;

A Peasant-Prince; a Masterpiece of God.

WALTER MALONE, Abraham Lincoln.

<sup>8</sup> When the Norn Mother saw the Whirlwind Hour

Greatening and darkening as it hurried on,
She left the Heaven of Heroes and came down

To make a man to meet the mortal need.

She took the tried clay of the common road—

Clay warm yet with the genial heat of earth,
Dashed through it all a strain of prophecy,
Tempered the heap with thrill of human tears
Then mixed a laughter with the serious stuff.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

Here was a man to hold against the world,
A man to match the mountains and the sea.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth,
The smack and tang of elemental things:

The rectitude and patience of the cliff,

The goodwill of the rain that loves all leaves,

The friendly welcome of the wayside well,

The courage of the bird that dares the sea,

The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn,

The pity of the snow that hides all scars, . . .

The tolerance and equity of light.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

One fire was on his spirit, one resolve—
To send the keen axe to the root of wrong,

Clearing a free way for the feet of God,

The eyes of conscience testing every stroke.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

So came the Captain with the mighty heart;
And when the judgment thunders split the house,

Wrenching the rafters from their ancient rest,

He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again

The rafters of the house.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

I am Ann Rutledge who sleeps beneath these weeds,

Beloved of Abraham Lincoln,
Wedded to him, not through union,
But through separation.

From the dust of my bosom.

EDGAR LEE MASTERS, Ann Rutledge. Engraved

But from her beauty and her doom

A man rose merciful and just;
And a great People still can feel
The passion of her dust.

When Abraham Lincoln was murdered
The one thing that interested Matthew Arnold

Was that the assassin Shouted in Latin
As he leapt on the stage.

This convinced Matthew
There was still hope for America.

Mr. Lincoln was deficient in those little links which make up the path of a woman's happiness.

MARY OWENS, explaining her refusal to marry
Lincoln.

I have now come to the conclusion never again to think of marrying, and for this reason: I can never be satisfied with anyone who would be blockhead enough to have me.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Mrs. Browning,
1 April, 1838, after being rejected by Mary Owens.

For he, to whom we had applied
Our shopman's test of age and worth,
Was elemental when he died,
As he was ancient at his birth:
The saddest among kings of earth,
Bowed with a galling crown, this man
Met rancor with a cryptic mirth,
Laconic—and Olympian.

E. A. ROBINSON, The Master.

Look on this cast, and know the hand
That bore a nation in its hold;

From this mute witness understand

O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done,
The ship has weather'd every rack, the prize we sought is won,
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring?
But O heart! heart! heart!

O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, O Captain! My Captain!

The ship is anchor'd safe and sound, its voyage closed and done.

From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won;

Exult, O shores, and ring, O bells!

But I with mournful tread,
Walk the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, O Captain! My Captain!

This dust was once the man,
Gentle, plain, just and resolute, under whose cautious hand,

Against the foulest crime in history known in any land or age,

Was saved the Union of these States.

WALT WHITMAN, This Dust Was Once the Man.

Lincoln was a very normal man with very normal gifts, but all upon a great scale, all knit together in loose and natural form, like the great frame in which he moved and dwelt.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Chicago, 12 Feb., 1909.

<sup>5</sup>
You lay a wreath on murdered Lincoln's bier,
You, who with mocking pencil went to trace,

Broad for the self-complacent British sneer,
His length of shambling limb, his furrowed face.

TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln. This poem appeared in Punch, 6 May, 1865, accompanying a full-page cartoon with the caption, "Britannia Sympathises with Columbia," representing Punch among the mourners at Lincoln's bier, upon which Britannia is laying a wreath. It was Punch's apology for its scurrilous abuse and caricature of Lincoln during the whole period of the war. The poem has often been ascribed to Shirley Brooks, but an entry in his diary, under date of 10

May, 1865, is conclusive evidence that the verses were written by Taylor. Brooks wrote: "Dined Punch, all there. Let out my views about some verses on Lincoln in which T. T. had not only made P. eat 'umble pie, but swallow dish and all." So far from being the writer of the verses, he condemned their publication. At the time the poem appeared, it was also ascribed to Tennyson.

Beside this corpse, that bears for winding sheet
The Stars and Stripes he lived to rear anew,
Between the mourners at his head and feet,
Say, scurril jester, is there room for you?

Yes, he had lived to shame me from my sneer,
To lame my pencil and confute my pen—
To make me own this hind of Princes peer,
This rail-splitter a true-born king of men.

TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

Sore heart, so stopped when it at last beat high!
Sad life, cut short just as its triumph came!

TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

Vile hand, that brandest murder on a strife,
Whate'er its grounds, stoutly and nobly striven,
And with the martyr's crown, crownest a life
With much to praise, little to be forgiven.

 to whom Jupiter gave the stork as their king.
 To trust expedients with such a king on the throne would be just as wise as if there were a lion in the lobby, and we should vote to let him in and chain him, instead of fastening
 the door to keep him out.

COLONEL SILIUS TITUS, Speech, on the Exclusion Bill, House of Commons, 7 Jan., 1680.
 This, Titus's most famous speech, was delivered against the limitation which Charles offered to impose upon a Catholic sovereign rather than pass the bill excluding his brother from the throne. "A lion in the lobby" passed into a proverb.

But Titus said, with his uncommon sense,
 When the Exclusion Bill was in suspense:
 "I hear a lion in the lobby roar;
 Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we shut the door

3 He listens to good purpose who takes note. (Bene ascolta chi la nota.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 100.

4 The grace of listening is lost if the listener's attention is demanded, not as a favor, but as a right. (In audiendi officio perit gratia, si repositur.)
PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 13.

5 Listeners seldom hear good of themselves.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Hearkeners, we say, seldom hear good of themselves.
MATHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Ecclesiastes, vii.

6 Take care what you say before a wall, as you cannot tell who may be behind it.
SADI, Gulistan: Rules for Conduct. No. 12.

7 In listening mood, she seemed to stand,
The guardian Naiad of the strand.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 17.

8 And this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 66.

9 No syren did ever so charm the ear of the listener, as the listening ear has charmed the soul of the syren.
SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 239.

I—Literature: Definitions

10 Literature is the thought of thinking Souls.
CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

11 Literature is "The expression of a nation's mind in writing."

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Remarks on American Literature.

12 Literature . . . is an art, a science, a profession, a trade, and an accident. The literature that is of lasting value is an accident. It is something that happens.

S. MCC. CROTHERS, Free Trade vs. Protection in Literature.

13 There is first the literature of knowledge, and secondly, the literature of power. The function of the first is—to teach; the function of the second is—to move; the first is a rudder, the second an oar or a sail. The first speaks to the mere discursive understanding; the second speaks ultimately, it may happen, to the higher understanding or reason, but always through affections of pleasure and sympathy.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays on the Poets: Alexander Pope.

Books, we are told, propose to instruct or to amuse. Indeed! . . . The true antithesis to knowledge, in this case, is not pleasure but power. All that is literature seeks to communicate power: all that is not literature seeks to communicate knowledge.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Letters to a Young Man. No. 3. De Quincey adds that he is indebted for this distinction to "many years' conversation with Mr. Wordsworth."

Literature exists to please—to lighten the burden of men's lives; to make them for a short while forget their sorrows and their sins, their silenced hearths, their disappointed hopes, their grim futures—and those men of letters are best loved who have best performed literature's truest office.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Essays: The Office of Literature.

Literature does not please by moralizing us; it moralizes us because it pleases.

H. W. GARROD, The Profession of Poetry, p. 264.

14 Literature is an avenue to glory, ever open for those ingenious men who are deprived of honours or of wealth.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 24.

Literature—the most seductive, the most deceiving, the most dangerous of professions.

JOHN MORLEY, Life of Burke, p. 9.

15 Literature is the effort of man to indemnify himself for the wrongs of his condition.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Walter Savage Landor.

16 Literature, taken in all its bearings, forms the grand line of demarcation between the human and the animal kingdoms.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

1 Literature flourishes best when it is half a trade and half an art.

WILLIAM RALPH INGE, The Victorian Age.

Literature was formerly an art and finance a trade: to-day it is the reverse.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. i, No. 65.

2 The classics are only primitive literature. They belong to the same class as primitive machinery and primitive music and primitive medicine.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Behind the Beyond: Homer and the Humbug.

The fashion of liking Racine will pass like that of coffee. (La mode d'aimer Racine passera comme la mode du café.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, as quoted by Voltaire. (Lettres, 29 Jan., 1690.) La Harpe compressed the epigram to, "Racine passera comme le café." Since neither Racine nor coffee has passed, the prophecy may, from one angle, be considered a good one.

3 Language put to its best purpose, used at its utmost power and with the greatest skill, and recorded that it may not pass away, evaporate and be forgotten, is what we call, for want of a better word, literature.

J. W. MACKAIL, Classical Studies, p. 214.

4 American literature is English literature made in this country. . . . The American spirit in literature is a myth.

JOHN MACY, The Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

5 Take the whole range of imaginative literature, and we are all wholesale borrowers. In every matter that relates to invention, to use, or beauty, or form, we are borrowers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, The Lost Arts.

Literature is a succession of books from books. . . . Every novel was suckled at the breasts of older novels, and great mothers are often prolific of anemic offspring.

JOHN MACY, The Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

6 Great literature is simply language charged with meaning to the utmost possible degree.

EZRA POUND, How to Read. Pt. ii.

7 To turn events into ideas is the function of literature.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 138.

8 Just as we suffer from excess in all things, so we suffer from excess in literature. (Que-madmodum omnium rerum, sic litterarum quoque intemperantia laboramus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cvi, 12.

Unhealthy literature. (Nihil sanantibus litteris.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 15.

9 Literature in many of its branches is no other than the shadow of good talk.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers.

10 Literature must be an analysis of experience and a synthesis of the findings into a unity.

REBECCA WEST, Ending in Earnest.

11 Literature always anticipates life. It does not copy it, but moulds it to its purpose.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

12 Literature is the orchestration of platitudes.

THORNTON WILDER, Literature.

II—Literature: Apothegms

13 Life comes before literature, as the material always comes before the work. The hills are full of marble before the world blooms with statues.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Literature and Life.

14 There is no such thing as either literature or poetry for the masses.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 136.

15 I made a compact with myself that in my person literature should stand by itself, of itself, and for itself.

DICKENS, Speech, at Liverpool, 1869.

16 Time, the great destroyer of other men's happiness, only enlarges the patrimony of literature to its possessor.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 22.

17 Our high respect for a well-read man is praise enough of literature.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation.

18 It is life that shakes and rocks us; it is literature which stabilizes and confirms.

H. W. GARROD, Profession of Poetry, p. 257.

19 Literature, like a gypsy, to be picturesque, should be a little ragged.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Literary Men.

20 One of the evils of our literature is that our learned men are without wit, and our witty men without learning. (Un des maux de notre littérature, c'est que nos savants ont peu d'esprit, et que nos hommes d'esprit ne sont pas savants.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 258.

1 National literature begins with fables and ends with novels. (La littérature des peuples commence par les fables et finit par les romans.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 383.

Literature and fiction are two entirely different things. Literature is a luxury; fiction is a necessity.

G. K. CHESTERTON, A Defence of Penny Dreadfuls.

See also under FICTION.

2 Literature is a very bad crutch, but a very good walking-stick.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton.

3 Break your worthless pens, Thalia, and tear up your books. (Frangere leves calamos et scinde, Thalia, libellos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 73. Written in indignation at the neglect of literature.

4 The republic of letters. (La république des lettres.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Mariage Forcé. Sc. 4, l. 2. (1664)

A pamphlet . . . which should make a great noise in the republic of letters. (Une brochure . . . qui doit faire grand bruit dans la république des lettres.)

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. xii, ch. 7. (1715)

The death of Dr. Hudson is a loss to the republic of letters.

WILLIAM KING, Letter, 7 Jan., 1719; FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xiv, ch. 1. (1749)

"The Republic of Letters" is a very common expression among the Europeans.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter 20.

The Commonwealth of Letters.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 529. (1712)

5 Literary fame is the only fame of which a wise man ought to be ambitious, because it is the only lasting and living fame.

ROBERT SOUTHY, as quoted by Landor. (FORSTER, Life of Landor. Bk. vii, ch. 13.)

6 Literature is full of perfumes.

WALT WHITMAN, Uncollected Prose. Vol. ii, p. 74.

LONDON

I—London: Praise

7 As I came down the Highgate Hill,
The Highgate Hill, the Highgate Hill,
As I came down the Highgate Hill
I met the sun's bravado,
And saw below me, fold on fold,
Grey to pearl and pearl to gold,
This London like a land of old,
The land of Eldorado.

HENRY BASHFORD, Romances.

8 What a place to plunder! (Was für Plunder!)

FIELD MARSHAL VON BLÜCHER, on viewing London from St. Paul's, after the Peace Banquet at Oxford, 1814. The correct translation is, of course, "What rubbish!"

The bold old Reiter looked down from St. Paul's and sighed out, "Was für Plunder!" The German women plundered; the German cooks and intendants plundered; even Mustapha and Mahomet, the German negroes, had a share of the booty.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George I.

9 London is the clearing-house of the world.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, Guildhall, London, 19 Jan., 1904.

The centre of a thousand trades.

COWPER, Hope, l. 248.

10 Oh, London is a fine town,

A very famous city,

Where all the streets are paved with gold,
And all the maidens pretty.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law. Act i, sc. 2.

11 Where has commerce such a mart,
So rich, so throng'd, so drain'd, and so supplied

As London, opulent, enlarg'd, and still Increasing, London?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 719.

Oh thou, resort and mart of all the earth,
Chequer'd with all complexions of mankind,
And spotted with all crimes; in which I see Much that I love, and more that I admire,
And all that I abhor; thou freckl'd fair,
That pleasest and yet shock'st me.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 835.

12 London—a nation, not a city.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 27.

13 London is the epitome of our times, and the Rome of to-day.

EMERSON, English Traits: Result.

14 He was born within the sound of Bow-bell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

15 The Old Lady in Threadneedle Street in Danger.

JAMES GILLRAY. Title of caricature dated 22 May, 1797, referring to the Bank of England, which is situated in Threadneedle Street, London, and which had suspended cash payments 26 Feb., 1797. The directors of the Bank were so-called by William Cobbett, because, like Mrs. Partington, they tried with their broom to sweep back the Atlantic flood of national progress.

A silver curl-paper that I myself took off the shining locks of the ever-beautiful old lady of Threadneedle Street.

DICKENS, Dr. Marigold. Referring to a bank-note.

1
London is the only place in which the child grows completely up into the man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Londoners and Country People.

I do not think there is anything deserving the name of society to be found out of London.
. . . You can pick your society nowhere but in London.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Coffee-House Politicians.

2
When a man is tired of London he is tired of life; for there is in London all that life can afford.

3
The noble spirit of the metropolis is the life-blood of the state, collected at the heart.

JUNTIUS, Letters. No. 37.

4
Ah London! London! our delight,
Great flower that opens but at night,
Great City of the midnight sun,
Whose day begins when day is done.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, A Ballad of London.

Paris, half Angel, half Grisette,
I would that I were with thee yet;
But London waits me, like a wife,
London, the love of my whole life.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Paris Day by Day.

5
I love the haunts of old Cockaigne,
Where wit and wealth were squandered.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, St. James's Street.

6
In that temple of silence and reconciliation where the enmities of twenty generations lie buried, in the Great Abbey which has during many ages afforded a quiet resting-place to those whose minds and bodies have been shattered by the contentions of the Great Hall.

MACAULAY, Essays: Warren Hastings.

7
Go where we may, rest where we will,
Eternal London haunts us still.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. No. 9.

8
In town let me live then, in town let me die
For in truth I can't relish the country, not I.
If one must have a villa in summer to dwell,
Oh give me the sweet shady side of Pall Mall.

CHARLES MORRIS, The Contrast.

Dear, damn'd, distracting town.

POPE, A Farewell to London, l. 1.

10
I hope to see London once ere I die.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 64.

11
The way was long and weary,
But gallantly they strode,
A country lad and lassie,
Along the heavy road.

The night was dark and stormy,
But blithe of heart were they,
For shining in the distance

The lights of London lay.

O gleaming lights of London,
That gem of the city's crown;

What fortunes be within you,

O Lights of London Town!

GEORGE R. SIMS, Lights of London: Song.

12
To merry London, my most kindly nurse,
That to me gave this life's first native source.

EDMUND SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 128.

13
Oh, mine in snows and summer heats,
These good old Tory brick-built streets!

My eye is pleased with all it meets

In Bloomsbury.

WILFRED WHITTEN, Bloomsbury.

And as sure as London is built of bricks.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Education.

14
Earth has not anything to show more fair:
Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 36. Composed upon Westminster Bridge.

Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!

The river glideth at his own sweet will:

Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;

And all that mighty heart is lying still!

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 36.

II—London: Criticism

15
Lo, where huge London, huger day by day,
O'er six fair counties spreads its hideous sway!

ALFRED AUSTIN, The Golden Age.

16
I came to Gotham, where many, if not all,
I saw were fools. (Veni Gotham, ubi multos, Si non omnes, vidi stultos.)

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnabæ Itinerarium.
(1638)

A mighty mass of brick, and smoke, and shipping,
Dirty and dusty, but as wide as eye Could reach, with here and there a sail just skipping

In sight, then lost amidst the forestry
Of masts; a wilderness of steeples peeping
On tiptoe through their sea-coal canopy;

A huge, dun cupola, like a foolscap crown
On a fool's head—and there is London Town!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 82.

Thou art in London—in that pleasant place,
Where every kind of mischief's daily brewing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 23.

17
That monstrous tuberosity of civilised life,
the capital of England.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

There is a Stupidest of London men, actually resident, with bed and board of some kind, in London.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

1 London Bridge was made for wise men to go over and fools to go under.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 249. (1639) A reference to the danger incurred by boats in shooting the rapids of the old bridge, where Anne Killigrew, to whose memory Dryden wrote a famous ode, was drowned in 1685.

There is a saying also that London Bridge was built upon wool-packs.

JOHN AUBREY, Natural History of Wiltshire, p. 98. (c. 1685)

2 Let but thy wicked men from out thee go,
And all the fools that crowd thee so,
Even thou, who dost thy millions boast,
A village less than Islington will grow,
A solitude almost.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Solitude.

Methinks I see
The monster London laugh at me.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Solitude.

3 A stony-hearted step-mother.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium Eater. Pt. i. Referring to Oxford Street.

4 Mr. Weller's knowledge of London was extensive and peculiar.

DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

5 London is a roost for every bird.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 11.

London is a modern Babylon.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. v, ch. 5.

6 Beyond Hyde Park all is a desert.

GEORGE ETHEREGE, The Man of Mode.

London-over-the-Border.

A term applied to the Metropolitan district in Essex, derived from an article on that area in Household Words (12 Sept., 1857) entitled Londoners-over-the-Border. The article has been attributed without authority to Charles Dickens.

7 Ye towers of Julius, London's lasting shame,
With many a foul and midnight murder fed.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard. Pt. ii, st. 3. Referring to the Tower of London.

Purg'd by the sword, and purified by fire,
Then had we seen proud London's hated walls;
Owls would have hooted in St. Peter's choir,
And foxes stunk and litter'd in St. Paul's.

THOMAS GRAY, Impromptu on Lord Holland's Seat at Kingsgate.

8 People-pestered London.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, The Lover to His Dear.

9 London has a great belly but no palate.

THOMAS HOBBS, History of the Civil Wars, p. 169.

London's the dining-room of Christendom.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, City Pageant.

10 London! the needy villain's gen'ral home,
The common shore of Paris, and of Rome;
With eager thirst, by folly or by fate,
Sucks in the dregs of each corrupted state.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 93.

For who would leave, unbrib'd, Hibernia's land,
Or change the rocks of Scotland for the Strand? . . .

Here malice, rapine, accident, conspire,
And now a rabble rages, now a fire;
Their ambush here relentless ruffians lay,
And here the fell attorney prowls for prey;
Here falling houses thunder on your head,
And here a female atheist talks you dead.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 9.

11 Where London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head and lies.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 339.

12 Londoner-like ask as much more as you will take.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 349. (1678)

13 You are now
In London, that great sea, whose ebb and flow

At once is deaf and loud, and on the shore
Vomits its wrecks, and still howls on for more.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 192.

14 We looked o'er London, where men wither and choke,
Roofed in, poor souls, renouncing stars and skies.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, A Talk on Waterloo Bridge.

LONELINESS, see Solitude

LONGFELLOW, HENRY WADSWORTH

15 O gracious Poet and benign,
Belovèd presence! now as then
Thou standest by the hearths of men.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Longfellow.

16 The New World's sweetest singer! Time may lay

Rude touch on some, thy betters; yet for thee
Thy seat is where the throned immortals be.

CRAVEN L. BETTS, Longfellow.

17 Whose Muse, benignant and serene,
Still keeps his Autumn chaplet green
Because his verse is pure!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Ah! gentlest soul! how gracious, how benign Breathes through our troubled life that voice of
thine,

Filled with a sweetness born of happier spheres,
That wins and warms, that kindles, softens,
cheers,
That calms the wildest woe and stays the bitterest tears!

O. W. HOLMES, To H. W. Longfellow.

<sup>1</sup> You may say that he's smooth and all that till you're hoarse,
But remember that elegance also is force;
After polishing granite as much as you will,
The heart keeps its tough old persistency
still.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1311.

<sup>2</sup> The winds have talked with him confidingly;
The trees have whispered to him; and the
night

Hath held him gently as a mother might,
And taught him all sad tones of melody.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Longfellow.

<sup>3</sup> A pure sweet spirit, generous and large
Was thine, dear poet. Calm, unturbulent,
Its course along Life's various ways it went,
Like some broad river. . . . Ever to the sea . . .

Thy life flowed on, from all low passions free,
Filled with high thoughts, charmed into Poesy
To all the world a solace and delight.

W. W. STORY, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

<sup>4</sup> Threadbare his songs seem now, to lettered ken:

They were worn threadbare next the hearts of men.

WILLIAM WATSON, Longfellow.

iii, sc. 1.

LOTUS

6
Where drooping lotos-flowers, distilling balm, Dream by the drowsy streamlets sleep hath crowned,
While Care forgets to sigh, and Peace hath balsamed Pain.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Sonnet.
7
Lotos the name: divine, nectareous juice!
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 106. (Pope, tr.)

8
Stone lotus cups, with petals dipped in sand.
JEAN INGELOW, Gladys and Her Island, l. 460.

9
They wove the lotus band to deck
And fan with pensile wreath their neck.
THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode lxx.

Whose flowers have a soul in every leaf.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri.

10
A spring there is, whose silver waters show,
Clear as a glass, the shining sands below:
A flowery lotos spreads its arms above,
Shades all the banks, and seems itself a grove.
POPE, Sappho to Phaon, l. 179.

11
The lotos bowed above the tide and dreamed.
MARGARET J. PRESTON, Rhodope's Sandal.

12
Thro' every hollow cave and alley lone,
Round and round the spicy downs the yellow
Lotos-dust is blown.
TENNYSON, The Lotos-Eaters: Choric Song.

13
In that dark land of mystic dream
Where dark Osiris sprung,
It bloomed beside his sacred stream
While yet the world was young;
And every secret Nature told,
Of golden wisdom's power,
Is nestled still in every fold,
Within the Lotos flower.
WILLIAM WINTER, A Lotos Flower.

LOUSE

14
Ha! Wha're ye gaun, ye crowlin' ferlie!
Your impudence protects you sairly;
I canna say but ye strunt rarely
Owre gauze an' lace;
Tho' faith! I fear ye dine but sparely
On sic a place.
BURNS, To a Louse.

Ye ugly, creepin', blastit wonner,
Detested, shunn'd by saunt an' sinner!
How dare ye set your fit upon her,
Sae fine a lady?
Gae somewhere else, and seek your dinner
On some poor body.
BURNS, To a Louse.

15
Better a louse in the pot than no flesh at all.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 241. (1639)

16
I care not I, sir, not three skips of a louse.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub, ii, 1. (1633)
Lady Montague told me, and in her own house,
"I do not care for you three skips of a louse."
I forgive her, for women, however well-bred,
Will still talk of that which runs most in their
head.
HENRY FOX, Impromptu Retort, to Lady
Montague.

17
It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies
—love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 21.

I—Love: Definitions

18
Nuptial love maketh mankind; friendly love perfecteth it; wanton love corrupteth and debaseth it.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

If divine Plato's tenets they be true,
Two Venuses, two loves there be;
The one, from heaven, unbegotten still,
Which knits our souls in unity;
The other famous over all the world,

Binding the hearts of gods and men,
Dishonest, wanton, and seducing she,
Rules whom she will, both where and when.
BEROALDUS, Epigram. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 2.)

1
Ask not of me, love, what is love?
Ask what is good of God above—
Ask of the great sun what is light—
Ask what is darkness of the night—
Ask sin of what may be forgiven—
Ask what is happiness of Heaven—
Ask what is folly of the crowd—
Ask what is fashion of the shroud—
Ask what is sweetness of thy kiss—
Ask of thyself what beauty is.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party and Entertainment. See also BEAUTY AND LOVE.

2
Love is a fiend, a fire, a heaven, a hell,
Where pleasure, pain, and sad repentance dwell.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 38.

3
Love is that orbit of the restless soul
Whose circle grazes the confines of space,
Bounding within the limits of its race
Utmost extremes.

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Sonnet: Love.

4
Unless you can think, when the song is done,
No other is soft in the rhythm;
Unless you can feel, when left by One,
That all men else go with him;
Unless you can know, when unpraised by his breath,

That your beauty itself wants proving;
Unless you can swear "For life, for death!"—
Oh, fear to call it loving!

E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

Unless you can muse in a crowd all day
On the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love, as the angels may,
With the breadth of heaven betwixt you;
Unless you can dream that his faith is fast,
Through behoving and unbehoving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving!

E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

5
Love is the business of the idle, but the idleness of the busy.

BULWER-LYTTON, Rienzi. Ch. 4.

Love has no thought of self!
Love buys not with the ruthless usurer's gold
The loathsome prostitution of a hand
Without a heart! Love sacrifices all things
To bless the thing it loves!

BULWER-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act v, sc. 2, l. 23.

6
All love, at first, like generous wine,
Ferments and frets until 'tis fine;

But, when 'tis settled on the lee,
And from th' impurer matter free,
Becomes the richer still the older,
And proves the pleasanter the colder.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 361.

7
Yes, Love indeed is light from heaven;
A spark of that immortal fire
With angels shared, by Allah given,
To lift from earth our low desire.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1131.

Love! the surviving gift of Heaven,
The choicest sweet of Paradise,
In life's else bitter cup distilled.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Memory of Burns, l. 16.

8
Love is ever the beginning of Knowledge as fire is of light.

CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe.

A loving heart is the beginning of all knowledge.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

Knowledge is the parent of love; wisdom, love itself.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

9
What is love? 'tis nature's treasure,
'Tis the storehouse of her joys;

'Tis the highest heaven of pleasure,
'Tis a bliss which never cloys.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act i, 2.

Ah, what is love? It is a pretty thing,
As sweet unto a shepherd as a king,
And sweeter too,
For kings have cares that wait upon a crown,
And cares can make the sweetest love to frown.

ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.

What thing is love?—for (well I wot) love is a thing.

It is a prick, it is a sting.

It is a pretty, pretty thing;

It is a fire, it is a coal,

Whose flame creeps in at every hole!

GEORGE PEELE, The Hunting of Cupid.

10
Love's but a frailty of the mind,
When 'tis not with ambition joined.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 1.

And love's the noblest frailty of the mind.

DRYDEN, The Indian Emperor. Act ii, sc. 2.

That reason of all unreasonable actions.

DRYDEN, The Assignment. Act iii, sc. 1.

11
When too much zeal doth fire devotion,
Love is not love, but superstition.

Our love is principle, and has its root
In reason, is judicious, manly, free.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 353.

13
Love is a sickness full of woes,
All remedies refusing;

A plant that with most cutting grows,
Most barren with best using.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Hymen's Triumph.

1 Many are the names applied to friendship;
but where youth and beauty enter in, there friendship is rightly called love and is held to be the fairest of the gods.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 99.

2 Knightly love is blent with reverence
As heavenly air is blent with heavenly blue.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

3 In the last analysis, love is only the reflection of a man's own worthiness from other men.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Love, which is the essence of God, is not for levity, but for the total worth of man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

4 Love is the blossom where there blows
Every thing that lives or grows.

GILES FLETCHER, Christ's Victory.

Love is life's end (an end, but never ending);
All joys, all sweets, all happiness, awarding;
Love is life's wealth (ne'er spent, but ever spending);

More rich by giving, taking by discarding;
Love's life's reward, rewarded in rewarding.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Britain's Ida. Canto ii,
st. 8.

Love is the tyrant of the heart; it darkens
Reason, confounds discretion; deaf to counsel,
It runs a headlong course to desperate madness.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 105.

5 Love is God's essence; Power but his attribute: therefore is his love greater than his power.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt. iv.

Thou canst not pray to God without praying to Love, but mayest pray to Love without praying to God.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt.
xiii.

6 It is the special quality of love not to be able to remain stationary, to be obliged to increase under pain of diminishing.

ANDRÉ GIDE, The Counterfeiters. Pt. iii, ch. 5.

7 Love is a platform upon which all ranks meet.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

8 Love and desire are the spirit's wings to great deeds. (Lust und Liebe sind die Fittige zu grossen Thaten.)

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act ii, sc. 1.

9 Love is a lock that linketh noble minds,
Faith is the key that shuts the spring of love.

ROBERT GREENE, Alcida.

10 Love is a circle, that doth restless move
In the same sweet eternity of love.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love, What It Is.

11 To love is to know the sacrifices which eternity exacts from life.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBS, School for Saints. Ch.
25.

12 In love inhere these evils—first war, then peace. (In amore hæc sunt malis, bellum, Pax russum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 267.

13 Love's like the flies, and, drawing-room or garden, goes all over a house.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Love.

14 Love is only one of many passions . . . and has no great influence on the sum of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 244.

15 Love is the leech of life, next to our Lord,
It is the graft of peace, the nearest road to
heaven.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ii, l. 201.

16 Love keeps the cold out better than a cloak.
It serves for food and raiment.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
5, l. 52.

17 True Love is but a humble, low-born thing,
And hath its food served up in earthen ware;
It is a thing to walk with, hand in hand,
Through the everydayness of this workday
world.

J. R. LOWELL, Love, l. 1.

18 Love is a beautiful dream.

WILLIAM SHARP, Cor Cordium.

19 Therefore the love which us doth bind,
But Fate so enviously debars,

Is the conjunction of the mind,
And opposition of the stars.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Definition of Love.

20 Love is a flame to burn out human wills,
Love is a flame to set the will on fire,
Love is a flame to cheat men into mire. . . .
Love puts such bitter poison on Fate's arrow.

JOHN MASEFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. ii.

21 Love is all in fire, and yet is ever freezing;
Love is much in winning, yet is more in leas-
ing;

Love is ever sick, and yet is never dying;
Love is ever true, and yet is ever lying;
Love does doat in liking, and is mad in loathing;

Love indeed is anything, yet indeed is nothing.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2.

Love is the mind's strong physic, and the pill
That leaves the heart sick and o'eturns the will.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act iii, sc. 1.

This have I known always: Love is no more
Than the wide blossom which the wind assails,
Than the great tide that treads the shifting
shore,

Strewing fresh wreckage gathered in the gales;
Pity me that the heart is slow to learn

What the swift mind beholds at every turn.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnets. No. vi.

As God's my judge, I do cry Holy! Holy!
Upon the name of Love, however brief.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Love Sonnet.

2
Love is nothing else but an insatiate thirst of enjoying a greedily desired object.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

3
One of the glories of society is to have created woman where Nature made a female, to have created a continuity of desire where Nature only thought of perpetuating the species; in fine, to have invented love.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions.

Love is based upon a view of women that is impossible to any man who has had any experience of them.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 67.

4
"Tell me, what's Love?" said Youth, one day,
To drooping Age, who crost his way.—

"It is a sunny hour of play,
For which repentance dear doth pay,
Repentance! Repentance!

And this is Love, as wise men say."

THOMAS MOORE, Youth and Age.

5
Romantic love is the privilege of emperors, kings, soldiers and artists; it is the butt of democrats, traveling salesmen, magazine poets and the writers of American novels.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 14.

Romance cannot be put into quantity production
—the moment love becomes casual, it becomes commonplace.

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 239.

6
Youth's for an hour, beauty's a flower,
But love is the jewel that wins the world.

MOIRA O'NEILL, Beauty's a Flower.

7
Love is a kind of warfare. (Militiæ species amor est.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 233.

Every lover is a soldier, and Cupid has a camp of his own. The age that is meet for the wars is also suited to Venus. (Militat omnis amans, et habet sua castra Cupido; Quæ bello est habilis, Veneri quoque convenit ætas.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, epis. 9, l. 1.

Love, an' please your Honour, is exactly like war,

in this, that a soldier, though he has escaped three weeks complete o' Saturday night, may, nevertheless, be shot through his heart on Sunday morning.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vii, ch. 21.

Who sell their laurel for a myrtle wreath,
And love when they should fight.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 229.

8
'Tis that delightful transport we can feel
Which painters cannot paint, nor words reveal,

Nor any art we know of can conceal.

THOMAS PAINE, What Is Love?

9
We may, without undue tension of speech, speak of Goodness as Love in conduct; of Truth as Love in thought; of Beauty as Love in self-expression, in whatever medium.

RICHARD ROBERTS. (NEWTON, My Idea of God,

10
Love is the fulfilling of the law.

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 10.

11
Love indeed is a light burden, not cumbering but lightening the bearer; and maketh glad both young and old. . . . Love is the fairest and most profitable guest that a reasonable creature can entertain. . . . In the light and warmth of love our life grows strong and comely: a better dwelling, nor a sweeter, never
I found.

RICHARD ROLLE, Incendium Amoris.

12
To love is to choose.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ix, No. 1.

13
Love is an egotism of two. (L'amour est un égoïsme à deux.)

ANTOINE DE SALLE.

Many people when they fall in love look for a little haven of refuge from the world, where they can be sure of being admired when they are not admirable, and praised when they are not praiseworthy.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 180.

14
True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven: . . .

It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v,
st. 13.

15
Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to
love.

It is to be all made of sighs and tears; . . .
It is to be all made of faith and service; . . .

It is to be all made of fantasy.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, l. 89.

Love is merely a madness, and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 420.

Love is a familiar; Love is a devil: there is no evil angel but Love.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 177.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 333.

And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 344.

1 Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs; Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes; Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears: What is it else? a madness most discreet, A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 196. (1595)

Love is a sour delight, a sugar'd grief, A living death, an ever-dying life; A breach of Reason's law, a secret thief, A sea of tears, an everlasting strife; A bait for fools, a scourge of noble wits, A deadly wound, a shot which ever hits.

THOMAS WATSON, The Passionate Centurie of Love. Sonnet xviii. (1582) Watson's eighteen-line "sonnets" were closely studied by Shakespeare, whose own sonnets appeared in 1600.

2 Love's heralds should be thoughts, Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams, Driving back shadows over louring hills: Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 4.

3 Love is not love Which alters when it alteration finds, Or bends with the remover to remove: O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark That looks on tempests and is never shaken; It is a star to every wandering bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass come; Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, But bears it out even to the edge of doom.

If this be error and upon me proved,

I never writ, nor no man ever loved. SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxvi.

Love's not love When it is mingled with regards that stand Aloof from the entire point.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 241.

4 Love is the salt of life.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, Ode on Love. Canto v.

5 Love is a pleasing but a various clime.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegy, v.

Love is an April's doubtful day:

Awhile we see the tempest lour; Anon the radiant heav'n survey, And quite forget the fitting show'r.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Song, vii.

6 Love is an appetite of generation by the mediation of beauty.

SOCRATES. (MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.)

7 Love is the emblem of eternity: it confounds all notion of time: effaces all memory of a beginning, all fear of an end.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. viii, ch. 2.

8 Love in its essence is spiritual fire.

SWEDENBORG, True Christian Religion. Par. 31.

9 A reality in the domain of the imagination.

TALLEYRAND, defining love. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

10 Love is swift, sincere, pious, pleasant, gentle, strong, patient, faithful, prudent, long-suffering, manly and never seeking her own; for wheresoever a man seeketh his own, there he falleth from love.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

11 Love is the strange bewilderment which overtakes one person on account of another person.

JAMES THURBER AND E. B. WHITE, Is Sex Necessary?

12 You are as prone to love as the sun is to shine; it being the most delightful and natural employment of the Soul of Man: without which you are dark and miserable. For certainly he that delights not in Love makes vain the universe, and is of necessity to himself the greatest burden.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

13 The bodies of lovers are the forms of ineffable Desire,

Male and female serpents of the Holy Spirit Breathing out its essence in individual outline.

W. J. TURNER, The Pursuit of Psyche.

14 Love is the child of illusion and the parent of disillusion; love is consolation in desolation; it is the sole medicine against death, for it is death's brother.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, The Tragic Sense of Life, p. 132.

1 For love is but the heart's immortal thirst
To be completely known and all forgiven.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Love.

Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure, and a madness of desire—oh, no, love is not that—it is goodness, and honor, and peace and pure living.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Little Rivers: A Handful of Heather.

2 To love is to believe, to hope, to know;
'Tis an essay, a taste of Heaven below!

EDMUND WALLER, Divine Love. Canto iii, l. 17.

Life's one joy is this,
To love, to taste the soul's divine delight
Of loving some most lovely soul or sight—
To worship still, though never an answering sign
Should come from Love asleep within the shrine.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Coming of Love. Pt. x, l. 12.

And I know that the hand of God is the promise
of my own,

And I know that the spirit of God is the brother
of my own,

And that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women my sisters and lovers,

And that a kelson of the creation is love.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 5.

3 Say not you love a roasted fowl,
But you may love a screaming owl,
And, if you can, the unwieldy toad.

WORDSWORTH, Loving and Liking.

4 Love is the god who gives safety to the city.

ZENO. (DENIS, Théories Morales. Vol. i, p. 346.)

5 Now I know what love is. (Nunc scio quid sit Amor.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. viii, l. 43.

6 Tell me, my heart, if this be love.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, Song: When Delia.

But love is such a mystery

I cannot find it out:

For when I think I'm best resolved,

I then am most in doubt.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Song: I Prithce Send Me Back My Heart.

II—Love: Apothegms

7 Love spends his all, and still hath store.

III—Love: Its Blindness

12 If things were seen as they truly are, the beauty of bodies would be much abridged.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 9.

13 For love is blind all day and may not see.
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 354.

14 I have heard of reasons manifold
Why Love must needs be blind,
But this the best of all I hold—
His eyes are in his mind.
What outward form and feature are
He guesseseth but in part;
But that within is good and fair
He seeth with the heart.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Reason for Love's Blindness.

15 Never was owl more blind than a lover.
DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna.

16 Love is not a hood, but an eye-water.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

17 Every one is blind when maddened by love. (Scilicet insano nemo in amore videt.)
PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 14, l. 18.

18 But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 36.

Things base and vile, holding no quality,
Love can transpose to form and dignity:
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind:
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste;
Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste:
And therefore is Love said to be a child,

Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 232.

The lover . . .

Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 10.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,

That they behold, and see not what they see?

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxvii.

Love doth to her eyes repair,

To help him of his blindness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 2, l. 46.

I joyed; but straight thus water'd was my wine,—

That love she did, but loved a love not blind.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet lxii.

IV—Love and Pity

Of all the paths that lead to a woman's love Pity's the straightest.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of Malta. Act i, sc. 1, l. 73.

Pity, some say, is the parent of future love.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Spanish Curate. Act v, sc. 1.

'Tis pity makes a Deity;

Ah, Silvia, deign to pity me,

And I will worship none but thee.

APHERA BEHN, Dialogue for Entertainment at Court.

Love gains the shrine when pity opes the door.

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iii.

Anon her heart hath pity of his woe,

And with that pity love came in also.

CHAUCEER, The Legend of Good Women: Dido, l. 155.

In women pity begets love, in men love begets pity.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Pity is sworn servant unto love;

And thus be sure, wherever it begin

To make the way, it lets the master in.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Queen's Arcadia. Act iii, sc. 1.

'Twas but a kindred sound to move,

For pity melts the mind to love.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 5.

Can you pretend to love

And have no pity? Love and that are twins.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act iii, sc. 1.

Pity is love when grown into excess,

ROBERT HOWARD, The Vestal Virgin.

Love's pale sister, Pity.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Hymn to Darga.

He kin' o' l'itered on the mat,

Some doubtfle o' the sekle,

His heart kep' goin' pity-pat,

But hern went pity Zekle.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

For trust me, they who never melt

With pity, never melt with love.

THOMAS MOORE, To a Lady, With Some Manuscript Poems.

Pity is but one remove from love.

RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. i, 34.

Soft pity never leaves the gentle breast

Where love has been received a welcome guest.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act ii, sc. 4.

Pity's akin to love; and every thought

Of that soft kind is welcome to my soul.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act ii, sc. 2.

Pity swells the tide of love.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 106.

V—Love and Wisdom

'Tis impossible to love and to be wise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love. Quoted.

Away with doubts, all scruples hence remove;
No man at one time can be wise, and love.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Silvia to Wed.

'Tis hard to be in love and to be wise.

NATHANIEL LEE, Princess of Cleve. Act i, sc. 3.

Men loved wholly beyond wisdom

Have the staff without the banner.

LOUISE BOGAN, Men Loved Wholly.

The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom.

(Le premier soupir de l'amour Est le dernier de la sagesse.)

ANTOINE BRET, École Amoureuse. Sc. 7.

The wisest man the warl' e'er saw,

He dearly lov'd the lasses, O.

BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes, O.

How wise are they that are but fools in love!

JO. COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1610) First name uncertain.

O tyrant love, when held by you,

We may to prudence bid adieu.

(Amour! Amour! quand tu nous tiens

On peut bien dire, Adieu, prudence.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 1.

Prudence and love are not made for each other:
as love increases, prudence diminishes. (La prudence et l'amour ne sont pas faits l'un pour l'autre: à mesure que l'amour croît, la prudence diminue.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 546.

1 It is not reason that governs love. (La raison n'est pas ce qui règle l'amour.)

MOULÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 248.

I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 21.

To say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 146.

Love draws me one way, reason another. (Aliud-que cupido, mens aliud suadet.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 18.

2 A little sane love is all right, but not the insane sort. (Bonum est paucillum amare sane, insane non bonum est.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 176.

Find me a reasonable lover, and I'll give you his weight in gold. (Auro contra cedo modestum amatorem, a me aurem accipe.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 201.

3 Lover, lunatic. (Amans amens.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 82.

Of lunatics rather than of lovers. (Amentium, haud amantium.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 218.

4 To love and to be wise is scarcely given to a god. (Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 22.

The proverb holds, that to be wise and love, is hardly granted to the gods above.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 364.

To be wise and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 163.

To be wise and eke to love
Is granted scarce to god above.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: March: Willye's Emblem.

5 Only a wise man knows how to love. (Solut sapiens scit amare.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, 12.

6 If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 34.

We that are true lovers, run into strange capers.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 55.

7 Love is your master, for he masters you:

And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 1, l. 39.

8 In all I wish, how happy should I be,
Thou grand Deluder, were it not for thee?
So weak thou art that fools thy power despise;
And yet so strong, thou triumph'st o'er the wise.

SWIFT, To Love.

Love is master of the wisest. It is only fools who defy him.

THACKERAY, Men's Wives: Dennis Haggarty's Wife.

9 Knowledge and love, altogether cotton not.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 7. (1666)

VI—Love: Two Souls With But a Single Thought

10 My heart, I fain would ask thee
What then is Love? say on.

"Two souls with one thought only,
Two hearts that beat as one."

(Mein Herz ich will dich fragen, Was ist denn Liebe, sag?)

"Zwei Seelen und ein Gedanke, Zwei Herzen und ein Schlag.")

VON MÜNCH BELLINGHAUSEN (FRIEDRICH HALM), Der Sohn der Wildniss. Act ii. (W. H. Charlton, tr.)

Charlton's translation was the one preferred by the author.

Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one.

VON MÜNCH BELLINGHAUSEN, Ingomar the Barbarian. Last lines. (Maria Anne Lovell, tr.) This is the popular translation of the play, which was a favorite in the American theater for many years.

Trooly it is with us as it was with Mr. & Mrs. Ingomer in the Play, to wit—

2 soles with but a single thawt

2 harts which beet as 1.

ARTEMUS WARD, Among the Spirits.

11 As for the lover, his soul dwells in the body of another. (Τοῦ δ' ἐρώμετος τὴν ψυχὴν ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ σώματι ἔσῃ.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 5.)

Love is a spiritual coupling of two souls,
So much more excellent, as it least relates Unto the body.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iii, sc. 2.

12 Two souls in one, two hearts into one heart.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6, l. 1057. (Sylvester, tr.)

What is love? Two souls and one flesh. Friendship? Two bodies and one soul.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Love, Friendship, Friends. (Hapgood, tr.)

Bianca: Canst tell me what love is?

Guido: It is consent. The union of two minds, two souls, two hearts

In all they think, and hope, and feel.

OSCAR WILDE, A Florentine Tragedy.

1 Naught can restrain consent of twain. (Non caret effectu, quod voluere duo.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 3, l. 16.

Love keeps his revels where there are but twain.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 123.

2 One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
One heart, one bed, two bosoms and one troth.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 41.

3 Love, that two hearts makes one, makes eke one will.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 4, st. 19.

We were two and had but one heart. (Deux eptions et n'avions qu'un cœur.)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Rondeau.

The world has little to bestow
Where two fond hearts in equal love are joined.
ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Delia.

Two human loves make one divine.
E. B. BROWNING, Isobel's Child. St. 16.

VII—Love: With All Your Faults

4 Affection should not be too sharp-eyed, and love is not to be made by magnifying glasses.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals, p. 70.

Analysis kills love, as well as other things.
JOHN BROWN, Horæ Subsecivæ.

5 Never love unless you can
Bear with all the faults of man!
THOMAS CAMPION, Advice to a Girl.

6 With all thy faults, I love thee still.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206.

7 But love can every fault forgive,
Or with a tender look reprove;
And now let naught in memory live
But that we meet, and that we love.
GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall: The Elder Brother: Song.

8 Love sees no faults.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3297.

9 For Love can beauties spy
In what seem faults to every common eye.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 121.

10 When we love, it is the heart that judges.
(Quand on aime, c'est le cœur qui juge.)
JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 66.

11 If lovers should mark everything a fault,
Affection would be like an ill-set book,

Whose faults might prove as big as half a volume.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling. Act
ii, sc. 1.

12 The woman we love will always be in the right.
(La femme qu'on aime aura toujours raison.)
ALFRED DE MUSSET, Idylle.

13 Could I her faults remember,
Forgetting every charm,
Soon would impartial reason
The tyrant love disarm.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

14 We love the things we love in spite
Of what they are.
LOUIS UNTERMAYER, Love.

VIII—Love and Life

15 One hour of right-down love
Is worth an age of dully living on.
APHERA BEHN, II The Rover. Act v, sc. 1.

Each moment of a happy lover's hour
Is worth an age of dull and common life.
APHERA BEHN, Younger Brother. Act iii, sc. 3.

16 For life, with all it yields of joy and woe, . . .
Is just a chance o' the prize of learning love.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l.
245.

17 What is life when wanting love?
Night without a morning!
Love's the cloudless summer sun,
Nature gay adorning.
BURNS, Thine Am I.

18 Love's the weightier business of mankind.
COLLEY CIBBER, *She Wou'd and She Wou'd
Not*. Act i, last line.

We are all born for love; it is the principle of existence and its only end.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sibyl. Bk. v, ch. 4.

Th' important business of your life is love.
GEORGE LYTTELTON, Advice to a Lady.

19 Life without love is load; and time stands
still:

What we refuse to him, to death we give;
And then, then only, when we love, we live.
CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 10.

Love, then, hath every bliss in store;
'Tis friendship, and 'tis something more.
Each other every wish they give;
Not to know love is not to live.
JOHN GAY, Plutus, Cupid and Time, l. 135.

She who has never loved has never lived.
JOHN GAY, The Captives. Act ii, sc. 1.
See also LIFE AND LIVING.

20 Canst thou not wait for Love one flying hour
O heart of little faith?
EDMUND GOSSE, Sonnet: Dejection and Delay.

Ye gods! annihilate but space and time,
And make two lovers happy.

POPE, The Art of Sinking in Poetry. Ch. 9.
Quoted as "Anon."

1
Among the holy bookes wise,
I finde writ in such wise,
Who loveth nought is here as dead.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv.

And he that liveth to himself is dead,
And he that lives for love lives evermore;
Only in love can life's true path be trod;
Love is self-giving; therefore love is God.

MORTON LUCE, Thysia. Sonnet xxxvi.

2
To live without loving is not really to live.
(Vivre sans aimer n'est pas proprement vivre.)

MOLIÈRE, La Princesse d'Élide. Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 40.

Take love away from life and you take away its pleasures. (Ôtez l'amour de la vie, Vous en ôtez les plaisirs.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Dialogue between Acts i and ii.

Life! what art thou without love?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables. Fable xiv.

3
Were it not for love,
Poor life would be a ship not worth the launching.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Tristram.

4
Life's richest cup is Love's to fill—
Who drinks, if deep the draught shall be,
Knows all the rapture of the hill
Blent with the heart-break of the sea.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, Love's Cup.

5
To love it is and love alone
That life or luxury is known.

J. B. TABB, The Test.

6
Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, pass'd in music out of sight.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 33.

IX—Love in Man and Woman

See also Woman and Love

7
Love is so different with us men.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.

8
Alas; the love of women! it is known
To be a lovely and a fearful thing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 199.

9
Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,
'Tis woman's whole existence: man may range
The court, camp, church, the vessel, and the mart,
Sword, gown, gain, glory, offer in exchange

Pride, fame, ambition, to fill up his heart,
And few there are whom these cannot estrangle;

Men have all these resources, we but one,
To love again, and be again undone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 194.

A woman's whole life is a history of the affections.
WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

To a man the disappointment of love may occasion some bitter pangs: it wounds some feelings of tenderness—it blasts some prospects of felicity;
but he is an active being—he may dissipate his thoughts in the whirl of varied occupation. . . .
But woman's is comparatively a fixed, a secluded, and meditative life. . . . Her lot is to be wooed and won; and if unhappy in her love, her heart is like some fortress that has been captured, and sacked, and abandoned, and left desolate.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

Love, that of every woman's heart
Will have the whole, and not a part,
That is to her, in Nature's plan,
More than ambition is to man,
Her light, her life, her very breath,
With no alternative but death.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, sec. 7.

Howe'er man rules in science and in art,
The sphere of woman's glories is the heart.

THOMAS MOORE, Epilogue to the Tragedy of Ina, l. 53.

Man dreams of fame, while woman wakes to love.
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 458.

10
The love of man? Exotic flower,
Broken, crushed, within an hour.
The love of woman? Storm-swept sea
Surging into eternity.

ELLEN M. CARROLL, Man and Woman.

11
Poor love is lost in men's capacious minds,
In ours, it fills up all the room it finds.

JOHN CROWNE, Thyestes.

Oh! a man's love is strong
When fain he comes a-mating.

But a woman's love is long
And grows when it is waiting.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, The Two Loves.

13
I know a woman's portion when she loves,
It's hers to give, my darling, not to take;
It isn't lockets, dear, nor pairs of gloves,
It isn't marriage bells nor wedding cake,
It's up and cook, although the belly ache;
And bear the child, and up and work again,
And count a sick man's grumble worth the pain.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

14
Women know no perfect love;
Loving the strong, they can forsake the
strong;

Man clings because the being whom he loves
Is weak and needs him.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

1 Love lessens woman's delicacy and increases man's. (Die Liebe vermindert die weibliche Feinheit und verstärkt die männliche.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 34.

A loving maiden grows unconsciously more bold.
(Ein liebendes Mädchen wird unbewusst kühner.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 71.

2 Love is the history of a woman's life; it is an episode in man's. (L'amour est l'histoire de la vie des femmes; c'est un épisode dans celle des hommes.)

MADAME DE STAËL, De L'Influence des Passions.

3 Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 26.

4 A man can be happy with any woman as long as he does not love her.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

X—Love for Love

5 To be beloved, love. (Ut ameris, ama.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xxii, l. 6; MARTIAL,
Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 11.

If you would be loved, love. (Si vis amari, ama.)

HECATO, Fragments. No. 27. (SENECA, Epistu-læ ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 6.)

That you may be loved, be lovable. (Ut ameris, amabilis esto.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 107.

If you would be loved, love and be lovable.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1755.

6 Show thou love to win love.

WILLIAM BARCLAY, Mirror of Good Manners,
p. 74. (1570)

7 But I love you, sir:
And when a woman says she loves a man,
The man must hear her, though he love her not.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 613.

Behold me! I am worthy

Of thy loving, for I love thee!

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 79.

If thou must love me, let it be for nought
Except for love's sake only.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xiv.

8 And because my heart I proffered,
With true love trembling at the brim,
He suffers me to follow him.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Canto ix.

Love like mine must have return.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

9 I cannot love where I'm beloved.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 304.

I cannot love thee as I ought,
For love reflects the thing beloved.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lii, st. 1.

10 Love looks for love again.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 27. (1639)

Love is the loadstone of love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3288.

The only present love demands is love.

JOHN GAY, The Espousal, l. 56.

And sure love craveth love, like asketh like.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk.
xxviii, st. 80. (1591)

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love.

THOMAS HOOD, Hero and Leander, l. 120.

11 If there's delight in love, 'tis when I see That heart which others bleed for, bleed for
me.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12.

Johnson: "True. When he whom everybody else flatters, flatters me, I then am truly happy."
Mrs. Thrall: "The sentiment is in Congreve, I think." Johnson: "Yes, madam, in The Way of the World."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

12 Love, which insists that love shall mutual be.
(Amor che a nullo amato amar perdona.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 103.

13 The sense of the world is short,—
Long and various the report,—

To love and be beloved;

Men and gods have not outlearned it;
And, how oft soe'er they've turned it,
'Tis not to be improved.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Eros.

14 Let no man think he is loved by any when he loves none.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 156.

Let him love no one, and be beloved by none.
(Nec amet quemquam, nec ametur ab ullo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 130.

15 The devil take me, if I think anything but love to be the object of love.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 9. (1751)

16 Only in love they happy prove
Who love what most deserves their love.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 6.

17 If I love you, what business is that of yours?
(Wenn ich dich lieb habe, was geht's dich an?)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

18 There is no heaven like mutual love.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Peleus and Thetis.

19 Love is kindest, and hath most length,

The kisses are most sweet,
When it's enjoyed in heat of strength,
Where like affections meet.
PATRICK HANNAY, Song.

<sup>1</sup> That bliss no wealth can bribe, no pow'r bestow,

That bliss of angels, love by love repaid.
DAVID MALLET, Amyntas and Theodora.
Canto i, l. 367.

<sup>2</sup> Divine is Love and scorneth worldly pelf,
And can be bought with nothing but with self.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Love the Only Price of Love.

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought,
Love gives itself, but is not bought.
LONGFELLOW, Endymion. St. 4.

<sup>3</sup> Lovers live by love as larks live by leeks.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

<sup>4</sup> Love begins with love.
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.

<sup>5</sup> The pleasure of love is in loving; and we are much happier in the passion we feel than in that which we inspire. (Le plaisir de l'amour est d'aimer, et l'on est plus heureux par la passion que l'on a que par celle que l'on
donne.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 259.
To love for the sake of being loved is human,
but to love for the sake of loving is angelic.
LAMARTINE, Graziella. Pt. iv, ch. 5.

Or rather let me love than be in love.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife.

All love is sweet Given or returned. . . .
They who inspire it most are fortunate,
As I am now: but those who feel it most
Are happier still.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 5,
l. 39.

We love being in love, that's the truth on't.
THACKERAY, Henry Esmond. Bk. ii, ch. 15.

<sup>6</sup> Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 156.

<sup>7</sup> Yet leave me not; yet, if thou wilt, be free;
Love me no more, but love my love of thee.
SWINBURNE, Erotion.

I that have love and no more
Give you but love of you, sweet:
He that hath more, let him give;
He that hath wings, let him soar;
Mine is the heart at your feet
Here, that must love you to live.
SWINBURNE, The Oblation.
And he that shuts Love out, in turn shall be Shut out from Love, and on her threshold lie

Howling in outer darkness.

TENNYSON, The Palace of Art: Introduction.

<sup>8</sup> And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph. St. 11.

A woman despises a man for loving her, unless she happens to return his love.

ELIZABETH STODDARD, Two Men. Ch. 32.

<sup>9</sup> Love for love is evenest bought.
UNKNOWN, Love for Love. (c. 1420)

Love, which cannot be paid but with love.
EDWARD FENTON, Certain Secret Wonders of Nature. (1569)

Love is never paid but with pure love.
JAMES MAB, Celestina, 138. (1631)

What can pay love but love?
MRS. MARY MANLEY, The Lost Lover. Act v,
sc. 3. (1696)

Love is love's reward.
DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, ii, 373. (1700)

XI—Love: Its Cause

<sup>10</sup> Loving comes by looking.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 28. (1639)

I saw and loved.
EDWARD GIBBON, Autobiographical Memoirs, p.
48.

But looking liked, and liking loved.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto v, Introduction, l. 78.

<sup>11</sup> 'Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just It. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walked down a street.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mrs. Bathurst. (1904) The creation of "It" has been erroneously credited to Elinor Glyn.

<sup>12</sup> To love but little is in love an infallible means of being beloved. (N'aimer guère en amour est un moyen assuré pour être aimé.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.
636.

<sup>13</sup> Habit causes love. (Consuetudo concinnat amorem.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1278.

By habit love enters the mind; by habit is love unlearned. (Intrat amor mentes usu, dediscitur usu.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 503.

<sup>14</sup> There is one genuine love-philtre—consideration. By this the woman is able to sway her man.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 646.

<sup>15</sup> It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit, Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest
merit,

That woman's love can win, or long inherit;
But what it is, hard is to say,
Harder to hit.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1010.

1 Often the pretender begins to love truly and ends by becoming what he feigned to be. (Sæpe tamen vere coepit simulator amare, Sæpe, quod incipiens finxerat esse, fuit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 615.

I have laughed at the foolish man who feigned to love and fell like a fowler into his own snare. (Deceptum risi, qui se simulabat amare, In laqueos aucups decideratque suos.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 501.

2 Love must be fostered with soft words. (Dulcibus est verbis mollis alendus amor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 152.

Insidious love glides into defenseless hearts. (Adfuit incautis insidiosus Amor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 148.

He who says over-much, "I love not," is in love. (Qui nimium multis "non amo" dicit, amat.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 648.

3 Love is commenced at the mind's bidding, but is not cast off by it. (Amor animi arbitrio sumitur, non ponitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 5.

4 Talking of love is making it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

There are many people who would never have been in love if they had never heard love spoken of. (Il y a des gens qui n'auraient jamais été amoureux, s'ils n'avaient jamais entendu parler de l'amour.)

5 The sight of lovers feedeth those in love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 60.

6 If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 19.

I'll be damned if the dog ha'n't given me some stuff to make me love him.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 15.

7 She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I loved her that she did pity them.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 167.

8 A mastiff dog
May love a puppy cur for no more reason
Than that the twain have been tied up together.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act i, sc. 4, l. 109.

9 The less my hope the hotter my love. (Quanto minus spei est tanto magis amo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 1053. (Act v, sc. 4.)

10 Women are well aware that what is commonly called sublime and poetical love depends not upon moral qualities, but on frequent meetings, and on the style in which the hair is done up, and on the color and cut of the dress.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 6.

XII—Love: Its Cure

11 Who loves, raves—'tis youth's frenzy; but the cure

Is bitterer still.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Cantó iv, st. 123.

12 Then fly betimes, for only they Conquer love, that run away.

THOMAS CAREW, Conquest by Flight.

In love's wars, he who flyeth is conqueror.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2819.

The only victory over love is flight.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

13 Hunger, perhaps, may cure your love,
Or time your passion greatly alter;

If both should unsuccessful prove,
I strongly recommend a halter.

(Ἐρωτα παύει λιμός· εἰ δὲ μή, χρόνος.
ἐὰν δὲ μὴδὲ ταῦτα τὴν φλόγα σβέσῃ, θεραπεία σοι τὸ λοιπὸν ἡρήσθω βρόχος.)

CRATES, Cures for Love. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 497.)

Why has some lover cast the noose about his neck, and hung, a sad burden, from a lofty beam? (Cur aliquis laqueo collum nodatus amator A trabe sublimi triste pendit onus?)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 17.

But ah! should she false-hearted prove,
Suspended, I'll dangle in air;

A victim to delicate love,

In Dyot Street, Bloomsbury Square.

WILLIAM B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

They love too much that die for love.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mourir. (1611)

A lover forsaken a new love may get,

But a neck, when once broken, can never be set.

WILLIAM WALSH, The Despairing Lover. (1692) Quoted by Scott, Peeveril of the Peak. Ch. 39.

14 Love's a malady without a cure.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 110.

O ye Gods, have ye ordained for every malady a medicine, for every sore a salve, for every pain a plaster, leaving only love remedyless?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

Love, the sole disease thou canst not cure.

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 12.

15 Alas, wretched me, that love may not be cured by herbs! (Me miserum, quod amor non est medicabilis herbis!)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 149.

Ah me! love can not be cured by herbs. (Ei mihi!
quod nullis amor est sanabilis herbis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 523.

1 Take away leisure and Cupid's bow is broken.
(Otia si tollas, Periere Cupidinus arcus.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 139.

You who seek an end to love, be busy, and you will be safe. (Qui finem quæris amoris, res age, tutus eris.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 143.

The lover too shuns business.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 219.

2 All love is vanquished by a succeeding love.
(Successore novo vincitur omnis amor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 462.

The new drives out the old. (Cura cura repulsa nova.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 484.

And love may be expelled by other love,
As poisons are by poisons.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

Diamonds cut diamonds; they who will prove
To thrive in cunning, must cure love with love.

JOHN FORD, Lover's Melancholy. Act i, sc. 3.

In all cases of heart-ache, the application of another man's disappointment draws out the pain and allays the irritation.

There is no remedy for love but to love more.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 July, 1839.

3 The disease has a thousand forms, I have a thousand remedies. (Mille mali species, mille salutis erunt.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 526.

Plenty destroys passion. (Copia tollit amorem.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 541.

4 I loved her then, but now, another love overhangs my heart. (Illam amabam olim, nunc jam alia cura impendet pectora.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 135. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 192.

For one heat, all know, doth drive out another;
One passion doth expel another still.

CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act v, sc. 1.

5 But he who stems a stream with sand,
And fetters flame with flaxen band,
Has yet a harder task to prove—
By firm resolve to conquer love!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 28.

XIII—Love: Its Power

6 Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost
In high ambition, and a thirst of greatness;

'Tis second life, it grows into the soul,
Warms every vein, and beats in every pulse.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

When love's well-timed, 'tis not a fault to love;
The strong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wise,
Sink in the soft captivity together.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1.

When love once pleads admission to our hearts,
In spite of all the virtue we can boast,
The woman that deliberates is lost.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1.

7 If two stand shoulder to shoulder against the
gods,
Happy together, the gods themselves are helpless

Against them, while they stand so.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen.
Act ii.

8 Somewhere there waiteth in this world of ours
For one lone soul another lonely soul,
Each choosing each through all the weary
hours,

And meeting strangely at one sudden goal,
Then blend they, like green leaves with golden
flowers,

Into one beautiful perfect whole;
And life's long night is ended, and the way
Lies open onward to eternal day.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Somewhere There Waiteth.

I know not when the day shall be,
I know not when our eyes may meet;
What welcome you may give to me,
Or will your words be sad or sweet,
It may not be 'till years have passed,
'Till eyes are dim and tresses gray;
The world is wide, but, love, at last,
Our hands, our hearts, must meet some day.

HUGH CONWAY, Some Day.

Two shall be born, the whole wide world
apart, . . .

And bend each wandering step to this one end—
That, one day, out of darkness, they shall meet
And read life's meaning in each other's eyes.
And two shall walk some narrow way of life, . . .
And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet . . .
They seek each other all their weary days
And die unsatisfied—and this is Fate!

SUSAN MARR SPALDING, Fate.

9 Love can find entrance, not only into an open heart, but also into a heart well fortified, if watch be not well kept.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

10 For love is of sae mickle might,
That it all paines makis light.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. ii, l. 520.

11 The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.

F. W. BOURDILLON, The Night Has a Thousand Eyes.

Love Is something awful which one dare not touch
So early o' mornings.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 40.

3
God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures
Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,
One to show a woman when he loves her.
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. St. 17.

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas,
Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno,
Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing it,
Drew one angel—borne, see, on my bosom!
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Conclusion.

Is she poor?—What costs it to be styled a donor?
Merely an earth to cleave, a sea to part.
ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii.

4
Love, thou art not a king alone,
Both slave and king thou art!
Who seeks to sway, must stoop to own
The kingdom of a heart.
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iii.

5
The man in arms 'gainst female charms,
Even he her willing slave is.
BURNS, Lovely Davies.

6
The law of love threads every heart
And knits it to its utmost kin,
Nor can our lives flow long apart
From souls our secret souls would win.
JOHN BURROUGHS, Waiting. Unpublished concluding stanza.

7
No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as love can do with a twined thread.

12
The warrior for the True, the Right,
Fights in love's name;
The love that lures thee from that fight
Lures thee to shame:
That love which lifts the heart, yet leaves
The spirit free,—
That love, or none, is fit for one
Man-shaped like thee.
AUBREY DE VERE, Song.

13
Love maketh a wit of a fool.
CHARLES DIBDIN, The Quaker. Act i, sc. 8.
It hath been a saying more common than true that love makes all men orators.

15
The solid, solid universe
Is pervious to Love;
With bandaged eyes he never errs,

Around, below, above.
His blinding light He fingeth white
On God's and Satan's brood,
And reconciles By mystic wiles
The evil and the good.
EMERSON, Cupido.

A ruddy drop of manly blood
The surging sea outweighs;
The world uncertain comes and goes,
The lover rooted stays.
EMERSON, Friendship.

1
No man ever forgot the visitation of that power to his heart and brain, which created all things anew; which was the dawn in him of music, poetry and art; which made the face of nature radiant with purple light, the morning and the night varied enchantments; . . .
when he became all eye when one was present,
and all memory when one was gone.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.

There is a power in love to divine another's destiny better than that other can, and, by heroic encouragements, hold him to his task.

It hath and shall be evermore
That Love is master where he will.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 33.

And netheles there is no man
In all this world so wise, that can
Of Love temper the measure.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 21.

6
But ah! in vain from Fate I fly,
For first, or last, as all must die,
So 'tis as much decreed above,
That first, or last, we all must love.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, To Myra.

And Love, that watched us ever from afar,
Came fluttering to our side, and cried, "O ye
Who think to fly, ye cannot fly from me;

Lo! I am with you always where you are."
EDMUND GOSSE, Reconciliation.

O, love, love, love! Love is like a dizziness;
It winna let a poor body Gang about his business!
JAMES HOGG, Love Is Like a Dizziness.

13
One can't choose when one is going to love.
HENRIK IBSEN, The Master Builder. Act ii.

14
Love is the magician, the enchanter, that changes worthless things to joy, and makes right-royal kings and queens of common clay.
It is the perfume of that wondrous flower,
the heart, and without that sacred passion,
that divine swoon, we are less than beasts:
but with it, earth is heaven and we are gods.
R. G. INGERSOLL, Works, p. 363. (1930 ed.)

15 Love extinguish'd, earth and heav'n must fail.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Hymn to Durga.

16
You have ravish'd me away by a Power I cannot resist; and yet I could resist till I saw you; and even since I have seen you I have endeavored often "to reason against the reasons of my Love."

KEATS, Letter to Fanny Brawne, 13 Oct., 1819.

6 Look round our world; behold the chain of
love

Combining all below and all above.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 7.

7 In peace, Love tunes the shepherd's reed;
In war, he mounts the warrior's steed;
In halls, in gay attire is seen;
In hamlets, dances on the green.
Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
And men below, and saints above;
For love is heaven, and heaven is love.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
iii, st. 2.

"Love rules the camp, the court, the grove,"—
"for love

Is heaven, and heaven is love:"—so sings the bard.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 13.

8 Whoever at the outset has resisted and routed love, has been safe and conqueror; but whoso by dalliance has fed the sweet torment, too late refused to bear the accepted yoke. (Quisquis in primo obstitit Populique amorem,

9 For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
3, l. 340.

O powerful love! that in some respects, makes a beast a man, in some other, a man a beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 5, l. 5.

10 With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls,

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 66.

Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
2, l. 107.

11 I have done penance for contemning Love,
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd
me

With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears and daily heart-sore sighs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 129.

Love's a mighty lord;
And hath so humbled me, as, I confess
This is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service no such joy on earth.
Now no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 136.

12 Through all the drama—whether damn'd or
not—
Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot.

15 For Love is lord of truth and loyalty,
Lifting himself out of the lowly dust
On golden plumes up to the purest sky,
Above the reach of loathly sinful lust.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 176.

Such is the power of that sweet passion,
That it all sordid baseness doth expel,
And the refined mind doth newly fashion
Unto a fairer form.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 190.

16 Why should we kill the best of passions, love?
It aids the hero, bids ambition rise
To nobler heights, inspires immortal deeds,

Even softens brutes, and adds a grace to virtue.

JAMES THOMSON, Sophonisba. Act v, sc. 2.

1 Yet Love consumes me; for what bounds are there to love? (Me tamen urit amor: quis enim modus adsit amori?)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 68.

Love conquers all; let us too yield to Love. (Omnia vincit Amor: et nos cedamus Amori.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. x, l. 69.

Love will conquer at the last.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 280.

2 Whoe'er thou art, thy master see;
He was, or is, or is to be.
(Qui que tu soit, Voici ton maître;
Il l'est, let fut, Ou le doit être.)

VOLTAIRE, Inscription for a Statue of Cupid.

3 Mightier far
Than strength of nerve or sinew, or the sway
Of magic potent over sun and star,
Is Love, though oft to agony distrest,
And though his favourite seat be feeble woman's breast.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1047.

Thus love, you see, can find a way
To make both man and maids obey.
THOMAS DELONEY, Genile Craft. Ch. 15. (c. 1597)

'Tis love that makes me bold and resolute,
Love that can find a way where path there's none,
Of all the gods the most invincible.
EURIPIDES, Hippolytus. Frag. 2.

Tho' the sun in heaven desert you,
"Love will find out the way."
ALFRED NOYES, Love Will Find Out the Way.

Ah, to that far distant strand
Bridge there was not to convey,
Not a bark was near at hand,
Yet true love soon found the way.
SCHILLER, Hero and Leander. (Bowring, tr.)

6 Zeus came as an eagle to god-like Ganymede, as a swan came he to the fair-haired mother of Helen.

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, No. 65.

Jupiter himself was turned into a satyr, a shepherd, a bull, a swan, a golden shower, and what not for love.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 1.

Did not Jupiter transform himself into the shape of Amphytrio to embrace Alcmæna; into the form of a swan to enjoy Leda; into a bull to beguile Io; into a shower of gold to win Danaë?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 93.

Leda, sailing on the stream
To deceive the hopes of man,
Love accounting but a dream,
Doted on a silver swan;
Danaë, in a brazen tower,
Where no love was, loved a shower.

JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian.

7 To enlarge or illustrate this power and effect of love is to set a candle in the sun.

Wist thou not well the old clerks' saw,
That who shall give a lover any law?

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 306. (c. 1380)

9 Love will not be constrained by mastery;
When mastery cometh, the god of love anon
Beateth his wings, and farewell! he is gone!
Love is a thing as any spirit free.

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 36.

Nor may love be compelled by mastery;
For soon as mastery comes, sweet love anon
Taketh his nimble wings, and soon away is gone.

<sup>4</sup> Let love be free; free love is for the best.
And, after heaven, on our dull side of death,
What should be best, if not so pure a love
Clothed in so pure a loveliness?
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1370.

<sup>5</sup> Oh, rank is good, and gold is fair,
And high and low mate ill;
But love has never known a law
Beyond its own sweet will!
WHITTIER, Amy Wentworth.

XV—Love: Love's Young Dream

<sup>6</sup> I've paced much this weary, mortal round,
And sage experience bids me this declare:—
"If Heaven a draught of heavenly pleasure spare,
One cordial in this melancholy vale
'Tis when a youthful, loving, modest pair,
In other's arms breathe out the tender tale,
Beneath the milk-white thorn that scents the ev'ning gale."

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 9.
Oh Love! young Love! bound in thy rosy band,
Let sage or cynic prattle as he will,
These hours, and only these, redeem Life's years of ill.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 81.
Oh! there's nothing in life like making love.
THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship.

<sup>7</sup> What a sweet reverence is that when a young man deems his mistress a little more than mortal and almost chides himself for longing to bring her close to his heart.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Vol. ii, ch. 15.

<sup>8</sup> Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,
To feel for ever its soft fall and swell;
Awake for ever in a sweet unrest;
Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath;
And so live ever—or else swoon to death.
KEATS, Last Sonnet.

Wishing forever in that state to lie,—
Forever to be dying so, yet never die.
CONGREVE, On Arabella Hunt, Singing.

<sup>9</sup> And, happy melodist, unwearied,
For ever piping songs for ever new;

More happy love! more happy, happy love!
For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd,
For ever panting and for ever young.
KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 3.

<sup>10</sup> There's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream.
THOMAS MOORE, Love's Young Dream.

Is there on earth a space so dear
As that within the blessed sphere
Two loving arms entwine?
THOMAS MOORE, To Fanny.

<sup>11</sup> One pulse of passion—youth's first fiery glow,—
Is worth the hoarded proverbs of the sage:
Vex not thy soul with dead philosophy;
Have we not lips to kiss with, hearts to love,
and eyes to see?
OSCAR WILDE, Panthea. St. 2.

<sup>12</sup> Love in thy youth, fair maid; be wise,
Old Time will make thee colder,
And though each morning new arise
Yet we each day grow older.
UNKNOWN, Madrigal. (PORTER, Madrigals and Airs, 1632.)

Take it, girl! And fear no after,
Take your fill of all this laughter,
Laugh or not the tears will fall,
Take the laughter first of all.
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

XVI—Love: Its Sweetness

<sup>13</sup> To love and be beloved, this is the good,
Which for most sovereign all the world will prove.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet xlv.

<sup>14</sup> The crowning glory of loving and being loved is that the pair make no real progress; however far they have advanced into the enchanted land during the day they must start again from the frontier next morning.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 189.

<sup>15</sup> O happy race of men, if love, which rules heaven, rule your minds! (O felix hominum genus, Si vestros animos amor Quo cælum regitur regat.)

BOËTHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk ii, meter 8, l. 28.

<sup>16</sup> "Oh! Love," they said, "is King of Kings,
And Triumph is his crown.
Earth fades in flame before his wings,
And Sun and Moon bow down."
RUPERT BROOKE, Song.

<sup>17</sup> There is music even in the beauty, and the silent note which Cupid strikes, far sweeter than the sound of an instrument.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 10.

1 Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest!

Love is best!

ROBERT BROWNING, Love Among the Ruins.

O lyric Love, half angel and half bird,
And all a wonder and a wild desire!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. i, l. 1391.

What's the earth
With all its art, verse, music, worth—
Compared with love, found, gained, and kept?
ROBERT BROWNING, Dis Aliter Visum.

2 Devotion wafts the mind above,
But Heaven itself descends in love;
A feeling from the Godhead caught,
To wean from self each sordid thought;
A Ray of him who form'd the whole;
A Glory circling round the soul!
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1135.

3 For soft the hours repeat one story,
Sings the sea one strain divine,
My clouds arise all flushed with glory;
I love, and the world is mine!
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The World Is Mine.

4 Power and gold and fame denied,
Love laughs glad in the paths aside.
LOUISE DRISCOLL, The Highway.

Love has in store for me one happy minute.
DRYDEN, No, No, Poor Suffering Heart.

5 The person love does to us fit,
Like manna, has the taste of all of it.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love. Quoted.

6 Earth's the right place for love:
I don't know where it's likely to go better.
ROBERT FROST, Birches.

7 If, as Mimnermus holds, without love and jests there is no joy, live amid love and jests.
(Si, Mimnermus uti censet, sine amore jocis-que Nil est jucundum, vivas in amore jocis-que.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 65.

8 For lover or nightingale who can wait?
Whenever he cometh he cometh late.
R. U. JOHNSON, Spring at the Villa Conti.

9 I sing of little loves that glow
Like tapers shining in the rain,
Of little loves that break themselves
Like moths against the window-pane.
ALINE KILMER, Prelude.

10 Love is more than great riches.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Story of Thebes. Pt. iii.
Though poor in gear, we're rich in love.
BURNS, The Sodger's Return.

11 Love's own hand the nectar pours,
Which never fails nor ever sours.
DAVID MALLETT, Cupid and Hymen.

12 The world is filled with folly and sin,
And Love must cling, where it can, I say:
For Beauty is easy enough to win;
But one isn't loved every day.
OWEN MEREDITH, Changes.

13 For what is knowledge duly weighed?
Knowledge is strong, but love is sweet;
Yea all the progress he had made
Was but to learn that all is small
Save love, for love is all in all.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, The Convent Threshold.
Love is like a rose, the joy of all the earth, . . .
Love is like a lovely rose, the world's delight.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Hope.

14 Mortals, while through the world you go,
Hope may succor and faith befriend,
Yet happy your hearts if you can but know,
Love awaits at the journey's end!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, The Journey's End: Envoy.

15 But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's
love.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 57.

16 This is the very ecstasy of love.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 102.
Nature is fine in love, and where 't is fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 161.

Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 271.

17 O spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch so'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 1, l. 9.

18 Love, as is told by the seers of old,
Comes as a butterfly tipped with gold,
Flutters and flies in sunlit skies,
Weaving round hearts that were one time
cold.

SWINBURNE, Song.

A lover looked. She dropped her eyes
That glowed like pansies wet with dew;
And lo, there came from out the skies

Butterflies all blue.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Butterflies.

1
O Love, what hours were thine and mine,
In lands of palm and southern pine;
In lands of palm, of orange-blossom,
Of olive, aloe, and maize and vine.

TENNYSON, The Daisy. St. 1.

Sweet is true love tho' given in vain, in vain.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1000.

2
The wine of Love is music,
And the feast of Love is song:
And when Love sits down to the banquet,
Love sits long: . . .
Sits long and rises drunken,
But not with the feast and the wine;
He reeleth with his own heart,
That great, rich Vine.

JAMES THOMSON, The Vine.

3
"The worlds in which we live are two,
The world 'I am' and the world 'I do.'"
The worlds in which we live at heart are one,
The world "I am," the fruit of "I have done";
And underneath these worlds of flower and fruit,

The world "I love,"—the only living root.

HENRY VAN DYKE, One World.

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul;
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates un-roll;

And when he comes to call thee, arise and follow
fast;

His way may lie through darkness, but it leads to light at last.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Prison and the Angel.

Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul,
May keep the path, but will not reach the goal;
While he who walks in love may wander far,
But God will bring him where the Blessed are.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Way.

4
Vain is the glory of the sky,
The beauty vain of field and grove,
Unless, while with admiring eye
We gaze, we also learn to love.

WORDSWORTH, Poems of the Fancy. No. 20.

5
He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel
In worlds whose course is equable and pure;
No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
The past unsighed for, and the future sure.

WORDSWORTH, Laodamia. St. 16.

6
'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true love,
That kills the soul: love betters what is best,
Even here below, but more in heaven above.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 25. After Michelangelo.

All these I better in one general best.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

XVII—Love: Its Bitterness

7
Could I love less, I should be happier now.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Garden and Bower.

8
Love and sorrow twins were born
On a shining showery morn.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, The Graham.

9
Love is like fire. . . Wounds of fire are hard to bear; harder still are those of love.
HJALMAR HJORTH BOYESEN, Gunnar. Ch. 4.

10
Was it something said,
Something done,
Vexed him? Was it touch of hand,
Turn of head?
Strange! that very way
Love begun:
I as little understand
Love's decay.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.

11
Ah woe is me, through all my days
Wisdom and wealth I both have got,
And fame and name and great men's praise;
But Love, ah! Love I have it not.
H. C. BUNNER, The Way to Arcady.

12
Had we never lov'd sae kindly,
Had we never lov'd sae blindly,
Never met, or never parted,
We had ne'er been broken-hearted!
BURNS, Ae Fond Kiss.

13
O Love! thou art the very god of evil,
For, after all, we cannot call thee devil.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 205.

O love! what is it in this world of ours
Which makes it fatal to be loved? Ah, why With cypress branches hast thou wreathed thy bowers,
And made thy best interpreter a sigh!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 2.

Soon or late Love is his own avenger.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 73.

14
Just like Love is yonder rose,
Heavenly fragrance round it throws,
Yet tears its dewy leaves disclose,
And in the midst of briars it blows
Just like Love.

CAMOËNS, Rose and Thorn. (Strangford, tr.)

15
My love-lies-bleeding.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, O'Connor's Child. St. 5.

16
O pang all pangs above,
Is kindness counterfeiting absent Love.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Pang More Sharp than All.
Love's despair is but Hope's pining ghost!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Visionary Hope.

17
So, lovers dream a rich and long delight,

But get a winter-seeming summer's night.

JOHN DONNE, Love's Alchemy. See also

1
Heighdy! heighdy! Misery me, lackadaydee!
He sipped no sup, and he craved no crumb,
As he sighed for the love of a ladye!

W. S. GILBERT, Yeomen of the Guard. Act i.

2
For winning love, we run the risk of losing.

THOMAS HARDY, Revolusion. St. 2.

3
A love that took an early root
And had an early doom.

T. K. HERVEY, The Devil's Progress.

4
O night of love and beauty, all the years
Shall pay for thy brief ecstasy with tears.

ROBERT HILLYER, Sonnets.

5
There are as many pangs in love as shells upon the shore. (Littore quot conchæ, tot sunt in amore dolores.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 519.

How wretched is the man who loves! (Uti miser est homo qui amat.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 616. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

He who falls in love meets a worse fate than he who leaps from a rock. (Qui in amore Præcipi-tavit, pejus perit quam si saxo saliat.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 30.

Love not! love not! ye hopeless sons of clay;
Hope's gayest wreaths are made of earthly
flowers—

Things that are made to fade and fall away,
Ere they have blossomed for a few short hours.

CAROLINE NORTON, Love Not.

The hour when you too learn that all is vain,
And that Hope sows what Love shall never reap.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Sonnets. No. 44.

Slighted love is sair to bide.

BURNS, Duncan Gray.

Ay me! for aught that I could ever read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,

The course of true love never did run smooth.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 132.

I never heard
Of any true affection but 'twas nipped.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act iii, sc. 2.

11
There is no creature loves me,
And if I die, no soul shall pity me.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 200.

Nobody loves me; I'm going into the garden and eat worms.

UNKNOWN, A Valentine Greeting.

12
To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans;

Coy looks with heart-sore sighs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 29.

And writers say, as the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
Even so by love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the bud,
Losing his verdure even in the prime.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 45.

What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?

Of love that never found his earthly close,
What sequel? Streaming eyes and breaking hearts;

Or all the same as if he had not been?

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 1.

15
Yet each man kills the thing he loves,
By each let this be heard,

Some do it with a bitter look,
Some with a flattering word,

The coward does it with a kiss,
The brave man with a sword!

OSCAR WILDE, Ballad of Reading Gaol. St. 7.

XVIII—Love: Pain or Pleasure

17
Mysterious love, uncertain treasure,
Hast thou more of pain or pleasure. . . .

Endless torments dwell about thee:

Yet who would live, and live without thee!

ADDISON, Rosamond. Act iii, sc. 2.

18
Yes, loving is a painful thrill,
And not to love more painful still;
But oh, it is the worst of pain,

To love and not be lov'd again.

ANACREON, Odes. No. 29. (Moore, tr.)

A mighty pain to love it is,
And 'tis a pain that pain to miss;
But of all pains, the greatest pain
It is to love, but love in vain.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Anacreontiques: Gold.

The sweetest joy, the wildest woe is love.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Alcove and Garden.

Love's alternate joy and woe.

BYRON, Maid of Athens.

I have tasted the sweets and the bitters of love.

BYRON, Lines to the Rev. J. T. Becher.

O Love, all other pleasures
Are not worth thy pains.
(Amour, tout les autres plaisirs Ne valent pas tes peines.)

CHARLEVAL, Ballade.

All other pleasures are not worth its pains.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love. Quoted.

What a recreation it is to be in love! It sets the heart aching so delicately, there's no taking a wink of sleep for the pleasure of the pain.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Mountaineers. Act i, sc. 1.

Lovers derive their pleasures from their misfortunes.

DIOGENES (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 67.)

Love has a thousand ways to please,
But more to rob us of our ease.

DRYDEN, King Arthur. Act v, sc. 1.

Pains of love be sweeter far
Than all other pleasures are.

DRYDEN, Tyrannic Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

The jolif woe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 84.

Oh Love! thou bane of the most generous souls!

Thou doubtful pleasure, and thou certain
pain.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love.

Love of itself's too sweet. The best of all
Is when love's honey has a dash of gall.

ROBERT HERRICK, Another of Love.

The sweets of love are mixed with tears.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Primrose.

'Tis the pest
Of love that fairest joys give most unrest.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. ii, l. 366.

But, for the general award of love,
The little sweet doth kill much bitterness.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 13.

Love leads to present rapture,—then to pain;

But all through Love in time is healed again.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Sweet Marjoram.

O what a heaven is love! O what a hell!

MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, I The Honest Whore. Act i, sc. 1.

O, then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 206.

Forgetfulness of grief I yet may gain;
In some wise may come ending to my pain;
It may be yet the Gods will have me glad!
Yet, love, I would that thee and pain I had!

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Death of Paris.

Love overflows with both honey and gall. It gives you a taste of sweetness, and then heaps bitterness before you to satiety. (Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus; Gustui dat dulce, amarum ad satietatem usque og-gerit.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 69.

She has more of aloes (bitterness) than of honey.
(Plus aloes quam mellis habet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 181.

True he it said, whatever man it said,
That love with gall and honey doth abound,
But if the one be with the other weighed,
For every dram of honey therein found,
A pound of gall doth over it redound.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto x, l. 1.

Of honey and of gall in love there is store:
The honey is much, but the gall is more.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: March: Thomalin's Emblem.

There is no pleasure like the pain
Of being loved, and loving.

W. M. PRAED, Legend of the Haunted Tree.

In love, pain and pleasure are always at strife. (In venere semper certant dolor et gaudium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 298.

Yet what is Love, good shepherd, sain?
It is a sunshine mixed with rain.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Now What Is Love?

Whether love be pain or pain be love I do not know; but I know one thing: that pain is pleasure if pain be love. (An amor dolor sit,
An dolor amor sit, Utrumque nescio, Hoc unum sentio: Jocundus dolor est Si dolor
amor est.)

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Scrap Books. Vol. i, p. 185. Quoted, as a medieval Latin poem.

And love is loveliest when embalm'd in tears.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 1.

1 Love's very pain is sweet,
But its reward is in the world divine,
Which, if not here, it builds beyond the grave.

SHELLEY, Epipsychidion, l. 596.

2 "I thought love had been a joyous thing," quoth my Uncle Toby.—" 'Tis the most serious thing, an' please your Honour (sometimes) that is in the world."

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vii, ch. 20.

bitters of love. (Quisquis amores Aut metuet dulcis aut experietur amarus.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 109.

XIX—Love: Lovers' Quarrels

5 Little quarrels often prove
To be but new recruits of love;
When those who're always kind of coy,
In time must either tire or cloy.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 905.

And to be wroth with one we love
Doth work like madness in the brain.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 101.

6 In love there are these evils: first war, and then peace. (In amore hæc sunt mala: bel-lum, Pax rursum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 267.

7 A lovers' quarrel is short-lived. (Ὁρνή φιλοῦντων ὀλίγον ἰσχύει χρόνον.)

10 They are twice as much friends as they were before quarrelling. (Bis tanto amici sunt inter se quam prius.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 943. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

11 You must anger a lover if you wish him to love. (Cogas amantem irasci, amare si velis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 118.

12 The difference is wide that the sheets will not decide.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

13 Love is hurt with jar and fret;
Love is made a vague regret.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 209.

14 The quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love. (Amantium iræ amoris integratio est.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 555. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

Old Terence has taken notice of that; and observes upon it, That lovers falling-out occasions lovers falling in.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 48.

Then did she say, "Now have I found this proverb true to prove,
*The falling out of faithful friends, renewing is of
love.*

RICHARD EDWARDS, *The Paradise of Dainty
Devices*. No. 42, st. 1. (1560)

Let the falling out of friends be a renewing of affection.

The falling out of lovers is the renewing of love.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. 2. (1621)

And blessings on the falling out

That all the more endears,
When we fall out with those we love,
And kiss again with tears!

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 251.

15 And how can curses keep him yours
When kisses could not make him so?

ANNE GOODWIN WINSLOW, The Beaten Path.

16 Love scarce is love that never knows
The sweetness of forgiving.

WHITTIER, Among the Hills. St. 77.

17 Apart
Must dwell those angels known as Peace and
Love,

For only Death can reconcile the two.

With love that scorns the lapse of time,
And ties that stretch beyond the deep.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Memory of Burns, l. 47.

For time makes all but true love old;
The burning thoughts that then were told
Run molten still in memory's mould.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground, l. 19.

2
Banish that fear; my flame can never waste,
For love sincere refines upon the taste.

CIBBER, The Double Gallant. Act v, sc. 1.

3
Last night, ah, yesternight, betwixt her lips and mine

There fell thy shadow, Cynara! thy breath
was shed

Upon my soul between the kisses and the wine;

And I was desolate and sick of an old passion,

Yea, I was desolate and bowed my head:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

ERNEST DOWSON, Non Sum Qualis Eram Bonæ Sub Regno Cynaræ.

I cried for madder music and for stronger wine,
And when the feast is finished and the lamps
expire,

Then falls thy shadow, Cynara! The night is
thine;

And I am desolate and sick of an old passion,

Yea, hungry for the lips of my desire:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my
fashion.

ERNEST DOWSON, Non Sum Qualis.

It's no matter what you do,

If your heart be only true:

And his heart was true to Poll.

Love me little, love me long.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

You say to me-wards your affection 's strong;
Pray love me little, so you love me long.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love Me Little, Love Me Long.

Love moderately; long love doth so.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 14.

Love me little, love me long,

Is the burden of my song.

UNKNOWN, Old Ballad.

9
Of all my loves the last, for hereafter I shall glow with passion for no other woman.
(Meorum Finis amorum, Non enim posthac alia calebo Femina.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode. 11, l. 31.

10
Bold Lover, never, never canst thou kiss, Though winning near the goal—yet, do not grieve;

She cannot fade, though thou hast not thy bliss,

For ever wilt thou love, and she be fair!

KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn, l. 17.

Sing the Lovers' Litany;

"Love like ours can never die!"

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Lovers' Litany.

12
True love is the ripe fruit of a lifetime.

LAMARTINE, Graziella. Pt. iv, ch. 30.

13
It is with true love as it is with ghosts;
everyone talks of it, but few have seen it.
(Il est du véritable amour comme de l'apparition des esprits: tout le monde en parle, mais peu de gens en ont vu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 76.

With all thy sober charms possess,
Whose wishes never learnt to stray.

WILLIAM LANGHORNE, Poems. Vol. ii, p. 123.

16
Age enricheth true love, Like noble wine.

GERALD MASSEY, O, Lay Thy Hand in Mine.

17
Great loves live on.

You need not die and dare the skies

In forms that poor creeds hinge upon

To pass the gates of Paradise.

JOAQUIN MILLER, With Love to You and Yours. Pt. iv, sec. 12.

18
The naturalists tell us that the flower called heliotrope turns without ceasing toward that star of day, and just so will my heart hereafter turn toward the resplendent stars of your adorable eyes. (Et comme les naturalistes remarquent que la fleur nommée hélitrope tourne sans cesse vers cet astre du jour, aussi mon cœur d'ores en avant tournera-t-il toujours vers les astres resplendissants de vos yeux adorables.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Malade Imaginaire. Act ii, sc. 5.

No, the heart that has truly lov'd never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sunflower turns on her god, when he sets,
The same look which she turn'd when he rose.
THOMAS MOORE, Believe Me, If All Those En- dearing Young Charms. St. 2.

But never a Circe has snared one yet,
In a green, cool cavern beside the sea,
Who could make the heart of him quite forget

A patiently waiting Penelope!

ROSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY, Ulysses Re- turns.

2
Think of my loyal love, my last adieu;
Absence and love are naught if we are true.
ALFRED DE MUSSET, Rappelle-toi. (Van Dyke, tr.)

3
A thousand girls do not charm me; I am not inconstant in love. (Non mihi mille placent;
non sum desultor amoris.)

Lovers remember all things. (Meminerunt omnia amantes.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xv, l. 43.

When love is at its best, one loves
So much that he cannot forget.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Two Truths.

Of all affliction taught a lover yet,
'Tis sure the hardest science to forget!
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 189.

5 Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also,
if aught but death part thee and me.
Old Testament: Ruth, i, 16, 17.

And on her lover's arm she leant,
And round her waist she felt it fold,
And far across the hills they went
In that new world which is the old. . . .
And o'er the hills and far away

Beyond their utmost purple rim,
Beyond the night, across the day,
Thro' all the world she follow'd him.

TENNYSON, The Day-dream: The Departure.

Through thick and thin she followed him.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 370.

As I am true to thee and thine,
Do thou be true to me and mine!
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
v, st. 26.

7
Why then should I seek further store,
And still make love anew?
When change itself can give no more,
'Tis easy to be true!

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, To Celia.

But, to the charms which I adore,
'Tis religion to be true.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 3.

8
Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,
That could not live asunder day or night.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 30.

9
Her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 34.

Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale;
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 178.

What are the fields, or flow'rs, or all I see?
Ah! tasteless all, if not enjoy'd with thee.

THOMAS PARNELL, Health: An Eclogue.

10
True love in this differs from gold and clay,
That to divide is not to take away.
SHELLEY, Epipsychidion, l. 160.

They sin who tell us Love can die.
With life all other passions fly,
All others are but vanity. . . .
But Love is indestructible.
Its holy flame for ever burneth,
From Heaven it came, to Heaven returneth; . . .
It soweth here with toil and care,
But the harvest time of Love is there.
SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. x, st. 10.

11
To love one maiden only, cleave to her,
And worship her by years of noble deeds,
Until they won her.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 472.

No lapse of moons can canker Love,
Whatever fickle tongues may say.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvi.

I know not if I know what true love is,
But if I know, then, if I love not him,
I know there is none other I can love.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 672.

12
Love is love for evermore.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 74.

O tell her, brief is life but love is long.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 93.

To be true to each other, let 'appen what maäy
Till the end o' the daäy

An the last loäd hoäm.

TENNYSON, The Promise of May. Act ii, l. 190.

3 I loved thee once, I'll love no more:
Thine be the grief as is the blame:
Thou art not what thou wast before—
What reason I should be the same?
ROBERT AYTON, I Do Confess.

4 I cannot love as I have loved,
And yet I know not why;
It is the one great woe of life
To feel all feeling die.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Party.
But they know love grows colder,
Grows false and dull, that was sweet lies at most.
Astonishment is no more in hand or shoulder,
But darkens, and dies out from kiss to kiss.
All this is love; and all love is but this.
RUPERT BROOKE, Love.

Dear, we know only that we sigh, kiss, smile;
Each kiss lasts but the kissing; and grief goes over;
Love has no habitation but the heart.
RUPERT BROOKE, Mutability.
Now, God be thanked Who has matched us with His hour,
And caught our youth, and wakened us from
sleeping, . . .
And all the little emptiness of love!
RUPERT BROOKE, 1914, Peace.

5 The glory dropped from their youth and
love,
And both perceived they had dreamed a
dream.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust,
l. 152.

6 Love in your heart as idly burns
As fire in antique Roman urns.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 309.

7 He that loves a rosy cheek,
Or a coral lip admires,
Or from star-like eyes doth seek
Fuel to maintain his fires,
As Old Time makes these decay,
So his flames must waste away.
THOMAS CAREW, Disdain Returned.
Time can but cloy love, And use destroy love.
BYRON, Stanzas.

8 What have I done? What horrid crime committed?
To me the worst of crimes—outliv'd my lik-
ing.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act iii, sc. 2.

'Tis an unhappy circumstance that . . . the man
so often should outlive the lover.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1.

9 The miracle to-day is that we find
A lover true: not that a woman's kind.
CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 2.

10 Him, who loves always one, why should they call
More constant, than the man loves always all.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Inconstant.

11 Lukewarmness I account a sin,
As great in love as in religion.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Request.

12 Men and women call one another inconstant, and accuse one another of having changed their minds, when, God knows, they have but changed the object of their eye, and seen a better white or red.
JOHN DONNE, Sermons, p. 483.

13 Love is like linen, often chang'd, the sweeter.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 5.

14 Pretty Polly say, When I was away,
Did your fancy never stray
To some newer lover?
JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

15 Wisely a woman prefers to a lover a man who neglects her.
This one may love her some day, some day
the lover will not.
JOHN HAY, Distichs.

16 I do love I know not what;
Sometimes this and sometimes that.
ROBERT HERRICK, No Luck in Love.

17 Love has a tide!
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Tides.

18 In their first passions women love the lover, and in the others, they love love. (Dans les premières passions, les femmes aiment l'am-ant, et dans les autres, elles aiment l'amour.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 471. (1665)

In her first passion woman loves her lover;
In all the others, all she loves is love.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 3. Undoubtedly a translation of La Rochefoucauld, to whom,
however, Byron gave no credit.

The man's desire is for the woman; but the woman's desire is rarely other than for the desire of the man.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 75.

1
The beginning and the end of love are both marked by embarrassment when the two find themselves alone. (Le commencement et le déclin de l'amour se font sentir par l'embarras où l'on est de se trouver seul.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 4.

There are few people who would not be ashamed of being loved when they love no longer. (Il n'y a guère de gens qui ne soient honteux de s'être aimés, quand ils ne s'aiment plus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 71.

2
Love never dies of starvation, but often of indigestion.

NINON DE L'ENCLOS. (L'Esprit des Autres, 3.)

But joy incessant pall's the sense;

And love, unchanged, will cloy,

And she became a bore intense

Unto her love-sick boy!

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

3
For as by basil the scorpion is engendered, and by means of the same herb is destroyed; so love which by time and fancy is bred in an idle head, is by time and fancy banished from the heart: or, as the salamander, which being a long space nourished in the fire, at the last quencheth it, so affection having taken hold of the fancy, and living, as it were, in the mind of the lover, in tract of time altereth and changeth the heat, and turneth it to chilliness.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

Thanks be to God, the world is wide,
And I am going far from home!

And I forgot in Camelot
The man I loved in Rome.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Fugitive.

And in my heart there stirs a quiet pain
For unremembered lads that not again
Will turn to me at midnight with a cry.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet.

5
I know I am but summer to your heart,
And not the full four seasons of the year;
And you must welcome from another part
Such noble moods as are not mine, my dear.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet.

6
Some love is light and fleets away,
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Some love is deep and scorns decay,
Ah, well-a-day! in vain.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, True Love's Dirge.

The moods of love are like the wind,
And none knows whence or why they rise.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House: Sarum Plain.

7
Fickle is he, and he has two wings, wherewith to fly away. (Et levis est, et habit geminas, quibus avolet, alas!)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 19.

And lately had he learn'd with truth to deem
Love has no gift so grateful as his wings.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 82.

Love, like a bird, hath perch'd upon a spray
For thee and me to hearken what he sings.

Contented, he forgets to fly away;

But hush! . . . remind not Eros of his wings.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

8
What is the love of men that women seek it?
In its beginning pale with cruelty,
But having sipped of beauty, negligent,
And full of languor and distaste: for they Seeking that perfect face beyond the world
Approach in vision earthly semblances,
And touch, and at the shadows flee away.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

9
Our love was like most other loves—
A little glow, a little shiver,

A rosebud, and a pair of gloves,
And "Fly not yet" upon the river.

W. M. PRAED, The Belle of the Ball.

10
Even the inconstant flame may burn brightly,
if the soul is naturally combustible.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason. Vol. ii, p. 25.

11
Love still has something of the sea,
From whence his Mother rose;
No time his slaves from doubt can free,
Nor give their thoughts repose.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Song.

12
Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 51.

13
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 210.

There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 115.

14
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 20.

He was a lover of the good old school,
Who still become more constant as they cool.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 34.

15
Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea and one on shore,

- To one thing constant never.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 64.
- Sigh no more, lady, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever:
One foot on sea and one on land,
To one thing constant never.
THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray. (Reliques. Vol. i, bk. ii, No. 18.) Percy says that his poem is a collection of the "fragments of ancient ballads dispersed through Shakespeare's plays," which he connected together by some stanzas of his own, to "form them into a little tale."
- 1
Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty.
SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim. St. 7.
- 2
O, how this spring of love resembleth
Th' uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 3, l. 84.
- 3
Plough not the seas, sow not the sands,
Leave off your idle pain;
Seek other mistress for your minds;
Love's service is in vain.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Love's Servile Lot.
- 4
The last link is broken
That bound me to thee,
And the words thou hast spoken
Have render'd me free.
FANNY STEERS, Song.
- 5
Out upon it! I have lov'd
Three whole days together;
And am like to love three more,
If it prove fair weather.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Constant Lover.
- And Love, grown faint and fretful
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.
SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine.
- 6
I have lived long enough, having seen one thing, that love hath an end.
SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 1.
- 7
To say that you can love one person all your life is just like saying that one candle will continue burning as long as you live.
LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2.
- 8
Love, like fortune, turns upon a wheel, and is very much given to rising and falling.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The False Friend. Act i,
sc. 1.
- 9
For surely it is something to have been
The best beloved for a little while,

- To have walked hand in hand with Love, and seen
His scarlet wings flit once across thy smile.
OSCAR WILDE, Apologie.
- 10
Those who are faithful know only the trivial side of love: it is the faithless who know love's tragedies.
OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray.
Ch. 1.
- 11
Give me, I ask it, nay I know no pride—
The love that's left when you
Have spent the greater part.
I have a beggar heart.
ANNE ELIZABETH WILSON, The Beggar Heart.
- 12
I loved a lass, a fair one,
As fair as e'er was seen;
She was indeed a rare one,
Another Sheba queen:
But, fool as then I was,
I thought she loved me too:
But now, alas! she's left me,
Falero, lero, loo!
GEORGE WITHER, I Loved a Lass.
- Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair? . . .
If she think not well of me,
What care I how fair she be?
GEORGE WITHER, The Lover's Resolution.
- 13
Oh, waly, waly, gin love be bonny,
A little while, when it is new;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.
UNKNOWN, Gin Love be Bonny.
- 14
My love he loves another love:
Alas, sweetheart, why does he so?
UNKNOWN, The Mourning Maiden. (c. 1550)

- 15
Then crown my joys, or cure my pain:
Give me more love, or more disdain.
THOMAS CAREW, Mediocrity in Love Rejected.
- Give hopes of bliss or dig my grave:
More love or more disdain I crave.
CHARLES WEBBE, Against Indifference.
- Or love me less, or love me more;
And play not with my liberty:
Either take all, or all restore;
Bind me at least, or set me free!
SIDNEY GODOLPHIN, Song.
- I'll be this abject thing no more;
Love, give me back my heart again.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Adieu l'Amour.
- 16
Would I were free from this restraint,
Or else had hopes to win her:
Would she could make of me a saint,
Or I of her a sinner.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, Pious Selinda.

- 1
Saith he, "Yet are you too unkind,
If in your heart you cannot find
    To love us now and then."
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Eclogue.
- 2
Thou art to me a delicious torment.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.
- 3
One common fate we both must prove;
You die with envy, I with love.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Poet and Rose, l. 29.
- 4
Time was when Love and I were well acquainted.
W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.
- 5
And love is still an emptier sound,
    The modern fair one's jest;
On earth unseen, or only found
    To turn the turtle's nest.
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield.
    Ch. 8.)
- 6
As if to show that love had made him smart
All over—and not merely round his heart.
THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.
His love was great though his wit was small.
THOMAS HOOD, Equestrian Courtship.
- 7
Roses red and roses white
Plucked I for my love's delight.
She would none of all my posies,—
Bade me gather her blue roses.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Blue Roses.
- 8
None without hope e'er loved the brightest
    fair,
But love can hope where reason would despair.
GEORGE LYTTELTON, Epigram.
- 9
And how should I know your true love
    From many another one?
Oh, by his cockle hat and staff,
    And by his sandal shoon.
THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray.
- 10
Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in;
But not alone in the silken snare
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.
NORA PERRY, The Love-Knot.
- 11
Ah! what avails it me the flocks to keep,
Who lost my heart while I preserv'd my sheep!
POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 79.
- 12
For, as our different ages move,
    'Tis so ordained (would Fate but mend
    it!),

- That I shall be past making love
    When she begins to comprehend it.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To a Child of Quality.
- 13
And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l.
    147.
By heaven, I do love; and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
    sc. 3, l. 14.
And frame love-ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 7.
All that a man has to say or do that can possibly concern mankind, is in some shape or other to tell the story of his love,—to sing, and, if he is fortunate and keeps alive, he will be forever in love.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 6 May, 1854.
- 14
He is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 190.
He was more than over shoes in love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
    Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.
Gone already!
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2,
    l. 185.
- 15
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
    Act v, sc. 4, l. 133.
And though she saw all heaven in flower above,
She would not love.
SWINBURNE, A Leave-taking.
- 16
How wayward is this foolish love,
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse
And presently, all humble, kiss the rod!
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
    Act i, sc. 2, l. 57.
- 17
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4,
    l. 175.
- 18
Love still a boy and oft a wanton is,
School'd only by his mother's tender eye.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet lxxiii.
But a bevy of Eroses, apple-cheek'd
In a shallop of crystal ivory-beak'd.
TENNYSON, The Islet.
Love is a boy by poets styl'd;

Then spare the rod and spoil the child.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 843.

1 Why so pale and wan, fond lover?

Prithee, why so pale?

Will, when looking well can't move her,

Looking ill prevail?

Prithee, why so pale?

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Aglaura: Song.

2 You lovers are such clumsy summer-flies,

Forever buzzing at your lady's face.

TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act iv, sc. 1.

3 Werther had a love for Charlotte

Such as words could never utter;

Would you know how first he met her?

She was cutting bread and butter.

THACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

Charlotte, having seen his body

Borne before her on a shutter,

Like a well-conducted person,

Went on cutting bread and butter.

THACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

4 The only difference between a caprice and a life-long passion is that the caprice lasts a little longer.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

5 When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks,

We always know she's coming by her song.

And every man he tells his little tale,

And Madelon, she listens all day long.

Our Madelon is never too severe—

A kiss or two is nothing much to her—

She laughs us up to love and life and God—

Madelon, Madelon, Madelon.

UNKNOWN, Madelon. Popular song during the World War.

XXIII—Love: Its Perjuries

6 Vows! dost think the gods regard the vows of lovers? They are things made in necessity and ought not to be kept, nor punished when broken.

APFRA BEHN, The Dutch Lover. Act v, sc. 1.

7 Lovers' oaths enter not the ears of the gods.

(Ἐρωτὶ θεοὺς μὴ δοῦναι οὐδ' ἐς ἀθανάτων.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 27.

8 Let no woman believe a man's oath, let none believe that a man's speeches can be trustworthy. They, while their mind desires something and longs eagerly to gain it, nothing fear to swear, nothing spare to promise; but as soon as the lust of their greedy mind is satisfied, they fear not then their words, they heed not their perjuries.

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxiv, l. 143.

What a woman says to her lover should be written in wind and running water. (Mulier cupido quod dicit amanti In vento et rapida scribere oportet aqua.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxx, l. 3.

9 Lovers' oaths, the sport of every lightest breeze. (Lascivia volant levibus perjuria ventis.)

CLAUDIAN, De Nuptiis Honorii Augusti, l. 83.

10 The old, yet still successful, cheat of love.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 188. (Pope, tr.)

11 No longer could I doubt him true—

All other men may use deceit;

He always said my eyes were blue,

And often swore my lips were sweet.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Mother, I cannot Mind My Wheel.

12 For the queen of love,
As they hold constantly, does never punish,
But smile at, lovers' perjuries.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

13 When a man talks of love, with caution trust him;

But if he swears, he'll certainly deceive thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act ii, sc. 1.

14 Venus lends deaf ears to love's deceits. (Commodat in lusus numina surda Venus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 86.

15 Jupiter from on high laughs at the perjuries of lovers. (Juppiter ex alto perjuriam ridet amantum.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 633.

For Jove himself sits in the azure skies

And laughs below at lovers' perjuries.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, l. 633. (Marlowe, tr.)

Jove laughs at lovers' perjuries, and bids the winds carry them away without fulfillment. (Perjuriam ridet amantum Juppiter et ventos inrita ferre jubet.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. vi, l. 49.

Fool, not to know that love endures no tie,

And Jove but laughs at lovers' perjury.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 148.

At lovers' perjuries, They say, Jove laughs.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 92.

16 Hell's afloat in lovers' tears.

DOROTHY PARKER.

17 Love is faithless. (Perfidiosus est amor.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 72. (Act i, sc. 1.)

18 Credit me, friend, it hath been ever thus,

Since the ark rested on Mount Ararat:

False man hath sworn, and woman hath believed—

Repented and reproached, and then believed once more.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel: Ch. 20, Motto.
Quoted as from The New World.

She deceiving, I believing,
What can lovers wish for more?

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Song.

1 Men's vows are women's traitors! . . . A bait for ladies.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 56.

2 You would for paradise break faith and troth;
And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
3, l. 143.

And swearing till my very roof was dry

With oaths of love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 206.

3 When my love swears that she is made of truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxviii. Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 1.

4 All lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 91.

We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l.
119.

5 No oath too binding for a lover.

SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 848.

6 For kings and lovers are alike in this,
That their chief art in reign dissembling is.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Loving and Beloved.

7 Fear not to swear; void are the perjuries of love, which, thanks to Jove, the winds carry away over land and sea. (Nec jurare time:
veneris perjuria venti Inrita per terras et freta summa ferunt, Gratia magna Jovi.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 4, l. 21.

8 When one is in love one begins to deceive oneself. And one ends by deceiving others.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act iii.

XXIV—Love: Love at First Sight

9 None ever loved, but at first sight they loved.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Blind Beggar of Alexandria. (1596)

Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander.
First Sestiad, l. 176. (1598)

Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,
"Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?"

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l.
82. (1599)

10 Love, that all gentle hearts so quickly know.
(Amor, ch'al cor gentil ratto s'apprende.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 100.

11 Amid the gloom and travail of existence suddenly to behold a beautiful being, and as instantaneously to feel an overwhelming conviction that with that fair form for ever our destiny must be entwined . . . this is love!
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple.

If thou hast loved, re-ope the magic book;
Say, do its annals date not from a look?
In which two hearts, unguess'd perchance before,
Rush'd each to each, and were as two no more;
While all thy being—by some Power above
Its will constrain'd—sigh'd, trembling, "This is Love."

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iii, l.
57.

12 That old miracle—Love-at-first-sight—
Needs no explanations.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, sec.
16.

13 Your brother and my sister no sooner met but they looked, no sooner looked but they loved, no sooner loved but they sighed, no sooner sighed but they asked one another the reason, no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, l.
36.

14 Not at first sight, nor with a dribbed shot,
Love gave the wound, which, while I breathe,
will bleed.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet ii.

15 The only true love is love at first sight; second sight dispels it.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

XXV—Love: First Love

16 As in the bosom o' the stream,
The moonbeam dwells at dewy e'en,
So trembling, pure, was tender love
Within the breast o' bonnie Jean.
BURNS, Bonnie Jean.

1
Nature's oracle—first love,—that all
Which Eve has left her daughters since her fall.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 189.

Love is so very timid when 'tis new.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 112.

2
The spot where love's first links were wound,
That ne'er are riven,
Is hallowed down to earth's profound,
And up to Heaven!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

3
The magic of first love is our ignorance that it can ever end.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple. Bk. iv,
ch. 1.

4
Lovers should guard their strangeness.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

The accepted and betrothed lover has lost the wildest charm of his maiden in her acceptance of him.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

5
But one always returns to one's first loves.
(Mais on revient toujours À ses premières amours.)

ÉTIENNE, La Joconde. Act iii, sc. 1.

6
The bashful virgin's side-long looks of love.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 29.

7
Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned,—
The white rose meant surrender.

JOHN HAY, The White Flag.

8
It is an ancient story Yet is it ever new.
(Es ist eine alte Geschichte, Doch bleibt sie immer neu.)

HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo.

9
Soft is the breath of a maiden's Yes;
Not the light gossamer stirs with less;
But never a cable that holds so fast
Through all the battles of wave and blast.

O. W. HOLMES, Dorothy Q. St. 7.

10
A warrior so bold, and a virgin so bright,
Conversed as they sat on the green.
They gazed on each other with tender de-
light,

Alonzo the Brave was the name of the knight—

The maiden's the Fair Imogene.

M. G. LEWIS, *Alonzo the Brave and the Fair
Imogene*. From his novel, Ambrosio, the Monk.

11
O, there is nothing holier, in this life of ours, than the first consciousness of love,—the first fluttering of its silken wings.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

12
That was the first sound in the song of love!
Scarce more than silence is, and yet a sound.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
3, l. 109.

How can I tell the signals and the signs
By which one heart another heart divines?
How can I tell the many thousand ways
By which it keeps the secret it betrays?

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii,
The Student's Tale: Emma and Eginhard, l.
75.

13
I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
I've bourne a weary lot;
But in my wanderings far or near
Ye never were forgot.

The fount that first burst frae this heart
Still travels on its way
And channels deeper as it rins
The luvie o' life's young day.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

14
I was a child and she was a child,
In this kingdom by the sea,
But we loved with a love that was more than
love,

I and my Annabel Lee;
With a love that the winged seraphs of heaven
Coveted her and me.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

And neither the angels in heaven above,
Nor the demons down under the sea,
Can ever dissever my soul from the soul
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

15
I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

New Testament: Revelation, ii, 4.

16
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 96.

For sometimes she would laugh, and sometimes cry,
Then sudden waxed wroth, and all she knew not
why.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 76.

17
First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act
iv.

18
For indeed I knew
Of no more subtle master under heaven
Than is the maiden passion for a maid,
Not only to keep down the base in man,
But teach high thought, and amiable words

And courtliness, and the desire of fame,
And love of truth, and all that makes a man.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 475.

1 Men always want to be a woman's first love.
That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act ii.

XXVI—Love: Old and New

2 Dawn love is silver,

Wait for the west:

Old love is gold love—

Old love is best.

KATHARINE LEE BATES, For a Golden Wedding.

3 'Tis good to be off wi' the old love
Before you are on wi' the new.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (1571)

'Tis well to be merry and wise,

'Tis well to be honest and true;

'Tis well to be off with the old love,

Before you are on with the new.

C. R. MATURIN, Bertram: Motto. A play produced at Drury Lane theatre in 1816.

It is best to be off wi' the old love,

Before you be on wi' the new.

SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 29.
(1819) Quoted as "the end of an old song."

It is good to be merry and wise,

It is good to be honest and true,

It is best to be off with the old love

Before you go on with the new.

Version of the old song published in Songs of England and Scotland, London, 1835. Vol.
ii, p. 73.

It's gude to be merry and wise,

It's gude to be honest and true,

And afore you're off wi' the auld love

It's best to be on wi' the new.

UNKNOWN, It's Gude to be Merry and Wise.

The Scotch version, showing characteristic Scotch caution.

It is better to love two too many than one too few.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams.

4 My merry, merry roundelay

Concludes with Cupid's curse:

They that do change old love for new,

Pray gods, they change for worse!

GEORGE PEELE, Cupid's Curse.

5 As one who cons at evening o'er an album
all alone,

And muses on the faces of the friends that he has known,

So I turn the leaves of Fancy, till in shadowy design

I find the smiling features of an old sweetheart of mine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, An Old Sweetheart of Mine.

6 Old love is little worth when new is more preferred.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto 10, st. 40.

7 I who all the Winter through,
Cherished other loves than you
And kept hands with hoary policy in marriage-bed and pew;

Now I know the false and true,

For the earnest sun looks through,

And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love. (1876)

8 The woods are hush'd, their music is no
more;

The leaf is dead, the yearning past away;

New leaf, new life—the days of frost are o'er;

New life, new love, to suit the newer day:

New loves are sweet as those that went before:

Free love—free field—we love but while we may.

TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 276.

At last she sought out Memory, and they trod
The same old paths where Love had walk'd with

Hope,

And Memory fed the soul of Love with tears.

TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale. Pt. i, l. 808.

9 Other loves may come to us and will,

And may hold us in their spell until

With a half regretful sigh,

We discover by and by,

There's a charm about the old love still.

F. W. VANDERSLOOT, There's a Charm About the Old Love Still. (1901)

XXVII—Love: Unreturning

10 Love, like Reputation, once fled, never returns more.

APHRA BEHN, History of the Nun.

The moon returns, and the spring; birds warble,
trees burst into leaf,

But Love once gone, goes for ever, and all that endures is the grief.

MATHILDE BLIND, Love Trilogy. No. 3.

And sigh to bethink me how vain is my sighing,
For love, once extinguished, is kindled no more.

REGINALD HEBER, Song to a Welsh Air.

11 Love, like Ulysses, is a wanderer,
For new fields always and new faces yearn-
ing. . . .

Put by, O waiting ones, put by your weaving,
Unlike Ulysses, love is unreturning.

ROSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY, Counsel.

12 For the man's love once gone never returns.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 333.

<sup>1</sup> Nothing grows again more easily than love.
(Nihil enim facilius quam amor recrudescit.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi. 3.

XXVIII—Love in a Cottage

<sup>2</sup> Love lasteth as long as the money endureth.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, The Game of Chesse, iii, 3.
(1474) Cited as "a common proverb in England."

<sup>3</sup> Love comes in at the window and goes out at the door.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327. (1605)
When poverty comes in at the door,
Love creeps out of the window.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5565.

<sup>4</sup> When the glowing of passion's over, and pinching winter comes, will amorous sighs supply the want of fire, or kind looks and kisses keep off hunger?

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, Artifice. (1724)
Nobody wants to kiss when they are hungry.
DOROTHY DIX.

<sup>5</sup> Love is maintained by wealth; when all is spent

Adversity then breeds the discontent.
ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 144.

<sup>6</sup> Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is—Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust;
Love in a palace is perhaps at last
More grievous torment than a hermit's fast.
KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii, l. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Love lurks as soon about a sheepcote as a palace.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, l. 95. (1590)
Love lives in cottages as well as in courts.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>8</sup> In the very smallest cot
There is room enough for a loving pair.
(Raum ist in der kleinsten Hütte Für ein glücklich liebend Paar.)
SCHILLER, Der Jüngling am Bache. St. 4.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis better far to love and be poor, than be rich with an empty heart.
SIR LEWIS MORRIS, Songs of Two Worlds: Love in Death.

Ah, better to love in the lowliest cot
Than pine in a palace alone.
G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Chastelar.

<sup>10</sup> Without Ceres (bread) and Liber (wine)
Venus will starve. (Sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 732.
Then the little maid she said, "Your fire may warm the bed,
But what shall we do for to eat?"

Will the flames you're only rich in make a fire in the kitchen,
And the little God of Love turn the spit?"
UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme, from an 18th century broadside.

<sup>11</sup> They may talk of love in a cottage,
And bowers of trellised vine—
Of nature bewitchingly simple,
And milkmaids half divine, . . .
But give me a sly flirtation,
By the light of a chandelier—
With music to play in the pauses,
And nobody very near.
N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.
Your love in a cottage is hungry,
Your vine is a nest for flies—
Your milkmaid shocks the Graces,
And simplicity talks of pies!
You lie down to your shady slumber
And wake with a bug in your ear,
And your damsel that walks in the morning
Is shod like a mountaineer.
N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.

True love is at home on a carpet,
And mightily likes his ease—
And true love has an eye for a dinner,
And starves beneath shady trees.
His wing is the fan of a lady,
His foot's an invisible thing,
And his arrow is tipp'd with a jewel,
And shot from a silver string.
N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.

XXIX—Love: Spoken and Silent

<sup>12</sup> Love ceases to be a pleasure when it ceases to be a secret.

APHERA BEHN, The Lover's Watch.

<sup>13</sup> Say thou dost love me, love me, love me—toll
The silver iterance!—only minding, Dear,
To love me also in silence, with thy soul.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxi.

<sup>14</sup> In many ways doth the full heart reveal
The presence of the love it would conceal.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Motto.

Love most concealed, does most itself discover.
WALTER DAVISON, Sonnets. No. xiv.

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 159.

<sup>15</sup> Words are the weak support of cold indifference; love has no language to be heard.
CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act iv, sc. 17.

<sup>16</sup> For God sake hold your tongue, and let me love.
JOHN DONNE, The Canonization.

1 Sweet are the words of Love, sweeter his thoughts:

Sweetest of all what Love nor says nor thinks.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, clxv.

When Silence speaks for Love she has much to say.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, lxxiii.

2 All the heart was full of feeling: love had ripened into speech,
Like the sap that turns to nectar, in the velvet of the peach.

WILLIAM WALLACE HARNEY, Adonais.

3 Love understands love; it needs no talk.

FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL, Loving Allegiance.

4 They do not love that do not show their love.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

5 Love is sparingly soluble in the words of men, therefore they speak much of it; but one syllable of woman's speech can dissolve more of it than a man's heart can hold.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 11.

No love so true as love that dies untold.

O. W. HOLMES, The Mysterious Illness.

6 Listlessness and silence denote the lover. (Amantem languor et silentium arguit.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xi, l. 9.

7 But oft the words come forth awrye of him that loveth well.

HENRY HOWARD, Pangs and Sleights of Love.

8 'Tis no sin love's fruits to steal;

But the sweet thefts to reveal;

To be taken, to be seen,

These have crimes accounted been.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act iii, sc. 6. See also under KISS.

9 Love contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse,

To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iii, l. 7.

Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes over-running with laughter,
Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iii, concluding lines.

In the way of love and glory,

Each tongue best tells his own story.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Of the Choice of a Wife.

Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself

And trust no agent.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 184.

A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 93.

10 [The passion wherewith] we lash ourselves into the persuasive speech distinguishing us from the animals.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1. .

11 All love gives words, and finds sustenance in delay. (Verba dat omnis amor, reperitque alimenta morando.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 95.

12 To be able to say how much you love is to love but little. (Chi può dir com' egli arde, è in picciol fusco.)

PETRARCH, Sonnets. No. cxxxvii.

O, they love least that let men know their love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 2, l. 32.

13 But I, in love, was mute and still.

PUSHEKIN, Eugene Onegin. Canto i, st. 52.

14 Silence in love bewrays more woe
Than words, though ne'er so witty:

A beggar that is dumb, you know,
May challenge double pity.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Silent Lover.

15 There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 1, l. 15.

16 Speak low, if you speak love.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 102.

O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 11.

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 166.

17 She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 113.

18 What, gone without a word?

Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 16.

Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,

As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 7, l. 18.

1 They love indeed who quake to say they love.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet liv.

2 The wretched man gan them avise too late,
That love is not where most it is profest.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 10, st. 31.

3 Silence, uttering love that all things understand.
SWINBURNE, The Clifside Path. St. 2.

4 Who are wise in love, Love most, say least.
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 245.

5 Love is a talkative passion.
THOMAS WILSON, Sacra Privata, p. 194.

XXX—Love: Protestations

6 Mary kept the belt o' love, and O but she was gay!
She danced a jig, she sung a song that took my heart away.
WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Lovely Mary Donnelly.

7 One sweet, sad secret holds my heart in thrall;
A mighty love within my breast has grown,
Unseen, unspoken, and of no one known;
And of my sweet, who gave it, least of all.
(Ma vie a son secret, mon âme a son mystère:

Un amour éternel en un moment concu.
La mal est sans remède, aussi j'ai dû le taire,
Et elle qui l'a fait n'en a jamais rien su.)
FELIX ARVERS, Sonnet. (Knight, tr.) In Mes Heures Perdues, Arvers states that it was taken from the Italian.

8 Heaven would not be Heaven were thy soul not with mine, nor would Hell be Hell were our souls together.
(Sive ad felices vadam post funera campos,
Seu ferar ardentem rapidi Phlegethontis ad
undam,
Nec sine te felix ero, nec tecum miser unquam.)

BAPTISTA MANTUANUS, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 108.
O mother, mother, what is bliss?
O mother, what is bale?

Without my William what were heaven,
Or with him what were hell?
GOTTFRIED AUGUSTUS BÜRGER, Lenoré. (Walter Scott, tr., William and Helen. This was Scott's first publication.)

Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 6.

9 And what am I but love of you made flesh,

Quickened by every longing love may bring,
A pilgrim fire, homeless and wandering.
KATHERINE BOWDITCH, Reincarnation.

10 "Honeypot" he called her,
Hurling words like javelins—
Stern John Knox with the flame in his eyes.
Steeled against shocks
Was great John Knox!
Target for surprise
From those side-glancing eyes?
Nay, I trow not—"Honeypot."
LOUISE MOREY BOWMAN, John Knox and Mary Queen.

11 In your arms was still delight,
Quiet as a street at night;
And thoughts of you, I do remember,
Were green leaves in a darkened chamber,
Were dark clouds in a moonless sky.
RUPERT BROOKE, Retrospect.

12 Beloved, let us love so well,
Our work shall still be better for our love,
And still our love be sweeter for our work,
And both commended, for the sake of each,
By all true workers and true lovers born.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 924.

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of everyday's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xliii.

13 For the lake, its swan;
For the dell, its dove;
And for thee—(oh, haste!)
Me, to bend above,
Me, to hold embraced.
ROBERT BROWNING, James Lee's Wife. Pt. i.

14 Flower o' the broom,
Take away love, and our earth is a tomb! . . .
Flower o' the clove,
All the Latin I construe is "amo," I love!
ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

Be a god and hold me With a charm!
Be a man and fold me With thine arm!
ROBERT BROWNING, A Woman's Last Word.

15 I canna tell, I mauna tell,
I darena for your anger;
But secret love will break my heart,
If I conceal it langer.
BURNS, Craigie-burn Wood.

The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life

Was my sweet Highland Mary.
 BURNS, Highland Mary.
 To see her is to love her,
 And love but her for ever;
 For nature made her what she is,
 And ne'er made sic anither!
 BURNS, O, Saw Ye Bonnie Lesley. (1792)
 Oh! she was good as she was fair,
 None—none on earth above her!
 As pure in thought as angels are,
 To know her was to love her.
 SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 69. (1814)

1
 Tho' father an' mither an' a' should gae mad,
 O whistle, an' I'll come to ye, my lad.
 BURNS, O Whistle, an' I'll Come to Ye.
 Whistle, and she'll come to you.
 JOHN FLETCHER, Wit Without Money. Act iv,
 sc. 4.

2
 O, my luve is like a red, red rose
 That's newly sprung in June.
 O, my luve is like the melody
 That's sweetly play'd in tune.
 BURNS, A Red, Red Rose.

3
 The cold in clime are cold in blood,
 Their love can scarce deserve the name;
 But mine was like the lava flood
 That boils in Ætna's breast of flame.
 BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1099.

4
 She was his life,
 The ocean to the river of his thoughts,
 Which terminated all.
 BYRON, The Dream. Sec. 2.
 She floats upon the river of his thoughts!
 LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 3.

5
 Of all the girls that are so smart
 There's none like pretty Sally;
 She is the darling of my heart,
 And she lives in our alley.
 HENRY CAREY, Sally in Our Alley.

6
 Let Time and Chance combine, combine!
 Let Time and Chance combine!
 The fairest love from heaven above,
 That love of yours was mine, My Dear!
 That love of yours was mine.
 THOMAS CARLYLE, Adieu.

7
 Blest as the immortal gods is he,
 The youth who fondly sits by thee,
 And hears and sees thee all the while Softly speak and sweetly smile.
 (Ille me pas esse deo videtur,
 Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
 Qui sedens adversus identidem te Spectat et audit.)
 CATULLUS, Odes. Ode li, l. 1. An almost literal version of a stanza by Sappho.

8
 He kissed the ground her feet did kiss.
 JOHN DAVIDSON, A New Ballad of Tannhäuser.

9
 Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer, do!
 I'm half crazy all for the love of you!
 It won't be a stylish marriage,
 I can't afford a carriage,
 But you'll look sweet upon the seat
 Of a bicycle built for two.
 HARRY DACRE, Daisy Bell. (1892)

10
 Never will you hold me
 With puddings and cake
 Or even the threat
 Of a heart to break. . . .
 A song within a song
 And eyes upon the door—
 And you will always hold me
 One day more.
 CHARLES DIVINE, Never Will You Hold Me.

11
 And for bonnie Annie Laurie
 I'd lay me down and dee.
 WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Annie Laurie. Annie Laurie was the eldest daughter of Sir Robert Laurie, of Maxwellton, b. 1682.

12
 Not from the whole wide world I chose
 thee,
 Sweetheart, light of the land and the sea!
 The wide, wide world could not enclose thee,
 For thou art the whole wide world to me.
 R. W. GILDER, Song.

13
 Thus let me hold thee to my heart,
 And every care resign:
 And we shall never, never part,
 My life—my all that's mine!
 GOLDSMITH, The Hermit. St. 39. (The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

14
 There is a lady sweet and kind,
 Was never face so pleased my mind;
 I did but see her passing by,
 And yet I love her till I die.
 BARNABE GOOGE, There is a Lady. An English version of a Latin stanza by Thomas Naogeorgus. (Popish Kingdome or Reigne of Antichrist, 1570. Stanza written on back of leaf 53.) Wrongfully ascribed to Robert Herrick in Scottish Student's Song-Book.
 (See Notes and Queries, ix, x, 427.)

Thou art my love, my life, my heart,
 The very eyes of me:
 And hast command of every part
 To live and die for thee.
 ROBERT HERRICK, To Althea Who May Command Him Anything.

15
 When the swallows homeward fly,
 When the roses scattered lie,
 When from neither hill or dale,
 Chants the silvery nightingale:
 In these words my bleeding heart
 Would to thee its grief impart;
 When I thus thy image lose,

Can I, ah! can I, e'er know repose?

KARL HERRLOSSOHN, When the Swallows Homeward Fly.

1
Heart of my heart, O come with me
To walk the ways of Arcadie.

NORAH M. HOLLAND, Grasshopper's Song.

Heart of my heart, the world is young;
Love lies hidden in every rose.

ALFRED NOYES, Unity.

2
I love thee—I love thee!
'Tis all that I can say;
It is my vision in the night,
My dreaming in the day.

THOMAS HOOD, I Love Thee.

I love thee, I love but thee,
With a love that shall not die
Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold!

BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

3
With thee I fain would live, with thee I'd gladly die! (Tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam libens!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 9, l. 24.

4
If you become a Nun, dear,
The bishop Love will be;
The Cupids every one, dear!
Will chant—"We trust in thee!"

LEIGH HUNT, The Nun.

5
We have lived and loved together
Through many changing years;
We have shared each other's gladness,
And wept each other's tears.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, We Have Lived and Loved Together.

We twa hae run about the braes,
And pu'd the gowans fine.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne.

To stray together down Life's slope,
While Age came on like gentle rain.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Winter Hour. Pt. viii.

By the waters of Life we sat together,
Hand in hand, in the golden days
Of the beautiful early summer weather,
When skies were purple and breath was praise.

THOMAS NOEL, An Old Man's Idyll.

6
By the old Moulmein Pagoda, lookin' eastward to the sea,
There's a Burma girl a-settin', and I know
she thinks o' me;
For the wind is in the palm-trees, and the temple-bells they say:

"Come you back, you British soldier; come you back to Mandalay!"

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay.

Though I walks with fifty 'ousemaids outer Chelsea to the Strand,

An' they talks a lot o' lovin', but wot do they understand?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay.

7
I love a lassie, a bonnie, bonnie lassie,
She's as pure as the lily in the dell.
She's as sweet as the heather,
The bonnie, bloomin' heather,
Mary, ma Scotch Blue-bell.

HARRY LAUDER AND GERALD GRAFTON, I Love a Lassie.

8
The charms, alas! that won me,
I never can forget:
Although thou hast undone me,
I own I love thee yet.

WILLIAM LEGGETT, Song.

I love thee, as the good love heaven.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
3, l. 146.

If you lak-a me lak I lak-a you.
ROSAMOND JOHNSON, Under the Bamboo Tree. (1902)

I'd leave my happy home for you.
HARRY VON TILZER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1899)

9
Not as all other women are
Is she that to my soul is dear;
Her glorious fancies come from far,
Beneath the silver evening-star,
And yet her heart is ever near.

J. R. LOWELL, My Love.

10
This lass so neat, with smile so sweet,
Has won my right good will,
I'd crowns resign to call her mine,
Sweet lass of Richmond Hill.

LEONARD McNALLY, The Lass of Richmond Hill. Published anonymously in London Public Advertiser, 3 Aug., 1789. Sometimes attributed to William Upton.

11
Come live with me and be my Love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
Or woods, or steepy mountain yields.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2, as "that smooth song which was made by Kit Marlowe, now at least fifty years ago." Sometimes wrongly attributed to Shakespeare, because fragments of the second and third stanzas are quoted in The Merry Wives of Windsor (Act iii, sc. 1, l. 16), and the entire poem included in The Passionate Pilgrim (Pt. xx). The versions vary slightly.

If all the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Nymph's Reply to the Passionate Shepherd. Walton included this poem in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2, calling it The Milkmaid's Mother's Answer, saying that "it was made by Sir Walter Raleigh in his younger days." The first stanza was also included in The Passionate Pilgrim, immediately following Marlowe's poem.

Come live with me, and be my love,
And we will some new pleasures prove
Of golden sands, and crystal brooks,
With silken lines, and silver hooks.

JOHN DONNE, The Bait. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 9, as "made by Dr. Donne, and made to shew the world that he could make soft and smooth verses, when he thought them fit and worth his labour."

1
My love is of a birth as rare
As 'tis for object strange and high;
It was begotten by despair
Upon impossibility.

ANDREW MARVELL, My Love.

2
She whom I love is hard to catch and conquer,
Hard, but O the glory of the winning were she won!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley. St. 2.
Give me purity to be worthy the good in her, and grant her patience to reach the good in me.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel, Ch. 34.

3
I loved you ere I knew you; know you now,
And having known you, love you better still.

OWEN MEREDITH, Vanini.

4
With the first dream that comes with the first sleep

I run, I run, I am gathered to thy heart.

ALICE MEYNELL, Renouncement.

5
Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,
His breath like caller air,
His very foot has music in't,
As he comes up the stair.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, The Sailor's Wife.
Also attributed to Jean Adam.

6
So dear I love him, that with him all deaths
I could endure, without him live no life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 832.

7
Come, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer,

Though the herd have fled from thee, thy home is still here.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Rest in This Bosom.
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart,
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Rest in This Bosom.

8
Wert thou more fickle than the restless sea,
Still should I love thee, knowing thee for such.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 22.

9
A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 12. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Or were I in the wildest waste,
Sae black and bare, sae black and bare,
The desert were a Paradise,
If thou wert there, if thou wert there.
BURNS, Oh! Wert Thou in the Cold Blast.

Oh that the desert were my dwelling-place,
With one fair spirit for my minister,
That I might all forget the human race,
And, hating no one, love but only her!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 177.

O Love! in such a wilderness as this,
Where transport and security entwine,
Here is the empire of thy perfect bliss,
And here thou art a god indeed divine.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 1.

"A jug and a book and a dame,
And a nice shady nook for the same,"
Said Omar Khayyám,

"And I don't give a darn

What you say, it's a great little game!"

E. M. ROBINSON, Limericised Classics.

10
Quick as a humming bird is my love,
Dipping into the hearts of flowers—
She darts so eagerly, swiftly, sweetly
Dipping into the flowers of my heart.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Quick as a Humming Bird.

11
Dear as the vital warmth that feeds my life,
Dear as these eyes, that weep in fondness o'er thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act v, sc. 1.

12
I love thee then
Not only for thy body packed with sweet
Of all this world, that cup of brimming
June, . . .

Not for this only do I love thee, but Because Infinity upon thee broods;
And thou art full of whispers and of shadows.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

13
Thou wast all that to me, love,
For which my soul did pine:
A green isle in the sea, love,
A fountain and a shrine.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To One in Paradise.

14
Love me if I live!

Love me if I die!

What to me is life or death,
So that thou be nigh?

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Song.

15
We are prepared, my love and I,
For winter on a hill:

I stored a theme of song, and she
A root of daffodil.

EDWIN QUARLES, Stronghold.

1 Love me and the world is mine.

DAVID REED, jr., Title of popular song, 1906.

2 The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, My Rosary.

3 Her voice, whate'er she said, enchanted;
Like music to the heart it went.
And her dark eyes—how eloquent!
Ask what they would, 'twas granted.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 80.

4 Still so gently o'er me stealing,
Mem'ry will bring back the feeling,
Spite of all my grief revealing
That I love thee, love thee still.
(Ah! perchè non posso odiarti
Infedel, com' io vorrei!
Cancellata dal mio cor.)

FELICE ROMANI, La Sonnambula. Act ii.

5 For one man is my world of all the men
This wide world holds; O love, my world is you.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Come Back to Me.

And in his heart my heart is locked,
And in his life my life.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Noble Sisters.

6 Love, all the hours are long
That once so fleetly flew;
I am bereft of song
Being bereft of you.
But when you come again
How nimbly Time will run
To such a jocund strain,
For you and song are one.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, Love and Song Are One.

7 O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 209.

8 The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 10.

That not impossible she.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed) Mistress.

9 Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 116.

Forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 292.

From my heart-string I love the lovely bully.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 47.

10 Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum!
for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth.
Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 187.

11 Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 90.

If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 144.

12 Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
Cry but "Ay me!" pronounce but "love"
and "dove."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 9.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 98.

13 This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 121.

You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry

Your love's protracted growing:

June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,
From seeds of April's sowing.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iii.

14 My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 133.

15 Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night
And pay no worship to the garish sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 21.

Romeo, if dead, should be cut up into little stars to make the heavens fine.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.

1 Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xviii.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

2 If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it remember me;
For such as I am all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is beloved.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 15.

3 O, but I love his lady too too much!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act ii, sc. 4, l. 205.

And notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,
The more it grows and fawneth on her still.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

4 Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love?

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 201.

5 When you loved me I gave you the whole sun and stars to play with. I gave you eternity in a single moment . . . a moment only; but was it not enough? Were you not paid then for all the rest of your struggle on earth? . . . We spent eternity together; and you ask me for a little lifetime more. . . .
I gave you your own soul: you ask me for my body as a plaything. Was it not enough? Was it not enough?

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

6 The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean;

The winds of heaven mix for ever
With a sweet emotion;

Nothing in the world is single;

All things, by a law divine,

In one another's being mingle—

Why not I with thine?

SHELLEY, Love's Philosophy.

7 I loved him for himself alone.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

But thou, through good and evil, praise and blame,

Wilt not thou love me for myself alone?

MACAULAY, Lines Written 30 July, 1847.

I love you because you're a sweet little fool.

J. H. BOKER, The Sweet Little Fool.

8 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 2.

9 Our way lies where God knows

And Love knows where:

We are in Love's hand to-day.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea.

Land me, she says, where love

Shows but one shaft, one dove,

One heart, one hand.—

A shore like that, my dear,

Lies where no man will steer,

No maiden land.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea. Imitated from Thé-ophile Gautier.

10 If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,

Our lives would grow together

In sad or singing weather.

SWINBURNE, A Match.

Were you the earth, dear love, and I the skies,

My love would shine on you like to the sun

And look upon you with ten thousand eyes

Till heaven waxed blind and till the world were done.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Love's Omnipotence.

11 There has fallen a splendid tear
From the passion-flower at the gate.

She is coming, my dove, my dear;

She is coming, my life, my fate;

The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near;"

And the white rose weeps, "She is late;"

The larkspur listens, "I hear, I hear;"

And the lily whispers, "I wait."

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 10.

She is coming, my own, my sweet;

Were it ever so airy a tread,

My heart would hear her and beat,

Were it earth in an earthy bed;

My dust would hear her and beat,

Had I lain for a century dead;

Would start and tremble under her feet,

And blossom in purple and red.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 11.

12 I confess that I love this woman; if that is a sin, I confess that also. (Ego me amare hanc fateor; si id peccare est, fateor id quoque.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 896.

13 How could I, blest with thee, long nights employ,

And how with thee the longest day enjoy!

(Quam vellem tecum longas requiescere Et tecum longos pervigilare dies!)
noctes

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 53.

14 The seamen on the wave, love,
When storm and tempest rave, love,

Look to one star to save, love,

Thou art that star to me!

JOHN TYLER, To Julia Gardiner Tyler. Written
1 Jan., 1855, at the age of 65.

1
Will you love me in December as you do in
May,
Will you love me in the good old fashioned
way?

When my hair has all turned gray,
Will you kiss me then and say,
That you love me in December as you do in
May?

JAMES J. WALKER, Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May? Set to music by Ernest R. Ball in 1905.

2
A narrow compass, and yet there
Dwelt all that's good, and all that's fair:
Give me but what this riband bound,
Take all the rest the sun goes round.

EDMUND WALLER, On a Girdle.

3
No lance have I, in joust or fight,
To splinter in my lady's sight;
But, at her feet, how blest were I
For any need of hers to die!

WHITTIER, The Henchman.

The love that no return doth crave
To knightly levels lifts the slave.

WHITTIER, The Henchman.

4
Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 3.

She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me.

WORDSWORTH, There Is an Eminence.

5
O dearer far than light and life are dear.

WORDSWORTH, To —. (To Mrs. W.)

Ah, dearer than my soul . . .

Dearer than light, or life, or fame.

JOHN OLDHAM, Lament for Saul and Jonathan.

Art thou not dearer to my eyes than light?
Dost thou not circulate through all my veins?
Mingle with life, and form my very soul?

EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris. Act v, sc. 1.

6
Tho' near the gates of Paradise,
Gladly I'd turn away,

Just to hear you say, "I love you!"

Sometime, somewhere, some day.

RIDA JOHNSON YOUNG, Sometime. (1919)

I seek for one as fair and gay,
But find none to remind me,

How blest the hours pass'd away

With the girl I left behind me.

UNKNOWN, The Girl I Left Behind Me. (1759)
(Charms of Melody, Dublin, 1810.)

8
Greensleeves was all my joy,
Greensleeves was my delight,
Greensleeves was my heart of gold,

And who but Lady Greensleeves?

UNKNOWN, A New Courtly Sonnet of the Lady Greensleeves. (A Handful of Pleasant Ditties, 1584.) The tune of Greensleeves is referred to by Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, and v, 5.

9
And when with envy time transported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You'll in your girls again be courted,
And I'll go wooing in my boys.

UNKNOWN, Winifreda. First printed in a volume of Miscellaneous Poems by Several Hands, 1726, where it was said to be a translation "from the ancient British language." Included in Percy's Reliques. Sometimes attributed to John Gilbert Cooper, who, however, was only three years old in 1726.

XXXI—Love and Fear

10
Love is a thing aye full of busy dread.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1645.
(c. 1374)

This proverb that I the lere . . .

Love goeth never without fear.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Castle of Labour. Sig. D 2. (1506)

11
There is no fear in love; but perfect love
casteth out fear.

New Testament: I John, iv, 18.

Love cannot be mixed with fear. (Non potest amor cum timore misceri.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 19.

12
For there is only sorrow in my heart;
There is no room for fear.

But how I wish I were afraid again,

My dear, my dear!

ALINE KILMER, I Shall Not Be Afraid.

13
Love is a thing full of anxious fears. (Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 12.

14
I do not wish to be feared; I prefer to be loved. (Nolo ego metui: amari mavolo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 835.

15
To fear love is to fear life, and those who fear life are already three parts dead.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 287.

Of all forms of caution, caution in love is perhaps most fatal to true happiness.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Conquest of Happiness, p. 186.

16
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

When little fears grow great, great love grows there.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 181.

XXXII—Love and Hate

1 For those who love, the world is wide,
But not for those who hate.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Rencontre.

2 For 'tis impossible hate to return with love.
(Che amar chi t'odia, ell'è impossibil cosa.)

ALFIERI, Polinice. Act ii, sc. 4.

3 I love you:
I'll cut your throat for your own sake.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iv, sc. 1.

4 When I love most, Love is disguised
In Hate; and when Hate is surprised
In Love, then I hate most.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 227.

Once, when I loved, I would enlaze
Breast, eyelids, hands, feet, form and face
Of her I loved in one embrace—

As if by mere love I could love immensely!

Once, when I hated, I would plunge

My sword and wipe with the first lunge

My foe's whole life out like a sponge—

As if by mere hate I could hate intensely!

But now I am wiser, know better the fashion

How passion seeks aid from its opposite passion.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 207.

5 The self-same thing they will abhor
One way, and long another for.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 219.

6 Now hatred is by far the longest pleasure;
Men love in haste, but they detest at leisure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 6.

7 I hate and I love. Perhaps you ask why I do so. I do not know, but I feel it, and I am in torment. (Odi et amo. Quare id faciam, fortasse requiris. Nescio, sed fieri sentio et excrucior.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxxv.

One loves without reason, and without reason one hates. (On aime sans raison, et sans raison l'on haït.)

REGNARD, Les Folies Amoureuses.

8 Love as though some day you would have to hate; hate as though some day you would have to love.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon.)

9 Few (especially young) people know how to love, or how to hate; their love is an unbounded weakness, fatal to the person they love; their hate is a hot, rash, and imprudent violence, always fatal to themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 29 Sept., 1752.

10 Dissembled hate or varnished love.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 4.

11 The doctrine of hatred must be preached,
as the counteraction of the doctrine of love,
when that pules and whines.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

12 I hate all that don't love me, and slight all that do.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act i, sc. 1.

13 If you hate a man, eat his bread; if you love him, do the same.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2756.

14 Violent antipathies are always suspicious, and betray a secret affinity.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Vol. i, p. 377.

15 He loves me for little, hates me for naught.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16 We've practiced loving long enough,
Let's come at last to hate.

(Wir haben lang genug geliebt, Und wollen endlich hassen.)

GEORG HERWEGH, Lied vom Hasse.

17 Who love too much, hate in the like extreme.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 79. (Pope, tr.)

18 If one judges love by its effects, it resembles hate more than affection. (Si on juge de l'amour par la plupart de ses effets, il res-semble plus à la haine qu'à l'amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 72.

The more one loves a mistress, the more one is ready to hate her. (Plus on aime une maîtresse, et plus on est prêt de la haïr.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 111.

19 There's nothing in this world so sweet as
love,

And next to love the sweetest thing is hate.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 5.

20 Nothing is more hateful than love.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

The noblest hateful love that e'er I heard of.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
1, l. 33.

21 Where I love, I profess it; where I hate,
In every circumstance I dare proclaim it.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1.

22 To love you was pleasant enough,
And, oh! 'tis delicious to hate you!

THOMAS MOORE, To —.

Any kiddie in school can love like a fool,
But hating, my boy, is an art.

OGDEN NASH, Plea for Less Malice Toward None.

23 Thy sweet obligingness could supple hate,
And out of it, its contrary create.

JOHN OLDEHAM, To Charles Morwent. St. 17.

1 I will hate, if I can: if not, I will unwillingly love. (Odero, si potero: si non, invitus amabo.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 35.

What will you do in your hatred, when you are so cruel in your love? (Quid facies odio sic ubi amore nocēs?)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xxi, l. 56.

2 Years of love have been forgot
In the hatred of a minute.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To —.

3 A woman either loves or hates; there is no third course. (Aut amat aut odit mulier; nil est tertium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 42.

4 Hatreds are the cinders of affection.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Letter to Sir Robert Cecil, 10 May, 1593.

5 Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 447.

6 Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 135.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 181.

My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 140.

It is a greater grief

To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xl.

7 What medicine then can such disease remove,
Where love draws hate, and hate engendereth love?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii.

8 Let me arise and open the gate,
To breathe the wild warm air of the heath,
And to let in Love, and to let out Hate,
And anger at living, and scorn of Fate,
To let in Life, and to let out Death.

MARY M. SINGLETON, A Reverie.

9 Who cannot hate, can love not.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 31.

10 Dower'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn,

The love of love.

TENNYSON, The Poet.

In a wink the false love turns to hate.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 850.

11 Here love returns with love to the lover,
And beauty unto the heart thereof,
And hatred unto the heart of the hater.

JOHN HALL WHEELOCK, The Triumph of Love.

12 She may strike the pouncing eagle, but she dares not harm the dove;
And every gate she bars to Hate shall open wide to Love!

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Osawatomie.

13 Love lights more fire than hate extinguishes,
And men grow better as the world grows old.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Optimism.

14 I've played the traitor Over and over;
I'm a good hater But a bad lover.

ELINOR WYLIE, Peregrine.

XXXIII—Love and Loss

15 Say what you will, 'tis better to be left than never to have been loved.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World.
Act ii, sc. 1.

Better be cheated to the last
Than lose the blessed hope of truth.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Faith.

16 Better to love amiss than nothing to have loved.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience, l. 46.

17 Far worse it is
To lose than never to have tasted bliss.

(Che mai

Non v'avere ò provate, ò possedute.)

GUARINI, Pastor Fido.

18 Methinks it is better that I should have pined away seven of my goldenest years, when I was thrall to the fair hair, and fairer eyes, of Alice W——n, than that so passionate a love adventure should be lost.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve.

19 He who for love hath undergone
The worst that can befall,

Is happier thousandfold than one
Who never loved at all.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, To Myrza: On Returning.

20 I hold it true, whate'er befall;
I feel it, when I sorrow most;
'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii, st. 4.

'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have lost at all.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, The Way of

All Flesh. Ch. 76. Usually misprinted "loved at all."

1
It is best to love wisely, no doubt; but to love foolishly is better than not to be able to love at all.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 6.

To love and win is the best thing; to love and lose the next best.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 6.

2
I fear to love thee, Sweet, because Love's the ambassador of loss.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To Olivia.

XXXIV—Love and Death

3
Scarcely a tear to shed;
Hardly a word to say;
The end of a summer day;
Sweet Love dead.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, An Evening.

Oh, listen! Love lasts! Love will never die.
I am only your Angel, who was your Bride;
And I know, that though dead, I have never died.

EDWIN ARNOLD, She and He.

Though I am dead my soul shall love thee still.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. No. xiii.

5
And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—
"Guess now who holds thee?"—"Death," I said. But, there,
The silver answer rang,—
"Not Death, but Love."

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. i.

6
Can we love but on condition that the thing we love must die?

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz.

Cold in the dust this perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once shall never die!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 429.

8
So blind is life, so long at last is sleep,
And none but Love to bid us laugh or weep.

WILLA CATHER, Evening Song.

9
A death for love's no death, but martyrdom.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge for Honour. Act iv, sc. 2.

10
My love is dead, Gone to his death-bed,
All under the willow-tree!

CHATTERTON, Ælla: The Minstrel's Song.

11
Love, like death, a universal leveller of mankind.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act ii, sc. 8.

Love either finds equality or makes it;
Like death, he knows no difference in degrees,

But planes and levels all.

DRYDEN, Marriage à la Mode. Act iii, sc. 1.

12
Given thee back
To earth, to light and life, to love and me.
CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 2.

13
Life bears Love's cross, death brings Love's crown.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Lettice.

14
As I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true!

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Too Late.

O Dowglas, O Dowglas, Tendir and trewe.

SIR RICHARD HOLLAND, Duke of the Howlat. (c. 1450) (PINKERTON, Collection of Scottish Poems. Vol. iii, p. 146.)

15
Love is anterior to life,
Posterior to death.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 37.

16
He who dares love, and for that love must die,

And, knowing this, dares yet love on, am I.
DRYDEN, II Conquest of Granada. Act iv, sc. 3.

He that dares drink, and for that drink dares die,
And, knowing this, dares yet drink on, am I.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Rehearsal. Act iv, sc. 1. Drawcansir, the burlesque tyrant in Buckingham's play, was a burlesque of Dryden's Almanzor in the Conquest of Granada.

17
I know not if it rains, my love,
In the land where you do lie;
And oh, so sound you sleep, my love,
You know no more than I.

A. E. HOUSMAN, The Half-Moon Westers Low.

18
I had rather live and love where death is king,
Than have eternal life where love is not.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Oration at a Child's Grave.

19
But great loves, to the last, have pulses red;
All great loves that have ever died dropped dead.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Dropped Dead.

20
The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
The surest guide a wanderer prove;
Death only binds us fast

To the bright shore of love.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: 8th Sunday after Trinity.

21
If Love were jester at the court of Death,
And Death the king of all, still would I pray,

"For me the motley and the bauble, yea,
Though all be vanity, as the Preacher saith,

The mirth of love be mine for one brief breath!"

FREDERICK LAWRENCE KNOWLES, If Love Were Jester at the Court of Death.

AMELIA OPIE, The Pilgrim of Love, l. 6.

<sup>2</sup> They that love beyond the world cannot be separated by it. Death cannot kill what never dies.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

<sup>3</sup> O Death, all-eloquent! you only prove
What dust we dote on, when 'tis man we love.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 335.

<sup>4</sup> Love is Life, and Death at last Crowns it eternal and divine.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Life in Death.

<sup>5</sup> Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Verses to Edmund Spenser.

<sup>6</sup> If there be any one can take my place
And make you happy whom I grieve to grieve,
Think not that I can grudge it, but believe
I do command you to that nobler grace,
That readier wit than mine, that sweeter face.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Monna Innominata. Sonnet xii.

<sup>7</sup> Tell me if the lovers are losers . . . tell me if any get more than the lovers . . . in the dust . . . in the cool tombs.

CARL SANDBURG, Cool Tombs.

<sup>8</sup> Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 107.

What mad lover ever dy'd,
To gain a soft and gentle bride?
Or for a lady tender-hearted,
In purling streams or hemp departed?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 23.

I thought when love for you died, I should die.
It's dead. Alone, most strangely, I live on.

RUPERT BROOKE, The Life Beyond.

For, heaven be thank'd, we live in such an age,
When no man dies for love, but on the stage.

DRYDEN, Epilogue: Mithridates.

<sup>9</sup> Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O
you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous
kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 113.

<sup>10</sup> Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath:

I am slain by a fair cruel maid.

My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!

My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 52.

<sup>11</sup> Love is strong as death.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

Love is greater than illusion, and as strong as death.

ALBERTO CASELLA, Death Takes a Holiday. Act iii.

Love, strong as death, the poet led.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. St. 4.

She is more strong than death,
Being strong as love.

SWINBURNE, Madonna Mia.

Love can vanquish Death.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 269.

<sup>12</sup> I loved you, and my love had no return,
And therefore my true love has been my death.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1268.

<sup>13</sup> O that 'twere possible
After long grief and pain
To find the arms of my true love
Round me once again! . . .

Ah, Christ, that it were possible
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 4, l. 1.

<sup>14</sup> I believe if I should die,
And you should kiss my eyelids where I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,

The folded orbs would open at thy breath,
And from its exile in the Isles of Death
Life would come gladly back along my veins.

MARY ASHLEY TOWNSEND, Love's Belief.

<sup>15</sup> My love lies in the gates of foam,
The last dear wreck of shore;

The naked sea-marsh binds her home,
The sand her chamber-door.

JOHN BYRNE LEICESTER WARREN (LORD DE TABLEY), The Churchyard on the Sands.

<sup>16</sup> Love still is Nature's truth, and Death her lie.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Coming of Love: The Spirit of the Sunrise.

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, De Factis Dictisque. Bk. iv, ch. 6, sec. 3.

<sup>2</sup> Life is ever lord of Death
And Love can never lose its own.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 211.

And yet, dear heart, remembering thee,
Am I not richer than of old?

Safe in thy immortality,

What change can reach the wealth I hold?

What chance can mar the pearl and gold

Thy love hath left in trust with me?

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 422.

XXXV—Love: Its Fruition

<sup>4</sup> Let us live, my Lesbia, and love, and value at a penny all the talk of crabbed old men.
(Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus, Rumoresque senum severiorum Omnes unius æstimemus assis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode v, l. 1.

Live we, Lesbia, and love!

What though the greybeards disapprove!

Let them wag their toothless jaws!

Who cares a copper for their saws?

RICHARD HOVEY, To Lesbia.

<sup>5</sup> When love is satisfied, all its charm is gone.
(À l'amour satisfait, tout son charme est ôté.)

CORNEILLE, Don Juan. Act i, sc. 2.

As soon as women belong to us, we no longer belong to them. (Soudain qu'elles sont à nous, nous ne sommes plus à elles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Women enjoy'd (whate'er before they've been)
Are like romances read, or sights once seen.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition.

Plays and romances read and seen, do fall
In our opinions; yet not seen at all,
Whom would they please? To an heroic tale
Would you not listen, lest it should grow stale?

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Platonic Love.

<sup>7</sup> Love's mysteries in souls do grow,

But yet the body is his book.

JOHN DONNE, The Ecstasy.

<sup>8</sup> But she ne'er loved who durst not venture
all.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act v, sc. 1.

Give all to love;

Obeys thy heart;

Friends, kindred, days,

Estate, good-fame,

Plans, credit, and the Muse,—

Nothing refuse.

R. W. EMERSON, Give All to Love.

<sup>9</sup> Love, while you are able to love. (O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst.)

FREILIGRATH, Der Liebe Dauer.

<sup>10</sup> O'er her warm cheek and rising bosom move
The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy. Pt. i, sec. 3. (Δάμπει δ' ἐπὶ πορφύρεσι Παρρησί φῶς ἔρωτος.—PHERYNICUS, Apud Athenæum.)

How beautiful she look'd! her conscious heart
Glow'd in her cheek, and yet she felt no wrong:
Oh love! how perfect is thy mystic art,
Strengthening the weak and trampling on the strong.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 106.

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face,
The heart whose softness harmonized the whole:
And, oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, l. 178.

<sup>11</sup> There is no sorrow like a love denied
Nor any joy like love that has its will.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>12</sup> When thou hast heard his name upon
The bugles of the cherubim,

Begin thou softly to unzone

Thy girlish bosom unto him,

And softly to undo the snood

That is the sign of maidenhood.

JAMES JOYCE, Bid Adieu to Girlish Days.

Did the harebell loose her girdle

To the lover bee,

Would the bee the harebell hallow

Much as formerly?

Did the paradise, persuaded,

Yield her moat of pearl,

Would the Eden be an Eden,

Or the earl an earl?

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 28.

<sup>13</sup> The reproduction of mankind is a great marvel and mystery. Had God consulted me in the matter, I should have advised him to continue the generation of the species by fashioning them of clay.

Money gets women, cards and dice
Get money, and ill-luck gets just
That copper couch and one clear nice
Cool squirt of water o'er your bust,
The right thing to extinguish lust!

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars: Recitativo.

7
Love indeed (I may not deny) first united provinces, built cities, and by a perpetual generation makes and preserves mankind;

but if it rage it is no more love, but burning lust, a disease, frenzy, madness, hell. . . .
It subverts kingdoms, overthrows cities, towns, families; mars, corrupts, and makes a massacre of men; thunder and lightning, wars, fires, plagues, have not done that mischief to mankind, as this burning lust, this brutish passion.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2.

For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,
Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter, . . .
And then, God knows what mischief may arise,
When love links two young people in one fetter,
Vile assignations, and adulterous beds, Elopements, broken vows and hearts and heads.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 16.

For gentlemen must sometimes risk their skin
For that sad tempter, a forbidden woman:
Sultans too much abhor this sort of sin,
And don't agree at all with the wise Roman,
Heroic, stoic Cato, the sententious,
Who lent his lady to his friend Hortensius.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 7.

The stoic husband was the glorious thing.
The man had courage, was a sage, 'tis true,
And lov'd his country.

POPE, Jane Shore: Epilogue, l. 38.

9
For men have ever a likerous appetite
On lower thing to perform their delight
Than on their wives, be they never so fair,
Nor never so true, nor so debonair.
Flesh is so newfangel, with mischance,
That we can in no thing have plesaunce
That tendeth unto virtue any while.

CHAUCER, The Maunciples Tale, l. 85.

It is as safe to play with fire, as it is to dally with gallantry. Love is a passion that hath friends in the garrison.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 31.

If anyone complains of not succeeding in affairs of gallantry, we will venture to say, it is because he is not gallant. He has mistaken his talent.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table, Vol. i, p. 116.

To set your neighbor's bed a-shaking is now an ancient and long-established custom. It was the silver age that saw the first adulterers.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 21.

I've taken my fun where I've found it;
I've rogued an' I've ranged in my time;
I've 'ad my pickin' o' sweethearts,
An' four o' the lot was prime.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

There's times when you'll think that you mightn't,
There's times when you'll know that you might;
But the things you will learn from the Yellow

Flaming, flickering on the night
From my neighbor's casement opposite,
I know as well as I know to pray,
I know as well as a tongue can say,
*That the innocent Sultan Shah-Zaman
Has gone to the city Ispahan.*

T. B. ALDRICH, When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan.

When Lust
By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk,

But most by lewd and lavish act of sin,
Lets in defilement to the inward parts,
The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies and imbrutes.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 463.

Blemishes are hid by night and every fault forgiven; darkness makes any woman fair.

Lust, thro' some certain strainers well refin'd,
Is gentle love, and charms all womankind.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 189.

There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said,
Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.
My soul abhors the tasteless dry embrace
Of a stale virgin with a winter face.

POPE, January and May, l. 101.

Give me a willing nymph! 'tis all I care,
Extremely clean, and tolerably fair,
Her shape her own, whatever shape she have,
And just that white and red which nature gave.

Many a stroke of luck has come to many a hopeless man. (Multa præter spem scio multis bona evenisse.)
PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 400. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

4
Against a lucky man even a god has little power. (Contra felicem vix deus vires habet.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 132.

5
It is better to be lucky than wise.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

An ounce of luck is better than a pound of wisdom.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
That weigheth, as thou mayst see, a chip of chance more than a pound of wit.
SIR THOMAS WYATT, Of the Courtier's Life.

6
By the luckiest stars.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 3, l. 252.

If it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 4, l. 67.

As good luck would have it.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 84.

II—Luck: Bad Luck

7
Just like my luck! If I had been bred a hatter, little boys would have come into the world without heads.
BULWER-LYTTON, Money. Act ii, sc. 4. Quoting a "poor Italian poet."

8
As ill-luck would have it.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 2.

9
What's worse than ill-luck?
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, p. 166.

The proverb says, What's worse than ill luck?
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 613. (1641)

10
Bad luck often brings good luck.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 834.

11
What evil luck soever
For me remains in store,
'Tis sure much finer fellows
Have fared much worse before.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems, p. 14.
Little is the luck I've had,
And oh, 'tis comfort small
To think that many another lad
Has had no luck at all.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems, p. 54.

12
Some people are so fond of ill-luck that they run half-way to meet it.
DOUGLAS JERROLD, *Jerrold's Wit: Meeting
Trouble Half-Way*. See also under TROUBLE.

13
Bad Luck, she is never a lady
But the commonest wench on the street,
Shuffling, shabby and shady,
Shameless to pass or meet.
Walk with her once—it's a weakness!
Talk to her twice—it's a crime!
Thrust her away when she gives you "good
day"
And the besom won't board you next time.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps.

III—Luck: Mascots

14
These messengers from Paradise are Mascots, my friends; happy the man to whom Heaven gives a Mascot.
(Ces envoyés du paradis,
Sont des Mascottes, mes amis,
Heureux celui que le ciel dote
D'un Mascotte.)
EDMOND AUDRAN, La Mascotte. Act i.

15
See a pin and pick it up,
All the day you'll have good luck;
See a pin and let it lay,
Bad luck you'll have all the day!
UNKNOWN. (HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes, p.

16
Dish yer rabbit foot'll gin you good luck.
De man w'at tote it mighty ap'fer ter come out right en' up wen deys any racket gwine on in de neighborhoods, let 'er be whar she will en w'en she may; mo' espeshually ef de man w'at got it know 'zactly w'at he got ter
do.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Brother Rabbit and His Famous Foot.

17
Now for good luck, cast an old shoe after me.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
And wheresoe'er thou move, good luck
Shall fling her old shoe after.
TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 27.

1 A farmer travelling with his load
Picked up a horseshoe on the road,
And nailed it fast to his barn door,
That luck might down upon him pour.

JAMES T. FIELDS, The Lucky Horseshoe.

Happy art thou, as if every day thou hadst picked up a horseshoe.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, st. 2.

2 One leaf is for hope, and one is for faith,
And one is for love, you know,
And God put another in for luck.

ELLA HIGGINSON, Four-Leaf Clover.

3 The god delights in odd numbers. (Numero deus impare gaudet.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. viii, l. 75.

Why is it that we entertain the belief that for every purpose odd numbers are the most effectual?

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxviii, sec. 23.

This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. . . . There is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 2.

"Now, Rory, leave off, sir; you'll hug me no
more;

That's eight times to-day that you've kissed me before."

"Then here goes another," says he, "to make sure,

For there's luck in odd numbers," says Rory O'More.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More or Good Omens.

Number three is always fortunate.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Quoted as a proverb.

4 My right eye itches, some good luck is near.

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. iii, l. 86. (Dryden, tr.)

LUTHER, MARTIN

5 I can do no other. (Ich kann nicht anders.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Speech. Diet of Worms, 18
April, 1521. Concluding sentence. Inscribed on his monument at Worms.

God helping her, she [America] can do no other.

WOODROW WILSON, War Speech, to Congress,
2 Apr., 1917. Concluding sentence.

6 I will go, though as many devils aim at me as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses.

MARTIN LUTHER. (RANKE, History of the Reformation. Vol. i, p. 533.)

On the 16th of April, 1521, Luther entered the imperial city [of Worms]. . . . On his approach,
. . . the Elector's chancellor entreated him . . .
not to enter a town where his death was decided.

The answer which Luther returned was simply this: "Tell your master that if there were as many devils at Worms as tiles on its roofs, I would enter."

BUNSEN, Life of Luther.

7 Grand rough old Martin Luther Bloomed fables—flowers on furze,
The better the uncouth:

Do roses stick like burrs?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Twins.

8 Luther was guilty of two great crimes,—he struck the Pope in his crown, and the monks in their belly.

ERASMUS, Colloquies.

9 What! shall one monk, scarce known beyond his cell,

Front Rome's far-reaching bolts, and scorn
her frown?

Brave Luther answered YES; that thunder's swell

Rocked Europe, and discharmed the triple crown.

J. R. LOWELL, To W. L. Garrison. St. 5.

10 The solitary monk who shook the world,
From pagan slumber, when the gospel trump Thunder'd its challenge from his dauntless lips

In peals of truth.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Luther: Man's Need and God's Supply.

11 His words are half battles.

RICHTER, of Martin Luther. (CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Priest.)

12 They [Luther and Calvin] condemned the Pope and desired to imitate him.

VOLTAIRE, To the Author of "Les Trois Im-posteurs."

Luther and Calvin, who, whate'er they taught,
Led folk from superstition to free thought.

ROBERT BRIDGES, La Gloire de Voltaire.

LUXURY

13 And if, the following day, he chance to find
A new repast, or an untasted spring,
Blesses his stars, and thinks it luxury.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

No wish profan'd my overwhelmèd heart.

Blest hour! it was a luxury,—to be!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Reflections on Having Left a Place of Retirement, l. 41.

14 Superfluities do not hurt. (Superflua non nocent.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Quoted as a saying of "those skilled in the law."

A rich man's superfluities are often a poor man's redemption.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *Who Wants a
Guinea?* Act i, sc. 1.

1
And ye sall walk in silk attire,
And siller hae to spare.

SUSANNA BLAMIRE, The Siller Crown. Quoted
by Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 66.

Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, put out the kitchen fire.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

2
Thus first necessity invented stools,
Convenience next suggested elbow-chairs,
And Luxury the accomplish'd Sofa last.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 86.

3
Too much plenty makes mouth dainty.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

4
What will not Luxury taste? Earth, sea, and air,

Are daily ransacked for the bill of fare!

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 199.

5
O Luxury! thou curs'd by heaven's decree, How ill-exchang'd are things like these for
thee!

How do thy potions, with insidious joy,
Diffuse their pleasures only to destroy!

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 395.

6
We can do without any article of luxury we have never had; but when once obtained, it is not in human natur' to surrender it voluntarily.

THOMAS CHANDLER HALIBURTON, The Clockmaker.

Them as ha' never had a cushion don't miss it.
GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 49.

7
Nature is free to all; and none were foes,
Till partial luxury began the strife.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. No. 11.

8
Persian elegance, my lad, I hate. (Persicos odi, puer, apparatus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 38, l. 1.

Dear Lucy, you know what my wish is,—
I hate all your Frenchified fuss.

W. M. THACKERAY, Ad Ministrum.

The pomp of the Persian I hold in Aversion,
I loathe all those gingerbread tricks.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Persicos Odi.

9
There is a limit to luxury.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xx, 186.

You can only drink thirty or forty glasses of beer a day, no matter how rich you are.

COL. ADOLPHUS BUSCH, Newspaper Interview.

10
Wherever luxury ceases to be innocent, it also ceases to be beneficial.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Of Refinement.

11
We read on the forehead of those who are surrounded by a foolish luxury, that Fortune sells what she is thought to give. (Il lit au front de ceux qu'un vain luxe environne, Que la fortune vend ce qu'on croit qu'elle donne.)

LA FONTAINE, Philemon et Baucis.

12
Luxury is like a wild beast, first made fiercer with tying and then let loose.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

13
Impatient of a scene whose luxuries stole,
Spite of himself, too deep into his soul.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

14
Fell luxury! more perilous to youth Than storms or quicksands, poverty or chains.

HANNAH MORE, Belshazzar.

Luxury and dissipation, soft and gentle as their approaches are, and silently as they throw their silken chains about the heart, enslave it more than the most active and turbulent vices.

HANNAH MORE, Essays: Dissipation.

15
Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessities.

J. L. MOTLEY. (HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.)

The superfluous, a very necessary thing. (Le superflu, chose très nécessaire.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Mondain, l. 21.

16
Luxury is an enticing pleasure, a bastard mirth, which hath honey in her mouth, gall in her heart, and a sting in her tail.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems: Bk. i, Hugo.

17
We rich men count our felicity and happiness to lie in these superfluities, and not in those necessities.

SCOPAS OF THESSALY. (PLUTARCH, Morals: Of the Love of Wealth. PASCAL, Pensées, v, 1.)

18
It is the superfluous things for which men sweat. (Ad supervacua sudatur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, 11.

Superfluous things like these: doubtless the man who first called them "hindrances" had a prophetic foresight. (Quæ sine dubio talia divinavit futura, qualia nunc sunt, qui primus appellavit
"impedimenta.")

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, 11.

19
The want of necessities is always . . . accompanied by the envious longing for super-fluities.

SOLON. (ORELLI, Opuscula Græcorum Veterum, i, 168.)

20
Falsely luxurious! will not man awake?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 67.

21
Most of the luxuries, and many of the so-called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

M

MACAULAY, THOMAS BABINGTON

1 As soon as I had time to look at my neighbour, . . . I settled that he was some obscure man of letters or of medicine, perhaps a cholera doctor. . . . Having thus settled my opinion, I went on eating my dinner, when Auckland, who was sitting opposite to me, addressed my neighbour, "Mr. Macaulay, will you drink a glass of wine?" I thought I should have dropped off my chair. It was MACAULAY, the man I had been so long most curious to see and to hear, whose genius, eloquence, astonishing knowledge, and diversified talents have excited my wonder and admiration, . . . and here I had been sitting next to him, hearing him talk, and setting him down for a dull fellow.

CHARLES C. F. GREVILLE, Memoirs. Pt. i, 6 Feb., 1832.

I never was more struck than upon this occasion by the inexhaustible variety and extent of his [Macaulay] information. . . . It is impossible to mention any book in any language with which he is not familiar; to touch upon any subject, whether relating to persons or things, on which he does not know everything that is to be known.

GREVILLE, Memoirs. Pt. ii, 21 Jan., 1841.

2 Macaulay is like a book in breeches. . . . He has occasional flashes of silence, that make his conversation perfectly delightful.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 363.)

To take Macaulay out of literature and society and put him in the House of Commons, is like taking the chief physician out of London during a pestilence.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 265.)

3 I wish I was as sure of anything as Macaulay is of everything.

WILLIAM WINDHAM.

MACHINERY

4 It is the Age of Machinery, in every outward and inward sense of that word.

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

5 The mystery of mysteries is to view machines making machines.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 2.

6 Things are in the saddle and ride mankind. EMERSON, Ode.

7 The machine unmakes the man. Now that the machine is so perfect, the engineer is nobody.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

What I ha' seen since ocean steam began Leaves me na doot for the machine: but what about the man?

RUDYARD KIPLING, McAndrew's Hymn.

8 Armed with his machinery man can dive, can fly, can see atoms like a gnat; he can peer into Uranus with his telescope, or knock down cities with his fists of gunpowder.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

9 One machine can do the work of fifty ordinary men. No machine can do the work of one extraordinary man.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xviii, p. 26.

10 Don't throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery.

PHILANDER JOHNSON. (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920, p. 36.)

11 It is never the machines that are dead. It is only the mechanically-minded men that are dead.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Machinery is the sub-conscious mind of the world.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Pt. ii, ch. 8.

12 It is questionable if all the mechanical inventions yet made have lightened the day's toil of any human being.

J. S. MILL, Principles of Political Economy.

Without doubt machinery has greatly increased the number of well-to-do idlers.

KARL MARX, Capital.

13 Machines are worshipped because they are beautiful, and valued because they confer power; they are hated because they are hideous, and loathed because they impose slavery.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 83.

14 You're not a man, you're a machine.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act iii.

15 There will be little drudgery in this better ordered world. Natural power harnessed in machines will be the general drudge.

H. G. WELLS, Outline of History. Ch. xli, par. 4.

All their devices for cheapening labour simply resulted in increasing the burden of labour.

WILLIAM MORRIS, News from Nowhere, p. 131.

McKINLEY, WILLIAM

16 The bullet that pierced Goebel's breast Cannot be found in all the West;

Good reason; it is speeding here [to Washington]

To stretch McKinley on his bier.

AMBROSE BIERCE, New York Journal, February 4, 1901. Basis of Roosevelt's denunciation of William Randolph Hearst as instigator of McKinley's assassination. (See SULLIVAN, "Our Times," iii, 280.)

If bad institutions and bad men can be got rid of only by killing, then the killing must be done. Editorial in N. Y. Evening Journal, April 10, 1901, attacking President McKinley.

1 Where is McKinley, Mark Hanna's McKinley,

His slave, his echo, his suit of clothes?

VACHEL LINDSAY, Bryan, Bryan, Bryan.

2 In his [McKinley's] photographs he is always the same. He would never consent to be photographed in a negligent pose, and always took the most meticulous care about every detail of his appearance and his posture. He embalmed himself, so far as posterity is concerned.

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 16.

My dear Sir, take any road, you can't go amiss. The whole state is one vast insane asylum.

JAMES L. PETIGRU, in 1860, when asked the way to the Charleston, S. C., insane asylum. The state was preparing for secession from the Union.

20

Can it be that they are mad themselves, since they call me mad? (An ille perperam insanire me ajunt, ipsi insanunt?)

PLAUTUS, Mænæchmi, l. 962.

Every madman thinks all other men mad. (Insanus omnis furere credit ceteros.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ.

21

Man's state implies a necessary curse;

When not himself, he's mad; when most himself, he's worse.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emblem 14.

22

I think for my part one-half of the nation is mad—and the other not very sound.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 6.

III—Madness and the Gods

23

Reckless madness from the gods. (Ἐἴτ' οὐν ἀσάλης θεόθεν μανία.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 179.

Whom the gods destroy, they first make mad.
('Ὁν θεὸς θέλει ἀπολέσαι, πρῶτ' ἀπόφθηναι.)
EURIPIDES, Fragment. (BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 1783. Note.)

Whom God would destroy, he first makes mad.
(Quem deus vult perdere, prius dementat.)

The Latin version of the Greek maxim, based probably on Euripides, though Plutarch (De Audiend. Poet., 106) has preserved the adage as a fragment of Æschylus.

Though rashness can hope for but one result,
We are heedless, when fate draws nigh us;
And the maxim holds good, Quem perdere vult Deus, dementat prius.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, Ye Wearie Wayfarer.
Fytte 2.

Whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad.

LONGFELLOW, Masque of Pandora. Pt. vi, l. 58.

1 For those whom God to ruin has design'd,
He fits for Fate, and first destroys their mind.
DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. iii, l. 1093.

2 Zeus has robbed him of his wits. ('Ἐκ γὰρ οἱ φρένας εἴλετο μητίερα Ζεὺς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 377.

3 When falls on man the anger of the gods,
First from his mind they banish understanding.

LYCURGUS, In Leocratem. Ch. xxi, sec. 92.
Quoted as "from one of the old poets."

4 Whom fate wishes to ruin she first makes mad. (Stultum facit fortuna quem vult perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 479.

5 Whom the gods intend to make miserable, they lead to error. (Τὸ κακὸν δοκεῖν ποτ' ἐσθλὸν τῷδ' ἔμμεν ὅτῳ φρένας θεὸς ἄγει πρὸς ἄταν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 621. Quoted as a saying.

Whom Jupiter would destroy, he first drives mad. (Quem Juppiter vult perdere, dementat primus.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone. (Johnson, tr.)

IV—Madness: Its Terrors

6 Babylon in ruins is not so melancholy a spectacle.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 421.

Babylon in all its desolation is a sight not so awful as that of the human mind in ruins.

S. B. DAVIES, Letter to Thomas Raikes, 25 May, 1835.

7 Today I had a strange warning. I felt the wing of insanity brush my mind.

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, Journal, 23 Jan., 1862.

8 No skill in swordsmanship, however just,
Can be secure against a madman's thrust.

COWPER, Charity, l. 509.

9 I stept into Bedlam, where I saw several poor miserable creatures in chains; one of them was mad with making verses.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 21 April, 1657.

The present state of insane persons, confined within this commonwealth, in cages, closets, cellars, stalls, pens! Chained, naked, beaten with rods, and lashed into obedience.

DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX, Memorial to the Legislature of Massachusetts, 1843, p. 4.

I have myself seen more than nine thousand idiots, epileptics and insane in the United States . . . bound with galling chains, bowed beneath fetters, lacerated with ropes, scourged with rods.

DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX, First petition to Congress. (Senate Misc. Doc., No. 150, 30 Cong. 1st Sess.)

O hark! what mean these yells and cries?

His chain some furious madman breaks;

He comes—I see his glaring eyes;

Now, now, my dungeon grate he shakes.

Help! help!—He's gone! O fearful woe,

Such screams to hear, such sights to see!

My brain, my brain!—I know, I know

I am not mad, but soon shall be.

MATTHEW GREGORY LEWIS, The Maniac.

10 Mad in the judgment of the mob, sane, perhaps, in yours. (Demens Judicio vulgi, sanus fortasse tuo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 97.

Much madness is divinest sense

To a discerning eye;

Much sense the starkest madness.

'Tis the majority

In this, as all, prevails

Assent, and you are sane;

Demur,—you're straightway dangerous,

And handled with a chain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 11.

11 Not so much of thee is left among us

As the hum outliving the hushed bell.

J. R. LOWELL, The Darkened Mind. Referring to his mother, who had become insane.

12 Demoniac frenzy, moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 485.

13 Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,
It is the slaver kills, and not the bite.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 105.

14 That he is mad, 't is true: 't is true 't is pity;
And pity 't is 't is true.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 97.

15 O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!
Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 50.

V—Madness and Sanity

16 Who then is sane? He who is not a fool.

(Quisnam igitur sanus? Qui non stultus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 158.

1
Sanity consists in not being subdued by your means.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Sanity is a madness put to good uses.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 146.

2
He who can simulate sanity will be sane.
(Qui poterit sanum fingere, sanus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 504.

3
It is not madness
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness

Would gambol from.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 141.

4
Every man has a sane spot somewhere.

R. L. STEVENSON AND LLOYD OSBOURNE, The Wrecker.

There be more maids than Mawkin, more men than Hodge, and more fools than Firk.

THOMAS DEKKER, Shoemaker's Holiday. Act
iii, sc. 1. (1600)

15
And, when once the young heart of a maiden is stolen,

The maiden herself will steal after it soon.

THOMAS MOORE, Ill Omens.

16
Men often deceive; but tender maids not often. (Sæpe viri fallunt; teneræ non sæpe puellæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 31.

I know a maiden fair to see,

Take care!

She can both false and friendly be,

Beware! Beware!

Trust her not, She is fooling thee!

LONGFELLOW, Beware! (Hüt du Dich!)

17
What tender maid but must a victim fall
To one man's treat, but for another's ball?
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 95.

For what sad maiden can endure to seem
Set in for singleness?

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.

Warn'd by the Sylph, O pious maid, beware!
This to disclose is all thy guardian can:

Beware of all, but most beware of man!

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 112.

And she who scorns a man must die a maid.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 28.

19
A maid that laughs is half taken.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A maid that giveth yieldeth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

20
A maid often seen, a gown often worn,
Are disesteemed and held in scorn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Be somewhat scanner of your maiden presence.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 121.

21
What shall be the maiden's fate?

Who shall be the maiden's mate?

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 16.

22
I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest,

That I protest I simply am a maid.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 72.

- 1
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 36.
- The maid who modestly conceals
Her beauties, while she hides, reveals:
Gives but a glimpse, and fancy draws Whate'er the Grecian Venus was.
EDWARD MOORE, The Spider and the Bee.
Fable 10.

MAIDENHOOD

- 17
A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:

It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan, l. 37.

1
She's neither proud nor saucy yet,
She's neither plump nor gaucy yet;
But just a jinking,
Bonny blinking,
Hilty-skitly lassie yet.

JAMES HOGG, My Love She's but a Lassie Yet.

2
She stood breast-high amid the corn,
Clasp'd by the golden light of morn,
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who many a glowing kiss had won.
HOOD, Ruth.

3
Maiden! with the meek, brown eyes,
In whose orbs a shadow lies
Like the dusk in evening skies!

Thou whose locks outshine the sun,
Golden tresses, wreathed in one,
As the braided streamlets run!

Standing, with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood fleet!

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

Bear a lily in thy hand;
Gates of brass cannot withstand
One touch of that magic wand.

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

4
She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them
white;

She guards them from the steep.
She feeds them on the fragrant height,
And folds them in for sleep.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Shepherdess.

5
The rare and radiant maiden, whom the angels name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

6
She dwelt among the untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,
A maid whom there were none to praise
And very few to love.

WORDSWORTH, Lucy. Pt. ii.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY

7
When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an un-pitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

8
To be in the weakest camp is to be in the strongest school.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Heretics.

9
A majority is always the best repartee.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 14.

10
Shall we judge a country by the majority, or by the minority? By the minority, surely.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

11
All history is a record of the power of minorities, and of minorities of one.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

That cause is strong which has not a multitude,
but one strong man behind it.

J. R. LOWELL, Address, Chelsea, Mass., 22 Dec., 1885.

12
Decision by majorities is as much an expedient as lighting by gas.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 21 Jan., 1858.

13
The oppression of a majority is detestable and odious: the oppression of a minority is only by one degree less detestable and odious.

GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 1870, on Irish Land Bill.

The most dangerous foe to truth and freedom in our midst is the compact majority. Yes, the damned, compact, liberal majority.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life are the tyrannies of minorities.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, New York City, 20 March, 1912.

The great mass of the people are in more danger of having their rights invaded and their liberties destroyed by the overweening influence of organized minorities, who have fanatical or selfish interests to serve, than by the force of an unthinking or cruel majority.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party Politics, p. 6.

14
Minority is no disproof:
Wisdom is not so strong and fleet
As never to have known defeat.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Advocatus Diaboli.

15
The minority is always in the right.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

The majority never has right on its side.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

When great changes occur in history, when great principles are involved, as a rule the majority are wrong.

EUGENE V. DEBS, Speech, at trial, Cleveland, O., 12 Sept., 1918.

The fact disclosed by a survey of the past that majorities have been wrong, must not blind us to the complementary fact that majorities have usually not been entirely wrong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Ch. 1, sec. 1.

1
If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written constitutional right, it might, in a moral point of view, justify revolution—certainly would if such a right were a vital one.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

2
Safer with multitudes to stray,
Than tread alone a fairer way:
To mingle with the erring throng,
Than boldly speak ten millions wrong.

ROBERT CRAGGS NUGENT, Epistle to a Lady.
See also PEOPLE: APOTHEGMS.

3
One, of God's side, is a majority.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, Harper's Ferry, 1 Nov., 1859.

One, with God, is always a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

4
Governments exist to protect the rights of minorities. The loved and the rich need no protection,—they have many friends and few enemies.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address, Boston, 21 Dec., 1860.

5
How a minority,
Reaching majority,
Seizing authority,
Hates a minority!

LEONARD H. ROBBINS, Minorities.

6
A majority, with a good cause, are negligent and supine.

SWIFT, Letter to a Member of Parliament in Ireland, 1708.

THE SILENT MAJORITY, see under DEATH.

There is such malice in men as to rejoice in misfortunes, and from another's woes to draw delight.
TERENCE, Andria. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 1.
Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here
for an hour;
We whisper and hint, and chuckle, and grin at a brother's shame.
TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 4, st. 5.

MAN

I—Man: Definitions

- 14
Good Lord, what is man? for as simple he looks,
Do but try to develop his hooks and his crooks!
With his depths and his shallows, his good and his evil;
All in all he's a problem must puzzle the devil.
BURNS, Inscribed to the Hon. C. J. Fox.
Are we a piece of machinery that, like the Æolian harp, passive, takes the impression of the passing accident? Or do these workings argue something within us above the trodden clod?
BURNS, Letter to Mrs. Dunlop, 1 Jan., 1789.
- 15
Admire, exult—despise—laugh, weep,—for here
There is such matter for all feeling:—Man!
Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 109.

For ours is a most fictile world, and man is the most fingent plastic of creatures.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. i, ch. 2.

1 Man is an embodied paradox, a bundle of contradictions.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 408.

2 Man is the genuine offspring of revolt.

COWPER, Hope, l. 183.

3 A Being, erect upon two legs, and bearing all the outward semblance of a man, and not of a monster.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

A wonderful fact to reflect upon that every human creature is constituted to be that profound secret and mystery to every other.

DICKENS, A Tale of Two Cities. Ch. 3.

The subtle man is immeasurably easier to understand than the natural man.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Robert Browning. Ch. 1.

4 Man is not order of nature, sack and sack, belly and members, link in a chain, nor any ignominious baggage, but a stupendous antagonism, a dragging together of the poles of the Universe.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

A man is the whole encyclopedia of facts. The creation of a thousand forests is in one acorn, and Egypt, Greece, Rome, Gaul, Britain, America, lie folded already in the first man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

A man is a bundle of relations, a knot of roots, whose flower and fruitage is the world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

Every man of us has all the centuries in him.

JOHN MORLEY, Life of Gladstone. Vol. i, p. 201.

5 Every man is an impossibility until he is born.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

A man is a golden impossibility. The line he must walk is a hair's breadth.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

A man is like a bit of Labrador spar, which has no lustre as you turn it in your hand until you come to a particular angle; then it shows deep and beautiful colors.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

6 A man is a god in ruins.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Nature. Ch. 8, Prospects. Quoted.

One definition of man is "an intelligence served by organs."

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Men are all inventors sailing forth on a voyage of discovery.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

7 Man is a little soul carrying around a corpse. (Ψυχάριον εἰ βαστάζον νεκρόν.)

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 26. Quoted by Marcus Aurelius. (Meditations. iv, 41.)

A little soul for a little bears up this corpse which is man.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine.

8 Man is Nature's sole mistake.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i.

9 Man is one world, and hath Another to attend him.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Man.

10 The fool of fate—thy manufacture, man.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 254. (Pope, tr.)

11 Man is the miracle in nature. God Is the One Miracle to man.

JEAN INGELow, The Story of Doom. Bk. vii, l. 271.

12 Man is a machine into which we put what we call food and produce what we call thought.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Gods.

13 Limited in his nature, infinite in his desires, man is a fallen god who remembers the heavens.

LAMARTINE, Méditations. Ser. ii.

14 Man is a torch, then ashes soon, May and June, then dead December, Dead December, then again June.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

15 This Being of mine, whatever it be, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the part which governs. ("Ὁ τί ποτε τοῦτό εἰμι, σὰρκις ἐστὶ καὶ πνεῦμά τι καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.")

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 2.

16 This many-headed, divers-armed, and furiously-raging monster is man; wretched, weak and miserable man: whom, if you consider well, what is he, but a crawling, and ever-moving ants'-nest?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

What a chimera, then, is man! What a novelty! What a monster, what a chaos, what a contradiction, what a prodigy! Judge of all things, feeble worm of the earth, depository of truth, a sink of uncertainty and error, the glory and the shame of the universe.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. vii, No. 434.

17 A pilgrim panting for the rest to come; An exile, anxious for his native home; A drop dis severed from the boundless sea; A moment parted from eternity.

HANNAH MORE, Reflections of King Hezekiah, l. 129.

O man, strange composite of heaven and earth!
Majesty dwarf'd to baseness! fragrant flower
Running to poisonous seed! and seeming worth Cloaking corruption! weakness mastering power!

Who never art so near to crime and shame,
As when thou hast achieved some deed of name!

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Dream of Gerontius, l. 291.

1 Man is a rope connecting animal and superman,—a rope over a precipice. . . . What is great in man is that he is a bridge and not a goal.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra. Sec. 4.

2 Man's the bad child of the universe.

JAMES OFFENHEIM, Laughter.

3 Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the Sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the Stoic's
pride, . . .

Alike in ignorance, his reason such,
Whether he thinks too little or too much;
Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurl'd;
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 3.

A feeble unit in the middle of a threatening In-finitude.

5 I am fearfully and wonderfully made.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxix, 14.

What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me: no, nor woman neither.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 316.

6 Man is Heaven's masterpiece.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 6.

Man is Creation's master-piece. But who says so?
—Man!

8 Man is a reasoning animal. (Rationale animal est homo.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, sec. 8.

Man is but a reed, the weakest in nature, but he is a thinking reed.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. vi, No. 347.

9 We are weak watery beings, standing in the midst of unrealities. (Inbecilli fluidique inter vana constitimus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lviii, 27.

10 When I beheld this I sighed, and said within myself, Surely man is a Broomstick!

SWIFT, A Meditation upon a Broomstick.

11 Before the beginning of years,
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;

Grief, with a glass that ran;

Pleasure, with pain for leaven;

Summer, with flowers that fell;

Remembrance fallen from heaven,

And madness risen from hell;

Strength without hands to smite;

Love that endures for a breath;

Night, the shadow of light,

And Life, the shadow of death.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

12 The piebald miscellany, man.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 190.

13 Of all created creatures man is the most detestable. Of the entire brood he is the only one . . . that possesses malice. . . . Also
. . . he is the only creature that has a nasty
mind.

MARK TWAIN, The Character of Man.

A nice man is a man of nasty ideas.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

A nice unparticular man.

THOMAS HARDY, *Far From the Madding
Crowd*. Ch. 8.

14 Man is a summer's day, whose youth and fire

Cool to a glorious evening and expire.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Silex Scintillans: Rules and Lessons.

15 I am an acme of things accomplished, and I am encloser of things to be.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 44.

16 The Ideal Man! Oh, the Ideal Man should talk to us as if we were goddesses, and treat us as if we were children. He should refuse all our serious requests, and gratify every one of our whims. He should encourage us to have caprices, and forbid us to have missions. He should always say much more than he means,

and always mean much more than he says.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii.

1 What then is man? The smallest part of nothing.

EDWARD YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iv, sc. 1.

2 To Contemplation's sober eye
Such is the race of Man:

And they that creep, and they that fly,
Shall end where they began.

Alike the Busy and the Gay
But flutter thro' life's little day.

THOMAS GRAY, An Ode on the Spring. St. 4.

The bloom of a rose passes quickly away,
And the pride of a Butterfly dies in a day.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, The Rose and the Butterfly.

3 Is man no more than this?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 107.

7 A man is the child of his works.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk i, ch. 20.

8 Human nature is the same all over the world; but its operations are so varied by education and habit, that one must see it in all its dresses.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

Modes and customs vary often, but human nature is always the same.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Feb., 1749.

I have seen human nature in all its forms; it is everywhere the same, but the wilder it is, the more virtuous.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. Quoting a traveller.

9 A new man; an upstart. (Homo novus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 39, sec. 138.

10 One man means as much to me as a multitude, and a multitude only as much as one man.

DEMOCRITUS, Fragments. No. 302.

11 A man ought to compare advantageously with a river, an oak, a mountain.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

12 Nature never rhymes her children, nor makes two men alike.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Countless the various species of mankind,
Countless the shades which sep'rate mind from mind;

No general object of desire is known,
Each has his will, and each pursues his own.

WILLIAM GIFFORD, Perseus.

13 Of course everybody likes and respects self-made men. It is a great deal better to be made in that way than not to be made at all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

A self-made man; who worships his creator.

III—Man: An Animal

1 Man is a noble animal, splendid in ashes, and pompous in the grave, solemnizing nativities and deaths with equal lustre, not omitting ceremonies of bravery, in the infamy of his nature.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

In brief, we all are monsters, that is, a composition of man and beast.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 62.

2 Man is a tool-using animal.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 5.

Man is a tool-making animal.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. (BOSWELL, Life of Johnson.)

3 But what a thoughtless animal is man!

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 252.

4 Man is the most intelligent of animals—and the most silly.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.)

5 How dull, and how insensible a beast Is man, who yet would lord it o'er the rest!

DRYDEN, Essay upon Satire, l. 1.

Man is a brute, without the brute's rough tongue And woodland death that kills without a sound.

None can be sure from what the race is sprung: Its virtue is, it must go underground.

ARTHUR FIELD, War.

6 Every man has a wild beast within him.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 1759.

7 Man is a make-believe animal—he is never so truly himself as when he is acting a part.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Notes of a Journey through France and Italy, p. 246.

8 Man is a toad-eating animal.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Connection between Toad-Eaters and Tyrants.

9 Man,—the aristocrat amongst the animals.

HEINE, Wit, Wisdom, and Pathos: Italy.

10 Man is an imitative animal. This quality is the germ of all education in him. From his cradle to his grave he is learning to do what he sees others do.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 225.

11 Man is the only animal which spits.

DONALD A. LAIRD, There Is a Lot to Just Sitting or Standing.

12 Man is a gaming animal.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist.

13 Man is the plumeless genus of bipeds, birds are the plumed.

PLATO, Politicus. Sec. 266.

Plato had defined man as an animal, biped and featherless, and was applauded. Diogenes plucked a fowl, and brought it into the lecture room with the words, "Here is Plato's man." In consequence of which there was added to the definition, "having broad nails."

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 40.

That unfeather'd two-legged thing, a son.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 170.

14 What is a man

If his chief good, and market of his time, Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 33.

15 Man is the only animal that esteems itself rich in proportion to the number and voracity of its parasites.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16 Man, an animal which makes bargains.

ADAM SMITH, The Wealth of Nations.

17 Man is a beast when shame stands off from him.

SWINBURNE, Phædra: Hippolytus.

18 Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

19 The only laughing animal is man.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, On Ridicule, l. 2.

For smiles from reason flow, To brute denied.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 239.

Man is the only animal that laughs and weeps; for he is the only animal that is struck with the difference between what things are, and what they ought to be.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Comic Writers, p. 1.

Aye, think! since time and life began, Your mind has only feared and slept;

Of all the beasts they called you man Only because you toiled and wept.

ARTURO GIOVANNITTI, The Thinker: The Statue by Rodin.

<sup>1</sup> Man is the only animal that eats when he is not hungry, drinks when he is not thirsty, and makes love at all seasons.

UNKNOWN. (The Bookman, April, 1932, p. 137.)

IV—Man: A Bubble

See also Life: A Bubble; World: A Bubble

<sup>2</sup> What's he, born to be sick, so always dying,
That's guided by inevitable fate;
That comes in weeping, and that goes out crying;

Whose calendar of woes is still in date;
Whose life's a bubble, and in length a span;
A concert still in discords? 'Tis a man.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk. i, song 2, l. 192.

<sup>3</sup> The not-incurious in God's handiwork
(This man's-flesh he hath admirably made,
Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste,
To coop up and keep down on earth a space
That puff of vapor from his mouth, man's soul).

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle: Karshish, l. 2.

A drop in Ocean's boundless tide, unfathom'd waste of agony;

Where millions live their horrid lives by making other millions die.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 20.

<sup>4</sup> The bubble winked at me, and said,
"You'll miss me, brother, when you're dead."
OLIVER HERFORD, Toast: The Bubble Winked.

<sup>5</sup> Like to the falling of a star,
Or as the flights of eagle are,
Or like the fresh spring's gaudy hue,
Or silver drops of morning dew, . . .
Even such is Man, whose borrowed light
Is straight call'd in and paid to night.
The wind blows out, the bubble dies,
The spring entombed in autumn lies;
The dew dries up, the star is shot,
The flight is past,—and Man forgot.

HENRY KING, On the Life of Man. Francis Quarles, a contemporary of King, claimed this poem. It has also been attributed to John Philpot, and to Simon Wastell. All of them, perhaps, wrote imitations of King's verses.

Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and for ever!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 16.

<sup>6</sup> A man is a bubble, said the Greek proverb (Πομφόλυξ ὁ ἄνθρωπος) . . . descending from God and the dew of heaven, from a tear and a drop of rain.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

How we bladders of wind strut about. We are meaner than flies; flies have their virtues, but we are nothing but bubbles. (Utres inflati ambulamus. Minoris quam muscæ sumus, muscæ tamen aliquam virtutem habent, nos non pluris sumus quam bullæ.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. The last phrase is a proverb used by many writers, among them: VARRO, De Re Rustica: Preface; SENECA, Apococytosis; LUCAN, Charron; and ERASMUS, Adagia.

Like bubbles on the sea of matter borne,
They rise, they break, and to that sea return.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 19.

<sup>7</sup> For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,

But bubbles on the rapid stream of time,
That rise, and fall, that swell, and are no
more,

Born, and forgot, ten thousand in an hour?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285.

V—Man: A Child

<sup>8</sup> What is man? A foolish baby;
Vainly strives, and fights, and frets:
Demanding all, deserving nothing,
One small grave is all he gets.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Cui Bono.

<sup>9</sup> Men are but children of a larger growth;
Our appetites are apt to change as theirs,
And full as craving too, and full as vain.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Man to the last is but a froward child;
So eager for the future, come what may,
And to the present so insensible!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Reflections.

<sup>11</sup> They are but children, too; though they have gray hairs, they are, indeed, children of a larger size.

SENECA, De Ira. Sec. 8.

<sup>12</sup> Man is a restless thing: still vain and wild,
Lives beyond sixty, nor outgrows the child.

ISAAC WATTS, To the Memory of T. Gunston, Esq., l. 189.

VI—Man: A Shadow

<sup>13</sup> Dark fluxion, all unfixable by thought,
A phantom dim of past and future wrought,
Vain sister of the worm—life, death, soul,
clod—

Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Self-Knowledge.

<sup>14</sup> We are spirits clad in veils;
Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communing fails
To remove the shadowy screen.

CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH, Gnosis.

1 We are dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16.

2 Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 22.

3 We are none other than a moving row
Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with the Sun-illuminated Lantern held
In Midnight by the Master of the Show.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 68. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

4 Man is but breath and shadow, nothing more.
(Ἀνθρώπος ἐστὶ πνεῦμα καὶ σκιά μόνον.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment: Ajax Locrus. No. 13.

5 Man is a substance clad in shadows.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales: Thoughts.

6 Fond man! the vision of a moment made!
Dream of a dream! and shadow of a shade!

YOUNG, Paraphrase of Job xxxviii, l. 187.

VII—Man: The Image of God

7 God in making man intended by him to reduce all His Works back again to Himself.

MATTHEW BARKER, Natural Theology, p. 85.

God made man merely to hear some praise
Of what He'd done on those Five Days.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Fons et Origo.

8 It is not fit that men should be compared with gods. (Nec divis homines componier æquumst.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxviii, l. 141.

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels.

Old Testament: Psalms, viii, 5.

Men are not angels, neither are they brutes.

BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Every man is as God made him, ay, and often worse.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 60.

9 'Twas much, that man was made like God before,

But, that God should be made like man, much more.

JOHN DONNE, Holy Sonnets. No. xv.

10 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 27.

Man is God's image; but a poor man is Christ's stamp to boot.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 64.

11 And first the golden race of speaking men
Were by the dwellers in Olympus made;
They under Cronos lived, when he was king
In heaven. Like gods were they, with careless mind,

From toil and sorrow free, and nought they knew

Of dread old age.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 109.

12 There wanted yet the master work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature who, not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, might erect
His stature, and upright with front serene Govern the rest, self-knowing, and from thence

Magnanimous to correspond with Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 505.

Thus while the mute creation downward bend
Their sight, and to their earthy mother tend,
Man looks aloft, and with erected eyes
Beholds his own hereditary skies.

(Pronaque quum spectent animalia cætera terram,

Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque tueri
Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 84. (Dryden, tr., l. 106.)

13 What a wonderful privilege to have the weakness of a man and the serenity of a god!
(Ecce res magna, habere inbecillitatem hominis, securitatem dei.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. liii, sec. 12.

Let each man think himself an act of God,
His mind a thought, his life a breath of God.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proëm, l. 163.

14 For a man is not as God,
But then most Godlike being most a man.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 30.

15 The noble man is only God's image. (Der edle Mensch ist nur ein Bild von Gott.)

LUDWIG TIECK, Genoveva.

VIII—Man and the Potter

See also Potter

16 This is the porcelain clay of human kind,
And therefore cast into these noble moulds.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act i, sc. 1.

The precious porcelain of human clay.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 11.

17 Mankind are earthen jugs with spirits in them.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 1842.

18 A vase is begun; why, as the wheel goes round, does it turn out a pitcher? (Amphora cœpit Institui: currente rota cur urceus exit?)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 21.

1 Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it,
What makest thou?

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlv, 9.

2 Upon the potter's flying wheel the clay
Knows not the purpose of its plasmic day;
So we upon the blindly-whirling sphere
Are shaped to ends which do not yet appear.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Potter's Clay.

3 For I remember stopping by the way
To watch a Potter thumbing his wet Clay:
And with its all-obliterated Tongue
It murmured—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 37. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Said one among them—"Surely not in vain
My substance of the common Earth was ta'en
And to this Figure moulded, to be broke,
Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again."

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 84. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The shatter'd bowl shall know repair; the riven lute shall sound once more;
But who shall mend the clay of man, the stolen breath to man restore?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st. 40.

4 Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

New Testament: Romans, ix, 21.

After a momentary silence spake
Some Vessel of a more ungainly make:
"They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
What! did the Hand then of the Potter shake?"

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 86. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 87. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 38.

6 Not for this
Was common clay ta'en from the common
earth,
Moulded by God, and temper'd with the tears
Of angels to the perfect shape of man.

TENNYSON, The Palace of Art: Introduction.

IX—Man: His Growth

7 What? Was man made a wheel-work to wind up,

And be discharged, and straight wound up anew?

No! grown, his growth lasts; taught, he ne'er forgets;

May learn a thousand things, not twice the same.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l. 447.

8 Though his beginnings be but poor and low,
Thank God, a man can grow!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Per Aspera.

9 Human improvement is from within outwards.

FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Divus Cæsar.

10 Men never amount to much until they outgrow their fathers' notions, sir.

LONDON CABELL GARLAND, Response, while
Chancellor of Vanderbilt University in 1891, to a student protesting against the agnostic tendencies of a professor.

11 Man seems the only growth that dwindles
here.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 126.

12 In the twentieth century war will be dead, the scaffold will be dead, hatred will be dead, frontier boundaries will be dead, dogmas will be dead; man will live. He will possess something higher than all these—a great country, the whole earth, and a great hope, the whole
heaven.

VICTOR HUGO, The Future of Man.

13 And step by step, since time began,
I see the steady gain of man.

WHITTIER, The Chapel of the Hermits.

14 Nature revolves, but man advances.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 691.

15 Though man sits still and takes his ease,
God is at work on man;

No means, no method unemploy'd,
To bless him, if he can.

YOUNG, Resignation. Pt. i, st. 119.

X—Man: His Virtues

16 Man is his own star; and the soul that can Render an honest and a perfect man,
Commands all light, all influence, all fate;
Nothing to him falls early or too late.

BAUMONT and FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune: Epilogue.

17 Love, hope, fear, faith—these make humanity;

These are its sign and note and character.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iii.

Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 117.
- 20
The first man is of the earth, earthy.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 47.
- 21
A man said to the universe:

STEPHEN CRANE, War Is Kind. Pt. iv.

1
Man's not worth a moment's pain,
Base, ungrateful, fickle, vain.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude.

2
Though every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile.

REGINALD HEBER, From Greenland's Icy Mountains.

Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine,
And all, save the spirit of man, is divine.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 1.

3
There is only one grade of men; they are all contemptible.

E. W. HOWE, A Letter from Mr. Biggs.

4
I despise mankind in all its strata. (Ich verachte die Menschheit in allen ihren Schichten.)

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT, Conversation, with Arago in 1812.

I hate mankind, for I think myself one of the best of them, and I know how bad I am.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PIOZZI, Johnsoniana.)

I wish I loved the Human Race;
I wish I loved its silly face;
I wish I liked the way it walks,
I wish I liked the way it talks;
And when I'm introduced to one wife,

And flies, and talks, and is extremely wise.

JULIAN HUXLEY, For a Book of Essays.

6 Mankind has honoured its destroyers and persecuted its benefactors, building palaces for living brigands, and tombs for long-dead prophets.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, *Wit and Wis-

7
Man; false man, smiling destructive man.

NATHANIEL LEE, Theodosius. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 50.

Trust not a man; we are by nature false,
Dissembling, subtle, cruel, and unconstant.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act ii, sc. 1.

There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 85.

8
What dwarfs men are. (Homunculi quanti sunt.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi: Prologue, l. 51.

However we brave it out, we men are a little
breed.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 131.

9
Man is the only one that knows nothing, that can learn nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk nor eat, and in short he can do nothing at the prompting of nature only, but weep.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
sec. 4.

10
O how contemptible a thing is man unless he can raise himself above humanity. (O quam contempta res est homo nisi supra humana se erexit.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones: Bk. i, Preface.

"Oh, what a vile and abject thing is man, unless he can erect himself above humanity." Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd.
For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

Unless above himself he can
Erect himself, how poor a thing is man.

SAMUEL DANIEL, *To the Lady Margaret,
Countess of Cumberland*. St. 12. Quoted by Wordsworth, The Excursion. Bk. iv,
l. 330.

"How poor a thing is man!" alas 'tis true,
I'd half forgot it when I chanced on you.

SCHILLER, The Moral Poet.

11
Like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 332.

Defused infection of a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 78.

Why, he's a man of wax.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 3,
l. 76.

12
How weak and yet how vain a thing is man,
Mean what he will, endeavour what he can!

JOHN SHEFFIELD, An Essay on Satire.

13
Man and his affairs, church and state and school, trade and commerce, and manufactures and agriculture, even politics, the most alarming of them all—I am pleased to see how little space they occupy in the landscape.

H. D. THOREAU, Walking.

14
All that I care to know is that a man is a human being—that is enough for me; he can't be any worse.

MARK TWAIN, Concerning the Jews.

1 Mankind, when left to themselves, are unfit for their own government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Lee, 31 Oct., 1786.

The mass of men are neither wise nor good.

JOHN JAY, Letter to Washington, 27 June, 1786.

2 Man only,—rash, refined, presumptuous
Man—

Starts from his rank, and mars Creation's plan!

Born the free heir of nature's wide domain,
To art's strict limits bounds his narrow'd reign;

Resigns his native rights for meaner things,
For Faith and Fetters, Laws and Priests and Kings.

UNKNOWN, The Progress of Man, l. 55.
(Poetry of the Anti-Jacobin.)

XII—Men: Most Men Are Bad

3 Most men are bad. (Oi πλείστοι κακοί.)

BIAS OF PRIENE, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived about 566 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias. Sec. 88. AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 189.) Ausonius Latinizes it: Plures mali.

By "bad" I meant uncultured men and savages, who disregard right and equity and hallowed customs.

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 192.

4 Bad's the best of us.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rollo. Act iv, sc. 2.

Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 102.

5 I'm no better than the best,

And whether worse than the rest

Of my fellow-men, who knows?

LONGFELLOW, The Divine Tragedy: The Third Passover. Pt. vii, l. 4.

I am as bad as the worst, but thank God I am as good as the best.

WALT WHITMAN.

XIII—Man: Great and Small

See also Greatness: Great and Small

11 There is a cropping-time in the generations of men, as in the fruits of the field; and sometimes, if the stock be good, there springs up for a time a succession of splendid men; and then comes a period of barrenness.

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 3.

12

Why each is striving, from of old,

To love more deeply than he can?

Still would be true, yet still grows cold?

—Ask of the Powers that sport with man!

They yok'd in him, for endless strife,

A heart of ice, a soul of fire;

And hurl'd him on the Field of Life,

An aimless unallay'd Desire.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Destiny.

13

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds; therefore let him seasonably water the one, and destroy the other.

Tallest of boys, or shortest of men,

He stood in his stockings just four foot ten.

R. H. BARHAM, Mr. Sucklethumkin's Story.

15

But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns, we,

Half dust, half deity, alike unfit

To sink or soar.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 2.

With knowledge so vast, and with judgment so strong,

No man with the half of 'em e'er went far wrong;

With passions so potent, and fancies so bright,
No man with the half of 'em e'er went quite right.

BURNS, Inscribed to the Hon. C. J. Fox.

16

Oh we are querulous creatures! Little less

Than all things can suffice to make us happy;

And little more than nothing is enough

To discontent us.

S. T. COLERIDGE, II Zepolya. Act i, sc. 1.

1 What the superior man seeks is in himself:
what the small man seeks is in others.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

2 A man so various that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 545.

Man is but man; unconstant still, and various;
There's no to-morrow in him, like to-day.

DRYDEN, Cleomenes. Act iii, sc. 1.

3 Too good for banning, and too bad for blessing.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

4 We are the creatures of imagination, passion and self-will, more than of reason or even of self-interest. . . . The falling of a teacup puts us out of temper for the day; and a quarrel that commenced about the pattern of a gown may end only with our lives.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Collected Works, xi, 259.

5 I've studied men from my topsy-turvy
Close, and, I reckon, rather true.

Some are fine fellows: some, right scurvy:
Most, a dash between the two.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Juggling Jerry. St. 7.

6 Then say not man's imperfect, Heav'n in fault;

Say rather man's as perfect as he ought;

His knowledge measured to his state and place,

His time a moment, and a point his space.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 69.

Virtuous and vicious ev'ry man must be,
Few in th' extreme, but all in the degree.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 231.

7 But men are men; the best sometimes forget.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 241.

8 Every man is odd.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
5, l. 42.

9 O God, that I had loved a smaller man!
I should have found in him a greater heart.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 860.

10 We are children of splendour and fame,
Of shuddering, also, and tears;
Magnificent out of the dust we came,
And abject from the Spheres.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode in May.

Man and his littleness perish, erased like an error and cancelled;

Man and his greatness survive, lost in the greatness of God.

WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea. Pt. iv,
l. 17.

11 Part mortal clay, and part ethereal fire,
Too proud to creep, too humble to aspire.

RICHARD WEST, Ad Amicos.

A spirit all compact of fire
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 149.

12 How poor, how rich, how abject, how august,
How complicate, how wonderful, is man!
How passing wonder He, who made him such!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 68.

So great, so mean, is man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 441.

13 He hath made the small and the great, and careth for all alike.

APOCRYPHA: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 7.

XIV—Man: His Inhumanity

14 What is man's greatest bane? His brother man alone. (Pernicies homini quæ maxima?
Solutus homo alter.)

BIAS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 2.)

In the evening, when we drink together, we are men, but when daybreak comes, we arise wild beasts, preying upon each other.

AUTOMEDON. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig.
46.)

15 Can spirit from the tomb, or fiend from Hell,
More hateful, more malignant be than man?

JOANNA BAILLIE, Orra. Act iii, sc. 2.

16 Of all beasts the man-beast is the worst:
To others, and himself, the cruellest foe.

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocrisy.

17 And Man, whose heav'n-erected face
The smiles of love adorn—

Man's inhumanity to man

Makes countless thousands mourn.

BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn. St. 7.

But why should æ man better fare,
And a' men brithers?

BURNS, Epistle to Dr. Blacklock.

18 Blow, blow, ye winds, with heavier gust!
And freeze, thou bitter-biting frost!

Descend, ye chilly, smothering snows!
Not all your rage, as now united, shows
More hard unkindness, unrelenting,

Vengeful malice, unrepenting,
Than heaven-illumin'd Man on brother Man bestows.

BURNS, A Winter Night. St. 7.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
Thou dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, 186.

19 The greatest enemy to man is man.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 1.

1 Man's that savage beast, whose mind,
From reason to self-love declin'd,
Delights to prey upon his kind.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Friendship and Single Life.

2 Man, biologically considered, . . . is the most formidable of all the beasts of prey, and, indeed, the only one that preys systematically on its own species.

WILLIAM JAMES, Memories and Studies, p. 301.

We are the wisest, strongest race:

Long may our praise be sung—

The only animal alive

That lives upon its young!

CHARLOTTE P. S. GILMAN, Child Labor.

3 Tiger with tiger, bear with bear, you'll find
In leagues offensive and defensive joined;
But lawless man the anvil dares profane,
And forge that steel by which a man is slain.
JUVENAL, Satires, xv, 163. (Tate, tr.)

The hunting tribes of air and earth,
Respect the brethren of their birth; . . .
Even tiger fell, and sullen bear,
Their likeness and their lineage spare,
Man, only, mars kind Nature's plan,
And turns the fierce pursuit on man.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 1.

Each animal,
By nat'ral instinct taught, spares his own kind;
But man, the tyrant man! revels at large,
Free-booter unrestrain'd, destroys at will
The whole creation, men and beasts his prey,
These for his pleasure, for his glory those.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Field Sports, l. 94.

4 O shame to men! devil with devil damn'd
Firm concord holds, men only disagree
Of creatures rational.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 496.

5 Man is no man, but a wolf. (Lupus est homo, non homo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 495. (Act ii, sc. 4.) Usually quoted, "Lupus est homo homini":
Man is a wolf to man. So used by Erasmus (Adagia), Burton (Anatomy of Melancholy, i, 1), and many others.

A man is a wolf to a man, that is, a devourer one of another.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Dicing, 57. (c. 1577)

We are (by our own censures) judged wolves one to another.

SIR EDWARD DYER, Writings, p. 90. (1585)

6 With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
sec. 5.

7 But just disease to luxury succeeds,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breeds;
The fury-passions from that blood began,

And turn'd on man a fiercer savage, man.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 165.

I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l.
44.

8 It is from his fellow-man that man's everyday danger comes. . . . Man delights to ruin man. (Ab homine homini cotidianum pericu-lum. . . . Homini perdere hominem libet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. ciii, sec. 2.

9 Humanity must perforce prey on itself
Like monsters of the deep.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 49.

10 No greater shame to man than inhumanity.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 26.

11 And much it grieved my heart to think
What Man has made of Man.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

12 Ah, how unjust to Nature and himself
Is thoughtless, thankless, inconsistent man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 112.

Man is to man, the sorest, surest ill.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 217.

Inhumanity is caught from man,
From smiling man.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 158.

Man's revenge,
And endless inhumanities on man.

XV—Man: His Life a Span

See also Life: Its Shortness

14 Ye children of man! whose life is a span
Protracted with sorrow from day to day,
Naked and featherless, feeble and querulous,
Sickly, calamitous creatures of clay.

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds. (Frere, tr.)

The world is old, and thou art young; the world is large, and thou art small;

Cease, atom of a moment's span, to hold thyself an All-in-All!

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 21.

15 As of the green leaves on a thick tree, some fall, and some grow.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xiv, 18.

16 The short span of life forbids us to spin out hope to any length. (Vitæ summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoare longam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 15.

Our days begin with trouble here,
Our life is but a span,

And cruel death is always near,
So frail a thing is man.

UNKNOWN, The New England Primer.

Her waist is ampler than her life,
For life is but a span.

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt.

1 Man passes away; his name perishes from record and recollection; his history is as a tale that is told, and his very monument becomes a ruin.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: Westminster Abbey. Conclusion.

2 Man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

Old Testament: Psalms, xlix, 12, 20.

Mark how fleeting and paltry is the estate of man,
—yesterday in embryo, to-morrow a mummy or ashes. So for the hair's-breadth of time assigned to thee live rationally, and part with life cheerfully, as drops the ripe olive, extolling the season that bore it and the tree that matured it.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 48.

3 He weaves, and is clothed with derision;
Sows, and he shall not reap;

His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

4 Man is born in vanity and sin; he comes into the world like morning mushrooms, soon thrusting up their heads into the air, . . .
and as soon they turn into dust and forgetfulness.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

All the windy ways of men
Are but dust that rises up,
And is lightly laid again.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 18.

5 The feathers in a fan are not so frail as man;
the green embossed leaf
than man is no more brief.

HUMBERT WOLFE, Man.

6 Nothing in life is certain for men, children of a day. (Oὐδὲν γὰρ βέβαιον πικρὸν ἐφ' ἡμετέροις.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Cassandra. (*Greek

7 Lord of himself;—that heritage of woe.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 2.

8 Oh, wearisome condition of humanity!

Born under one law, to another bound,
Vainly begot and yet forbidden vanity.
Created sick, commanded to be sound.

What meaneth Nature by these diverse laws?

Passion and reason, self-division's cause.

FULKE GREVILLE, Mustapha. Act v, sc. 4.

O suffering, sad humanity!

O ye afflicted ones, who lie
Steeped to the lips in misery,
Longing, and yet afraid to die,
Patient, though sorely tried!

LONGFELLOW, The Goblet of Life.

9 For men on earth 'tis best never to be born at all; or being born, to pass through the gates of Hades with all speed.

HOMER. (Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec.
316.)

A still small voice spake unto me,

"Thou art so full of misery,
Were it not better not to be?"

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 1.

10 The lot of man: to suffer, and to die.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 117. (Pope, tr.)

For Fate has wove the thread of life with pain,
And twins ev'n from the birth are Misery and Man!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 263. (Pope, tr.)

11 Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 1, 2.

13 The history of mankind is little else than a narrative of designs which have failed, and hopes that have been disappointed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 398.

14 The last state of that man is worse than the first.

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 45; Luke, xi, 26.

The state of man: inconstancy, weariness, unrest. (Condition de l'homme: inconstance, ennui, inquiétude.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 127.

15 Nothing is more wretched or more proud than man. (Homine nihil miserius, aut super-bius.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii,
sec. 7.

And, to conclude, I know myself a man—
Which is a proud and yet a wretched thing.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum.

16 Whome'er thou shalt see wretched, know him man. (Quemcumque miserum videris, homi-nem scias.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 463.

1 But hearing oftentimes
The still, sad music of humanity.
WORDSWORTH, Tintern Abbey, l. 91.

2 It needs a man to perceive a man.
A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Creeds.

3 He studied from the life,
And in the original perused mankind.
JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 231.

He took the suffering human race,
He read each wound, each weakness clear;
And struck his finger on the place,
And said, "Thou ailest here and here!"
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Memorial Verses, l. 19. Referring to Goethe.

For he pursued a lonely road,
His eyes on Nature's plan;
Neither made man too much a God,
Nor God too much a man.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, In Memory of the Author of "Obermann." Referring to Goethe.

4 There is a book into which some of us are happily led to look, and to look again, and never tire of looking. It is the Book of Man. You may open that book whenever and wherever you find another human voice to answer yours, and another human hand to take in your own.

WALTER BESANT, Books Which Have Influenced Me.

It is more necessary to study men than books. (Il est plus nécessaire d'étudier les hommes que les livres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 550.

All these his wondrous works, but chiefly
Man.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 663.

A Spirit, zealous, as he seem'd, to know
More of th' Almighty's works, and chiefly Man,
God's latest image.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 565.

13 Let us, since life can little more supply
Than just to look about us and to die,
Expatiate free o'er all this scene of man;
A mighty maze! but not without a plan; . . .
Eye Nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise;
Laugh where we must, be candid where we can,

But vindicate the ways of God to man.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 3.

In human works, tho' labour'd on with pain,
A thousand movements scarce one purpose gain;
In God's, one single can its end produce,
Yet serve to second too some other use:
So man, who here seems principal alone,
Perhaps acts second to some sphere unknown,
Touches some wheel, or verges to some goal:
'Tis but a part we see, and not a whole.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 53.

14 Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is Man.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 1.

XVIII—Man: Seeking and Finding

<sup>1</sup> The man forget not, though in rags he lies,
And know the mortal through a crown's disguise.

MARK AKENSIDE, An Epistle to Curio, l. 197.

<sup>2</sup> I am a man, and you are another.

BLACK HAWK, to Andrew Jackson, April, 1833, at their first interview.

Every inch a man.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, p. 247. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> Thus we are men, and we know not how:
there is something in us that can be without us, and will be after us; though it is strange that it hath no history what it was before us.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec.
36.

<sup>4</sup> I am seeking a man. ("Ἀνθρώπον ζητῶ.)

DIOGENES, after lighting a lamp in broad daylight, and going about with it through the streets of Athens. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 41.)

I am in search of a man. (Hominem quæro.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 19, l. 9.

I came to seek an honest man. ('Αγαθὸν ἄνδρα ζητεῖν.)

PLATO, when asked by Dionysius what business he had in Sicily. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Dion.
Ch. 5, sec. 2.)

A man! A man! My kingdom for a man!

JOHN MARSTON, Scourge of Villainy.

I am more fortunate than Diogenes, for I have found the man for whom he searched so long.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to d'Alembert.

<sup>5</sup> He of a temper was so absolute,
As that it seem'd, when Nature him began,
She meant to show all that might be in man.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. iii.

<sup>6</sup> Men's men: gentle or simple, they're much of a muchness.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Ch. 31.

<sup>7</sup> We are coming we, the young men,
Strong of heart and millions strong;
We shall work where you have trifled,

Cleanse the temple, right the wrong,

Till the land our fathers visioned

Shall be spread before our ken,

We are through with politicians;

Give us Men! Give us Men!

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Challenge of the Young Men.

God give us men. A time like this demands Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands!

Men whom the lust of office does not kill,

Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy,
Men who possess opinions and a will,
Men who love honor, men who cannot lie.
J. G. HOLLAND, Wanted.

Give us a man of God's own mould,
Born to marshal his fellow-men;
One whose fame is not bought and sold
At the stroke of a politician's pen.

Give us the man of thousands ten,
Fit to do as well as to plan;

Give us a rallying-cry, and then,

Abraham Lincoln, give us a MAN!

E. C. STEDMAN, Wanted—A Man.

<sup>8</sup> When shall we look upon his like again?
(Quando ullum inveniet parem?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 24, l. 8.

He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 187.

<sup>9</sup> Though I've belted you and flayed you,
By the livin' Gawd that made you,
You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!

KIPLING, Gunga Din.

<sup>10</sup> A man of mark.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Saga of King Olaf. Pt. ix, st. 2.

<sup>11</sup> The surest plan to make a Man

Is, think him so.

J. R. LOWELL, Jonathan to John. St. 9.

<sup>12</sup> Before Man made us citizens, great Nature made us men.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves Near Washington.

<sup>13</sup> A man after his own heart.

Old Testament: I Samuel, xiii, 14.

And Nathan said to David: "Thou art the man."

Old Testament: II Samuel, xii, 7.

<sup>14</sup> O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 78.

<sup>15</sup> He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him!

O miracle of men!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 31.

As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 1, l. 29.

A proper man as one shall see in a summer's day.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 88.

His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world "This was a man!"

THOMAS HARDY, A Pair of Blue Eyes. Ch. 27.

7
De wimmin, dey does de talkin' en de flyin', en de mens, dey does de walkin' en de pryin', en betwixt en betweenst um, dey ain't much dat don't come out.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Brother Rabbit and His Famous Foot.

8
Married men laugh at Single men. Single men laugh
At the married men.

Wan Lo tells me that women
Laugh up their sleeves at both.

HENRY HARRISON, Wan Lo Tanka.

9
A man is as good as he has to be, and a woman as bad as she dares.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

When rewards are distributed, the woman gets one half the pay that a man does, and if disgrace is given out she bears it all.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. iv, p. 179.

10
I had rather live with the woman I love in a world full of trouble, than to live in heaven with nobody but men.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

11
A look of intelligence in men is what regularity of features is in women: it is a style of beauty to which the most vain may aspire.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 12.

12
It is because of men that women dislike each other. (Les hommes sont cause que les femmes ne s'aiment point.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 3.

13
As unto the bow the cord is,
So unto the man is woman;
Though she bends him, she obeys him,
Though she draws him, yet she follows;
Useless each without the other!

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. x, l. 1.

Sure the shovel and tongs

To each other belongs.

SAMUEL LOVER, Widow Machree.

14
Laborin' man an' laborin' woman
Hev one glory an' one shame;
Ev'ythin' thet's done inhuman
Injers all on 'em the same.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 1, st. 10.

15
Campaspe: Were women never so fair, men would be false.

Apelles: Were women never so false, men would be fond.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act iii, sc. 3.

16
Men may have rounded Seraglio Point: they have not yet doubled Cape Turk.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1. Meaning that, though man has perhaps passed the stage of keeping harems, he has not yet learned to treat woman as an equal.

17
Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall,
Godlike erect, with native honour clad
In naked majesty seem'd lords of all,
And worthy seem'd. . . .
For contemplation he and valour form'd,
For softness she, and sweet attractive grace;
He for God only, she for God in him.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 288.

Female and male God made the man,
His image is the whole, not half.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House: Sarum Plain: Preludes. Pt. iv.

Male and female created he them.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 27.

18
In argument with men, a woman ever
Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 903.

Men are more eloquent than women made;
But women are more powerful to persuade.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Amyntas: Prologue.

grande subtilité est une fausse délicatesse, et la véritable délicatesse est une solide subtilité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 128.

For as laws are necessary that good manners may be preserved, so there is need of good manners that laws may be maintained.

MACHIAVELLI, Dei Discorsi. Pt. i, sec. 18.

Self-respect is at the bottom of all good manners. They are the expression of discipline, of good-will, of respect for other people's rights and comfort and feelings.

E. S. MARTIN, A Father to His Freshman Son.

You must practise
The manners of the time, if you intend
To have favour from it.

MASSINGER, The Unnatural Combat. Act i, sc. 1.

Good manners are the technic of expressing consideration for the feelings of others.

ALICE DUER MILLER, I Like American Manners. (Saturday Evening Post, 13 Aug., 1932.)

The most delightful of companions is he who combines the mind of a gentleman with the emotions of a bum. . . . Toward men, ever an aristocrat; toward women, ever a commoner—that way lies success.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, The Autobiography of an Attitude.

All Manners take a tincture from our own,
Or come discolour'd thro' our Passions shown;
Or Fancy's beam enlarges, multiplies,
Contracts, inverts, and gives ten thousand dyes.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 33.

Our manners, like our faces, though ever so beautiful, must differ in their beauty.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. iii, p. 262.

Those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 46.

The great secret is not having bad manners or good manners or any other particular sort of manners, but having the same manners for all human souls.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act v.

For manners are not idle, but the fruit
Of loyal nature and of noble mind.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 333.

Manners,—the final and perfect flower of noble character.

WILLIAM WINTER, The Actor and his Duty.

Good-breeding is the blossom of good-sense.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 470.

Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is but cabbage with a college education.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

Men are polished, through act and speech,
Each by each,
As pebbles are smoothed on the rolling beach.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, A Home Idyl.

1
The manners of every age should be observed by you. (Ætatis cujusque notandi sunt tibi mores.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 156.

I describe not men, but manners; not an individual, but a species.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

Nor is it my wish to find fault with individuals, but truly to show forth the very life and the manners of mankind. (Neque enim notare singulos mens est mihi, Verum ipsam vitam et mores hominum ostendere.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, Prologue, l. 49.

2
A man polished to the nail. (Ad unguem factus homo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 32. The phrase involves a metaphor from sculpture, for the Latin artist would pass his finger-nail over the marble to test the smoothness of its joints.

3
The attentive eyes
That saw the manners in the face.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines on the Death of Hogarth.

4
Evil communications corrupt good manners. (Φθείρουσιν ἥθη χρηστὴ ὁμιλία κακά.)

MENANDER, Thais. Frag. 2; EURIPIDES, Fragment. Frag. 962; New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 33. See also COMPANIONS: EVIL COMMUNICATIONS.

Everyone's manners make his fortune. (Mores cuique sui fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus. Ch. 14.

6
And all that's madly wild, or oddly gay,
We call it only pretty Fanny's way.

THOMAS PARNELL, Elegy to an Old Beauty.

Nobody ought to have been able to resist her coaxing manner; and nobody had any business to try. Yet she never seemed to know it was her manner at all. That was the best of it.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Vol. ii, ch. 14.

7
Well showed the elder lady's mien
That courts and cities she had seen.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 30.

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 431. Also PLAUTUS, Moscellaria, l. 724.

16
It is not learning, it is not virtue, about which people inquire in society. It's manners.

THACKERAY, Sketches and Travels in London: On Tailoring.

17
Good manners and soft words have brought many a difficult thing to pass.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, I Æsop. Act iv, sc. 2.

18
Manners before morals!

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iv.

One should be sure of his own manners before attacking another's morals.

MRS. JACK GARDNER, referring to Josiah Royce's attack on Francis E. Abbot, in International Journal of Ethics, Oct., 1890.

More tears have been shed over men's lack of manners than their lack of morals.

HELEN HATHAWAY, Manners for Men.

They teach the morals of a harlot and the manners of a dancing-master.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, of Lord Chesterfield's letters.

19
Manners makyth man.

Manners make the man.

DEFOE, Complete Gentleman. Pt. 1, ch. 1. (1729)

The difference is, that in the days of old Men made the manners; manners now make men.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 26.

III—Manners: Good Manners

1 Such easy greatness, such a graceful port,
So turn'd and finish'd for the camp or court!
ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 417.

We should lose something of the stately manners
Of the old school.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, sec. 2.

2 She puts off her patched petticoat today
And puts on Mayfair manners.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 658.

3 Genteel in personage,
Conduct, and equipage;
Noble by heritage,

Generous and free.

HENRY CAREY, The Contrivances. Act i, sc. 2.

4 Never seem wiser or more learned than the people you are with.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

Abhor a knave and pity a fool in your heart, but let neither of them unnecessarily see that you do so.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Dec., 1748.

A man's own good-breeding is his best security against other people's ill manners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Feb., 1750.

You must embrace the man you hate, if you cannot be justified in knocking him down.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

5 Who fears t' offend takes the first step to please.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love in a Riddle. Act i.

6 Come when you're called,
And do as you're bid;
Shut the door after you,
And you'll never be chid.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Contrast. Ch. 1.

7 Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

All that fashion demands is composure and self-content.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

8 The mildest manners, and the gentlest heart.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 756. (Pope, tr.)

The mildest manners with the bravest mind.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 963. (Pope, tr.)

He was the mildest mannered man
That ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat;
With such true breeding of a gentleman,
You never could divine his real thought.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 41.

9 You may observe that I am well-bred to a degree of needless scrupulosity.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 169.

No dancing bear was so genteel
Or half so dégagé.
COWPER, Of Himself.

10 Such high-bred manners, such good-natured
wit.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

11 Teach me, like thee, in various nature wise,
To fall with dignity, with temper rise:
Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe;
Correct with spirit, eloquent with ease,
Intent to reason, or polite to please.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 377.

12 Don't shake hands too eagerly. (Μὴ ῥαδίως δεξιὰν ἐμβάλλειν.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Bk. viii, sec. 17.)

13 Good manners be your speed!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 190.

14 Gentle blood will gentle manners breed.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto iii, st. 2.

True is, that whilom that good poet said,
The gentle mind by gentle deeds is known;
For a man by nothing is so well bewray'd
As by his manners.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto iii, st. 1.

The reference is to Chaucer. See also under GENTLEMAN.

IV—Manners: Bad Manners

15 You have the gift of impudence; be thankful;
Every man has not the like talent.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase. Act i, sc. 2.

I am privileged to be very impertinent, being an Oxonian.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair. Act ii, sc. 1.

With that dull, rooted, callous impudence
Which, dead to shame and every nicer sense,
Ne'er blush'd, unless, in spreading vice's snares,
She blunder'd on some virtue unawares.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 135.

16 No manners at all—no more breeding than a bum-bailey.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 6.

17 Though I be rude in speech.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 6.

18 God may forgive sins, he said, but awkward-ness has no forgiveness in heaven or earth.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

19 I suppose this is a spice of foreign breeding, to let your uncle kick his heels in your hall.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act ii.

1 Mr. Burchell . . . at the conclusion of every sentence would cry out "Fudge!"—an expression which displeased us all.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 11.

2 Unruly manners, or ill-timed applause
Wrong the best speaker or the justest cause.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 86. (Pope, tr.)

3 A rustic roughness, awkward and loutish. (Asperitas agrestis, et inconcinna gravisque.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 6.

4 Folly often goes beyond her bounds; but Impudence knows none.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Scitum Hispanicum.

Of all the plagues that heaven has sent,
A Wasp is most impertinent.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 8.

5 Incivility is not a Vice of the Soul, but the effect of several Vices; of Vanity, Ignorance of Duty, Laziness, Stupidity, Distraction, Contempt of others, and Jealousy.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

6 The movers and masters of our souls have surely a right to throw out their limbs as carelessly as they please, on the world that belongs to them, and before the creatures they have animated.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Pericles and Aspasia.

7 Degenerate manners grow apace. (Mores deteriores increbescunt.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 838. (Act v, sc. 1.)

Evil manners will, like watered grass, grow up very quickly. (Mores mali, Quasi herba irrigua succreverunt uberrime.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 8.

8 Rude, and scant of courtesy.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 28.

But by and rade the Black Douglas,
And wow but he was rough!

UNKNOWN, The Douglas Tragedy.

9 I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 110.

10 This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 304.

He answered me in the roundest manner.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 59.

This is some fellow,
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 101.

Fit for the mountains and the barb'rous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preach'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 52.

11 One ugly trick has often spoiled
The sweetest and the best.

ANN TAYLOR, Meddlesome Matty.

12 Her manners had not that repose
Which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 5.

13 His trick of doing nothing with an air,
His salon manners and society smile
Were but skin deep.

WILLIAM WATSON, A Study in Contrasts. Pt. i, l. 17.

MARCH

14 The stormy March has come at last,
With winds and clouds and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast
That through the snowy valley flies.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, March.

15 March winds and April showers
Bring forth May flowers.

ELWORTHY, West Somersetshire Word-Book, p. 461.

March wind and May sun
Makes clothes white and maids dun.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 41.

16 Men.: I would choose March, for I would come in like a lion.

Tony: But you'd go out like a lamb.

JOHN FLETCHER, Wife for a Month. Act ii, sc. 1. (1624)

Like the month of March, in like a lion and out like a lamb.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 259.

Like March, having come in like a lion, he purposed to go out like a lamb.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 15.

March comes in with an adder's head, and goes out with a peacock's tail.

R. L. GALES, Old-World Essays, p. 250.

17 Blossom on the plum,
Wild wind and merry;
Leaves upon the cherry,
And one swallow come.

NORA HOPPER, March.

18 Ah, March! we know thou art
Kind-hearted, 'spite of ugly looks and threats,
And, out of sight, art nursing April's violets!

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, March.

19 Slayer of the winter, art thou here again?

O welcome, thou that bring'st the summer nigh!
The bitter wind makes not thy victory vain,
Nor will we mock thee for thy faint blue sky.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Earthly Paradise: March. St. 1.

1
Now are the winds about us in their glee,
Tossing the slender tree;
Whirling the sands about his furious car,
March cometh from afar.

WILLIAM GILMORE SIMMS, Song in March.

2
With rushing winds and gloomy skies,
The dark and stubborn Winter dies:
Far-off, unseen, Spring faintly cries,
Bidding her earliest child arise:
March!

BAYARD TAYLOR, March.

3
Up from the sea the wild north wind is blowing

Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling, I watch the shaken elm boughs, knowing

It is the wind of March.

J. G. WHITTIER, March.

4
The braggart March stood in the season's door
With his broad shoulders blocking up the way.

ROBERT BURNS WILSON, The Passing of March.

5
Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated, . . .
The Ploughboy is whooping—anon—anon!
There's joy in the mountains:
There's life in the fountains; . . .
The rain is over and gone.

WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

6
March. Its tree, Juniper. Its stone, Bloodstone. Its motto, "Courage and strength in times of danger."

UNKNOWN, Old Saying.

MARIGOLD

7
The marigold, whose courtier's face
Echoes the sun.

JOHN CLEVELAND, On Phillis Walking Before Sunrise.

8
The marigold abroad her leaves doth spread,
Because the sun's and her power is the same.

HENRY CONSTABLE, Diana.

9
Fair is the marygold, for pottage meet.

JOHN GAY, The Shepherd's Week: Monday.

10
Open afresh your round of starry folds,
Ye ardent marigolds!

KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe upon a Little Hill, l. 47.

11
The sun-observing marigold.

FRANCIS QUARLES, School of the Heart, Ode 30.

12
Nor shall the marigold unmentioned die,
Which Acis once found out in Sicily;
She Phœbus loves, and from him draws his hue,

And ever keeps his golden beams in view.

RENÉ RAPIN, On Gardens. (Gardiner, tr.)

13
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 25.

The marigold that goes to bed wi' the sun,
And with him rises weeping.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 105.

14
The graceful and obsequious marigold,
How duly every morning she displays
Her open breast when Titan spreads his rays.

GEORGE WITHER, The Marigold.

MARLOWE, CHRISTOPHER

15 Neat Marlowe, bathed in the Thespian
springs,

Hath in him those brave translunary things
That the first poet had; his raptures were
All air and fire, which made his verses clear;
For that fine madness still he did retain
Which rightly should possess a poet's brain.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Of Poets and Poesie.

[Marlowe] had in him those brave translunary things that the first poets had.

JOHN DRINKWATER, To Harry Reynolds: Of Poets and Poetry.

16
Marlowe's mighty line.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare.

17
For thou, if ever godlike foot there trod
These fields of ours, wert surely like a god.
Who knows what splendour of strange dreams
was shed

With sacred shadow and glimmer of gold and red

From hallowed windows, over stone and sod
On thine unbowed, bright, insubmissive head?
The shadow stayed not, but the splendour stays,

Our brother, till the last of English days.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 18.

18
Marlowe was happy in his buskin Muse—
Alas, unhappy in his life and end:
Pity it is that wit so ill should dwell,
Wit lent from heaven, but vices sent from hell.

Our theatre hath lost, Pluto hath got,

A tragic penman for a dreary plot.

UNKNOWN, The Return from Parnassus. (1606)

MARRIAGE

I—Marriage: Definitions

19 Marriage always demands the greatest understanding of the art of insincerity possible between two human beings.

VICKI BAUM, And Life Goes On, p. 141.

The one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

<sup>1</sup> Marriage: The state or condition of a community consisting of a master, a mistress, and two slaves, making in all, two.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 213.

<sup>2</sup> The mere idea of marriage, existing to weaken the will by distracting its straight aim in the life of practically every young girl, is the simple secret of their confessed inferiority in men's pursuits and professions today.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan, p. 310.

To make it mutual, nature points the way: Let husbands govern: gentle wives obey.

Wedding is destiny, And hanging likewise.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

The ancient saying is no heresy, Hanging and wiving go by destiny.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 82. The proverb is used by many writers, among them: BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, 5, 5; CHAPMAN, All Fools, v, 1; FARQUHAR, Recruiting Officer, iii, 2; SWIFT, Polite Conversation, i.

8 Truly some men there be

That live always in great horror,

And say it goeth by destiny

To hang or wed: both hath one hour;

And whether it be, I am well sure,

Hanging is better of the twain;

Sooner done, and shorter pain.

Therefore it is fitting for the women to be married at about the age of eighteen, and the men at thirty-seven, or a little before.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 14, sec. 6.

Let still the woman take

An elder than herself; so wears she to him,

So sways she level in her husband's heart:

For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,

Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,

More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 30.

Then let thy love be younger than thyself,

Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:

For women are as roses, whose fair flower

Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

12 Ev'n in the happiest choice, where fav'ring heaven

Has equal love and easy fortune giv'n,—
Think not, the husband gain'd, that all is done;

The prize of happiness must still be won:
And, oft, the careless find it to their cost,
The lover in the husband may be lost;
The graces might alone his heart allure;
They and the virtues, meeting, must secure.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, Advice to a Lady.

13 And, to all married men, be this a caution,
Which they should duly tender as their life,
Neither to doat too much, nor doubt a wife.

IV—Marriage: Like with Like

<sup>5</sup> Ah, wise was he who first pondered this truth and gave it utterance: that to marry in one's own degree is far the best, and that neither among the rich nor the high-born should marriage be desired by a man who toileth with his hands.

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 887.

Oh! wise was he, the first who taught
This lesson of observant thought,
That equal fates alone may bless
The bowers of nuptial happiness;
That never where ancestral pride
Inflames, or affluence rolls its tide,
Should love's ill-omened bonds entwine
The offspring of an humbler line.

<sup>10</sup>

Whip your own top. (Τὴν κατὰ σαντὸν ἔλα.)

PITTACUS, when asked by a stranger whether he should marry his equal or his superior.

Pittacus led him to a group of boys who were spinning tops, and bade him listen to them. The boys were crying to each other,
"Whip your own top." The words also mean, "Keep to your own sphere," and the stranger led home the humbler bride. (CAL-LIMACHUS, Epigrams: Anth. Pal., vii, 89.)

DON MARQUIS, Tristram and Isolte.

2 O thrice ill-starred is he who marries when he is poor! (ὦ τρίς κακοδαίμων, ὅστις ὅν πένης γαμεῖ.)
MENANDER, Plocius.

3 Let all mankind this certain maxim hold:
Marry who will, our sex is to be sold.
With empty hands no tassels you can lure,
But fulsome love for gain we can endure;
For gold we love the impotent and old,
And heave, and pant, and kiss, and cling, for gold.
POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 170.
But honored well are charms to sell
If priests the selling do.
NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS, Unseen Spirits.

4 I asked of Echo, 't other day
(Whose words are few and often funny),
What to a novice she could say
Of courtship, love, and matrimony.
Quoth Echo, plainly,—“Matter-o'-money.”
J. G. SAXE, Echo.

5 I come to wive it wealthily.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 75.

6 Doänt thou marry for munny, but goä wheer
munny is!
TENNYSON, Northern Farmer, New Style. St. 5.
Remember, it is as easy to marry a rich woman
as a poor woman.
THACKERAY, Pendennis. Bk. i, ch. 28.

7 I prefer a man without money, to money without a man. (Ego vero malo virum, qui pecunia egeat, quam pecuniam, quæ viro.)
THEMISTOCLES, when someone asked his advice as to whether he should give his daughter to a man who was poor but honest or to one who was rich but less esteemed.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 18;
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 20, sec. 71.)

8 My Lord Denbigh is going to marry a fortune, I forget her name; my Lord Gower asked him how long the honey-moon would last? He replied, “Don't tell me of the honeymoon; it is harvest moon with me.”
HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu,
19 May, 1756.

VI—Marriage: December and May

9 What woes must such unequal union bring,
When hoary Winter weds the youthful Spring?
You, like Mezentius, in the nuptial bed,
Once more unite the living and the dead.
WILLIAM BROOME, *On a Gentleman of Seventy
Who Married a Lady of Sixteen*.
The living and the dead, at his [Mezentius'] command,
Were coupled face to face and hand to hand.
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii.

10 What can a young lassie, what shall a young lassie,
What can a young lassie do wi' an auld man?
BURNS, What Can a Young Lassie.

11 That she, this maiden, which that May us highte . . .
Should wedded be unto this January.
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 449.
When asthmatic January weds buxom May.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, Coming Terror, 267.

12 Men should wedden after their estate,
For youth and eld are often at debate.
CHAUCER, The Milleres Tale, l. 43.

13 Husband twice as old as wife,
Argues ill for married life.
W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act. i.

14 Better be an old man's darling than a young man's warling.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
“Warling” was apparently coined for this proverb, which will be found also in CAM-DEN, Remains, 293; SWIFT, Polite Conversation, i; AINSWORTH, Miser's Daughter, iii,
15, and elsewhere.

Better be an old man's darling
Than become a young man's slave.
J. R. PLANCHE, Extravaganza, v, 206.

15 For it ne sits not unto fresh May Forto be coupled to cold January.
JOHN LYDGATE, Temple of Glas. (c. 1400)
Lustful he was, at forty must be wed,
Old January will have May in bed.
UNKNOWN, Musarum Deliciae, i, 103.

16 Since thou wouldst needs (bewitched with some ill charms!)
Be buried in those monumental arms,

All we can wish is, may that earth lie light
Upon thy tender limbs! and so good night.

EDMUND WALLER, To One Married to an Old Man.

1 For every marriage then is best in tune,
When that the wife is May, the husband
June.

ROWLAND WATKYN, To the Most Courteous and Fair Gentlewoman, Mrs. Ellinor Williams.

2 Take a doe in the month of May,
And a forester's courage she soon will allay.
UNKNOWN. (Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 558.)

VII—Marriage and Repentance

3 Be not hasty to marry; it's better to have one plough going than two cradles; and more profit to have a barn filled than a bed.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.

4 You should indeed have longer tarried
By the roadside before you married.

W. S. LANDOR, To One Ill-mated.

5 In hasty recklessness men often marry,
And afterwards repent it all their lives.
(Par un prompt désespoir souvent on se
marie,
Qu'on s'en repent après tout le temps de sa vie.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 89.

6 Lest in making hasty choice, leisure for repentance should follow.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, l. 115.
(1566)

She was afraid to match in haste lest she might repent at leisure.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, xi, 86. (1592)

Marry too soon, and you'll repent too late.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Jealous Lovers. Act v,
sc. 2. (1632)

Marry in haste, repent at leisure.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelor. Act v, sc. 8. (1692)

7 Hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 18.

Wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque pace.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 76.

Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 11.

8 Marriage leapeth up upon the saddle, and repentance upon the crupper.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 35. (1669)

And sure all marriage in repentance ends.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian: Epilogue.

VIII—Marriage and Love

9 The angry tyrant lays his yoke on all,
Yet in his fiercest rage is charming still;
Officious Hymen comes whene'er we call,
But haughty Love comes only when he will.
APHRA BEHN, Love and Marriage.

'Tis Love alone can make our fetters please.
APHRA BEHN, Love and Marriage.

10 Love-matches are made by people who are content, for a month of honey, to condemn themselves to a life of vinegar.

COUNTESS OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book.

Marriage, from love, like vinegar from wine—
A sad, sour, sober beverage—by time
Is sharpen'd from its high celestial flavour
Down to a very homely household savour.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 5.

11 For Wedlock without love, some say,
Is but a lock without a key.
It is a kind of rape to marry
One that neglects or cares not for ye.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 321.

12 'Tis melancholy, and a fearful sign
Of human frailty, folly, also crime,
That love and marriage rarely can combine,
Although they both are born in the same
clime.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 5.

13 People marry through a variety of other reasons, and with varying results; but to marry for love is to invite inevitable tragedy.

J. B. CABELL, The Cream of the Jest, p. 235.

14 Can you keep the bee from ranging,
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fettered Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song. St. 6.

15 There as my heart is set, there will I wive.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 117.

16 Marriage has, as you say, no natural relation to love. Marriage belongs to society; it is a social contract.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 450.

17 And all the young ladies said . . . that to be sure a love-match was the only thing for happiness, where the parties could anyway afford it.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

18 Where there's marriage without love, there will be love without marriage.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

There can be only one end to marriage without love, and that is love without marriage.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Where love is there is marriage; where love is not, there is prostitution.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Where Love Is.

'Tis highly rational, we can't dispute,
That Love, being naked, should promote a suit:

But doth not oddity to him attach
Whose fire's so oft extinguished by a match?

RICHARD GARNETT, On Love and Marriage.

Marriage the happiest bond of love might be,
If hands were only joined where hearts agree.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.

Act v, sc. 1.

Union of hearts, not hands, does marriage make,
And sympathy of mind keeps love awake.

AARON HILL, Alzira.

If a man really loves a woman, of course he wouldn't marry her for the world if he were not quite sure that he was the best person she could by any possibility marry.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

It is commonly a weak man who marries for
love.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1776.)

It is love that is sacred. . . . Marriage and love have nothing in common. . . . We marry only once . . . but we may love twenty times. . . . Marriage is law, and love is instinct.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, The Love of Long Ago.

Hail wedded love, mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring, sole propriety
In Paradise of all things common else.
By thee adulterous lust was driv'n from men
Among the bestial herds to range; by thee,
Founded in reason, loyal, just, and pure,
Relations dear, and all the charities
Of father, son, and brother, first were known.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 750.

Love is often a fruit of marriage. (L'amour est souvent un fruit de mariage.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Act i, sc. 1, l. 54.

The old family maxim, that "if she marries first, love will come after."

EUSTACE BUDGELL, The Spectator. No. 605.

Marry first and love will follow.

HANNAH COWLEY, The Belle's Stratagem. Act
iii, sc. 1. Quoted as "the good old maxim."

The woman that marries to love better will be as much mistaken as the wench that marries to live better. Marrying to increase love is like gaming to become rich; you only lose what little stock you had before.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act iv.

A good marriage (if any there be) refuses the company and conditions of love; it endeavors to present those of amity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

I see no marriages fail sooner, or more troubled, than such as are concluded for beauty's sake, and huddled up for amorous desires.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

You cannot pluck roses without fear of thorns,
Nor enjoy a fair wife without danger of horns.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

Where I love I must not marry,
Where I marry, cannot love.

THOMAS MOORE, Love and Marriage.

They gied him my hand, tho' my heart was at sea.

ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

The garlands fade, the vows are worn away;
So dies her love, and so my hopes decay.

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 69.

How oft, when press'd to marriage, have I said,

Curse on all laws but those which Love has made!

Love, free as air, at sight of human ties,
Spreads his light wings, and in a moment flies.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 73.

Marry for love and work for siller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who marries for love without money, hath merry nights and sorry days.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Love as a relation between men and women was ruined by the desire to make sure of the legitimacy of children.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p.
27.

I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance. . . . I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 253.

'Tis safest in matrimony to begin with a little aversion.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2.

If they only married when they fell in love,
most people would die unwed.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

The Lion is the King of Beasts, but he is scarcely suitable for a domestic pet. In the same way, I suspect love is rather too violent a passion to make a good domestic sentiment.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

1 Venus, a beautiful, good-natured lady, was the goddess of love; Juno, a terrible shrew, the goddess of marriage: and they were always mortal enemies.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2 The only thing that can hallow marriage is love, and the only genuine marriage is that which is hallowed by love.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2.

3 All true love is grounded on esteem.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, True Love.

Wedded love is founded on esteem.

ELIJAH FENTON, Mariamne.

4 One should always be in love. That is the reason one should never marry.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

IX—Marriage: Made in Heaven

5 True it is that marriages be done in heaven and performed on earth.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure. iii, 24. (1567)

Marriages are made in heaven and consummated on earth. (Les mariages se font au ciel, et se consomment sur la terre.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

6 Marriage is destiny, made in heaven.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. (1590)

7 Matches are made in heaven.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 5, subs. 5. (1621) In frequent use thereafter.

8 If marriages

Are made in Heaven, they should be happier.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Isabella; or, The Fatal Marriage. Act iv, sc. 2.

X—Marriage: The Wedding

9 They stood before the altar and supplied The fire themselves in which their fat was fried.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary, p. 23.

10 To have and to hold from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness, and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony.

With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnization of Matrimony. In America, the second clause is omitted.

She is mine to have and to hold!

She has chosen between love and gold!

All the joys life can give

Shall be hers, while I live,

For she's mine to have and to hold.

WILL A. HEELAN, She Is Mine to Have and to Hold.

To Have and to Hold.

MARY JOHNSTON. Title of novel.

11 The business of a poor waiting-woman, here upon earth, is to be scraping up something against a rainy day, called the day of marriage.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 2.

12 Happiness untold awaits them

When the parson consecrates them.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

13 So, with decorum all things carried;

Miss frown'd, and blush'd, and then was—married.

GOLDSMITH, The Double Transformation, l. 19.

14 For next to that interesting job,

The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob,

There's nothing so draws a London mob

As the noosing of very rich people.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship.

15 There is something about a wedding-gown prettier than in any other gown in the world.

DOUGLAS JERROLD. (Douglas Jerrold's Wit: A Wedding-Gown.)

For talk six times with the same single lady, And you may get the wedding dresses ready.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 59.

16 The voice that breathed o'er Eden,

That earliest wedding-day,

The primal marriage blessing,

It hath not passed away.

JOHN KEBLE, Holy Matrimony.

17 Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the faces of a new-married couple,—in that of the lady particularly.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Bachelor's Complaint.

18 Fair Concord, ever abide by their couch, and to so well matched a pair may Venus ever be propitious. (Candida perpetuo reside, Concordia, lecto, Tamque pari semper sit Venus æqua jugo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 13.

God the best maker of all marriages
Combine your hearts in one.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 386.

1 What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 6.

What God hath joined together no man shall ever put asunder: God will take care of that.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

Under this window in stormy weather
I marry this man and woman together;
Let none but Him who rules the thunder
Put this man and woman asunder.

SWIFT, Marriage Service from His Chamber Window.

Yet 'tis "so nominated in the bond,"
That both are tied till one shall have expired.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 7.

2 To church in the morning, and there saw a wedding in the church, which I have not seen many a day; and the young people so merry one with another! and strange to see what delight we married people have to see these poor fools decoyed into our condition, every man and woman gazing and smiling at them.

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 25 Dec., 1665.

To church the parties went,
At once with carnal and devout intent.

POPE, January and May, l. 309.

3 You've picked an unlucky day for changing your name. (Ne hodie malo cum auspicio nomen commutaveria.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 373. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

4 Wooded, and married, and a',
Married, and wooed, and a'!
And was she nae very weel off
That was wooed, and married, and a'?

ALEXANDER ROSS, Song.

5 But who ever heard of a marriage deterred
Or even deferred

By any contrivance so very absurd
As scolding the boy, and caging his bird?

J. G. SAXE, Pyramus and Thisbe.

6 A man may weep upon his wedding day.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Prologue, l. 32.

7 Till holy church incorporate two in one.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6,
l. 37.

Since first he called her his before the holy man.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 130.

8 I must marry the girl first, and ask his consent
afterwards.

R. B. SHERIDAN, St. Patrick's Day. Act i, sc. 1.

9 Behold, whiles she before the altar stands,
Hearing the holy priest that to her speaks,

And blesseth her with his two happy hands,
How the red roses flush up in her cheeks,
And the pure snow with goodly vermeil stain,
Like crimson dyed in grain:
That even th' angels, which continually
About the sacred altar do remain,
Forget their service and about her fly,
Oft peeping in her face, that seems more fair,
The more they on it stare.

SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 223.

Against their bridal day, which is not long:
Sweet Thames, run softly, till I end my song.

SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 35.

10 Now when they sever wedded hands,
Joy trembles in their bosom-strands,
And lovely laughter leaps and falls
Upon their lips in madrigals.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

11 What woman, however old, has not the bridal-favours and raiment stowed away, and packed in lavender, in the inmost cupboards of her heart?

THACKERAY, Lovel, the Widower. Bk. i, ch. 28.

12 Design, or chance makes others wive,
But nature did this match contrive.

EDMUND WALLER, Marriage of the Dwarfs.

13 A manly form at her side she saw,
And joy was duty, and love was law.

WHITTIER, Maud Muller.

XI—Marriage: Bride and Bridegroom

14 The bride hath paced into the hall,
Red as a rose is she.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i.

Holy and pure are the drops that fall
When the young bride goes from her father's hall.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Bride of the Greek Isle.

15 Blest is the Bride on whom the sun doth shine.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Nuptial Song.

Blessed is the corpse that the rain falls on;
Blessed is the bride that the sun shines on.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, 667.

Fair weather weddings make fair weather lives.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere.
Act i, sc. 3.

16 As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxii, 5.

As are those dulcet sounds in break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear
And summon him to marriage.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 51.

17 A bonny bride is soon buskit.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

1 And you, brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy to the measures
fall.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 184.

2 A happy bridesmaid makes a happy bride.

TENNYSON, The Bridesmaid.

Bridesmaids may soon be brides; one wedding brings on another.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

XII—Marriage: the Honeymoon

3 Is Venus odious to brides? Or do they mock their parents with false tears, which they shed plentifully within their virgin bowers?

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxvi, l. 15.

4 More anxious than ever bride was on her wedding night, when wishes, hopes, fears, and doubts, tumultuously agitate, please, and terrify her.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 June, 1752.

5 'Tis not beauty that witcheth bridegrooms, but nobleness. (Οὐ τὸ κάλλος ἀλλ' ἀρεταὶ τέρπουσι τοὺς ζυνευέτας.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 208.

O lady, nobility is thine, and thy form is the reflection of thy nature!

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 238.

Solon bade the bride eat a quince the first night of marriage, intimating thereby, it seems, that the bridegroom was to expect his first pleasure from the bride's mouth and conversation.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Conjugal Precepts. Sec. 2.

6 Need we expose to vulgar sight
The raptures of the bridal night? . . .
Let it suffice, that each had charms;
He clasp'd a goddess in his arms;
And, though she felt his usage rough,
Yet in a man 'twas well enough.

GOLDSMITH, The Double Transformation, l. 21.

7 The moon, the moon, so silver and cold,
Her fickle temper has oft been told,
Now shady—now bright and sunny—
But of all the lunar things that change,
The one that shows most fickle and strange,
And takes the most eccentric range,
Is the moon—so called—of honey!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Honeymoon.

8 Other rites
Observing none, but adoration pure
Which God likes best, into their inmost bower
Handed they went; and eas'd the putting off
These troublesome disguises which we wear,

Straight side by side were laid; nor turn'd,
I ween,
Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites

Mysterious of connubial love refus'd:

Whatever hypocrites austere talk

Of purity and place and innocence,

Defaming as impure what God declares

Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.

Our Maker bids increase; who bids abstain
But our destroyer, foe to God and Man?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 736.

She what was honour knew,

And with obsequious majesty approv'd

My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bow'r

I led her blushing like the morn: all Heav'n

And happy constellations on that hour

Shed their selectest influence; the earth

Gave sign of gratulation, and each hill;

Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs

Whisper'd it to the woods, and from their wings

Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 508.

9 When a couple are newly-married, the first month is honey-moon or smick-smack;
The second is hither and thither: the third is thwack thwack:

The fourth, the Devil take them that brought thee and I together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53.

10

To-night,

When I should take possession of the bride.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 28.

Surfeiting in joys of love, With his new bride.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 252.

11

Put off your shame with your clothes when you go in to your husband, and put it on again when you come out.

THEANO, wife of Pythagoras, advising a woman. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.

12

All the women we need are inside, said the bridegroom, and closed the door on the bride.

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 77.

XIII—Marriage: Man and Wife

13

Thus in the East they are extremely strict,
And wedlock and a padlock mean the
same; . . .

But then their own polygamy's to blame;
Why don't they knead two virtuous souls
for life

Into that moral centaur, man and wife?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 158. This stanza, which Byron composed in bed, 27
Feb., 1821, was omitted by his publisher

from the first edition of the poem, but replaced in subsequent editions when Byron protested in a fury "that I will not permit any human being to take such liberties with my writings."

Sir Sampson Legend: Why my opinion is that those two monsters, joined together, make a yet greater, that's a man and his wife.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iv, sc. 2.

Composed that monstrous animal, a husband and wife.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xv, ch. 9.

<sup>2</sup> The reason that husbands and wives do not understand each other is because they belong to different sexes.

DOROTHY DIX, in her syndicated column.

<sup>3</sup> Pure, as the charities above,
Rise the sweet sympathies of love;
And closer chords than those of life
Unite the husband to the wife.

JOHN LOGAN, The Lovers.

<sup>4</sup> There is no such cosy combination as man and wife. (Οἰκεῖον οὕτως οὐδὲν ἔστιν ὡς ἀνὴρ τε καὶ γυνή.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 647.

Husband and wife come to look alike at last.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7.

<sup>5</sup> Men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 147.

They dream in courtship, but in wedlock wake.
POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 103.

You must not contrast too strongly the hours of courtship with the years of possession.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

<sup>6</sup> He is the half part of a blessed man Left to be finished by such as she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 437.

XIV—Marriage: Its Pleasures

<sup>7</sup> And such a bliss is there betwixt them two
That, save the joy that lasteth evermore,
There is none like, that any creature
Hath seen or shall, while that the world may dure.

CHAUCER, Man of Law's Tale, l. 1075.

The joys of marriage are the heaven on earth,
Life's paradise, great princess, the soul's quiet,
Sinews of concord, earthly immortality,
Eternity of pleasures.

JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 102.

<sup>8</sup> Thus hand in hand through life we'll go;
Its checkered paths of joy and woe
With cautious steps we'll tread.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 31.

<sup>9</sup> As your wedding ring wears,
You'll wear off your cares.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6146.

<sup>10</sup> Remember the nightingales which sing only some months in the spring, but commonly are silent when they have hatched their eggs, as if their mirth were turned into care for their young ones. Yet all the molestations of Marriage are abundantly recompensed with other comforts which God bestoweth on them who make a wise choice of a wife.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State.

As the birds do, so do we,
Bill our mate, and choose our tree.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Three Singers to Young Blood.

<sup>11</sup> Thrice happy they whom an unbroken bond unites,

And whom no quarrel shall sunder before life's final day.

(*Felices ter et amplius,
Quos inrupta tenet copula nec malis
Divulsus querimoniis
Suprema citius solvet amor die.*)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 13, l. 17.

<sup>12</sup> There is, indeed, nothing that so much seduces reason from vigilance, as the thought of passing life with an amiable woman.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Boswell, Life, i, 381.)

<sup>13</sup> Ay, marriage is the life-long miracle,
The self-begetting wonder, daily fresh.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 9.

<sup>14</sup> Not caged, my bird, my shy, sweet bird,
But nested—nested!

HABBERTON LULHAM, Nested.

<sup>15</sup> Let nothing break our bond but Death,
For in the world above

'Tis the breaker Death that soldereth
Our ring of Wedded Love.

GERALD MASSEY, On a Wedding Day. St. 11.

<sup>16</sup> Blest pair; and O yet happiest if ye seek No happier state, and know to know no
more.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 774.

1 Grave authors say, and witty poets sing,
That honest wedlock is a glorious thing.
POPE, January and May, l. 21.

The married man may bear his yoke with ease,
Secure at once himself and Heav'n to please;
And pass his inoffensive hours away,
In bliss all night, and innocence all day:
Tho' fortune change, his constant spouse remains,
Augments his joys, or mitigates his pains.
POPE, January and May, l. 37.

2 Purest Love's unwasting treasure,
Constant faith, fair hope, long leisure,
Days of ease, and nights of pleasure,
Sacred Hymen! these are thine.
POPE, Tragedy of Brutus: Chorus.

3 The sacred academy of man's life,
Is holy wedlock in a happy wife.
FRANCIS QUARLES, History of Queen Esther.
Sec. iii, med. 3.

4 One year of joy, another of comfort, and all the rest of content.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. A marriage wish.

5 But happy they! the happiest of their kind!
Whom gentler stars unite, and in one fate
Their hearts, their fortunes, and their beings blend.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1113.

6 Thrice happy is that humble pair,
Beneath the level of all care,
Over whose heads those arrows fly
Of sad distrust and jealousy.
EDMUND WALLER, The Marriage of the Dwarfs,
l. 7.

XV—Marriage: Its Pains

7 Though women are angels, yet wedlock's the devil.
BYRON, To Eliza. Quoted.

8 Here's a happy new year! but with reason
I beg you'll permit me to say—
Wish me many returns of the season,
But as few as you please of the day.
BYRON, On My Wedding-Day.

This day, of all our days, has done
The worst for me and you:—
'Tis just six years since we were one,
And five since we were two.
BYRON, To Penelope, 2 Jan., 1821.

9 We wedded men live in sorrow and care.
CHAUCER, The Merchant's Prologue, l. 16.

10 Man and wife,
Coupled together for the sake of strife.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1005.

War is no strife,
To the dark house and the detested wife.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 308.

Body and soul, like peevish man and wife,
United jar, and yet are loath to part.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 175.

11 Oh! how many torments lie in the small circle of a wedding-ring!
COLLEY CIBBER, Double Gallant. Act. i, sc. 2.

12 The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear,
And something every day they live
To pity, and, perhaps, forgive.
COWPER, Mutual Forbearance Necessary to the Happiness of the Married State.

13 If a man stay away from his wife for seven years, the law presumes the separation to have killed him; yet, according to our daily experience, it might well prolong his life.
CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintillæ Juris.

14 The wictim o' connubiality.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

Wen you're a married man, Samivel, you'll understand a good many things as you don't understand now; but vether it's worth while goin' through so much to learn so little, as the charity boy said ven he got to the end of the alphabet, is a matter o' taste.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 27.

15 Falsely your Church seven sacraments does frame:

Penance and Matrimony are the same.

RICHARD DUKE, To a Roman Catholic Friend upon Marriage.

16 I don't think matrimony consistent with the liberty of the subject.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act v, sc. 3.

'Tis a kind of bilboes to be married.

FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase. Act i, sc. 2.

The married man turns his staff into a stake.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

But married once,
A man is staked or poun'd, and cannot graze
Beyond his own hedge.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 1.

No man with such a faithful true intelligence at his side would ever stray far from his reservation.

DAN QUIN, Scrapbook, 29 Jan., 1892, p. 32, referring to William Jennings Bryan.

17 When the husband is fire and the wife tow,
the devil easily sets all in a flame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5594.

18 They that marry ancient people, merely in expectation to bury them, hang themselves, in hope that one will come and cut the halter.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Of Marriage.

1
The husband's sullen, dogged, shy,
The wife grows flippant in reply;
He loves command and due restriction,
And she as well likes contradiction.
She never slavishly submits,
She'll have her will, or have her fits;
He his way tugs, she t'other draws;
The man grows jealous, and with cause.

JOHN GAY, Cupid, Hymen, and Plutus.

2
Yet Wedlock's a very awful thing!
'Tis something like that feat in the ring,
Which requires good nerve to do it—
When one of a "Grand Equestrian Troop"
Makes a jump at a gilded hoop,

Not certain at all

Of what may befall

After his getting through it!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Marriage. St. 19.

3
It is so far from natural for a man and a woman to live in the state of marriage, that we find all the motives which they have for remaining in that connection, and the restraints which civilized society imposes to prevent separation, are hardly sufficient to keep them together.

4
No man likes to live under the eye of perpetual disapprobation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

You may think you had a conscience, but what is a conscience to a wife? . . . To marry is to domesticate the Recording Angel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. ii.

5
What! Posthumus, are you, who once had your wits, taking to yourself a wife? What snakes are driving you mad? Can you submit to a she-tyrant when there is so much rope to be had, so many dizzy heights of windows standing open?

There are convenient marriages, but no delightful ones. (Il y a de bons mariages, mais il n'y en a point de délicieux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 113.

Quoted by Bernard Shaw, Candida. Act i.

8
Who are happy in marriage? Those with so little imagination that they cannot picture a better state, and those so shrewd that they prefer quiet slavery to hopeless rebellion.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 245.

9
Like sculptured effigies they might be seen Upon their marriage-tomb, the sword between;

Each wishing for the sword that severs all.

Marriage is worse than cross I win, pile you lose.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Epsom Wells.

1 A young man married is a man that's marr'd.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 315.

2 O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures
ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 268.

3 She's not well married that lives married
long:
But she's best married that dies married young.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 77.

Even if we take matrimony at its lowest, even if we regard it as no more than a sort of friendship recognised by the police.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

Once you are married, there is nothing left for you, not even suicide, but to be good.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

7 As the husband is, the wife is; thou art
mated with a clown,
And the grossness of his nature will have weight to drag thee down.

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,
Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 47.

Alas! for all the pretty women who marry dull
men,
Go into the suburbs and never come out
again. . . .

What do these pretty women suffer when they marry?

They bear a boy who is like Uncle Harry.

ANNA WICKHAM, Meditation at Kew.

8 It is he who has broken the bond of marriage—not I. I only break its bondage.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.

9 The real drawback to marriage is that it makes one unselfish. Unselfish people are colorless.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 6.

10 "No married man but is tempest-tossed,"

XVI—Marriage and Celibacy

12 Certainly, the best works and of greatest merit for the public, have proceeded from the unmarried or childless men.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life.

13 One was never married, and that's his hell;
another is, and that's his plague.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 7.

14 Single gentlemen who would be double.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 48.

15 I would not answer for myself if I could find an affectionate family, with good shooting and first-rate claret.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 30.

16 Space is ample, east and west,
But two cannot go abreast.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Over-Soul.

Though we called your friend from his bed this night, he could not speak for you,
For the race is run by one and one and never by two and two.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tomlinson.

Down to Gehenna or up to the Throne,
He travels the fastest who travels alone.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners.

Who travels alone, without lover or friend,
But hurries from nothing, to nought at the end.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, *Reply to Rudyard
Kipling's Poem*.

Swift and sure go the lonely feet,
And the single eye sees cold and true,
And the road that has room and to spare for one
May be sorely narrow for two.

AMELIA JOSEPHINE BURR, To Lovers.

17 Bachelor's Hall! what a quare-lookin' place it is!

Kape me from sich all the days of my life!

JOHN FINLEY, Bachelor's Hall.

1

A bachelor

May thrive by observation on a little,
A single life's no burthen: but to draw
In yokes is chargeable, and will require
A double maintenance.

JOHN FORD, The Fancies Chaste and Noble.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 82.

2

We bachelors laugh and show our teeth, but you married men laugh till your hearts ache.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3

Nothing is finer or better than a single life.
(Melius nil cælibe vita.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 88.

4

Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, xi, 74.

5

Celibates replace sentiment by habits.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions. Paraphrasing Balzac.

6

Marriage may often be a stormy lake, but celibacy is almost always a muddy horsepond.

T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 7.

7

Let sinful bachelors their woes deplore,
Full well they merit all they feel, and more.

POPE, January and May, l. 29.

8

Thrice-blessed they that master so their
blood,

To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which, withering on the virgin
thorn,

Grows, lives and dies in single blessedness.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 74.

9

Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore
again?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 201.

The world must be peopled. When I said, I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till
I were married.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 251.

10

If you wish the pick of men and women,
take a good bachelor and a good wife.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

It is not for nothing that Don Quixote was a bachelor and Marcus Aurelius married ill.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

11

Celibate, like the fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in a perpetual sweetness, but sits alone, and is confined and dies in singularity.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons: The Marriage Ring.

12

The happy married man dies in good stile at home, surrounded by his weeping wife and children. The old bachelor don't die at all—he sort of rots away, like a pollywog's tail.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Draft in Baldinsville.

13

Nowadays all the married men live like bachelors, and all the bachelors like married men.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

Married men are viler than bachelors.

A. W. PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act ii.

14

I never married, and I wish my father never had. (Μὴ γάμος· αἶθε δὲ μηδ' ὁ πατήρ.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 309.)

I'm Smith of Stoke, aged sixty-odd,

I've lived without a dame

From youth-time on; and would to God

My dad had done the same.

THOMAS HARDY, Epitaph on a Pessimist.

XVII—Marriage: The Ins and the Outs

15

Wedlock, indeed, hath oft compared been
To public feasts, where meet a public rout,
Where they that are without would fain go
in,

And they that are within would fain go out.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Married State. (1612)

Wedlock, as old men note, hath likened been Unto a public crowd or common rout;
Where those that are without would fain get in,
And those that are within would fain get out.
Grief oft treads upon the heels of pleasure,
Marry'd in haste, we oft repent at leisure;
Some by experience find these words misplaced,
Marry'd at leisure, they repent in haste.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

Oh, could he have my share of din,

And I his quiet!—past a doubt

'Twould still be one man bored within,

And just another bored without.

J. R. LOWELL, Without and Within.

16

It happens as with cages: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged, from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and such as are out wish to get in.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

'Tis just like a summer bird cage in a garden;
the birds that are without despair to get in, and the birds that are within despair, and are in a consumption, for fear they shall never get out.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act i, sc. 2.

1 Marriage is like a beleaguered fortress; those who are without want to get in, and those within want to get out. (Le mariage est comme une forteresse assiégée; ceux qui sont dehors veulent y entrer et ceux qui sont dedans en sortir.)

QUITARD, Études sur les Proverbes Français, p. 102.

I'd rather be outside a-looking in than on the inside a-looking out.

TED SNYDER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1906)

2 Marriage is a desperate thing: the frogs in Æsop were extreme wise; they had a great mind to some water, but they would not leap into the well, because they could not get out again.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

3 People who share a cell in the Bastille, or are thrown together on an uninhabited isle, if they do not immediately fall to fisticuffs, will find some possible ground of compromise.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

4 The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

XVIII—Marriage: Second Marriage

5 Women who have been happy in a first marriage, are the most apt to venture upon a second.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act ii, sc. 1.

6 When widows exclaim loudly against second marriages, I would always lay a wager that the man, if not the wedding-day, is absolutely fixed on.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

7 For I'm not so old, and I'm not so plain, And I'm quite prepared to marry again.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

8 He loves his bonds, who, when the first are broke,

Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 42.

9 Alas! another instance of the triumph of hope over experience.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to the second marriage of a friend who had been unfortunate in his first wife. (BOSWELL, Life.)

10 Christ saw a wedding once, the Scripture says,

And saw but one, 'twas thought, in all his days;

Whence some infer, whose conscience is too nice,

No pious Christian ought to marry twice.

POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 9.

11 Disagreeable suspicions are usually the fruits of a second marriage. (Les soupçons importuns Sont d'un second hymen les fruits les plus communs.)

RACINE, Phèdre. Act ii, sc. 5.

12 In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second but who killed the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 189.

The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:
A second time I kill my husband dead
When second husband kisses me in bed.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 192.

13 I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 224.

14 Alas, she married another. They frequently do. I hope she is happy—because I am.

ARTEMUS WARD, Lecture.

15 When a man marries again it is because he adored his first wife.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

MARTYR AND MARTYRDOM

16 A tear is an intellectual thing,
And a sigh is the sword of an Angel King,
And the bitter groan of the martyr's woe
Is an arrow from the Almighty's bow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Grey Monk.

17 Commend me to the king, and tell him he is constant in his course of advancing me; from a private gentlewoman he made me a marquise, and from a marquise a queen; and now, as he had left no higher degree of earthly honour, he hath made me a martyr.

ANNE BOLEYN, on the way to execution. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 9.)

18 The noble army of martyrs.

Book of Common Prayer: Morning Prayer.

19 Plaintive martyrs, worthy of the name.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night.

20 To know how to say what others only know how to think is what makes men poets or sages; and to dare to say what others only dare to think makes men martyrs or reformers—or both.

ELIZABETH RUNDLE CHARLES, Chronicle of the Schönberg-Cotta Family.

- 1 They liv'd unknown
Till persecution dragg'd them into fame,
And chas'd them up to heav'n.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 724.
- 2 I came from martyrdom unto this peace.
(E venni dal martirio a questa pace.)
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xv, l. 148. Used by Longfellow as last line of his sonnet on President Garfield.
- Tortured for the Republic. (Strangulatus pro republica.)
JAMES A. GARFIELD, Last Words. Written as he was dying, 17 July, 1882.
- 3 For all have not the gift of martyrdom.
DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 59.
- 4 The martyr cannot be dishonored.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.
- 5 Pain is superficial and therefore fear is. The torments of martyrdom are probably most keenly felt by the bystanders.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.
- 6 A little bread and wine in a dungeon sufficed for the liturgy of the martyrs.
P. G. HAMERTON, Modern Frenchmen: Henri Perreyre.
- 7 For one the dew, the hare-bell and the song;
For one the mire, the hurry and the thong.
AMORY HARE, Life.
- 8 Who falls for love of God, shall rise a star.
BEN JONSON, An Epistle to a Friend.
- 9 The dungeon oped its hungry door
To give the truth one martyr more.
J. R. LOWELL, On the Death of C. T. Torrey.
- 10 I look on martyrs as mistakes,
But still they burned for it at stakes.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Everlasting Mercy, l. 933.
- 11 Martyrs! who left for our reaping,
Truths you have sown in your blood!
THOMAS MOORE, Where Is Your Dwelling?
- 12 It is the cause, not the death, that makes the martyr.
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)
- 13 Every step of progress the world has made has been from scaffold to scaffold, and from stake to stake.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Woman's Rights.
- 14 Who perisheth in needless danger is the devil's martyr.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- 15 From many a garnished niche around,

Stern saints and tortured martyrs frowned.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi,
st. 29.

16 Of one, whose naked soul stood clad in love,
Like a pale martyr in his shirt of fire.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. ii, l. 225.
Pycroft (Ways and Means of Men of Letters) reports Smith's printer as saying, "We utterly ruined one poet through a ridiculous misprint of 'shirt' for 'sheet,'" but there is no foundation for the story, as the line is not a misprint.

17 And martyrs, when the joyful crown is given,
Forget the pain by which they purchased
heaven.

GEORGE STEPNEY, To King James II.

Martyrs by the pang without the palm.
E. B. BROWNING.

18 The more ye mow us down, the more quickly we grow; the blood of Christians is fresh seed. (Plures efficitur quoties metimur a vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 50. Generally quoted, "The blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church."

The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians.
(Sanguis martyrum semen Christianorum.)

BEYERLINCK, Magnum Theatrum Vitæ Humanorum. (1665)

The seed of the Church, I mean the blood of primitive Martyrs.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History of Britain.
Pt. iv, bk. 1. (1665)

19 It is martyrs who create faith rather than faith that creates martyrs.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 103.

There have been quite as many martyrs for bad causes as for good ones.

H. W. VAN LOON, America.

20 I am very fond of truth, but not at all of martyrdom.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to D'Alembert, Feb., 1776.

21 These Christs that die upon the barricades, God knows it I am with them, in some things.

OSCAR WILDE, Sonnet to Liberty.

MAY

<sup>9</sup> Hebe's here, May is here!
The air is fresh and sunny;
And the miser-bees are busy
Hoarding golden honey.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, May.

<sup>10</sup> As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Address to the Nightingale. This song, often attributed to Shakespeare, is now assigned to Barnfield. It is found in his collection of Poems in Divers Humours, published in 1598.

<sup>11</sup> Here's to the day when it is May
And care as light as a feather,
When your little shoes and my big boots
Go tramping over the heather.
BLISS CARMAN, A Toast.

The season pricketh every gentle heart.
CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 184.

May, that mother is of monthes glad.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 50.

<sup>14</sup> For this is May! who with a daisy chain
Leads on the laughing Hours. . . .
And the glad earth, caressed by murmuring
showers,
Wakes like a bride, to deck herself with
flowers.

HENRY SYLVESTER CORNWELL, May.

<sup>15</sup> Use May, while that you may,
For May hath but his time;
When all the fruit is gone, it is Too late the tree to climb.
RICHARD EDWARDS, May.

<sup>16</sup> What potent blood hath modest May!
EMERSON, May-Day.

<sup>17</sup> Welcome May with his flowers.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 55. (1620)

'Twas as welcome to me as flowers in May.
JAMES HOWELL, Letters, i, 6. (1645)

<sup>18</sup> There was no month but May.
GEORGE HERBERT, Affliction.

<sup>19</sup> May, queen of blossoms,
And fulfilling flowers,
With what pretty music
Shall we charm the hours?
Wilt thou have pipe and reed,
Blown in the open mead?
Or to the lute give heed
In the green bowers?
EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, May.

<sup>20</sup> The voice of one who goes before, to make

The paths of June more beautiful, is thine
Sweet May!

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, May.

<sup>1</sup>Worship, ye that lovers be, this May!
For of your bliss the calends are begun;
And sing with us, "Away! winter, away!
Come, summer, come, the sweet season and sun!"

JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, The King's Quair. St. 15.

<sup>2</sup>Oh! that we two were Maying
Down the stream of the soft spring breeze;
Like children with violets playing,
In the shade of the whispering trees.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
ii, sc. 9.

<sup>3</sup>All flowers of Spring are not May's own;
The crocus cannot often kiss her;
The snow-drop, ere she comes, has flown—
The earliest violets always miss her.

LUCY LARCOM, The Sister Months.

<sup>4</sup>May is a pious fraud of the almanac.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Willows.

<sup>5</sup>And May was come, the month of gladness.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. i, l. 1293.

It might be the merry month of May.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, K. 4.

<sup>6</sup>Ah! my heart is weary waiting,
Waiting for the May:

Waiting for the pleasant rambles
Where the fragrant hawthorn brambles,
With the woodbine alternating,
Scent the dewy way;
Ah! my heart is weary, waiting,
Waiting for the May.

D. F. MCCARTHY, Summer Longings.

<sup>7</sup>The hawthorne-scented dusks of May.

DON MARQUIS, An Open Fire.

<sup>8</sup>Now the bright morning star, day's harbinger,

Comes dancing from the East, and leads with her

The flow'ry May, who from her green lap throws

The yellow cowslip, and the pale primrose.
Hail, bounteous May, that dost inspire
Mirth, and youth, and warm desire!

Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing.
Thus we salute thee with our early song,
And welcome thee, and wish thee long.

MILTON, Song: On May Morning.

As Jupiter

On Juno smiles, when he impregns the clouds
That shed May flowers.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 499.

<sup>9</sup>In the under-wood and the over-wood
There is murmur and trill this day,
For every bird is in lyric mood,
And the wind will have its way.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, May Magic.

<sup>10</sup>January grey is here,
Like a sexton by her grave;

February bears the bier;
March with grief doth howl and rave,
And April weeps—but, O, ye hours,
Follow with May's fairest flowers.

SHELLEY, Dirge for the Year.

<sup>11</sup>Another May new buds and flowers shall bring:

Ah! why has happiness no second Spring?

CHARLOTTE SMITH, Elegiac Sonnets. No. ii.

<sup>12</sup>When May, with cowslip-braided locks,
Walks through the land in green attire.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Lost May.

<sup>13</sup>God ripens the wines and corn, I say,
And wench for the marriage-day,
And boys to teach love's comely play.

By Goddes fay, by Goddes fay!

It is the month, the jolly month,
It is the jolly month of May.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A May Burden.

Thy brow-garland pushed all aslant
Tells—but I tell not, wanton May!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A May Burden.

<sup>14</sup>Among the changing months, May stands confest

The sweetest, and in fairest colours drest.

JAMES THOMSON, The Month of May.

<sup>15</sup>What is so sweet and dear
As a prosperous morn in May,

The confident prime of the day,
And the dauntless youth of the year,
When nothing that asks for bliss,
Asking aright, is denied,
And half of the world a bridegroom is
And half of the world a bride?

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode in May.

<sup>16</sup>He has a very hard heart who does not love in May. (Moult a dur cuer qui en Mai n'aime.)

UNKNOWN, Roman de la Rose.

O month when they who love must love and wed.

II—May-Day

1 Come, let us go, while we are in our prime,
And take the harmless folly of the time. . . .
Then while time serves, and we are but decaying,

Come, my Corinna, come, let's go a Maying.
ROBERT HERRICK, Corinna's Going a Maying.
Each flower has wept, and bowed toward the east,

Above an hour since: yet you not drest; . . .
Whenas a thousand virgins on this day,
Spring, sooner than the lark, to fetch in May.

ROBERT HERRICK, Corinna's Going a Maying.

2 To do observance to a morn of May.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 167.

No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 136.

More matter for a May morning.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l.
156.

3 You must wake and call me early, call me
early, mother dear;

To-morrow 'ill be the happiest time of all the glad New-year;

Of all the glad New-year, mother, the mad-
dest merriest day;

For I'm to be Queen o' the May, mother,
I'm to be Queen o' the May.

TENNYSON, The May Queen.

MEDDLER

4 He that is too much in anything, so that he giveth another occasion of satiety, maketh himself cheap.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.

5 Thus everybody meddled with what they had nothing to do.

APHERA BEHN, The Fair Jilt.

6 We had among us, not so much a spy,
As a recording chief-inquisitor,
The town's true master, if the town but knew!

We merely kept a governor for form.

ROBERT BROWNING, How It Strikes a Contemporary.

7 I never thrust my nose into other men's porridge. It is no bread and butter of mine.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 11.

He has an oar in every man's boat, and a finger in every pie.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22.

No man's pie is freed

From his ambitious finger.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 52.

You will have a finger in everybody's pie.

SOUTHERNE, Fatal Marriage. Act i, sc. 3.

Their law thrusteth its nose into every platter,
and its finger into every pie.

10 Whoso meddles of what men do,
Let him come here and shoe the goose.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Cited as an inscription in Whalley Church, c. 1434.

Who meddleth in all things may shoe the gosling.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

11 'Tis said that people ought to guard their noses

Who thrust them into matters none of theirs.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 67.

12 Every fool will be meddling.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 3.

13 Be no busybodies: meddle not with other folks' matter but when in conscience and duty prest; for it procures troubles and ill-manners, and is very unseemly to wise men.

WILLIAM PENN, Letters to His Wife and Children.

14 Never thrust your own sickle into another's
corn.

I—Medicine: Definitions

17 Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced: the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>1</sup> Surely every medicine is an innovation; and he that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils.

BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

<sup>2</sup> Then comes the question, how do drugs, hygiene and animal magnetism heal? It may be affirmed that they do not heal, but only relieve suffering temporarily, exchanging one disease for another.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 483.

<sup>3</sup> Dr. Bigelow's formula was, that fevers are self-limiting; afterwards that all disease is so; therefore no use in treatment. Dr. Holmes said, No use in drugs. Dr. Samuel Jackson said, Rest, absolute rest, is the panacea.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

Our foster nurse of nature is repose.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 12.

<sup>4</sup> By opposites opposites are cured. (Τὰ ἐναντία τῶν ἐναντίων ἐστὶν ἴψατα.)

HIPPOCRATES, De Flatibus. Vol. i, p. 570.

In diseases, less [of everything]. (In morbis minus.)

HIPPOCRATES. Quoted by Bacon as "a good, profound aphorism."

Like cures like. (Similia similibus curantur.)

HAHNEMANN, Motto, for the homœopathic school of medicine which he founded, and which he attributed to Hippocrates, quoting: "By similar things disease is produced, and by similar things administered to the sick, they are healed of their diseases," a sentence derived from Περὶ τῶν κατ' ἀνθρώπου, attributed to Hippocrates.

Take a little rum

The less you take the better,

Pour it in the lakes

Of Wener or of Wetter.

Dip a spoonful out

And mind you don't get groggy,

Pour it in the lake

Of Winnipissigie.

Stir the mixture well

Lest it prove inferior,

Then put half a drop

Into Lake Superior.

Every other day

Take a drop in water,

You'll be better soon

Or at least you oughter.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, Lines on Homœopathy.

O. W. HOLMES, Lecture, Harvard Medical School.

<sup>6</sup> In physic things of melancholic hue and quality are used against melancholy, sour against sour, salt to remove salt humours.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes: Preface.

<sup>7</sup> Medicine is a collection of uncertain prescriptions, the results of which, taken collectively, are more fatal than useful to mankind. Water, air, and cleanliness are the chief articles in my pharmacopœia.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Dr. Antonomarchi at St. Helena.

<sup>8</sup> Oft has a bitter medicine brought help to the languishing. (Sæpe tulit lassus sucus amarus opem.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 8.

We cannot endure sweets; a bitter potion strengthens us. (Dulcia non ferimus: suco renovemur amaro.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 583.

For 'tis a physic That's bitter to sweet end.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 7.

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 131.

Medicine sometimes injures, sometimes restores health; showing which plant is healthful and which harmful. (Eripit interdum, modo dat medicina salutem, Quæque juvet, monstrat, quæque sit herba nocens.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 269.

There is no medicine to remove the knotty gout, or relieve the fearful dropsy. (Tollere nodosam nescit medicina podagram, Nec formaditis auxiliatur aquis.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 23.

<sup>10</sup> Nothing hinders a cure so much as frequent change of medicine. (Nihil æque sanitatem impedit quam remediorum creora mutatio.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 3.

Remedies do not avail unless they remain in the system. (Remedia non prosunt, nisi immorantur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xl, sec. 4.

Not even medicines can master incurable diseases. (Ne medicina quidem morbos insanabiles vincit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 24.

<sup>11</sup> From the nature of human frailty, remedies operate more slowly than disease, and the body itself is slow to grow and quick to decay. (Natura tamen infirmitatis humanæ tar-diora sunt remedia quam mala; et ut corpora nostra lente augescunt, cito extinguuntur.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3.

II—Medicine: Apothegms

1 Dogs with their tongues their wounds do heal,

But men with hands, as thou shalt feel.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 773.

2 Because all the sick do not recover does not prove that there is no art of medicine. (Ne ægri quidem quia non omnes convalescunt idcirco ars nulla medicina est.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 4, 12.

3 When taken To be well shaken.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Newcastle Apothecary.

4 Though I have patches on me pantaloons, I've ne'er a wan on me intestines.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

5 For of the most High cometh healing.

Aprocrhya: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 2.

God who sends the wound sends the medicine. (Dios que dá la llaga, dá la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19.

A salve there is for every sore.

UNKNOWN, School-House of Women, l. 401. (1542) See also GOD: HIS MERCY.

6 Many dishes, many diseases. Many medicines, few cures.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

7 Different sores must have different salves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1283.

For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 254.

Is this the poultice for my aching bones?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 66.

You rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 138.

8 Some fell by laudanum, and some by steel,
And death in ambush lay in every pill.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iv, l. 62.

9 Strange and rare escapes there happen sometimes in physic. (Monstra contingunt in medicina.)

HIPPOCRATES, Adagia.

Many men have been cured of diseases by accidents; but they were not remedies.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Beneficia.

10 The worst about medicine is that one kind makes another necessary.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine, Vol. xxvii, p. 61.

11 It is the sick who need medicine and not the well.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 103.

12 My lord Jupiter knows how to gild the pill. (Le seigneur Jupiter sait dorer la pilule.)

MOLIÈRE, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 10, l. 24.

If the pills were pleasant, they would not want gilding.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2711.

A pill that the present moment is daily bread to thousands.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Catpaw. Act i, sc. 1.

When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 149.

13 The same medicine will both harm and cure me. (Res eadem vulnus opemque feret.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 20.

14 Too late is the medicine prepared, when the disease has gained strength by long delay. (Sero medicina paratur, Cum mala per longas convaluere moras.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 91.

For want of timely care,
Millions have died of medicable wounds.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, The Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iii, l. 519.

15 Meet the malady on its way. (Veniente occurrere morbo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 64.

Prevention is so much better than healing.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 598. (1630)

Prevention is better than cure.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 51.

'Twas a dangerous cliff, as they freely confessed,
Though to walk near its crest was so pleasant,
But over its terrible edge there had slipped

A Duke and full many a peasant;

So the people said something would have to be done,

But their projects did not at all tally.

Some said: "Put a fence round the edge of the cliff."

Some: "An ambulance down in the valley."

JOSEPH MALINES, Prevention and Cure. (Virginia Health Bulletin.)

16 If physic do not work, prepare for the kirk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 189. (1678)

17 It is medicine, not scenery, for which a sick man must go a-searching. (Medicina ægro, non regio, quaerenda est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, 18.

18 It is part of the cure to wish to be cured. (Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 249.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,

Which we ascribe to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 231.

1 Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 47.

Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 264.

Trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays

More than you rob.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 434.

2 Will toys amuse, when med'cines cannot cure?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 67.

III—Medicine: Worse Than the Disease

3 I find the medicine worse than the malady.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 2.

4 The cure is not worth the pain. (Τὸ ἐνανόρθωμα τῆς ἀλγυδόνος οὐκ ἄξιον.)

GAIUS MARIUS, after having had a varicose vein cut from his leg. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Gaius Marius. Ch. 6, sec. 3.)

The cure is worse than the disease.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 1.

5 There are some remedies worse than the disease. (Graviora quædam sunt remedia periculis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 301.

The remedy is worse than the disease.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions; JUVENAL, Satires, xvi, 31; LE SAGE, Gil Blas, bk. xii, ch. 8, and many others.

6 His remedies were more grievous than the offence. (Gravior remediis quam delicta erant.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 28.

7 The medicine increases the disease. (Ægrescitque medendo.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 46.

IV—Medicine: Desperate Remedies

8 No remedies cause so much pain as those which are efficacious. (Nulla remedia tam faciunt dolorem quam quæ sunt salutaria.)

BACON, Letter to Lord Henry Howard. Quoted.

9 'Tis not amiss, ere ye're giv'n o'er,

To try one desp'rate med'cine more;

For where your case can be no worse,

The desp'rat'st is the wisest course.

BUTLER, Epistle of Hudibras to Sidrophel, l. 5.

And ill it therefore suits

The mood of one of my high temperature

To pause inactive while await me means

Of desperate cure for these so desperate ills.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Act iv, sc. 3

10 Extreme remedies are very appropriate for extreme diseases.

HIPPOCRATES, Adagia.

11 When desperate ills demand a speedy cure, Distrust is cowardice, and prudence folly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

12 For the strongest maladies the strongest remedies. (Aux plus fortes maladies les plus forts remèdes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

13 No one tries desperate remedies at first. (Extrema primo nemo tentavit loco.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 153.

14 Diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are relieved,

Or not at all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 9. (1602)

A desperate disease must have a desperate cure.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Humourists, iv. (1670)

Strong disease requires a strong medicine.

TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. iv. (1539)

V—Medicine: Herbs as Medicine

15 The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth; and he that is wise will not abhor them.

Aprocrpypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 4.

16 And in requital ope his leathern scrip,
And show me simples of a thousand names,
Telling their strange and vigorous faculties.

MILTON, Comus, l. 626.

17 No cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 144.

In such a night
Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

18 O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 15.

19 He preferred to know the power of herbs and their value for curing purposes, and, heedless of glory, to exercise that quiet art. (Scire potestates herbarum usumque medendi Maluit et mutas agitare inglorius artis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 396.

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 174.

1 Why should a man die who has sage in his garden? (Cur moriatur homo, cui salvia crescit in horto?)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum, l. 177.

Of all the garden herbs none is of greater virtue than sage.

THOMAS COGAN, Heaven of Health. (1596)

MEDIOCRITY

2 Mediocrity is safest. (In medio spatio mediocria firma locantur.)

NICHOLAS BACON. Quoted by Chief-Justice Sir John Popham in sentencing Raleigh.

3 Commonplace and cringing, one gets everywhere. (Médiocre et rampant, et l'on arrive à tout.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act iii, sc. 7.

4 This miserable fate
Suffer the wretched souls of those who lived
Without or praise or blame.

(Questo misero modo

Tengon l'anime triste di coloro,
Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 34. (Cary, tr.)
They are being goaded along by swarms of wasps and hornets.

5 The secret of ugliness consists not in irregularity, but in being uninteresting.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

6 Oh, mediocrity,
Thou priceless jewel, only mean men have,
But cannot value.

JOHN FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iii, sc. 1.

7 The universal subjugator, the commonplace.
(Was uns alle bändigt, das Gemeine.)

GOETHE, Taschenbuch für Damen auf das Jahr 1806.

8 Not below mediocrity, nor above it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Phillips.

9 Mediocre minds generally condemn everything which passes their understanding. (Les esprits médiocres condamnent d'ordinaire tout ce qui passe leur portée.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 375.

To mediocrity genius is unforgivable.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

10 Mediocrity is praised in all cases. (Médiocrité est en tous cas louée.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

Wish then for mediocrity. (Souhaitez donc médiocrité.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, Prologue.

11 Who shines in the second rank will be eclipsed in the first. (Qui brille au second rang s'éclipse au premier.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Canto i, l. 31.

Who, like the hindmost chariot wheels, art curst,
Still to be near, but ne'er to reach the first.

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 98. (Dryden, tr.)

MEDITATION, see Thought

MEEKNESS

See also Moses

12 Keep quiet by the fire
And never say "no" when the world says
"ay."

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 436.

13 And of his port as meek as is a maid.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 69.

14 Wisdom has taught us to be calm and meek,
To take one blow, and turn the other cheek.

O. W. HOLMES, Non-Resistance.

15 Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 5.

It's goin' t' be fun t' watch an' see how long th' meek kin keep the earth after they inherit it.

KIN HUBBARD, Sayings.

16 Ornament of a meek and quiet spirit.

New Testament: I Peter, iii, 4.

17 Meekness is not weakness.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

18 They can be meek that have no other cause.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

Put meekness in thy mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 107.

MEETING

19 If e'er we meet hereafter, we shall meet
In happier climes, and on a safer shore.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

20 We met—'twas in a crowd—and I thought he would shun me.

T. H. BAYLY, Song: We Met.

21 We loved, sir—used to meet:
How sad and bad and mad it was—
But then, how it was sweet!

ROBERT BROWNING, Confessions. St. 9.

22 It lightens, it brightens
The tenebrific scene,

To meet with, and greet with
My Davie or my Jean!

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Davie.

1 For alday meeteth man at unset stevene
(i. e., unexpectedly).

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 666.

It is sooth said, by God of heaven,
Many meeteth at on-sett stevyn.

UNKNOWN, Sir Eglamour of Artoys, l. 1282.

2 Between cultivated minds the first interview is the best.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 496.

3 By the merest chance, in the twilight gloom,
In the orchard path he met me.

HOMER GREENE, What My Lover Said. Erroneously attributed to Horace Greeley, because, when the poem was first printed in the New York Evening Post, it was signed "H. G." Fraudulently claimed by Mrs. O. C. Jones. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

4 The joy of meeting not unmixed with pain.
LONGFELLOW, Moriuri Salutamus, l. 113.

5 In whatever place you meet me, Postumus, you cry out immediately, and your first words are, "How do you do?" You say this, even if you meet me ten times in one single hour:
you, Postumus, have nothing, I suppose, to
do.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, ep. 67.

6 In life there are meetings which seem Like a fate.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto iii, sec. 8.

7 And we meet, with champagne and a chicken, at last.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Lover. Quoted
by Scott, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 7.

8 Some day, some day of days, threading the street

With idle, heedless pace,
Unlooking for such grace,
I shall behold your face!

Some day, some day of days, thus may we meet.

NORA PERRY, Some Day of Days.

9 The joys of meeting pay the pangs of absence;

Else who could bear it?

NICHOLAS ROWE, Tamerlane. Act ii, sc. 1.

And doth not a meeting like this make amends
For all the long years I've been wand'ring away?

THOMAS MOORE, And Doth Not a Meeting?

10 The meeting of these champions proud
Seemed like the bursting thunder-cloud.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto iii,
st. 5.

11 1st Witch: When shall we three meet again,

In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2nd Witch: When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

I pray you know me when we meet again.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 419.

12 Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 44.

When gloaming treads the heels of day
And birds sit cowering in the spray,
Along the flowery hedge I stray,

To meet mine ain dear somebody.

ROBERT TANNAHILL, Love's Fear.

Like torrents from a mountain source
We rush'd into each other's arms.

TENNYSON, The Letters. St. 5.

13 Although I enter not,
Yet round about the spot
Ofttimes I hover,

And at the sacred gate
With longing eyes I wait,

Expectant of her.

THACKERAY, At the Church Gate. (Pendennis.
Ch. 31.)

14 Meet me by moonlight alone,
And then I will tell you a tale

Must be told by the moonlight alone,
In the grove at the end of the vale!

J. AUGUSTINE WADE, Meet Me by Moonlight.

II—Meeting and Parting

15 Like a plank of driftwood
Tossed on the watery main,

Another plank encountered,
Meets, touches, parts again;

So tossed, and drifting ever,
On life's unresting sea,

Men meet, and greet, and sever,
Parting eternally.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Book of Good Counsel. A free translation from the Sanskrit of the Hitopadêsa. See Fortnightly Review, July, 1893, for literal translation by Max Müller.

As two floating planks meet and part on the sea,
O friend! so I met and then drifted from thee.

WILLIAM R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: The Brief Chance Encounter.

16 Like driftwood spars which meet and pass
Upon the boundless ocean-plain,
So on the sea of life, alas!

Man nears man, meets, and leaves again.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Terrace at Berne, l. 45.

Two lives that once part, are as ships that divide
When, moment on moment, there rushes between

The one and the other, a sea;—

Ah, never can fall from the days that have been
A gleam on the years that shall be!

BULWER-LYTTON, A Lament, l. 10.

<sup>1</sup> Why meet we on the bridge of Time to 'change one greeting and to part?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st. 11.

Weep not, she says, at Nature's transient pain,
Congenial spirits part to meet again!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 405.

We only part to meet again.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

<sup>2</sup> As vessels starting from ports thousands of miles apart pass close to each other in the naked breadth of the ocean, nay, sometimes even touch in the dark.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3.

Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,

Only a signal shown and a distant voice in the darkness;

So on the ocean of life, we pass and speak one
another,

Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and a silence.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth. Pt. iv. The first phrase was used by Beatrice Harradan as the title of a novel.

We twain have met like the ships upon the sea,
Who hold an hour's converse, so short, so sweet;
One little hour! and then, away they speed
On lonely paths, through mist, and cloud, and foam,

To meet no more.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 4.

Alas, by what rude fate
Our lives, like ships at sea, an instant meet,
Then part forever on their courses fleet!

E. C. STEDMAN, The Blameless Prince. St. 51.

<sup>3</sup> Sing, minstrel, sing us now a tender song
Of meeting and parting, with the moon in it.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> Our parting was all sob and sigh,
Our meeting was all mirth and laughter.

W. M. PRAED, The Belle of the Ball.

<sup>5</sup> Say good-bye er howdy-do—
What's the odds betwixt the two?

Comin'—goin'—every day—
Best friends first to go away—
Grasp of hands you'd rather hold
Than their weight in solid gold,
Slips their grip while greetin' you,—
Say good-bye er howdy-do?

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Good-Bye er Howdy-Do.

<sup>6</sup> Their meetings made December June.
Their every parting was to die.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xcvi.

<sup>7</sup> We live to love; we meet to part;

And part to meet on earth no more.

BRYON FORCEYTHE WILLSON, No More.

MELANCHOLY

See also Sorrow

<sup>8</sup> Melancholy is a kind of demon that haunts our island, and often conveys herself to us
in an easterly wind.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 387. See also DICKENS, under WIND: APOTHEGMS.

ARISTOTLE. (Quoted by Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 3.)

<sup>10</sup> It is the heaviest stone that melancholy can throw at a man, to tell him he is at the end of his nature; or that there is no further state to come.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 4.

<sup>11</sup> He hated nought but—to be sad.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

<sup>12</sup> There is no greater cause of melancholy than idleness; "no better cure than business," as Rhasis holds.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

Employment, sir, and hardships, prevent melancholy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1777.)

<sup>13</sup> If there be a hell upon earth it is to be found in a melancholy man's heart.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 4, mem. 1, subs. 2.

That feral melancholy which crucifies the soul.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2.

<sup>14</sup> As melancholy as an unbraced drum.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, Wonder. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Melancholy was made, not for beasts, but for men; but if men give way to it overmuch they turn to beasts.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 11.

<sup>16</sup> With eyes up-rais'd, as one inspir'd,
Pale Melancholy sate retir'd;
And, from her wild, sequester'd seat,
In notes by distance made more sweet,
Pour'd thro' the mellow horn her pensive soul.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 57.

<sup>17</sup> There is a kindly mood of melancholy
That wings the soul, and points her to the skies.

JOHN DYER, The Ruins of Rome, l. 346.

<sup>18</sup> There's naught in this life sweet,
If man were wise to see 't,
But only melancholy;

O sweetest Melancholy!

JOHN FLETCHER, The Nice Valour. Act iii, sc. 3.
(c. 1620) Written probably in conjunction with Thomas Middleton. This song has also been attributed to Dr. William Strode, and appears in his play The Floating Island.
(1636)

All my joys to this are folly,
Naught so sweet as melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
The Author's Abstract.

All my griefs to this are jolly,
Naught so damn'd as melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
The Author's Abstract.

1 Tell us, pray, what devil
This melancholy is, which can transform
Men into monsters.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 107.

Melancholy
Is not, as you conceive, indisposition
Of body, but the mind's disease.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 111.

2 Here rests his head upon the lap of Earth,
A Youth, to Fortune and to Fame unknown.
Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
And Melancholy mark'd him for her own.
THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard: The Epitaph.

3 All things are touch'd with Melancholy,
Born of the secret soul's mistrust.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 109.

There's not a string attun'd to mirth
But has its chord in Melancholy.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 121.

4 Melancholy is the pleasure of being sad.

VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. iii, bk. i,
ch. 1.

Go! you may call it madness, folly;
You shall not chase my gloom away!
There's such a charm in melancholy
I would not if I could be gay.

SAMUEL ROGERS, To —.

And yet I cannot tell thee why,
I'm pleased and yet I'm sad.

H. K. WHITE, I'm Pleased and Yet I'm Sad.

5 Sit melancholy and pick your teeth when you cannot speak.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.
Act i, sc. 2.

6 She dwells with Beauty—Beauty that must
die;

And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips
Bidding adieu; and aching Pleasure nigh,
Turning to Poison while the bee-mouth
sips:

Aye, in the very temple of Delight

Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine,
Though seen of none save him whose strenuous tongue

Can burst Joy's grape against his palate fine;

His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,
And be among her cloudy trophies hung.

KEATS, Ode on Melancholy. St. 3.

7 It is a kind of happiness to know just how unhappy one should be. (C'est une espèce de bonheur de connaître jusqu'à quel point on doit être malheureux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 570.

8 A feeling of sadness and longing
That is not akin to pain,

And resembles sorrow only

As the mist resembles the rain.

LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done. St. 3.

9 But hail, thou Goddess, sage and holy,
Hail, divinest Melancholy,
Whose Saintly visage is too bright
To hit the Sense of human sight.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 11.

These pleasures, Melancholy, give;
And I with thee will choose to live.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 175.

10 Hence, loathed Melancholy,
Of Cerberus, and blackest midnight born,
In Stygian cave forlorn,
'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks and sights unholy!

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 1.

Moping melancholy, And moon-struck madness.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 485.

11 Oh! when a cheek is to be dried,
All pharmacy is folly; . . .
There's nothing like a rattling ride
For curing melancholy!

W. M. PRAED, The Troubadour.

12 He has a cloud in 's face.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 51.

Love, I am full of lead.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 11, l. 72.

13 I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 13.

I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice;
nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 10.

1

O melancholy!

Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare

Might easiliest harbour in?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 203.

2

There's something in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 174.

3

I am as melancholy as a gib cat.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 83.

As melancholy as a sick monkey.

MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy. Ch. 21.

As melancholy as a sick parrot.

APHERA BEHN, False Count. Act i, sc. 2.

4

Methinks no body should be sad but I.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 13.

My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 147.

And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 6.

5

Turn melancholy forth to funerals.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 14.

6

He is of a very melancholy disposition.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 6.

The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 53.

Melancholy is the nurse of frenzy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 135.

Like a melancholy malcontent.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 313.

Musing full sadly in his sullen mind.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ix, st. 35.

7

'Tis impious in a good man to be sad.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 675.

I—Memory: Definitions

8

Memory is the treasury and guardian of all things. (Memoria est thesaurus omnium rerum e custos.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. i, sec. 5.

9

The memory strengthens as you lay burdens upon it, and becomes trustworthy as you trust it.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium-Eater. Pt. i.

10

Some call her Memory,
And some Tradition; and her voice is sweet,
With deep mysterious accords.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. ii.

11

Memory [is] like a purse,—if it be overfull that it cannot shut, all will drop out of it. Take heed of a gluttonous curiosity to feed on many things, lest the greediness of the appetite of thy memory spoil the digestion thereof.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Of Memory.

12

Imagination and memory are but one thing which for divers considerations hath divers names.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 2.

13

The true art of memory is the art of attention.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 74.

Method is the mother of memory.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England, p. 166.

14

Memory, of all the powers of the mind, is the most delicate and frail.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Memoria.

15

Memory is to us the hearing of deaf actions, and the seeing of blind.

PLUTARCH, Morals: On the Cessation of Oracles. Sec. 39.

Memory: what wonders it performs in preserving and storing up things gone by, or rather, things that are!

PLUTARCH, Morals: On the Cessation of Oracles. Sec. 39.

16

Hail, Memory, hail! in thy exhaustless mine
From age to age unnumber'd treasures shine!
Thought and her shadowy brood thy call obey,

And Place and Time are subjects to thy sway!

ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. ii, l. 430.

17

Memory, the warder of the brain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 65.

Storehouse of the mind, garner of facts and fancies.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Memory.

Memory called the treasure of the mind.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique. (1560)

1 A man's real possession is his memory. In nothing else is he rich, in nothing else is he poor.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Death and Dying.

II—Memory: Apothegms

2 Memory, no less than hope, owes its charm to "the far away."

BULWER-LYTTON, A Lament. See also under DISTANCE.

3 Memory, in widow's weeds, with naked feet stands on a tombstone.

AUBREY DE VERE, Widowhood.

4 A man of great memory without learning hath a rock and a spindle and no staff to spin.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 Better a little well kept, than a great deal forgotten.

BISHOP HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon Preached Before King Edward.

6 Memory and Oblivion, all hail! Memory for goodness, Oblivion for evil.

MACEDONTUS THE CONSUL. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 67.)

7 Experience teaches that a good memory is generally joined to a weak judgment.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9.

A great memory does not make a philosopher, any more than a dictionary can be called a grammar.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Knowledge in Relation to Culture.

8 Many a man fails to become a thinker for the sole reason that his memory is too good.

NIETZSCHE, Maxims.

9 The jar will long retain the fragrance with which it was steeped when new. (Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem Testa diu.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 69.

Long, long be my heart with such memories fill'd!

Like the vase in which roses have once been distill'd:

You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will,

But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

THOMAS MOORE, Farewell! But Whenever.

Rose-leaves, when the rose is dead,
Are heaped for the beloved's bed;
And so thy thoughts, when thou art gone,
Love itself shall slumber on.

SHELLEY, To —: Music When Soft Voices.

10 Everyone complains of his lack of memory, but nobody of his want of judgment. (Tout le monde se plaint de sa mémoire, et personne ne se plaint de son jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 89.

11 Remarkable memory, yours! (Memor es probe!)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 343. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

12 If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 6.

13 Though yet of Hamlet . . . The memory be green.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 2.

Lord, keep my Memory Green.

DICKENS, The Haunted Man. Ch. 3.

And the tear that we shed, though in secret it rolls,

Shall long keep his memory green in our souls.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name.

14 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 85.

15 Purpose is but the slave to memory.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 197.

16 Illiterate him, I say, quite from your memory.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2.

17 Left behind as a memory for us. (Nobis meminisse relictum.)

STATIUS, Silvæ. Bk. ii, l. 55.

Nothing now is left But a majestic memory.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine, l. 10.

III—Memory: Its Sweetness

18 The safe relation of past trouble possesses its delight. (Habet enim præteriti doloris securæ recordatio delectionem.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Familiares. Bk. v, sec. 12.

How sweet to remember the trouble that is past.

EURIPIDES. (PLUTARCH, Morals.)

That which is bitter to endure may be sweet to remember.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4385.

Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.

ROBERT POLLOK, Course of Time. Bk. i, l. 464.

Things that were hard to bear are sweet to remember. (Quæ fuit durum pati, Meminisse dulce est.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 656.

Perchance some day the memory of this sorrow Will even bring delight.

(Forsan et hæc olim meminisse juvabit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 203.

19 What peaceful hours I once enjoy'd!
How sweet their mem'ry still!

WILLIAM COWPER, Walking with God.

When Time, who steals our years away
Shall steal our pleasures, too,
The mem'ry of the past will stay,
And half our joys renew.
THOMAS MOORE, Song.

Oft, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.
THOMAS MOORE, The Light of Other Days.

The light of other days is faded,
And all their glories past.
ALFRED BUNN, The Bohemian Girl: Song.

1 Oh! the good times when we were so unhappy. (Oh le bon temps où étions si malheureux.)
DUMAS, Le Chevalier d'Harmental. Bk. ii, p.
318.

Oh! that was the good time; I was very unhappy.
(Oh! c'était le bon temps; j'étais bien malheureuse.)

SOPHIE ARNOULD, Remark, to Rulhière.

One day, a famous actress was telling me of the rages of her first lover, and, half-dreaming, halflaughing, she added this charming word: Oh, that was the good time—I was very unhappy.
(Un jour, une actrice fameuse

Me contaït les fureurs de son premier amant;
Moitié rêvant, moitié rieuse,
Elle ajouta ce mot charmant:
Oh! c'était le bon temps, j'étais bien malheu-
reuse.)

CLAUDE RULHIÈRE, Épître à Monsieur de Cha—.

2 So may it be: that so dead Yesterday,
No sad-eyed ghost but generous and gay,
May serve you memories like almighty wine,
When you are old!
W. E. HENLEY, When You Are Old.

3 This memory brightens o'er the past,
As when the sun, concealed
Behind some cloud that near us hangs,
Shines on a distant field.
LONGFELLOW, A Gleam of Sunshine. St. 14.

4 Only stay quiet while my mind remembers
The beauty of fire from the beauty of embers.
JOHN MASEFIELD, On Growing Old.

5 A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory.
MILTON, Comus, l. 205.

6 And memories vague of half-forgotten things,
Not true nor false, but sweet to think upon.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: March, l. 63.

7 Then, when the world is born again
And the sweet year before thee lies,

Shall thy heart think of coming pain,
Or vex itself with memories?
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. xiv, l. 213.

8 For it is a pleasure, too, to remember. (Nam-que est meminisse voluptas.)
OVID, Heroides. Epis. xviii, l. 55.

9 Sweet Memory, wafted by thy gentle gale
Oft up the stream of Time I turn my sail.
ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. ii, l. 1.

Lull'd in the countless chambers of the brain,
Our thoughts are link'd by many a hidden chain.
ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 171.

10 Thou fill'st from the winged chalice of the soul
Thy lamp, O Memory, fire-winged to its goal.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Mnemosyne.

11 O Memory! thou soul of joy and pain!
RICHARD SAVAGE, The Bastard, l. 57.

12 Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 19.

13 Mankind are always happier for having been happy; so that, if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence by the memory of it.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy: Lecture 22, On Benevolent Affections.

14 A land of promise, a land of memory,
A land of promise flowing with the milk
And honey of delicious memories!
TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 326.

15 Out of the cradle endlessly rocking,
Out of the mocking-bird's throat, the musical shuttle, . . .

A reminiscence sing.
WALT WHITMAN, Out of the Cradle.

16 And, when the stream
Which overflowed the soul was passed away,
A consciousness remained that it had left,
Deposited upon the silent shore
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 25.

If there be a joy that slights the claim
Of grateful memory, let that joy depart!
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 5.

17 For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;

And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

WORDSWORTH, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud.
Wordsworth stated that this stanza was suggested by his wife.

The thought of our past years in me doth breed
Perpetual benediction.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 9.

Where'er I go,
Thy genuine image, Yarrow!
Will dwell with me,—to heighten joy,
And cheer my mind in sorrow.
WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Visited, l. 85.

IV—Memory: Its Bitterness

1
For of fortune's sharp adversity
The worst kind of infortune is this,
A man to have been in prosperity,
And it remember, when it passed is.

CHAUCE, Troilus and Criseyde, l. 1625.

Of joys departed,
Not to return, how painful the remembrance!
ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 109.

No traces left of all the busy scene,
But that remembrance says: The things have been.

SAMUEL BOYSE, The Deity.

2
There is no greater sorrow than to recall, in misery, the time when we were happy. (Nes-sun maggior dolore Che ricordarsi del tempo felice Nella miseria.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 121.

There is no worse sorrow than remembering happiness in the day of sorrow. (Il n'est pire douleur Qu'un souvenir heureux dans le jour de malheur.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, La Saule.

But woe to him, who left to moan,
Reviews the hours of brightness gone.

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Taurus, l. 1121. (An-stice, tr.)

Memory of happiness makes misery woeful.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4650.

But were there ever any
Writh'd not at passed joy?

KEATS, Stanzas: In a Drear-Nighted December.

Nor nothing more may heartes disavounce
Than of old joy new remembrance.

LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 650. (c. 1440)

3
O Memory! thou fond deceiver!
Still importunate and vain;
To former joys recurring ever,
And turning all the past to pain.

GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act i, sc. 1.

Remembrance wakes with all her busy train,
Swells at my breast, and turns the past to pain.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 81.

4
The bitter memory
Of what he was, what is, and what must be.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 24.

5
O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
The thochts o' bygone years
Still fling their shadows ower my path,
And blind my een wi' tears.
WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

6
When time has assuaged the wounds of the mind, he who unseasonably reminds us of them, opens them afresh.
(At cum longa dies sedavit vulnera mentis, Intempestive qui movet illa, novat.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 11,
l. 19.

7
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 314.

8
Remember thee!
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 95.

I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 222.

It presses to my memory,
Like damned, guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 110.

9
Here did she fall a tear; here in this place
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be
seen,

In the remembrance of a weeping queen.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 175.

10
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxx.

How sharp the point of this remembrance is!
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 138.

Let us not burden our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 199.

11
This is truth the poet sings
That a sorrow's crown of sorrows is remembering happier things.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 38.

The saddest lot of all is to know the good, and yet, perforce, to be debarred therefrom.

HESIOD, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 510. Said by Churton Collins (Illustrations of Tennyson, p. 62) to have inspired Tennyson's line.

1 So joys, remembered without wish or will,
Sharpen the keenest edge of present ill.
WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Captivity.

V—Memory: Tender Memories

2 Oh, I have roamed o'er many lands,
And many friends I've met;
Not one fair scene or kindly smile
Can this fond heart forget.
T. H. BAYLY, Song: Oh, Steer My Bark.

3 Ah, we fondly cherish
Faded things
That had better perish.
Memory clings
To each leaf it saves.
J. H. BONER, Gather Leaves and Grasses.

'T is but a little faded flower,
But oh, how fondly dear!
'T will bring me back one golden hour,
Through many a weary year.
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Where is the heart that doth not keep,
Within its inmost core,
Some fond remembrance hidden deep,
Of days that are no more?
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Who hath not saved some trifling thing
More prized than jewels rare,
A faded flower, a broken ring,
A tress of golden hair.
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Yet for old sake's sake she is still, dears,
The prettiest doll in the world.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, My Little Doll.

4 When other lips and other hearts
Their tales of love shall tell,
In language whose excess imparts
The power they feel so well,
There may, perhaps, in such a scene,
Some recollection be
Of days that have as happy been,
And you'll remember me.
ALFRED BUNN, Then You'll Remember Me.
(The Bohemian Girl. Act iii.)

5 Oh! scenes in strong remembrance set!
Scenes never, never to return!

ROBERT BURNS, The Lament. St. 10.
Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
And fondly broods with miser care;
Time but th' impression stronger makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear.
ROBERT BURNS, To Mary in Heaven.

6 While Memory watches o'er the sad review
Of joys that faded like the morning dew.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 45.

7 How cruelly sweet are the echoes that start
When memory plays an old tune on the heart!

ELIZA COOK, Old Dobbin. St. 16.

8 O Genevieve, sweet Genevieve,
The days may come, the days may go,
But still the hands of mem'ry weave
The blissful dreams of long ago.
GEORGE COOPER, Sweet Genevieve. A popular song the music of which was written about 1877 by Henry Tucker.

9 Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,—
Sweet Alice whose hair was so brown,
Who wept with delight when you gave her a
smile,
And trembled with fear at your frown?
THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, Ben Bolt.

10 A place in thy memory, Dearest!
Is all that I claim:
To pause and look back when thou hearest
The sound of my name.
GERALD GRIFFIN, A Place in Thy Memory.

11 Only a dream, and yet I hear you singing, Singing in the shadows, while gently falls
the dew.

Roses may fade, but each returning twilight
Brings the fragrant memory of you.
BERNARD HAMBLEN, The Memory of You.

12 I recollect a nurse called Ann,
Who carried me about the grass,
And one fine day a fine young man
Came up and kissed the pretty lass.
She did not make the least objection.

Thinks I, "Aha,
When I can talk I'll tell Mama,"
And that's my earliest recollection.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Terrible Infant.

13 The leaves of memory seemed to make
A mournful rustling in the dark.
LONGFELLOW, The Fire of Driftwood.

There comes to me out of the Past
A voice, whose tones are sweet and wild,
Singing a song almost divine,
And with a tear in every line.
LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii,
Interlude.

14 To live with them is far less sweet
Than to remember thee.

THOMAS MOORE, I Saw Thy Form.

So turn our hearts, as on we rove,
To those we've left behind us!
THOMAS MOORE, The Journey Onwards.

15 All to myself I think of you,
Think of the things we used to do,

Think of the things we used to say,
Think of each happy bygone day.
Sometimes I sigh, and sometimes I smile,
But I keep each olden, golden while
All to myself.

WILBUR D. NESBIT, All to Myself.

1 My home, the city, and the image of well-known places pass before my eyes. (Ante oculos errant domus, urbsque et forma locorum.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 57.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

2 I wept for memory.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, She Sat and Sang Always.

3 Still are the thoughts to memory dear.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 32.

4 The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 226.

5 Ah, how much less all living loves to me,
Than that one rapture of remembering thee.
(Heu quanto minus est cum reliquis versari, quam tui meminisse.)

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Epitaph to the Memory of Mary Doleman. (Munby, tr.)

6 I am with you,
Wandering through Memory Lane.
B. G. DE SILVA, Memory Lane. (1924)

7 As the dew to the blossom, the bud to the bee,
As the scent to the rose, are those memories to me.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Pulpit Eloquence.

8 Passing sweet
Are the domains of tender memory!
WORDSWORTH, Ode to Lycoris. No. ii, l. 50.

VI—Memory and Forgetfulness

See also Forgetfulness

9 I sit beside my lonely fire
And pray for wisdom yet:
For calmness to remember
Or courage to forget.

CHARLES HAMILTON AIDÉ, Remember or Forget.

Forget that I remember,

And dream that I forget.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Rococo.

10 Remembrances embellish life but forgetfulness alone makes it possible. (Les souvenirs embellissent la vie, l'oubli seul la rend possible.)

GENERAL CIALDINI, Written in an Album.

11 We have all forgot more than we remember.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5442.

12 A retentive memory is a good thing, but the ability to forget is the true token of greatness.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

13 Ah, tell me not that memory
Sheds gladness o'er the past;
What is recalled by faded flowers,
Save that they did not last?
Were it not better to forget,
Than but remember and regret?

LETITIA ELIZABETH LANDON, Despondency.

14 Better by far you should forget and smile,
Than that you should remember and be sad.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Birthday.

15 Though varying wishes, hopes, and fears
Fever'd the progress of these years,
Yet now, days, weeks, and months but seem
The recollection of a dream.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iv, Introduction, l. 21.

16 I shall remember while the light lives yet,
And in the night-time I shall not forget.

SWINBURNE, Erotion.

17 Teach me not the art of remembering, but the art of forgetting, for I remember things I do not wish to remember, but I cannot forget things I wish to forget.

THEMISTOCLES, when Simonides offered to teach him the art of memory. (CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 32, sec. 104.)

18 Mem: To remember to forget to ask
Old Whitbred to my house one day.

JOHN WOLCOT, Whitbread's Brewery Visited by Their Majesties.

MERCY

19 For Mercy, Courage, Kindness, Mirth,
There is no measure upon earth;
Nay, they wither, root and stem,
If an end be set to them.

LAURENCE BINYON, A Song.

For Mercy has a human heart,
Pity a human face,
And Love, the human form divine,
And Peace, the human dress.

Then every man, of every clime,
That prays in his distress,

Prays to the human form divine,
Love, Mercy, Pity, Peace.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Divine Image.

1 Mercy is for the merciful.

BYRON, Lines on Hearing Lady Byron Was Ill.

Mercy to him that shows it, is the rule.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 595.

Mercy of mercy needs must arise.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xii, l. 233.

2 Bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering.

New Testament: Colossians, iii, 12.

Open thy bowels of compassion.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iv, sc. 7.

3 We hand folks over to God's mercy, and show none ourselves.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 42. See also
GOD: HIS MERCY.

4 Cowards are cruel, but the brave
Love mercy and delight to save.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 1.

5 And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard. St. 17.

6 Mercy the wise Athenians held to be
Not an affection, but a Deity.

ROBERT HERRICK, Mercy.

7 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 7.

Who will not mercy unto others show,
How can he mercy ever hope to have?

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 42.

8 Mercy is better than vengeance. (Συγγνώμη
τιμωρίας κρείσσων.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i,
sec. 76.)

9 Mercy stood in the cloud, with eye that wept
Essential love.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. iii, l. 658.

10 Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;

That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

POPE, Universal Prayer. St. 10.

11 So much his courage and his mercy strive,
He wounds to cure, and conquers to forgive.

PRIOR, Ode in Imitation of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 2.

12 Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxv, 10.

13 It is a bad cause which asks for mercy.

(Mala causa est quæ requirit misericordiam.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 346. See also
JUSTICE AND MERCY.

14 It is impossible to imagine anything which better becomes a ruler than mercy. (Ex- cogitare nemo quicquam poterit quod magis decorum regi sit quam clementia.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 1.

Humanity always becomes a conqueror.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act i, sc. 1.

It is noble to grant life to the vanquished.
(Pulchrum est vitam donare minori.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. vi, l. 816.

Tigers have courage and the rugged bear,
But man alone can, whom he conquers, spare.

WALLER, Epistle to My Lord Protector.

15 Mercy often gives death instead of life.
(Mortem misericors sæpe pro vita dabit.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 329.

16 Where to serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 46.

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 81.

I cry you, mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 109.

17 Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so;
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 297. See also JUSTICE: LET JUSTICE
BE DONE.

18 No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,

Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 59.

19 The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal
power,

The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest
God's

When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 184.

We do pray for mercy;

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 200.

1 Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 37.

2 Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 117.

3 For mercy will soon pardon the meanest:
but mighty men shall be mightily tormented.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 6.

4 Sweet Mercy! to the gates of Heaven
This Minstrel lead, his sins forgiven;
The rueful conflict, the heart riven

With vain endeavour,
And memory of Earth's bitter leaven
Effaced for ever.

WORDSWORTH, Thoughts Suggested on the Banks of the Nith, l. 55.

5 Merit is worthier than fame.

BACON, Letter to Lord Essex. No. 48.

6 Merit and good-breeding will make their way everywhere.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

The force of his own merit makes his way.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

7 Amongst the sons of men how few are known
Who dare be just to merit not their own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 1.

8 The little merit man can plead
In doing well, dependeth still
Upon his power of doing ill.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 248.

View the whole scene, with critic judgement scan,

And then deny him merit if you can.
Where he falls short, 'tis Nature's fault alone;
Where he succeeds, the merit's all his own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1023.
Referring to Thomas Sheridan, the actor.

9 It sounds like stories from the land of spirits
If any man obtain that which he merits
Or any merit that which he obtains.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Good Great Man.

10 No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread
abode,

(There they alike in trembling hope repose)
The bosom of his Father and his God.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard: The Epitaph*.

11 Distinguish between baseness and merit, not by descent, but by purity of life and heart.
(Turpi secernis honestum Non patre præ-claro, sed vita et pectore puro.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. vi, l. 63.

12 Man's chief merit consists in resisting the impulses of his nature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 285.

13 What merit to be dropped on fortune's hill?
The honour is to mount it!

J. S. KNOWLES, The Hunchback. Act i, sc. 1.

14 The same principle leads us to neglect a man of merit that induces us to admire a fool.
(Du même fonds dont on néglige un homme de mérite, l'on sait encore admirer un sot.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 12.

15 Nature makes merit and fortune uses it.
(La nature fait le mérite, et la fortune le met en œuvre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 153.

There are people who disgust with merit, and others who please with faults. (Il y a des gens dégoûtants avec du mérite, et d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 155.

Our merit wins the esteem of honest men, and our lucky star that of the public. (Notre mérite nous attire l'estime des honnêtes gens, et notre étoile celle du public.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 165.

The world more often rewards the appearance of merit than merit itself. (Le monde récompense plus souvent les apparences du mérite que le mérite même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 166.

16 There is merit without eminence, but there is no eminence without some merit. (Il y a du mérite sans élévation, mais il n'y a point d'élévation sans quelque mérite.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 400.

Eminence is to merit what dress is to beauty.
(L'élévation est au mérite ce que la parure est aux belles personnes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 401.

By merit rais'd To that bad eminence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 5.

17 What is merit? The opinion one man entertains of another.

HENRY JOHN PALMERSTON, Speeches. Quoted by Carlyle in Shooting Niagara.

1 We should try to succeed by merit, not by favor. (Virtute ambire oportet, non favoribus.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 78.

2 Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 33.

3 The sufficiency of merit is to know that my merit is not sufficient.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 1.

4 O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 119.

5 For merit lives from man to man,
And not from man, O Lord, to thee.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Prelude. St. 9.

6 In the use,
Not in the bare possession lies the merit.
GILBERT WEST, Institution of the Garter, l. 461.

MERMAID

7 According to the constitution of mermaids, so much of a mermaid as is not a woman must be a fish.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 1.

8 What at top is a lovely woman, ends below in a black and ugly fish. (Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 4.

9 O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 168.

As if some mermaid did their ears entice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 202.

10 Once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath
That the rude sea grew civil at her song:
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,

To hear the sea-maid's music.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 149.

11 Who would be A mermaid fair,
Singing alone, Combing her hair?

TENNYSON, The Mermaid.

Slow sail'd the weary mariners and saw,
Betwixt the green brink and the running foam,

Sweet faces, rounded arms, and bosoms prest
To little harps of gold; and while they mused,
Whispering to each other half in fear,
Shrill music reach'd them on the middle sea.

TENNYSON, The Sea Fairies.

As merry as mice in malt.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 16.

IV—Merriment: Some Merry Men

2
In Paris a queer little man you may see,
A little man all in gray;
Rosy and round as an apple is he,
Content with the present whate'er it may be,
While from care and from cash he is equally free,
And merry both night and day!
"Ma foi! I laugh at the world," says he,
"I laugh at the world, and the world laughs at me!"

What a gay little man in gray.
BÉRANGER, The Little Man all in Gray. (Amelia Edwards, tr.)

3
I'll be merry and free,
I'll be sad for naeboddy;
Naeboddy cares for me,
I care for naeboddy.
ROBERT BURNS, I Hae a Wife.

There was a jolly miller once,
Lived on the river Dee;
He work'd, and sung, from morn till night,
No lark more blythe than he.
And this the burthen of his song,
For ever us'd to be,
"I care for nobody, not I,
If no one cares for me."
ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, 5.

4
He was a care-defying blade
As ever Bacchus listed!
Tho' Fortune sair upon him laid,
His heart, she ever miss'd it.
He had nae wish but—to be glad,
Nor want but—when he thirsted;
He hated naught but—to be sad.
ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

5
A merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 65.

6
Don Pedro: In faith, lady, you have a merry
heart.
Beatrice: Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 323.

Don Pedro: To be merry best becomes you:
for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beatrice: No, sure, my lord, my mother cried;
but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 346.

MIDNIGHT

7
This dead of midnight is the noon of thought,
And Wisdom mounts her zenith with the stars.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, A Summer's Evening Meditation, l. 51.

8
That hour, o' night's black arch the keystone.
BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

9
Is it for work? There comes no fool to bore
us.
Midnight intoxicates the human swine;
I, pen in hand, with all the gods for chorus,
Write then my clearest thought, my noblest line.

Midnight is mine.

MORTIMER COLLINS, Midnight Is Mine.

But wouldst thou hear the melodies of Time,
Listen when sleep and drowsy darkness roll
Over hush'd cities, and the midnight chime Sounds from their hundred clocks, and deep bells toll,

Like a last knell over the dead world's soul.
THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 298.

13
I stood on the bridge at midnight,
As the clocks were striking the hour,
And the moon rose o'er the city,
Behind the dark church-tower.
LONGFELLOW, The Bridge.

From the cool cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there,—
From those deep cisterns flows.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

Midnight! the outpost of advancing day!
The frontier town and citadel of night!
LONGFELLOW, The Two Rivers. Pt. i.

14
O wild and wondrous midnight,
There is a might in thee
To make the charmed body
Almost like spirit be,

And give it some faint glimpses
Of immortality!

past time, there has been a ceaseless devouring of the weak by the strong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles.

<sup>18</sup> Let us have faith that right makes might,
and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Cooper Institute,
N. Y., 27 Feb., 1860.

It has been said of the world's history hitherto that might makes right. It is for us and for our time to reverse the maxim, and to say that right makes might.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Right is overcome by might. (Vi verum vincitur.)
PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 591. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

1 O God, that right should thus overcome might!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 27.

2 Where might is, the right is:

Long purses make strong swords.

Let weakness learn meekness:

God save the House of Lords.

SWINBURNE, A Word for the Country. St. 1.

3 But let the free-winged angel Truth their guarded passes scale,

To teach that right is more than might, and justice more than mail!

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatomie.

So let it be. In God's own might

We gird us for the coming fight,

And, strong in Him whose cause is ours

In conflict with unholy powers,

We grasp the weapons He has given,—

The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.

MILL and MILLER

8 Two millers thin, called Bone and Skin,

Would starve us all, or near it;
But be it known to Skin and Bone
That Flesh and Blood can't bear it.

JOHN BYROM, On Two Millers, Bone and Skin, Who Wished a Monopoly of Corn.

9 Well could be stolen corn and tollen thrice,
And yet he had a thumb of gold, pardee.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 563.

Every honest miller has a golden thumb.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales. An old saying, referring to a merchant keeping his thumb on the scales when weighing anything.

Honest millers have golden thumbs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2531. Ray states that the miller's reply was, "None but a cuckold can see it"; or, "True, but it takes a thief to see it."

The miller—the prosperous fellow with the golden thumb.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Chronicles of Clovernook, p. 94.

10 The water that is past cannot make the mill go.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bib. Scho. Instruct., p. 151. (1633)

The mill cannot grind with water that's past.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Oh seize the instant time; you never will

With waters once passed by impel the mill.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Proverbs. (Poems, p. 303.)

Listen to the Water-Mill:

Through the live-long day

How the clicking of its wheel

Wears the hours away!

Languidly the Autumn wind

Stirs the forest leaves,

From the field the reapers sing

Binding up their sheaves:

And a proverb haunts my mind

As a spell is cast,

"The mill cannot grind

With the water that is past."

SARAH DOUDNEY, The Lesson of the Water-Mill. Fraudulently claimed by General D. C. McCallum. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

11 The mill goes toiling slowly around
With steady and solemn creak,

And my little one hears in the kindly sound
The voice of the old mill speak.

EUGENE FIELD, Nightfall in Dordrecht.

12 As good water goes by the mill as drives it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 691.

13 There is no likelihood that those things will bring grist to the mill.

GOLDING, Calvin on Deuteronomy, 755. (1583)

'Tis a pick-purse doctrine, contrived to bring grist to the Pope's mill.

WILLIAM GURNALL, Christian in Complete Armour. Pt. iii, ch. 5. (1661)

Some people make fat, some blood, and some bile; and whatever they take is a sort of grist to the mill.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 10.

<sup>1</sup> The same water that drives the mill, decayeth it.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse.

<sup>2</sup> Much water goeth by the mill
That the miller knoweth not of.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

More water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 86. (1593)

The miller sees not all the water that goeth by his mill.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

<sup>3</sup> The miller grinds more men's corn than one.

THOMAS NASEE, Works. Vol. iii, p. 25.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS GRIND SLOWLY, see under RETRIBUTION.

<sup>4</sup> Here lies an Israelite indeed;
Match him if you can:

A neighbour good, a miller too,
And yet an honest man.

MILTON, JOHN

<sup>5</sup> Milton's golden lyre.

MARK AKENSIDE, Ode on a Sermon Against Glory. St. 2.

<sup>6</sup> On his anointed eyes, God set his seal
And gave him—blindness and the inward light,

That he, repining not at lack of sight,
Might see as never man saw.

RICHARD ROGERS BOWKER, Milton.

<sup>7</sup> Milton's the prince of poets—so we say;

A little heavy, but no less divine;

An independent being in his day—

Learn'd, pious, temperate in love and wine.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 91.

<sup>8</sup> The words of Milton are true in all things, and were never truer than in this: "He who would write heroic poems must make his whole life a heroic poem."

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns.

<sup>9</sup> Ages elaps'd ere Homer's lamp appear'd,
And ages ere the Mantuan swan was heard:
To carry nature lengths unknown before,
To give a Milton birth, ask'd ages more.

Thus genius rose and set at order'd times,
And shot a day-spring into distant climes,

Ennobling ev'ry region that he chose;
He sunk in Greece, in Italy he rose;
And, tedious years of Gothic darkness pass'd,
Emerg'd all splendour in our isle at last.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 556.

Greece boasts her Homer, Rome can Virgil claim;

England can either match in Milton's fame.
(Græcia Mæonidam, jactet sibi Roma Maronem Anglia Miltonum jactat utrique parem.)

SALVAGGI, Ad Joannem Miltonum.

<sup>10</sup> Three Poets, in three distant Ages born, Greece, Italy, and England did adorn.

The first in loftiness of thought surpass'd,

The next in majesty, in both the last:

The force of nature could no farther go;

To make the third she join'd the former two.

DRYDEN, Lines under the Portrait of Milton.

The reference is to Homer, Vergil, and Milton.

<sup>11</sup> Nor second He, that rode sublime
Upon the seraph-wings of Ecstasy,

The secrets of th' Abyss to spy.

He pass'd the flaming bounds of Place and Time:

The living Throne, the sapphire blaze,

Where Angels tremble, while they gaze,

He saw; but blasted with excess of light,

Closed his eyes in endless night.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy. Pt. iii, st. 2.

<sup>12</sup> He was a Phidias that could cut a Colossus out of a rock, but could not cut heads out of cherry stones.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Milton. (HANNAH MORE, Johnsoniana.)

<sup>13</sup> I am old and blind!

Men point at me as smitten by God's frown.

ELIZABETH LLOYD, Milton on His Blindness.

Sometimes attributed to Milton himself.

Miss Lloyd was a member of the Society of Friends of Philadelphia, Pa.

<sup>14</sup> Milton's strong pinion now not Heav'n can bound,

Now, serpent-like, in prose he sweeps the ground,

In quibbles, Angel and Archangel join,

And God the Father turns a School-divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 99.

<sup>15</sup> O mighty-mouth'd inventor of harmonies,
O skill'd to sing of Time or Eternity,

God-gifted organ-voice of England,

Milton, a name to resound for ages.

TENNYSON, Milton.

<sup>16</sup> Lover of Liberty at heart wast thou,

Above all beauty bright, all music clear:

To thee she bared her bosom and her brow,
Breathing her virgin promise in thine ear,
And bound thee to her with a double vow,— Exquisite Puritan, grave Cavalier!
HENRY VAN DYKE, Milton.

<sup>1</sup>
The ancients recommended us to sacrifice to the Graces, but Milton sacrificed to the Devil.

heirs.
WILLIAM WATSON, An Exaggerated Deference to Foreign Literary Opinion.

<sup>3</sup>
The New World honors him whose lofty plea
For England's freedom made her own more
sure,

Whose song, immortal as its theme, shall be
Their common freehold while both worlds endure.

WHITTIER, *On the Milton Window, in St.
Margaret's, Westminster*.

<sup>4</sup>
That mighty orb of song, The divine Milton.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 249.

The sightless Milton, with his hair
Around his placid temples curled.
WORDSWORTH, The Italian Itinerant. Pt. i, l. 12.

Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart;
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the
sea:

Pure as the naked heavens, majestic, free,
So didst thou travel on life's common way,
In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart
The lowliest duties on herself did lay.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: London, 1802.

<sup>5</sup>
A man's felicity consists not in the outward and visible blessings of fortune, but in the inward and unseen perfections and riches of the mind.

ANARCHARSIS. (PLUTARCH, The Banquet of the Seven Wise Men. Sec. 11.)

<sup>6</sup>
The mind of man is far from the nature of a clear and equal glass, . . . nay, it is rather like an enchanted glass, full of superstition and imposture.

BACON, Advancement of Learning: Of the Understanding.

<sup>7</sup>
I had rather believe all the fables in the Legend and the Talmud and the Alcoran, than that this universal frame is without a

3
Man's mind a mirror is of heavenly sights,
A brief wherein all marvels summèd lie,
Of fairest forms and sweetest shapes the
store,

Most graceful all, yet thought may grace them more.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Content and Rich.

4
The human mind always makes progress, but it is a progress in spirals. (L'esprit humain fait progrès toujours, mais c'est progrès en spirale.)

MADAME DE STAËL.

"Spiral" the memorable Lady terms
Our mind's ascent.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The World's Advance.
Trevelyan, in his notes to Meredith's Poetical Works, says that the "memorable lady" was Mrs. Browning (see quotation from Aurora Leigh under ART: DEFINITIONS), but the resemblance is much closer to the preceding quotation from Madame de Staël.

5
Were I so tall to reach the Pole,
Or grasp the ocean in my span,
I must be measured by my soul;
The mind's the standard of the man.

<sup>12</sup> Intellect obscures more than it illumines.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. ii, ch. 15.

III—Mind: Little and Great

<sup>13</sup> The mind soars to the lofty: it is at home in the grovelling, the disagreeable, and the little.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Winterslow, p. 77.

<sup>14</sup> Little minds are interested in the extraordinary; great minds in the commonplace.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

Great minds discuss ideas, average minds discuss events, small minds discuss people.

UNKNOWN, Minds.

<sup>15</sup> Little minds are wounded too much by little things; great minds see all, and are not even hurt. (Les petits esprits sont trop blessés des petites choses; les grands esprits les voient toutes, et n'en sont point blessés.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 357.

<sup>16</sup> Nobody, I believe, will deny, that we are to form our judgement of the true nature of the human mind, not from sloth and stupidity of the most degenerate and vilest of men, but from the sentiments and fervent desires of the best and wisest.

ARCHBISHOP LEIGHTON, Theological Lectures: No. 5, Of the Immortality of the Soul.

<sup>17</sup> It is good to be often reminded of the inconsistency of human nature, and to learn to look without wonder or disgust on the weaknesses which are found in the strongest minds.

MACAULAY, Essays: Warren Hastings.

It is not given to the human intellect to expand itself widely in all directions at once, and to be at the same time gigantic and well-proportioned.

MACAULAY, Essays: Madame d'Arblay.

<sup>18</sup> The conformation of his mind was such, that whatever was little seemed to him great, and whatever was great seemed to him little.

MACAULAY, Essays: Horace Walpole.

IV—Mind: The Great Mind

<sup>19</sup> The true standard of quality is seated in the mind; those who think nobly are noble.

<sup>20</sup> Measure your mind's height by the shade it casts.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iii.

<sup>1</sup> No beauty's like the beauty of the mind.
 JOSHUA COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act v, sc. 3.

<sup>2</sup> It is the mind's for ever bright attire,
 The mind's embroidery, that the wise admire.
 That which looks rich to the gross vulgar eyes
 Is the fop's tinsel which the grave despise.
 JOHN DYER, To Mr. Savage.

<sup>3</sup> A great mind is a good sailor, as a great heart is.
 EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 2.
 Works of the intellect are great only by comparison with each other.
 EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Literary Ethics.

<sup>4</sup> A noble mind disdains to hide his head,
 And let his foes triumph in his overthrow.
 ROBERT GREENE, Alphonso, King of Arragon. Act i.

<sup>5</sup> Whose well-taught mind the present age surpass.
 HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 210. (Pope, tr.)

 HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 34.

<sup>7</sup> Such is the delight of mental superiority, that none on whom nature or study have conferred it, would purchase the gifts of fortune by its loss.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150.

<sup>8</sup> The true, strong, and sound mind is the mind that can embrace equally great things and small.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)
 A great mind conceives the greatest things; it sees and understands the smallest ones. (Un grand esprit . . . imagine les plus grandes choses; il voit et connaît les plus petites.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Réflexions Diverses: Ch. xvi, De la Différence des Esprits.

Greatness of mind is not shown by admitting small things, but by making small things great under its influence. He who can take no interest in what is small, will take false interest in what is great.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ii, sec. 4, ch. 4.
<sup>9</sup> By a tranquil mind I mean nothing else than a mind well ordered.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 3.

 By nature great, are conscious of their greatness.

NICHOLAS ROWE, The Royal Convert.

<sup>14</sup> A great mind becomes a great fortune. (Magnam fortunam magnus animus decet.)
 SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 5.

<sup>15</sup> A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 20.

<sup>16</sup> The mind that would be happy, must be great.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night ix, l. 1378.

V—Mind: The Little Mind

<sup>17</sup> Nature did never put her precious jewels into a garret four stories high, and therefore exceeding tall men have ever very empty heads.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 17.
 Often the cockloft is empty in those whom nature hath built many stories high.

THOMAS FULLER, Andronicus. Pt. xviii, sec. 6.
 Tall men are like houses of four stories, wherein commonly the uppermost room is worst furnished.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, sec. 2, letter 1.
 Whose cockloft is unfurnished.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 629.

<sup>3</sup> Feels himself spent, and fumbles for his brains.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 537.

<sup>4</sup> here is little Effie's head whose brains are made of gingerbread when the judgment day comes
God will find six crumbs.

E. E. CUMMINGS, Portrait.

Your little voice, so soft and kind;
Your little soul, your little mind!

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Love Song.

<sup>5</sup> To be bored by essentials is characteristic of small minds.

R. U. JOHNSON, Poems of Fifty Years: Preface.

<sup>6</sup> Most brains reflect but the crown of a hat.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 704.

The defect in his brain was just absence of mind.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 228. See also ABSENCE: ABSENCE OF MIND.

What darkness rules the minds of men! (Quantum mortalia pectora cæcæ Noctis habent!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 472.

<sup>8</sup> Anxious minds quake with both hope and fear. (Sollicitæ mentes speque metuque pavent.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 361.

<sup>9</sup> A brain of feathers and a heart of lead.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 44.

<sup>10</sup> O heavy burden of a doubtful mind!

FRANCIS QUARLES, A Feast of Worms. Sec. 1.

<sup>11</sup> 'Tis but a base, ignoble mind

That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 13.

<sup>12</sup> In nature there's no blemish but the mind.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 401.

<sup>13</sup> Mental power cannot be got from ill-fed brains.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Ethics. Sec. 238.

<sup>14</sup> Let Gryll be Gryll, and have his hoggish mind.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto xii, st. 87. Gryll, or Grillus, was one of the companions of Ulysses, and was changed into a hog by the enchantments of Circe.

<sup>15</sup> Now hither, now thither, he turns his wavering mind. (Animum nunc huc celerem, nunc dividit illuc.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 285.

<sup>16</sup> O mind of man, ignorant of fate and impending doom, unable to keep within due bounds when uplifted by favoring fortune! (Nescis mens hominum fati sortisque futuræ Et servare modum, rebus sublata secundis!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 501.

<sup>17</sup> Minds that have nothing to confer
Find little to perceive.

WORDSWORTH, Yes! Thou Art Fair.

VI—Mind: A Kingdom

<sup>18</sup> Dame Nature doubtless has designed
A man the monarch of his mind.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content. See also HENLEY, under SOUL.

COWPER, Truth, l. 405.

<sup>20</sup> My mind to me a kingdom is;

Such present joys therein I find,

That it excels all other bliss

That earth affords or grows by kind:

Though much I want which most would have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is.

My mind to me a kingdom is;

Such perfect joy therein I find

As far exceeds all earthly bliss,

That God or Nature hath assigned:

Though much I want, that most would have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is.

As altered by William Byrd, in Psalmes, Sonets, and Songs of Sadnes. London, 1588.

(PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. 3.)

I am no such pil'd cynic to believe

That beggary is the only happiness,

Or, with a number of these patient fools,

To sing, "My mind to me a kingdom is,"

When the lank hungry belly barks for food.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act i, sc. 1.

My mind's my kingdom.

FRANCIS QUARLES, School of the Heart. Ode iv, st. 3.

<sup>21</sup> A good mind possesses a kingdom. (Mens regnum bona possidet.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 380.

<sup>22</sup> I feel no care of coin;

Well-doing is my wealth;

My mind to me an empire is,

While grace affordeth health.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Content and Rich.

VII—Mind: Its Power

<sup>1</sup> The human understanding is naturally right, and has within itself a strength sufficient to arrive at the knowledge of truth, and to distinguish it from error.

BURLAMAQUI, Principles of Natural Law.

A head's breadth? Ay, but therein is hell's depth, and the height up to heaven, And the thrones of the gods and their halls, their chariots, purples, and splendors.

PADRAIC COLUM, The Plougher.

<sup>3</sup> How fleet is a glance of the mind!
Compar'd with the speed of its flight,
The tempest itself lags behind,
And the swift-wing'd arrows of light.
COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

<sup>4</sup> Thy mind reverting still to things of earth,
Strikes darkness from true light.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xv, l. 62. (Cary, tr.)

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis true, 'tis certain; man, tho' dead, retains Part of himself; th' immortal mind remains.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 122. (Pope, tr.) See also under IMMORTALITY.

<sup>6</sup> The mind can weave itself warmly in the cocoon of its own thoughts, and dwell a hermit anywhere.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

<sup>7</sup> The lively force of his mind has broken down all barriers, and has made its way far beyond the glittering walls of the Universe. (Vivida vis animi pervicit, et extra Processit longe flammanitia mœnia Mundi.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 73.

His vigorous and active mind was hurl'd
Beyond the flaming limits of this world
Into the mighty space, and there did see
How things began, what can, what cannot be.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 75. (Creech, tr.) The reference is to Epicurus.

Three sleepless nights I passed in sounding on,
Through words and things, a dim and perilous way.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 1774. (Written eighteen years before The Excursion.)

The intellectual power, through words and things,

Went sounding on, a dim and perilous way!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 700.

A mind forever
Voyaging through strange seas of thought alone.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. iii, l. 62.

<sup>8</sup> Nothing can withstand the powers of the mind. Barriers, enormous masses of matter, the remotest recesses are conquered; all things succumb; the very heaven itself is laid open. (Rationi nulla resistunt. Claustra nec immensæ moles, ceduntque recessus: Omnia succumbunt; ipsum est penetrabile cœlum.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. i, 541.

<sup>9</sup> The mind, unmastered by passions, is a very citadel, for a man has no fortress more impregnable wherein to find refuge and be untaken forever.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, sec. 48.

<sup>10</sup> The mind, that ocean where each kind
Does straight its own resemblance find;
Yet it creates, transcending these,
Far other worlds, and other seas;
Annihilating all that's made
To a green thought in a green shade.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

<sup>11</sup> The social states of human kinds
Are made by multitudes of minds,
And after multitudes of years
A little human growth appears
Worth having, even to the soul
Who sees most plain it's not the whole.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 60.

<sup>12</sup> The hand that follows intellect can achieve.
MICHELANGELO, The Artist. (Longfellow, tr.)

<sup>13</sup> The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a Heav'n of Hell, a hell of Heav'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 254.

<sup>14</sup> The mind hath no horizon,
It looks beyond the eye, and seeks for mind
In all it sees, or all it sees o'erruling.

MONTGOMERY, The Pelican Island. Canto i, l. 78.

<sup>15</sup> There are but two powers in the world, the sword and the mind. In the long run the sword is always beaten by the mind.

NAPOLEON. (FREDERIKS, Maxims of Napoleon.)

<sup>16</sup> The joy of the mind marks its strength.

NINON DE L'ENCLOS, Letter to St. Evremond.

<sup>17</sup> The mind alone cannot be exiled. (Mente tamen, quæ sola loco non exulat.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 9, l. 41.

The human mind cannot be burned nor bayoneted, nor wounded, nor missing.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1863.

1 Mind is ever the ruler of the universe.

PLATO, Philebus. Sec. 30.

2 The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaimed blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

3 It is the mind that maketh good or ill,
That maketh wretch or happy, rich or poor.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto 9, st. 30. See also THOUGHT: ITS POWER.

VIII—Mind: Its Cultivation

4 Constant attention wears the active mind,
Blots out our pow'rs, and leaves a blank behind.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 647.

5 He found a sort of food for the soul in cultivating his mind. (Animi cultus ille erat ei quasi quidam humanitatis cibus.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 19, sec. 54.

We strive to improve the heart and mind. (Cor et mentem colere nititur.)

UNKNOWN, Motto, over a school at Marquise, France.

6 If the brain sows not corn, it plants thistles.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 Rule your mind, which, if it is not your servant, is your master. Curb it with a bit; bind it with a chain. (Animum rege; qui nisi pariet Imperat; hunc frenis, hunc tu compesce catena.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 62.

Restrain your mind. (Compesce mentem.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 16, l. 22.

A wise man will be master of his mind, a fool will be its slave. (Animo imperabit sapiens, stultus serviet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 40.

8 We must view with profound respect the infinite capacity of the human mind to resist the introduction of useful knowledge.

THOMAS R. LOUNSBURY. (LOCKWOOD, The Freshman and His College, p. 44.)

9 It is good to rub and polish our brain against that of others. (Il est bon de frotter et limer notre cervelle contre celle d'autrui.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

10 To relax the mind is to lose it. (Remittere animum quasi amittere est.)

MUSONIUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xviii, ch. 2.)

Straining breaks the bow, relaxation the mind. (Arcum intensus frangit, animum remissio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 53. Quoted by Bacon, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 2.

The mind is like a bow, the stronger by being unbent.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Otium.

11 A sick mind cannot endure any harshness. (Mensque pati durum sustinet ægra nihil.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 18.

We must spare the mind which has received a grievous wound. (Parcendum est animo miserabile vulnus habenti.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 23.

12 Recreation should sometimes be given to the mind that it may be restored to you in better condition for thinking. (Ludus animo debet aliquando dari Ad cogitandum melior ut redeat tibi.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 14, l. 12.

13 Strength of mind is exercise, not rest.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 104.

14 Love, Hope, and Joy, fair Pleasure's smiling train,
Hate, Fear, and Grief, the family of Pain,

These mix'd with art, and to due bounds confin'd

Make and maintain the balance of the mind.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 117.

15 We should toughen our minds. (Indurandus est animus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 5.

16 I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness and the bettering of my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 89.

17 He who seeks the mind's improvement,
Aids the world, in aiding mind.

CHARLES SWAIN, What Is Noble?

18 Nor less I deem that there are Powers
Which of themselves our minds impress;
That we can feed this mind of ours
In a wise passiveness.

WORDSWORTH, Expostulation and Reply.

19 If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface it. If we rear temples, they will crumble to dust. But if we work upon men's immortal minds, if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and love of their fellow men, we engrave on those tablets something which no time can efface, and which will brighten and brighten to all eternity.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Faneuil Hall, 1852.

IX—Mind: The Mind Diseased

See also Madness

20 With curious art the brain, too finely wrought,

Preys on herself, and is destroy'd by thought.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 645.

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. ii, ch. 10, sec. 24.

<sup>2</sup> In a disordered mind, as in a disordered body, soundness of health is impossible. (In perturbato animo sicut in corpore sanitas esse non posset.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 4, sec. 9.

Not of sound mind. (Non compos mentis.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. 20, sec. 48.

See also under MADNESS.

<sup>3</sup> All things can corrupt perverted minds. (Omnia perversas possunt corrumpere mentes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 301.

In sickness the mind reflects upon itself. (In morbo recolligit se animus.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii.

<sup>4</sup> The incessant care and labour of his mind Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

So thin that life looks through and will break out.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 118.

As that the walls worn thin, permit the mind To look out through, and his Frailty find.

SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War. Bk. iv, st. 84.

See also AGE: FACING THE SUNSET.

<sup>5</sup> O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown! The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers, quite, quite, down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 158.

<sup>6</sup> Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous matter

Which weighs upon the heart?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 40.

Nature, too unkind,

That made no medicine for a troubled mind!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act iii, l. 7.

<sup>7</sup> That is not a common chance

That takes away a noble mind.

TENNYSON, To J. S. St. 12.

X—Mind: Mind and Body

<sup>8</sup> The shape alone let others prize,

The features of the fair:

I look for spirit in her eyes,

And meaning in her air.

MARK AKENSIDE, Song.

<sup>9</sup> Fat bodies, lean brains!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 1.

He has more guts than brains.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>10</sup> Certain it is that minds, like bodies, will often fall into a pimpled, ill-conditioned state from mere excess of comfort.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 7.

<sup>11</sup> Bodies devoid of mind are as statues in the market place. (Αἱ δὲ σάρκες αἱ κεναὶ φρενῶν ἀγάλματ' ἀγορᾶς εἰσιν.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 386.

<sup>12</sup> A faultless body and a blameless mind.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 138. (Pope, tr.)

Whose little body lodg'd a mighty mind.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 999. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>13</sup> A strong body makes the mind strong.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 83.

<sup>14</sup> A sound mind in a sound body is a thing to be prayed for. (Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 356. See also under HEALTH.

<sup>15</sup> We perceive that the mind strengthens and decays with the body. (Cum corpore ut una Crescere sentimus pariterque senescere mentem.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 446.

<sup>16</sup> In these bodies of ours, the mind is of more value than the hand; all our vigor is in that. (In corpore nostro Pectora sunt potiora manu: vigor omnis in illis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii, l. 368.

<sup>17</sup> The body must be repaired and supported, if we would preserve the mind in all its vigor. (Cujus futuris animus sustinetur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 9.

Hold fast to this sound and wholesome rule of life: that you indulge the body only so far as is needful for good health. The body should be treated rigorously, that it may not be disobedient to the mind. (Hanc ergo sanam ac salubrem formam vitæ tenete, ut corpori tantum indulgeatis, quantum bonæ valitudini satis est. Durius tractandum est, ne animo male pareat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 5.

1 The contagion of a sick mind affects the body. (Vitiant artus ægræ contagia mentis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 25.

The mind grows sicker than the body in contemplation of its sufferings. (Corpore sed mens est ægro magis ægra, malique In circumspectu stat sine fine sui.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 6, l. 43. See also under DISEASE.

A feeble body enfeebles the mind. (Un corps débile affaiblit l'âme.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 164.

3 We employ the mind to rule, the body to serve. (Animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 1. sec. 2.

4 And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt,

The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave and newly move
With casted slough and fresh legerity.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 20.

We are not ourselves

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 108.

When the mind's free, The body's delicate.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 11.

5 Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor;

For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 174.

6 Not body enough to cover his mind decently with; his intellect is improperly exposed.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 258.)

There is an unseemly exposure of the mind, as well as of the body.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches, p. 165.

7 The clothing of our minds certainly ought to be regarded before that of our bodies.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 75.

8 A man's body and his mind, with the utmost reverence to both I speak it, are exactly like a jerkin and a jerkin's lining;—rumple the one,—you rumple the other.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

9 The earthy tabernacle weigheth down the mind that museth upon many things.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ix, 15.

10 And, as her mind grew worse and worse,
Her body—it grew better.

WORDSWORTH, The Idiot Boy, l. 415.

XI—Mind: Mind and Matter

11 All the choir of heaven and furniture of earth—in a word, all those bodies which compose the mighty frame of the world—have not any subsistence without a mind.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Principles of Human Knowledge.

12 Mind and Matter.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, title of dissertation.

Berkeley, in the early part of his life, wrote a dissertation against the existence of material beings and external objects, with such subtlety that Whiston acknowledged himself unable to confute it.

DR. JOHN HAWKESWORTH, Note to Swift's Letters, 1769.

13 When Bishop Berkeley said "there was no matter,"

And proved it—'twas no matter what he said.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 1.

What is mind? No matter. What is matter? Never mind.

THOMAS HEWITT KEY. (On the authority of F. J. Furnivall.)

14 Doctor Berkeley, Bishop of Cloyne, a very worthy, ingenious, and learned man, has written a book to prove that there is no such thing as matter, and that nothing exists but in idea. . . . His arguments, strictly speaking, are unanswerable; but yet I am so far from being convinced by them, that I am determined to go on to eat and drink, and walk and ride, in order to keep that Matter, which I so mistakenly imagine my body at present to consist of, in as good plight as possible.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

15 Bishop Berkeley destroyed this world in one volume octavo; and nothing remained, after his time, but mind; which experienced a similar fate from the hand of Mr. Hume in 1737.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy: Introductory Lecture.

16 Mind moves matter. (Mens agitat molem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 727.

17 I believe that there is no God, but that matter is God and God is matter; and that it is no matter whether there is any God or no.

<sup>1</sup>
The present moment is our ain,
The neist we never saw.
JAMES BEATTIE, Stanza, added to Mickle's song, The Sailor's Wife.
He who governed the world before I was born shall take care of it likewise when I am dead.
My part is to improve the present moment.
JOHN WESLEY.

But yet what minutes! Moments like to these
Rend men's lives into immortalities.
BYRON, The Island. Canto iii, st. 4.
But what minutes! Count them by sensation, and not by calendars, and each moment is a day, and the race a life.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 2.
There are moments in life worth purchasing

Distils from thence the tears of wrath and strife,
And so turns wine to water back again.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Steps to the Temple: To Our Lord, Upon the Water Made Wine.

The water owns a power Divine,

And conscious blushes into wine;

Its very nature changed displays

The power divine that it obeys.

SEDULIUS, Hymn. Sedulius (Scotus Hyber-

I—Misery: Definitions

5 It is a miserable state of mind to have few things to desire, and many things to fear.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

6 Nothing is a misery,
Unless our weakness apprehend it so.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act i, sc. 1. See also MIND: ITS POWER.

7 To have a stomach and lack meat, to have meat and lack a stomach, to lie in bed and cannot rest are great miseries.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

8 Misery of any kind is not the cause of Immorality, but the effect thereof.

CARLYLE, Count Cagliostro: Flight Last.

And all the fair examples of renown
Out of distress and misery are grown.

SAMUEL DANIEL, On the Earl of Southampton.

9 O Misery! where once thou art possessed,
See but how quickly thou canst alter kind,
And, like a Circe, metamorphosest
The man that hath not a most godlike mind.

DRAYTON, The Barons' Wars. Bk. vi, st. 77.

10 Nay, misery's blackest night may chance,
By Fortune's turn, to show a happy dawn.
(Ἄλλ' ἔστιν ἔστιν ἢ λίαν δυσπραξία λίαν διδοῦσα μεταβολάς, ὅταν τύχῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 721.

Better days, perhaps, await the wretched. (Forsan miseros meliora sequentur.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 153.

My desolation does begin to make
A better life.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 1.

11 Never did any public misery
Rise of itself: God's plagues still grounded are

On common stains of our humanity;
And, to the flame which ruineth mankind,
Man gives the matter, or at least gives wind.

FULKE GREVILLE, Treatise of Warres.

The chief cause of our misery is less the violence of our passions than the feebleness of our virtues.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. v, No. 25.

12 Misery is but the shadow of happiness. Happiness is but the cloak of misery.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 58.

13 The secret of being miserable is to have leisure to bother about whether you are happy or not. The cure for it is occupation.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

16 It is misery enough to have once been happy.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, p. 166. See also MEMORY: ITS BITTERNESS.

17 Horatio looked handsomely miserable, like
Hamlet slipping on a piece of orange-peel.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Horatio Sparkins.

18 It would be far better to work at the prevention of misery, than to multiply places of refuge for the miserable.

DIDEROT, The Encyclopedia. Vol. i, p. 182.

19 He beareth his misery best that hideth it most.

GIDEON HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 95.

20 There are a good many real miseries in life that we cannot help smiling at, but they are the smiles that make wrinkles and not dim-ples.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Poet at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 3.

21 It is easy to mock the miserable. (Facile est miserum irridere.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 239. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

One should never mock the miserable, for who can be sure of continued happiness?

(Il ne faut jamais moquer des misérables, Car qui peut s'assurer d'être toujours heureux?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 17.

Misery makes sport to mock itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 85.

Press anything you will, a groan will issue forth.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. v, No. 12.

Nothing almost sees miracles But misery.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 172.

Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows.

wretchedness. (Miserias properant suas Au-dire miseri.)

SENECA, Hercules Cætus, l. 754.

4 Poor naked wretches, whereso'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as this.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 28.

First Murderer: I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

Second Murderer: And I another
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 109.

5 Sharp misery had worn him to the bone.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 41.

6 All of which misery I saw, and a great part of which I was. (Quæque ipse miserrima vidi, Et quorum pars magna fui.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 5.

7 Preach to the storm, and reason with despair,
But tell not Misery's son that life is fair.

But for domestic quarrels one will do.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 19.

<sup>5</sup> As Juan mused on mutability,
Or on his mistress—terms synonymous.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 20.

But on the whole they were a happy pair,
As happy as unlawful love could make them;
The gentleman was fond, the lady fair,
Their chains so slight, 'twas not worth while to break them.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 54.

Not that he had no cares to vex,
He loved the muses and the sex;
And sometimes these so froward are,
They made him wish himself at war;
But soon his wrath being o'er, he took Another mistress, or new book.

BYRON, Mazeppa. St. 4.

<sup>6</sup> A Mistress moderately fair,
And good as guardian angels are,
Only belov'd and loving me.

<sup>13</sup> How d'you like her? Puts old Velasquez in his place. A young mistress is better than an old master, eh?

H. G. WELLS, Autocracy of Mr. Parham. Ch. 3.

<sup>14</sup> A mistress should be like a little country retreat near the town; not to dwell in constantly, but only for a night and away.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

Next to the pleasure of making a new mistress is that of being rid of an old one.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

I—Moderation: Apothegms

CLEOBULUS OF LINDUS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 579 B.C. This phrase, his maxim, is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple of Apollo at Delphi. The Latin form is, "Optimus modus." (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 93.)

Is not ariston metron "moderation is best"? ("Ἀριστον μέτρον an sit optimus modus?")

CLEOBULUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 152.)

Observe moderation: proportion is best in all things. (Μέτρα φυλάσσεσθαι καιρὸς δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἀριστος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 694.

I, who have so much and so universally adored this ἀριστον μέτρον, "excellent moderation," of ancient times, and who have concluded the most moderate measure the most perfect, shall I pretend to an unreasonable and prodigious old age?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

Be not too zealous; moderation is best in all things. (Μηδὲν ἄγαν σπεύδειν πάντων μέσ' ἀρίστα.)

THEOGNIS, Sententiæ. No. 335.

To find the medium asks some share of wit, And therefore 'tis a mark fools never hit.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 879.

Little wealth, little care.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A little with quiet is the only diet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

There is measure in all things; certain limits, beyond and short of which right cannot be found. (Est modus in rebus, sunt certi denique fines, Quos ultra citraque nequit consistere rectum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 106.

Yes, there's a mean in morals. Life has lines To north or south of which all virtue pines.

HORACE, Satires, i, 1, 106. (Conington, tr.)

In everything, I wot, there lieth measure.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 715. (c. 1380)

Measure is Medicine.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus i, l. 33. (1362)

Measure is a merry mean.

JOHN RUSSELL, Boke of Nurture, l. 107. (c. 1450)

For measure is treasure.

FRANCIS SEGER, School of Virtue. (1557)

My glass is not large, but I drink from my glass. (Mon verre n'est pas grand, mais je bois dans mon verre.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET.

Moderation is the languor and sloth of the soul, as ambition is its activity and ardor. (La modération est la langueur et la paresse de l'âme, comme l'ambition en est l'activité et l'ardeur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 293.

Who wishes to travel far spares his steed. (Qui veut voyager loin ménage sa monture.)

RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1.

Things that are moderate last a long while. (Moderata durant.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 259.

Short is the duration of things which are immoderate. (Immodicis brevis est ætas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 29, l. 7.

They are as sick that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing: it is no mean happiness therefore, to be seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 5.

Be moderate, be moderate.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 1.

II—Moderation: The Golden Mean

The golden mean is free from trips.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Pleasant Quips, p. 14. (1596)

Safely he jogs along the way which "Golden Mean" the sages call;

Who scales the brow of frowning Alp must face full many a slip and fall.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 12.

Whoso cultivates the golden mean, avoids the poverty of a hovel and the envy of a palace. (Auream quisquis mediocritatem Diligit, tutus caret obsoleti Sordibus tecti, caret invidenda Sobrius aula.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 5.

He that holds fast the golden mean, And lives contentedly between

The little and the great,

Feels not the wants that pinch the poor,

Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door,

Imbittering all his state.

HORACE, Odes, ii, 10. (Cowper, tr.)

The golden rule in life is moderation in all things. (Adprime in vita esse utile, ut ne quid nimis.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 61. (Act i, sc. 1.)

The proper mean. (Le juste milieu.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Comte d'Argental, 29 Nov., 1765; PASCAL, Pensées.

The golden mean, and quiet flow Of truths that soften hatred, temper strife. WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 11.

III—Moderation: Nothing in Excess

Nothing to excess. That is enough, or precept too will run to excess. (Nil nimium. Satis hoc, ne sit et hoc nimium.)

ANACHARSIS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 49.)

Nothing in excess. (Μηδὲν ἄγαν.)

EURIPIDES. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 156.)

Nothing in excess. (Μηδὲν ἄγαν.)

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 63. Laertius also ascribes the saying to Socrates, who lived two centuries later. Bk. ii, sec. 32: "Being once asked in what consisted the virtue of a young man, Socrates said, 'In doing nothing in excess.'"—Τὸ μὴδὲν ἄγαν.) The more familiar Latin form is, "Ne quid nimis." With the equally famous, "Know thyself" (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν), it was inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi.

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. Bk. ii, No. 3.

The best things carried to excess are wrong.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1039.

Well observe

The rule of Not too much, by temperance taught.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 527.

This modest charm of not too much,
Part seen, imagined part.

WORDSWORTH, To May, l. 95.

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 238. (Act i, sc. 2.)

<sup>4</sup> Between excess and famine lies a mean;
Plain, but not sordid; tho' not splendid,
clean.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 47.

<sup>5</sup> The too constant use even of good things is hurtful. (Bonarum rerum consuetudo pessima est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 55.

He who has plenty of pepper will pepper his cabbage.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 673.

<sup>6</sup> It is the quality of a great soul to despise great things, and to prefer moderation to excess. (Magni animi est magna contemnere, ac mediocria malle quam nimia.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxix, 4.

<sup>7</sup> Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 124.

Can we ever have too much of a good thing?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 6.

People may have too much of a good thing.

JOHN WOLCOT, Subjects for Painters: The Gentleman and His Wife.

<sup>8</sup> To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light

To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,

Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 11.

But Shakespeare also says, 'tis very silly

"To gild refined gold, or paint the lily."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 76.

<sup>9</sup> Moderation is a fatal thing. Nothing succeeds like excess.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

The road of excess leads to the palace of wisdom.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

There is moderation even in excess.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 1.

IV—Moderation: Living on Little

<sup>10</sup> Men live better on little. (Vivitur exiguo melius.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 215.

Our portion is not large, indeed;

But then how little do we need,

For Nature's calls are few!

In this the art of living lies,

To want no more than may suffice,

And make that little do.

We'll therefore relish with content,

Whate'er kind Providence has sent,

Nor aim beyond our pow'r;

For, if our stock be very small,

'Tis prudent to enjoy it all,

Nor lose the present hour.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. Sts. 9, 10.

<sup>11</sup> He who understands the limits of life knows how easy it is to procure enough to remove the pain of want and make the whole life complete and perfect. Hence he has no longer any need of things which are to be won only by labor and conflict.

EPICURUS, Sovran Maxims. No. 21.

<sup>12</sup> He will always be a slave who does not know how to live upon a little. (Serviet æternum, quia parvo nesciet uti.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 41.

Let's live with that small pittance which we have;

Who covets more is evermore a slave.

HERRICK, The Covetous Still Captive.

<sup>13</sup> What, and how great, the virtue and the art
To live on little with a cheerful heart!

(Quæ virtus et quanta, boni, sit vivere parvo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 1. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>14</sup> O Luxury, extravagant of resources and never satisfied with what costs little, . . . learn how little it costs to prolong life, and how little nature demands. . . . Running water and bread are enough for mankind.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 373.

1
Thou seest how few be the things, the which if a man has at his command his life flows gently on and is divine.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 5.

Remember this,—that very little is needed to make a happy life. (Τούτου μέμνησο δέ, καὶ ἐπι κέλευ, ὅτι ἐν ὀλιγίστοις κείται τὸ εὐδαιμόνως βιώσαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec.
67.

2
How many things I can do without! (Πόσων ἐγὼ χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχω.)

SOCRATES, on looking in the shop windows.
(DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 8.)

3
Man's rich with little, were his judgment
true;

Nature is frugal, and her wants are few;
These few wants answer'd, brings sincere delights,

But fools create themselves new appetites.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 166.

V—Moderation: Enough Is As Good As a Feast

4
Enough sufficeth for the wise. (Ἐπεὶ τὰ γ' ἀρκούνθ' ἱκανὰ τοῖς γε σώφροσιν.)

EURIPIDES, Phaenissai, l. 554.

Now that's enough! (Jam satis est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 89, l. 1.

Who has enough, of no more has he need.

ROBERT HENRYSON, *The Town and Country
Mouse*.

Enough, with over-measure.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 140.

5
As good is enough as a great feast.

JOHN LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, 59. (c.
1420)

Enough is as good as a feast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11.
(1546) Also CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, iii,
2; VANBRUGH, Relapse, v; BICKERSTAFFE,
Love in a Village, iii, 1, and many others.

6
"Pray take them, Sir—enough's a feast;
Eat some, and pocket up the rest."

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. vii, l. 24.

7
Distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 73.

8
I neither want nor yet abound,—
Enough's a feast, content is crowned.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, A Contented Mind.

9
Enough is a plenty, too much is a pride.

THOMAS TUSSEY, *Hundred Points of Good
Husbandry: Dinner Matters*.

VI—Moderation: Its Virtues

10
Moderation, the noblest gift of Heaven.
(Σωφροσύνα, δῶρημα κάλλιστον Θεῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 635.

Moderation: a virtue not to be despised by the most exalted among men, and prized also by the gods.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 2.

11 Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States.
Bk. iii, Of Moderation. Quoted by Bishop
Joseph Hall in the introduction to Christian Moderation as an Oriental proverb.

12
True happiness springs from moderation.
(Aus Mässigkeit entspringt ein reines Glück.)

GOETHE, Die Natürliche Tochter. Act ii, sc. 5.

13
Let him who has enough ask for nothing more. (Quod satis est cui contigit, nihil am-plius optet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. ii, l. 46.

Give us enough but with a sparing hand.

EDMUND WALLER, Reflections.

You never know what is enough unless you know what is more than enough.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

14
He who desires only what is enough, is troubled neither by raging seas, nor hail-smitten vineyards, nor an unproductive farm. (Desiderantem quod satis est neque Tumultuosum sollicitat mare, . . . Non verberatæ gran-dine vineæ Fundusque mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 25.

15
The moderation of fortunate people comes from the calm which good fortune gives to their tempers. (La modération des personnes heureuses vient du calme que la bonne fortune donne à leur humeur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 17.

Moderation is like sobriety: one would like to eat more, but one fears to make oneself ill. (La modération est comme la sobriété: on voudrait bien manger davantage, mais on craint de se faire mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 507.

16
Enjoy thy possessions as if about to die, and use them sparingly, as if about to live. That man is wise who understands both these commandments, and hath applied a measure both to thrift and unthrift.

LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 26.)

It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with an even mind. (Divitiæ grandes homini sunt, vivere parce Æquo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1117.

17
Take this at least, this last advice, my son:

Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on:
The coursers of themselves will run too fast,
Your art must be to moderate their haste.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 147. (Addison, tr.) The story of Phaëton.

Up hill, our course is rather slow;
Down hill, how merrily we go;
But when 'tis neither up nor down,
It is a middling pace I own.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxii, l. 227.

1 In many things the middle have the best; be mine a middle station. (Πολλὰ μέσοισιν ἀρίστα.
Μέσος θεῶν ἐν πόλει εἶναι.)

PHOCYLIDES, Fragment. (ARISTOTLE, Politics, iv, 6, 8.)

Tenants of life's middle state,
Securely plac'd between the small and great,
Whose character, yet undebauch'd, retains
Two-thirds of all the virtue that remains.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 807.

He knows to live who keeps the middle state,
And neither leans on this side nor on that.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 61.

2 Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 8.

3 Only moderation gives charm to life. (Nur Maas ihm Reiz.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 145.

4 A thatched roof once covered free men; under marble and gold dwells slavery. (Culmus liberos textit, sub marmore atque auro servitus habitat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 10.

5 In modesty of fortune there are the fewer dangers. (Ex mediocritate fortunæ, pauciora pericula sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 60.

6 There is a limit to enjoyment, though the sources of wealth be boundless,
And the choicest pleasures of life lie within the ring of moderation.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Compensation, l. 15.

VII—Moderation: Some Wishes

7 In the downhill of life when I find I'm declining,

May my lot no less fortunate be
Than a snug elbow-chair can afford for reclining,

And a cot that looks o'er the wide sea.

JOHN COLLINS, In the Downhill of Life.

8 Ah, yet, e'er I descend to th' grave,

May I a small House and large Garden have,
And a few Friends, and many Books, both
true,

Both wise, and both delightful too.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish. St. 2.

This only grant me, that my means may lie
Too low for envy, for contempt too high.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

9 Some have too much, yet still they crave;

I little have, yet seek no more:

They are but poor, though much they have,

And I am rich with little store:

They poor, I rich; they beg, I give;

They lack, I lend; they pine, I live.

SIR EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is. St. 5.

10 May heaven (it's all I wish for) send
One genial room to treat a friend,

Where decent cupboard, little plate,

Display benevolence, not state.

And may my humble dwelling stand

Upon some chosen spot of land:

A pond before full to the brim,

Where cows may cool, and geese may swim;

Behind, a green like velvet neat,

Soft to the eye, and to the feet.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 642.

11 Give me a three-legged table, a shell of clean salt, and a coat that, however coarse, will keep out the cold. (Sit mihi mensa tripes et Concha salis puri et toga, quæ defendere frigus Quamvis, crassa queat.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 13.

12 This is what I prayed for: a piece of land not very large, where there would be a garden, and near the house a spring of ever-flowing water, and above these a bit of woodland. More and better than this have the gods done for me. I am content.

(Hoc erat in votis: modus agri non ita magnus.

Hortus ubi et tecto vicinus jugis aquæ fons
Et paulum silvæ super his foret. Auctius atque

Di melius fecere. Bene est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 1. The opening words give expression, not to a wish, but to satisfaction as the poet looks out across his little farm, the realization of his dreams. Hence the past tense of erat.

Give me, ye gods, the produce of one field,
That so I neither may be rich nor poor;
And having just enough, not covet more.

DRYDEN, Imitation of Horace.

O grant me, Heaven, a middle state,
Neither too humble nor too great;
More than enough for nature's ends,
With something left to treat my friends.

DAVID MALLET, Imitation of Horace.

I've often wish'd that I had clear
For life, six hundred pounds a year;
A handsome house to lodge a friend;
A river at my garden's end;
A terrace walk, and half a rood
Of land set out to plant a wood.
SWIFT, Imitation of Horace. Bk. ii, sat. 6.

In all my wand'rings round this world of
care,
In all my griefs—and God has given my share—
I still had hopes my latest hours to crown,
Amidst these humble bowers to lay me down.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 83.

Ye gods! my wishes are confined
To—health of body, peace of mind,
Clean linen, and a guinea!
EDWARD LYSACHT, Ambition.

That spot of ground pleases me in which small possession makes me happy, and where slight resources are abundant. (Illa placet tellus in qua res parva beatum Me facit et tenues luxuriantur opes.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 96, l. 5.

If I live to grow old, as I find I go down,
Let this be my fate: in a country town,
May I have a warm house, with a stone at my gate,
And a cleanly young girl to rub my bald pate.
May I govern my passions with absolute sway,
Grow wiser and better as my strength wears
away,
Without gout or stone, by a gentle decay.
WALTER POPE, The Old Man's Wish. (1685)

Mine be a cot beside the hill;
A bee-hive's hum shall soothe my ear;
A willow brook, that turns a mill,
With many a fall, shall linger near.
SAMUEL ROGERS, A Wish.

Give me, indulgent gods! with mind serene,
And guiltless heart, to range the sylvan scene;
No splendid poverty, no smiling care,
No well-bred hate, or servile grandeur, there.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 243.

MODESTY

See also Blushing, Humility

I—Modesty: Definitions

Modesty cannot properly be described as a virtue, for it is a feeling rather than a disposition—a kind of fear of disrepute.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iv, ch. 9,
sec. 1.

Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750.

Modesty is that feeling by which honorable shame acquires a valuable and lasting authority.

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica. Bk. ii, 56.

Modesty is the citadel of beauty and of virtue. (Αἰδώς τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ ἀρετῆς πόλις.)

DEMADES, Peri Dodekætiās. (MÜLLER, Oratores Attici. Vol. ii, p. 438.)

Modesty is often mistaken for secrecy, and silence for bad temper. (Plerumque modestus Occupat obscuri speciem, taciturnitus acerbi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 94.

Modesty, and unstained Honor, sister to Justice. (Pudor, et Justiciæ soror, Incorrupta Fides.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode. 24, l. 6.

Modesty is to merit what shadows are to a painting; it gives it force and relief. (La mo-destie est au mérite ce que les ombres sont aux figures dans un tableau: elle lui donne de la force et du relief.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 2.

Modesty antedates clothes and will be resumed when clothes are no more. Modesty died when clothes were born. Modesty died when false modesty was born.

MARK TWAIN. (PAINE, Life. Vol. iii, p. 1513.)

II—Modesty: Apothegms

With time diffidence dies away in man. (Ἐν χρόνῳ δ' ἀποφθίνει τὸ τάρβος ἀνθρώποισιν.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 857.

Modesty does not long survive innocence.

EDMUND BURKE, *Impeachment of Warren
Hastings*, 17 Feb., 1788.

I'm modesty personified!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

I'm shy, nervous, modest, retiring, and diffident.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

There's no false modesty about you.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

An impudent fellow may counterfeit modesty, but I'll be hanged if a modest man can ever counterfeit impudence.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act ii.

A truly modest fellow. (Multum demissus homo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 57.

Modesty cannot be taught, it must be born.
(Pudor doceri non potest, nasci potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 492.

Modesty, once banished, never returns. (Pudor dimissus numquam redit.)

6 Ever with the best desert goes diffidence.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scutcheon. Act i, sc. 2.

7 Modesty sets off one newly come to honour.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Thy modesty's a candle to thy merit.

HENRY FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 3, l. 8.

8 Modesty becomes a young man. (Decet verendum esse adolescentem.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 833. (Act v, sc. 1.)

9 I have done one braver thing
Than all the Worthies did,
And yet a braver thence doth spring,
Which is, to keep that hid.

JOHN DONNE, The Undertaking.

10 He full of bashfulness and truth,
Loved much, hoped little, and desired naught.

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 16. (Fairfax, tr.)

IV—Modesty: Its Faults

11 Modest dogs miss much meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 Modesty in a man is a crime. Don't be modest. It is a woman's virtue.

FREDERICK WARDE, Interview, on his 80th birthday, 23 Feb., 1931.

13 All men have their faults; too much modesty is his.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act ii.

William was once a bashful youth;
His modesty was such,

That one might say (to say the truth),
He rather had too much.

WILLIAM COWPER, Of Himself.

14 There is a luxury in self-dispraise;
And inward self-disparagement affords
To meditative spleen a grateful feast.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 475.

V—Modesty in Women

15 Modesty is the beauty of women.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Rare is agreement between beauty and modesty. (Rara est adeo concordia formæ Atque pudicitiae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 297. See also under BEAUTY.

16 Her modest looks the cottage might adorn,
Sweet as the primrose peeps beneath the thorn.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 329.

17 Like the violet, which alone
Prosperes in some happy shade,
My Castara lives unknown

To no looser eye betrayed.

WILLIAM HABINGTON, Castara. (1634)

18 Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy the sweet view on 't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 9.

Modesty may more betray our sense
Than woman's lightness.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 168.

19 Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 285.

20 He saw her charming, but he saw not half
The charms her downcast modesty conceal'd.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 229.

21 There is no woman, where there's no reserve.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 45.

Let those ankles never swerve
From their exquisite reserve.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction.

22 Naked in nothing should a woman be;
But veil her very wit with modesty:
Let man discover, let her not display,
But yield her charms of mind with sweet delay.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 106.

Good Husbandry: Good Husbandry Lessons*.
He that makes money before he gets wit,
Will be but a short while master of it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6432.
- 5 He that wants money wants everything.
RICHARD CUMBERLAND, *The Fashionable
Lover*. Act ii, sc. 1.
A man without money is a bow without an arrow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 317.
The skilfullest wanting money is scorned.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 18.

- 6 Be it better or be it worse,
Please you the man that bears the purse.
THOMAS DELONEY, Thomas of Reading.
- 7 Wery glad to see you, indeed, and hope our acquaintance may be a long 'un, as the gen'l'm'n said to the fi' pun' note.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 25.
- 8 Money never cometh out of season.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, 82. (1633)
Money in purse will be always in fashion.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3435.
- 9 He that hath no money needeth no purse.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, 138. (1633)
No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 148.
- 10 Money maketh horses run.
JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 30. (1578)
Money makes the old mare trot and the young tit amble.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 7. (1605)
- 11 It is money makes the mare to trot.
JOHN WOLCOT, Ode to Pitt. (1790)
Will you lend me your mare to go a mile?
No, she is lame leaping o'er a stile.
But, if you will her to me spare,
You shall have money for your mare.
Oh, ho! Say you so?
Money will make the mare to go.
UNKNOWN, Old Glees and Catches.
- 12 If you would know the value of money, go and try to borrow some.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.
- 13 They who are of the opinion that money will do everything, may very well be suspected to do everything for money.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 242.
- 14 To have money is a fear, not to have it a grief.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 15 Money will be slave or master. (Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 47.
Money is a good servant but a bad master.
(L'argent est un bon serviteur, mais un méchant maître.)
BACON, Menegiana, ii, 296. Quoting a French proverb.
- 16 Proud of your money you may strut,
But fortune does not change your birth.
(Licet superbus ambules pecunia, Fortuna non mutat genus.)
HORACE, Epodes. No. iv, l. 5.

1 Without money and without price.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 1.

2 Few listen without a desire of conviction to those who advise them to spare their money.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 26.

3 Loss of money is bewailed with louder lamentations than a death. (Majore tumultu Planguntur nummi quam funera.)
 JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 130.

Nothing stings more deeply than the loss of money. (Nec quicquam acrius quam pecuniæ damnum stimulat.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, sec. 44.

He has lost his purse. (Zonam perdidit.)
 HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 40.

4 The devil of money has the better end of the staff.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Quevedo's Visions, 38.

She does not know everything, but she has got hold of the right end of the stick.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. v.

5 The plainest print cannot be read through a gold eagle.

7 There is no fortress so strong that money cannot take it. (Nihil tam munitum, quod non expugnari pecunia possit.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. 1, sec. 2.

8 As I sat at the café, I said to myself,
They may talk as they please about what they call pelf,

They may sneer as they like about eating and drinking,

But help it I cannot, I cannot help thinking
How pleasant it is to have money, heigh-ho!

How pleasant it is to have money!

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Spectator Ab Extra.

11 Queen Cash gives birth and beauty. (Et genus et formam regina Pecunia donat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 37.

Sir, money, money, the most charming of all things—money, which will say more in one moment than the most eloquent lover can in years.
Perhaps you will say a man is not young; I answer, he is rich; he is not genteel, handsome, witty, brave, good-humored, but he is rich, rich, rich, rich, rich,—that one word contradicts everything you can say against him.

HENRY FIELDING, The Miser. Act iii.

O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a-year.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 4, l. 32.

<sup>4</sup> Money is indeed the most important thing in the world; and all sound and successful personal and national morality should have this fact for its basis.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot: Preface.
The universal regard for money is the one hopeful fact in our civilization. Money is the most important thing in the world. It represents health, strength, honour, generosity and beauty. . . . Not the least of its virtues is that it destroys base people as certainly as it fortifies and dignifies noble people.

BERNARD SHAW.

The seven deadly sins. . . . Food, clothing, firing, rent, taxes, respectability and children. Nothing can lift those seven millstones from man's neck but money; and the spirit cannot soar until the millstones are lifted.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii.

<sup>5</sup> It is money that sacks cities, and drives men forth from hearth and home; warps and seduces native innocence, and breeds a habit of dishonesty.

So we get the chinks,
We will bear with the stinks.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax, 68. (1596)

V—Money: The Love of Money

See also Avarice

1 My theme is always one, and ever was—
"Radix malorum est Cupiditas."

CHAUCER, Pardoner's Tale: Prologue, l. 5.

2 The love of money is the mother-city of all evils. (Τὴν φιλαργυρίαν εἶπε μητρόπολιν παντῶν τῶν κακῶν.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 50.)

For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 10. Often incorrectly quoted, "Money is the root of all evil."

Lack of money is the root of all evil.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. Also attributed to Mark Twain.

3 The love of money and the love of learning seldom meet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 The love of money grows as the money itself grows. (Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 139.

VI—Money: Contempt for Money

5 Thy money perish with thee.

New Testament: Acts, viii, 20.

6 I cannot afford to waste my time making money.

AGASSIZ, when offered a large sum for a course of lectures at a western college. (WHIPPLE, Recollections of Eminent Men.)

7 "Vile money!" True. Let's have enough
To save our thinking of such stuff.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

8 Money, which is of very uncertain value, and sometimes has no value at all and even less.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

9 Let us despise money.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, The Weak Things of God. Vol. ii, p. 59.

To despise money at the right moment is sometimes the way to make it. (Pecuniam in loco negligere maximum interdumst lucrum.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 216. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

10 The beggarly last doit.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 321.

11 Money, thou bane of bliss and source of woe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Avarice.

12 What beauty is there in a piled up heap [of money]? (Quid habet pulchri constructus acervus?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 44.

13 Money never made any man rich, but his mind. He that can order himself to the law of nature, is not only without sense, but the fear of poverty.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

14 Money amassed with excessive care chokes many. (Plures nimia congesta pecunia cura Strangulat.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 12.

15 A money-mong'ring pitiable brood.

KEATS, Addressed to Haydon. St. 2.

16 Never do anything for money; leave gain to trades pursued for gain.

PERIANDER. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander. Sec. 4.)

17 Trade it may help, Society extend,
But lures the Pirate, and corrupts the friend:
It raises armies in a nation's aid,
But bribes a senate, and the land's betray'd.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 29.

18 Who steals my purse steals trash.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 157.

19 The price we pay for money is paid in liberty.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies, p. 138.

20 Not greedy of filthy lucre.

New Testament: I Timothy, iii, 3.

21 Whereunto is money good?

Who has it not wants hardihood,
Who has it has much trouble and care,
Who once has had it has despair.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinnedichte. (Longfellow, tr.)

22 Money—money, like everything else—is a deception and a disappointment.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. ii, ch. 7.

MONK AND NUN

23 Despair makes the monk. (Desperatio facit monachum.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Quoted.

24 Merrily sang the monks in Ely
When Cnut, King, rowed thereby;
Row, my knights, near the land,
And hear we these monks' song.

KING CANUTE (?), Song of the Monks of Ely. (c. 1030) A famous early English ballad, recorded by a monk of Ely in 1166. (SPENS, History of the English People.)

1
There was also a Nonne, a Prioeresse,
That of her smiling was full simple and coy.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 118.

From Eastertide to Eastertide
For ten long years her patient knees
Engraved the stones,—the fittest bride
Of Christ in all the diocese.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of a Nun.

2
I like the church, I like a cowl,
I love a prophet of the soul;
And on my heart monastic aisles
Fall like sweet strains or pensive smiles;
Yet not for all his faith can see,
Would I that cowl'd churchman be.
EMERSON, The Problem.

3
If you become a nun, dear,
A friar I will be;
In any cell you run, dear,
Pray look behind for me.
The roses all turn pale, too;
The doves all take the veil, too;
The blind will see the show;
What! you become a nun, my dear.
I'll not believe it, no!
LEIGH HUNT, The Nun.

4
I envy them, those monks of old,
Their books they read, and their beads they told.
G. P. R. JAMES, The Monks of Old.

5
It was a friar of orders gray
Walked forth to tell his beads.
THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray.
(Reliques. Ser. i, bk. ii, No. 18.) Arranged by Percy from fragments of old ballads.

To happy convents, bosom'd deep in vines,
Where slumber abbots purple as their wines.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 301.

6
I think that friars and their hoods,
Their doctrines and their maggots,
Have lighted up too many feuds,
And far too many faggots.
W. M. PRAED, Chant of Brazen Head. St. 8.

7
The habit does not make the monk. (L'habit ne fait point le moine.)
RABELAIS, Works: The Author's Prologue.

All hoods make not monks.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 23.
See also under APPEARANCE.

8
Sacred nun . . . disciplined; ay, dieted in grace.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 260.

Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis. St. 126.

Unhappy nuns, whose common breath's a sigh.
WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: With How Sad Steps.

9
Ere yet, in scorn of Peter's-pence,
And number'd bead, and shrift,
Bluff Harry broke into the spence
And turn'd the cowl's adrift.
TENNYSON, The Talking Oak. St. 12.

10
If thou wilt stand firm and grow as thou oughtest, esteem thyself as a pilgrim and stranger upon earth.

Thou must be contented for Christ's sake to be esteemed as a fool in this world, if thou desire to lead the life of a monk.

Dress and tonsure profit little; but change of heart and perfect mortification of the passions make a true monk.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 17.

11
O ay! the Monks, the Monks, they did the mischief!

Theirs all the grossness, all the superstition
Of a most gross and superstitious age.

UNKNOWN. (SCOTT, The Monastery.) Quoted as from an old play.

MONTH

12
Thirty days hath November,
April, June, and September,
February hath twenty-eight alone,
And all the rest have thirty-one.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Abridgement of the Chronicles of England. (1570) "A rule to know how many days every month in the year hath." Reprinted in 1577, in Harrison's Description of England, as an English version of these Latin hexameters:

Junius, Aprilis, Septemque, Novemberque tricenos;

Unum plus reliqui, Februus tenet octo vicens;
At si bissextus fuerit, superadditur unus.

13
Thirty days hath September,
April, June, and November,
February has twenty-eight alone,
All the rest have thirty-one;
Excepting leap year,—that's the time
When February's days are twenty-nine.

UNKNOWN. (The Return from Parnassus.
1606.)

Fourth, eleventh, ninth, and sixth,
Thirty days to each affix;
Every other thirty-one,
Except the second month alone.

A version common among the Friends of Chester County, Pa.

14
For hark! the last chime of the dial has ceased,

And Old Time, who his leisure to cozen,
Has finished the Months, like the flasks at a feast,

Is preparing to tap a fresh dozen.
THOMAS HOOD, For the New Year.

Touch'd with the dewy sadness of the time,
To think how the bright months had spent their prime.

THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 8.

1
A little month.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 147.

2
He hath a month's mind here to mistress
Frances.

UNKNOWN, London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 2.
(1605)

When people earnestly desire a thing, they frequently say, they have a month's mind to it.

PECK, Desid. Curiosa, p. 229. (1731)

MONUMENT

3
Death comes even to the monumental stones and the names inscribed thereon. (Mors etiam saxis nominibusque venit.)

AUSONIUS, Epistles. Epis. xxxv, l. 9.

No—marble and recording brass decay,
And, like the graver's mem'ry, pass away.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 551.

But monuments themselves memorials need.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 2.

4
Sorry preëminence of high descent!
Above the vulgar born, to rot in state.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 154.

Proud even in death, here rot in state.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 726.

5 Ulysses in Hecuba cared not how meanly he lived, if he might find a noble tomb after death.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 1.

6
Gold once out of the earth is no more due unto it; what was unreasonably committed to the ground, is reasonably resumed from it;
let monuments and rich fabrics, not riches, adorn men's ashes.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 3.

To extend our memories by monuments, whose death we daily pray for, and whose duration we cannot hope, without injury to our expectations in the advent of the last day, were a contradiction to our beliefs.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

7
Let not a monument give you or me hopes,
Since not a pinch of dust remains of Cheops.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 219.

So much for monuments that have forgotten
Their very record!

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act v, sc. 1.

See also under OBLIVION.

8
Monuments are made for victories over strangers: domestic troubles should be covered with the veil of sadness.

JULIUS CÆSAR, refusing a monument after the battle of Pharsalia. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 56.) Charles Sumner quoted these words after the Civil War.

9
I would much rather have men ask why I have no statue than why I have one. (Μάλλον γὰρ βούλομαι ζητεῖσθαι, διὰ τί μου ἀνδριὰς οὐ κεῖται ἢ διὰ τί κείται.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, *Lives: Marcus
Cato*. Ch. 19, sec. 4.)

10
Toils much to earn a monumental pile,
That may record the mischiefs he hath done.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 276.

11
Do not, good sir, judge the dead by his monument. The stone is senseless and can cover a foul corpse as well as any other. (Μὴ λίθῳ τεκμαίρεο, ὃ λῶστέ, τὸν θανόντα.)

CRINAGORAS, Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 380.)

12
Yet, Corah, thou shalt from Oblivion pass;
Erect thyself thou Monumental Brass.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 632.
Referring to Titus Oates.

13
The monuments of noble men are their virtues. (Γενναίων δ' ἀρεταὶ πόνων τοῖς θανούσιν ἀγαλμα.)

EURIPIDES, Herakles Mainomenos, l. 357.

14
Ye shall not pile, with servile toil,
Your monuments upon my breast,
Nor yet within the common soil
Lay down the wreck of power to rest,
Where man can boast that he has trod
On him that was "the scourge of God."

EDWARD EVERETT, Alaric the Visigoth. St. 3.

15
How poor remembrances are statues, tombs,
And other monuments that men erect
To princes, which remain closed rooms
Where but a few behold them.

JOHN FLORIO, Ode.

16
Tombs are the clothes of the dead; a grave is but a plain suit, and a rich monument is one embroidered.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Tombs.

17
There wants no marble for a tomb
Whose breast hath marble been to me.

WILLIAM HABINGTON, To Roses in the Bosom of Castara.

18
Not by marble graven with public records is the breath and life of goodly heroes continued after death. (Non incisa notis marmora publicis, Per quæ spiritus et vita redit bonis
Post mortem ducibus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 8, l. 13.

19
See nations slowly wise, and meanly just,

To buried merit raise the tardy bust.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 159.

1 He is covered by the heavens who has no sepulchral urn. (Cœlo tegitur qui non habet urnam.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 819.

He that unburied lies wants not his hearse,
For unto him a tomb's the Universe.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 41.

Nothing can cover his high fame but Heaven;
No pyramids set off his memories,
But the eternal substance of his greatness;
To which I leave him.

JOHN FLETCHER, The False One. Act ii, sc. 1.

2 Towers of silence.

ROBERT X. MURPHY. (SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, Letter, London Times, 8 Aug., 1905.)

3 To this man a statue of gold should be set up. (Huic decet statum statui ex auro.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 640. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

I will raise her statue in pure gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 299.

4 The erection of a monument is superfluous; our memory will endure if our lives have deserved it. (Impensa monumenti supercavua est; memoria nostri durabit, si vita meruimus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 19, sec. 3.

The marble keeps merely a cold and sad memory of a man who would else be forgotten. No man who needs a monument ever ought to have one.

HAWTHORNE, English Note-Books: 12 Nov., 1857, Westminster Abbey.

Those only deserve a monument who do not need one; that is, who have raised themselves a monument in the minds and memories of men.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 388.

5 Protect his memory, and preserve his story,
Remain a lasting monument of his glory.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Lines on Drayton's Monument.

Like Collins, ill-starred name!

Whose lay's requital was, that tardy Fame,
Who bound no laurel round his living head,
Should hang it o'er his monument when dead.

SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain: Introduction. St. 8.

6 So flits the world's uncertain span!
Nor zeal for God, nor love for man
Gives mortal monuments a date
Beyond the power of Time and Fate.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 1.

7 This grave shall have a living monument.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 320.

8 And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 93.

9 If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 71.

10 If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 2, l. 80.

There's hope a great man's memory may out-live his life half a year: but, by 'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 142.

11 Among the knightly brasses of the graves,
And by the cold Hic Jacets of the dead!

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 750. The first two words of tombstone inscriptions were usually "Hic Jacet," Here Lies.

May no rude hand deface it,
And its forlorn Hic jacet!

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Scotland. No. 5.

12 Let it rise! Let it rise, till it meet the sun in his coming; let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and the parting day linger and play on its summit.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, on laying the corner-stone of the Bunker Hill Monument.

13 A warrior, with his shield of pride
Cleaving humbly to his side,
And hands in resignation prest,
Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto i, l. 128.

14 If you would see his monument, look around.
(Si monumentum requiris circumspice.)

CHRISTOPHER WREN, Epitaph, for his father,
Sir Christopher Wren, inscribed on his tomb in St. Paul's cathedral, London.

Wouldst thou behold his monument? look around!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Florence. Referring to Massaccio.

And, talking of Epitaphs,—much I admire his,
Circumspice si Monumentum requiris;
Which an erudite Verger translated to me,
"If you ask for his monument, Sir-come-spy-see!"

R. H. BARRIAM, The Cynotaph.

"Si monumentum quæris, circumspice" would be equally applicable to a physician buried in a churchyard.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet.

MOON, THE

I—Moon: Apothegms

<sup>1</sup> Thinketh, He dwelleth i' the cold o' the moon.

Thinketh He made it, with the sun to match,
But not the stars; the stars came otherwise.

ROBERT BROWNING, Caliban upon Setebos, l. 25.

Do I carry the moon in my pocket?

ROBERT BROWNING, Master Hugues of Saxe-Gotha. St. 29.

<sup>2</sup> Doth the moon care for the barking of a dog?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7.

The moon does not heed the barking of dogs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 208.

<sup>3</sup> Quoth Pandarus, thou hast a full great care
Lest that the churl may fall out of the moon!

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 1023.

<sup>4</sup> And hail their queen, fair regent of the night.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Botanic Garden. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 90.

Now Cynthia, nam'd fair regent of the night.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 4.

The dew of summer night did fall;

The moon (sweet regent of the sky)

Silver'd the walls of Cumnor Hall,

And many an oak that grew thereby.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, Cumnor Hall.

<sup>5</sup> The appearance of the face in the moon may equally well arise from interchange of parts.

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 95.)

<sup>6</sup> With this pleasant, merry toy, he . . . made his friends believe the moon to be made of green cheese.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 1542.) This is one of the most frequently found sayings in sixteenth and seventeenth century literature.

They would make men believe that the moon is made of green cheese.

JOHN FRITH, Antithesis, 315. (1573)

Or think that the moon is made of a green cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

He . . . thought the moon was made of green
cheese.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

He made an instrument to know

If the moon shine at full or no;

That would, as soon as e'er she shone straight,

Whether 'twere day or night demonstrate;

Tell what her d'iameter to an inch is,

And prove that she's not made of green cheese.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 261.

<sup>7</sup> You gazed at the moon and fell in a gutter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5904.

<sup>8</sup> Fear may force a man to cast beyond the
moon.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

I cast before the Moon.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 78. (1579)

<sup>9</sup> We should in that but bark against the moon.

HEYWOOD AND ROWLEY, Fortune by Land and Sea. Act i, sc. 1.

I'd rather be a dog, and bay the moon,

Than such a Roman.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 27.

But thou, as blind Bayards, barkest at the moon.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 53.

<sup>10</sup> O Maker of sweet poets.

KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe Upon a Little Hill, l.
116. Referring to the moon.

<sup>11</sup>

Let the air strike our tune,

Whilst we show reverence to yond peeping
moon.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Witch. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>12</sup>

Another Cynthia her new journey runs,

And other planets circle other suns.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 243.

<sup>13</sup>

God saves the moon from the wolves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

To keep the moon safe from the wolves. (Garder la lune des loups.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii.

<sup>14</sup>

The moon is not seen where the sun shines.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>15</sup>

That I could clamber to the frozen moon

And draw the ladder after me.

SCHOPENHAUER, Parerga and Paralipomena.

<sup>16</sup>

O sovereign mistress of true melancholy.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 9, l. 11.

<sup>17</sup>

How now, moon-calf? How dost thine ague?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 139.

<sup>18</sup>

A sweet little Venus we'll fondle between us,

When I wed my old man in the moon.

JAMES THORNTON, My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon. (1892)

<sup>19</sup>

Everyone is a moon, and has a dark side which he never shows to anybody.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

Nay: for if that moon could love a mortal, . . .

She would turn a new side to her mortal,

Side unseen of herdsman, huntsman, steers-
man— . . .

Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats—him, even!

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 116.

See also BROWNING under LOVE: PROTESTATIONS.

1 Meet me by moonlight alone.
J. AUGUSTINE WADE, Meet Me by Moonlight Alone.

II—Moon: Description

2 Soon as the evening shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And nightly, to the listening earth,
Repeats the story of her birth.

ADDISON, Ode. (Spectator. No. 465.)

3 The moon is a silver pin-head vast,
That holds the heaven's tent-hangings fast.
W. R. ALGER, The Use of the Moon.

4 And from embattled clouds emerging slow,
Cynthia came riding on her silver car.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, l. 107.

Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 19.

5 The moon, like a flower,
In heaven's high bower
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Night.

6 Curving on a sky imbrued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight;
Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato.
Rounder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 15.

7 That gentle Moon, the lesser light, the Lover's lamp, the Swain's delight,
A ruined world, a globe burnt out, a corpse
upon the road of night.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v, 11.

8 The moon pull'd off her veil of light,
That hides her face by day from sight
(Mysterious veil, of brightness made,
That's both her lustre and her shade),
And in the lantern of the night,
With shining horns hung out her light.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 905.

9 The devil's in the moon for mischief; they Who call'd her chaste, methinks, began too soon

Their nomenclature; there is not a day,
The longest, not the twenty-first of June,
Sees half the business in a wicked way,
On which three single hours of moonshine
smile—

And then she looks so modest all the while!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 113.

10 Into the sunset's turquoise marge
The moon dips, like a pearly barge;
Enchantment sails through magic seas,
To fairyland Hesperides,
Over the hills and away.
MADISON CAWEIN, At Sunset.

11 Till clomb above the eastern bar
The horned Moon, with one bright star
Within the nether tips.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 209.

The moving Moon went up the sky,
And no where did abide:
Softly she was going up,
And a star or two beside.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 263.

12 When the hollow drum has beat to bed
And the little fifer hangs his head,
When all is mute the Moorish flute,
And nodding guards watch wearily,
Oh, then let me,

From prison free,
March out by moonlight cheerily.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Mountaineers.
Act i, sc. 2.

13 Hour after hour that passionless bright face
Climbs up the desolate blue.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Moon-Struck.

14 How like a queen comes forth the lonely
Moon

From the slow opening curtains of the clouds;

Walking in beauty to her midnight throne!
GEORGE CROLY, Diana.

15 The moon is distant from the sea,
And yet with amber hands
She leads him, docile as a boy,
Along appointed sands.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 31.

16 The man who has seen the rising moon break out of the clouds at midnight, has been present like an archangel at the creation of light and of the world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

17 The moon low sailing where the waters fill
The lozenge lake, beside the banks of balm,
Gleams like a chevron on the river's arm.

BRET HARTE, Cadet Grey. Canto ii, st. 2.

18 A golden sickle reaping darkness down.

JAMES BARRON HOPE, Jamestown.

19 He who would see old Hoghton right
Must view it by the pale moonlight.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, English Proverbs and Provincial Phrases, p. 196.

If thou would'st view fair Melrose aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, st. 1.

1
Mother of light! how fairly dost thou go
Over those hoary crests, divinely led!
Art thou that huntress of the silver bow
Fabled of old? Or rather dost thou tread
Those cloudy summits thence to gaze below,
Like the wild chamois from her Alpine snow,
Where hunters never climb'd—secure from dread?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to the Moon. St. 1.

2
The crimson Moon, uprising from the sea,
With large delight, foretells the harvest near.
EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, The Harvest Moon.

3
Queen and huntress, chaste and fair,
Now the sun is laid to sleep,
Seated in thy silver chair,
State in wonted manner keep:
Hesperus entreats thy light,
Goddess excellently bright.

BEN JONSON, Hymn to Diana.

Bless us then with wishèd sight,
Goddess excellently bright.

BEN JONSON, Hymn to Diana.

4
What is there in thee, Moon! that thou should'st move
My heart so potently?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iii, l. 142.

The moon put forth a little diamond peak,
No bigger than an unobserved star,
Or tiny point of fairy cimeter.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 497.

5
See yonder fire! It is the moon
Slow rising o'er the eastern hill.
It glimmers on the forest tips.
And through the dewy foliage drips
In little rivulets of light,
And makes the heart in love with night.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. vi, l. 462.

6
The bent and broken moon, Batter'd and black, as from a thousand battles,
Hangs silent on the purple walls of Heaven.
JOAQUIN MILLER, Ina. Sc. 2.

7
The moon had climbed the highest hill
Which rises o'er the source of Dee,
And from the eastern summit shed
Her silver light on tower and tree.
JOHN LOWE, Mary's Dream.

Unmuffle, ye faint stars; and thou fair Moon,
That wont'st to love the traveller's benison,
Stoop thy pale visage through an amber cloud,
And disinherit Chaos.
MILTON, Comus, l. 331.

I walk unseen
On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wandering Moon
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the heav'n's wide pathless way;
And oft, as if her head she bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 65.

9
The Moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length,
Apparent Queen, unveil'd her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 606.

10
Like moonlight o'er a troubled sea,
Brightening the storm it cannot calm.

THOMAS MOORE, The Loves of the Angels, l. 1153.

11
The moon looks On many brooks,
The brook can see no moon but this.

THOMAS MOORE, While Gazing on the Moon's Light. Lines suggested by:

The moon looks upon many night flowers; the night flowers see but one moon.

SIR WILLIAM JONES.

12
The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas.

ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

13
Day glimmer'd in the east, and the white
Moon

Hung like a vapour in the cloudless sky.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: The Lake of Geneva.

14
Again thou reignest in thy golden hall,
Rejoicing in thy sway, fair queen of night!
THOMAS ROSCOE, To the Harvest Moon.

15
The curled moon Was like a little feather
Fluttering far down the gulf.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damozel. St. 10.

16 Good even, good fair moon, good even to
thee;

I prithee, dear moon, now show to me
The form and the features, the speech and degree,

Of the man that true lover of mine shall be.
SCOTT, The Heart of Mid-Lothian. Ch. 17.

17
The glimpses of the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 53.

Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 27.

18
Dull: What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five months old as yet?

Hol: Dictyanna, goodman Dull; Dictyanna, goodman Dull.

Dull: What is Dictyanna?

Nath: A title to Phœbe, to Luna, to the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

1
Upon the corner of the moon,
There hangs a vaporous drop profound.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 23.

2
How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 54.

3
How slow
This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame or a dowager
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 3.

The moon, the governess of floods.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 103

The wat'ry star.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

4
It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,

And makes men mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 109.

5
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 4.

6
Romeo: Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Juliet: O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 107.

7
That orb'd maiden with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon.

SHELLEY, The Cloud, l. 45.

Bright wanderer, fair coquette of Heaven,
To whom alone it has been given
To change and be adored forever.

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing Heaven and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless

Among the stars that have a different birth,—
And ever changing, like a joyless eye

That finds no object worth its constancy?

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

8
The young moon has fed
Her exhausted horn
With the sunset's fire.

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 1031.

The moonlight's ineffectual glow.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto viii.

9
With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st
the skies!

How silently and with how wan a face!

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet xxxi. Quoted by Wordsworth, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii, No. 23.

With what a silent and dejected pace

Dost thou, wan Moon, upon thy way advance.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Angelina.

10
I with borrow'd silver shine,
What you see is none of mine.
First I show you but a quarter,
Like the bow that guards the Tartar:
Then the half, and then the whole,
Ever dancing round the pole.

SWIFT, On the Moon.

11
Behold, whatever wind prevail,
Slow westering, a phantom sail—
The lonely soul of Yesterday—
Unpiloted, pursues her way.

JOHN B. TABB, The Mid-day Moon.

12
Moon, worn thin to the width of a quill,
In the sawn clouds flying,
How good to go, light into light, and still Give light, dying.

SARA TEASDALE, Moon's Ending.

13
A maiden moon that sparkles on a sty.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 178.

14
Ask me no more: the moon may draw the sea.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 364.

The innocent moon that nothing does but shine
Moves all the labouring surges of the world.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Mirage.

15
Pale ports o' the moon.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

16
Lo, the moon ascending,
Up from the east the silvery round moon,
Beautiful over the house-tops, ghastly, phantom moon,

Immense and silent moon.

WALT WHITMAN, Dirge for Two Veterans.

17
But tenderly Above the sea
Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.
J. G. WHITTIER, The Eve of Election. St. 1.

18
And suddenly the moon withdraws
Her sickle from the lightening skies,

And to her sombre cavern flies,
 Wrapped in a veil of yellow gauze.
 OSCAR WILDE, La Fuite de la Lune.

<sup>1</sup> You meaner beauties of the night,
 That poorly satisfy our eyes
 More by your number than your light;
 You common people of the skies;—
 What are you when the moon shall rise?
 SIR HENRY WOTTON, On His Mistress, The Queen of Bohemia.

<sup>2</sup> Late, late yestreen I saw the new moon,
 Wi' the auld moon in hir arm.
 UNKNOWN, Sir Patrick Spence. St. 7. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i.)

I saw the new moon late yestreen,
 Wi' the auld moon in her arm.
 UNKNOWN, Ballad. (SCOTT, Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border.)

<sup>3</sup> By the light of the moon, my friend Pierrot,
 Lend me thy pen to write a word;
 My candle is out, I've no more fire,
 Open your door to me, for the love of God.
 (Au clair de la lune, Mon ami Pierrot,
 Prête moi ta plume, Pour écrire un mot;
 Ma chandelle est morte, Je n'ai plus de feu,
 Ouvre moi ta porte, Pour l'amour de Dieu.
 UNKNOWN. French folk song, quoted by George du Maurier in Trilby.

MORALITY

<sup>4</sup> Not the whiteness of years but of morals is to be praised. (Non annorum canities est laudanda, sed morum.)
 AMBROSIOUS, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, sec. 7.

<sup>5</sup> Kant, as we all know, compared moral law to the starry heavens, and found them both sublime. On the naturalistic hypothesis we should rather compare it to the protective blotches on a beetle's back, and find them both ingenious.

ARTHUR J. BALFOUR, Foundations of Belief.

<sup>6</sup> The foundations of morality are like all other foundations: if you dig too much about them the superstructure will come tumbling down.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books.

<sup>7</sup> A moral (like all morals) melancholy.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 63.

"Tut, tut, child!" said the Duchess. "Every thing's got a moral, if you only can find it."

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

Whate'er the story be, the moral's true.
 DRYDEN, University of Oxford: Prologue.

<sup>8</sup> Morality was held a standing jest,

And faith a necessary fraud at best.
 CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. ii, l. 597.

<sup>9</sup> He cursed the canting moralist,
 Who measures right and wrong.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of a Poet Born.

To denounce moralizing out of hand is to pronounce a moral judgment.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 19.

<sup>10</sup> Let us be moral. Let us contemplate existence.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 10.

<sup>11</sup> Morality, said Jesus, is kindness to the weak; morality, said Nietzsche, is the bravery of the strong; morality, said Plato, is the effective harmony of the whole. Probably all three doctrines must be combined to find a perfect ethic; but can we doubt which of the elements is fundamental?

WILL DURANT, The Story of Philosophy.

<sup>12</sup> Men talk of "mere Morality," which is much as if one should say "Poor God, with nobody to help him."

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

<sup>13</sup> The moral system of the universe is like a document written in alternate ciphers, which change from line to line.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

<sup>14</sup> Morality, when vigorously alive, sees farther than intellect.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Divus Caesar.

<sup>15</sup> It is for each man to procure himself the emotion he needs, and the morality which suits him.

RÉMY DE GOURMONT, Decadence.

<sup>16</sup> We are doomed to be moral and cannot help ourselves.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Morality.

<sup>17</sup> Veracity is the heart of morality.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Universities Actual and Ideal.

<sup>18</sup> Rhetoric takes no real account of the art in literature, and morality takes no account of the art in life.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 154.

<sup>19</sup> Morality with religion is only a kind of dead reckoning,—an endeavor to find our place on a cloudy sea.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

<sup>20</sup> The difference between a moral man and a man of honor is that the latter regrets a discreditable act even when it has worked.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 206.

ries or distinctions of race.
HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. i, ch. 2.
- 6
If thy morals make thee dreary, depend upon it they are wrong.
R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.
- 7
Morals are a personal affair; in the war of righteousness every man fights for his own hand.
R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.
- 8
There is no such thing as morality; it is not immoral for the tiger to eat the wolf, or the wolf the cat, or the cat the bird, and so on down; that is their business. . . . It is not immoral to create the human species—with or without ceremony; nature intended exactly these things.
MARK TWAIN. (PAINE, Mark Twain.)
- 9
Morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike.

MORTALITY

See also Death, the Inevitable; Oblivion

3 Learn not to esteem human things overmuch.
(Γίγνσκε τάνθρώπεια μὴ σέβειν ἄγαν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Niobe. Frag. 80.

Mortal man taketh thought only for the day, and hath no more surety than the shadow of smoke.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 227.

4 Who then to frail mortality shall trust
But limns on water, or but writes in dust.

FRANCIS BACON, The World.

5 Child of mortality, whence comest thou?
Why is thy countenance sad, and why are thine eyes red with weeping?

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Hymns in Prose, 13.

6 The earth goeth on the earth glistening like
gold;

The earth goeth to the earth sooner than it wold;

The earth builds on the earth castles and
towers;

The earth says to the earth, all shall be ours.

WILLIAM BILLYNG, Five Wounds of Christ.
(MONTGOMERY, Christian Poets, p. 58.) An epitaph which is cited in Ravenshaw's
Antiente Epitaphs, p. 158. Weaver's Funeral Monuments (1631) states that it was used as epitaph for the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the time of Edward III.

Earth walks on Earth, glittering in gold;
Earth goes to Earth sooner than it wold;
Earth builds on Earth palaces and towers;
Earth says to Earth, Soon all shall be ours.

SCOTT, Epitaph. (Notes and Queries, 21 May, 1853.)

7 Generations pass while some trees stand, and old families last not three oaks.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

8 All bodies are subject to change; so it comes to pass that each body is mortal. (Omne corpus mutabile est; . . . ita efficitur ut omne corpus mortale sit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, ch. 12,
sec. 30.

9 Sad Mortality may hide
In his ashes all her pride,
With this inscription o'er his head:
All hope of never dying here lies dead.

RICHARD CRASHAW, *On the Death of Mr.
Herrys*. No. 3, l. 59.

10 To show the world that now and then
Great ministers are mortal men?

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Sir G. Etheredge, l. 43.

11 All things are born of earth; all things earth takes again. ("Ἀπαντα τίκτει χθών, πάλιν τε λαμβάνει.)

EURIPIDES, Antiope. Frag. 48.

Earth all things bears and gathers in again. (Ἡ πάντα τίκτει καὶ πάλιν κομίζεται.)

MEANDER, Monostikoi. No. 89.

12 Man loses all semblance of mortality by living in the midst of immortal blessings.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 135.)

13 To smell of a turf of fresh earth is wholesome for the body; no less are thoughts of mortality cordial to the soul.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States.
Bk. iv.

14 All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 6.

All flesh is as grass.

New Testament: I Peter, i, 24.

Grass and hay, we are all mortal.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Whimseys, 73. (1631)

All flesh is grass, and all its glory fades.

Like the fair flow'r dishevell'd in the wind.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 261.

All flesh is hay.

JOHN ERSKINE, Gospel Sonnets: Meditations on Tobacco.

Since all flesh is grass ere 'tis hay,

O may I in clover lie snug,

And when old Time mows me away,

Be stacked with defunct Lady Mugg!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Beautiful Incendiary.

15

Mortality

Weights heavily on me like unwilling sleep.

KEATS, On Seeing the Elgin Marbles.

16

All that belongs to mortals is mortal; all things pass us by, or if not, we pass them by.
(Θνητὰ τὰ τῶν θνητῶν, καὶ πάντα παρέρχεται ἡμᾶς ἢν δὲ μὴ, ἀλλ' ἡμεῖς αὐτὰ παρερχόμεθα.)

LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 31.)

17

How gladly would I meet
Mortality my sentence, and be earth

Insensible, how glad would lay me down
As in my mother's lap!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 775.

1 We are all mortal, and each is for himself.
(Nous sommes tous mortels, et chacun est pour soi.)

MOLIÈRE, L'École des Femmes. Act ii, sc. 5, 4.

2 All that's bright must fade,—
The brightest still the fleetest;
All that's sweet was made
But to be lost when sweetest.

THOMAS MOORE, All That's Bright Must Fade.

3 Remember that thou art mortal. (Μέμνησ' ὅτι θνητός ὑπάρχεις.)

PHOCYLIDES, Sententiæ. No. 109.

Your lot is mortal; you wish for what is not mortal. (Sors tua mortalis; non est mortale quod optas.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 56.

4 Consider
The lilies of the field whose bloom is brief:—
We are as they;
Like them we fade away
As doth a leaf.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Consider.

5 We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 82.

Gloucester: O, let me kiss that hand!
Lear: Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 134.

In them nature's copy's not eterne.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 38.

6 Man's wretched state,
That flowers so fresh at morn, and fades at evening late.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ix, st. 39.

All that in this world is great or gay
Doth as a vapour vanish and decay.
SPENSER, The Ruines of Time, l. 55.

7 The immortal could we cease to contemplate,
The mortal part suggests its every trait.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait. St. 7.

Why have we longings of immortal pain,
And all we long for mortal?
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Ode to the Setting Sun, l. 194.

8 Old age will come; disease may come before;
Fifteen is full as mortal as threescore.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 170.

All men think all men mortal but themselves.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 424.

MOSES

9 And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxiv, 6.

By Nebo's lonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,
In a vale in the land of Moab,
There lies a lonely grave;
But no man built that sepulcher,
And no man saw it e'er,
For the angels of God upturned the sod
And laid the dead man there.
CECIL FRANCES ALEXANDER, The Burial of Moses.

This was the truest warrior
That ever buckled sword;
This the most gifted poet
That ever breathed a word;
And never earth's philosopher
Traced with his golden pen
On the deathless page truths half so sage
As he wrote down for men.
CECIL FRANCES ALEXANDER, The Burial of Moses.

10 Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.

Old Testament: Numbers, xii, 3.

Moses was a merciful, meek man, and yet with what fury did he run through the camp, and cut the throats of three-and-thirty thousand of his dear Israelites that were fallen into idolatry.
DANIEL DEFOE, The Shortest Way with the Dissenters.

11 Whilst you are fighting (said Panurge) I will pray God for your victory, after the example of the chivalrous Captain Moses, leader of the people of Israel. (Pendant que combaterez, je prieray Dieu pour votre victoire, à l'exemple du chevalereux capitaine Moses, conducteur du peuple israëlique.)
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 37.

12 Softly his fainting head he lay
Upon his Maker's breast;
His Maker kiss'd his soul away,
And laid his flesh to rest.
ISAAC WATTS, The Death of Moses.

Like Moses to thyself convey,
And kiss my raptur'd soul away.
SAMUEL WESLEY, Collection Hymn.
Died of the kisses of the lips of God.
F. W. MYERS, St. Paul: Of Moses.

MOTHER AND MOTHERHOOD

I—Mother: Apothegms

13 Where there is a mother in the house, matters speed well.
A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Nurture.

14 Thou wilt scarce be a man before thy mother.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act ii, sc. 2.

But strive still to be a man before your mother.
COWPER, Connoisseur. Motto of No. 3.

1 The mother's heart is the child's schoolroom.
HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

2 The sweetest sounds to mortals given
Are heard in Mother, Home, and Heaven.
WILLIAM GOLDSMITH BROWN, Mother, Home, Heaven.

3 The many-tattered,
Little old-faced peaking sister-turned-mother.
ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Sec. 2.

4 A noble mother must have bred
So brave a son.
CAMPBELL, Napoleon and the British Sailor.

5 A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing alive.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Three Graves. St. 10.

6 Men are what their mothers made them.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

All that I am my mother made me.
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

All that I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother.
ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

7 Mothers' darlings make but milksop heroes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3474.

A child may have too much of his mother's blessing.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Nothing like mamma's darling for upsetting a coach.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. i, ch. 3.

Cease at length to follow thy mother. (Tandem desine matrem.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 23, l. 11.

8 Where yet was ever found a mother,
Who'd give her booby for another?
JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 3, l. 33.

9 And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living.
Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 20.

10 What is home without a mother?
ALICE HAWTHORNE. Title of poem.

11 Put them all together, they spell "Mother,"
A word that means the world to me.
HOWARD JOHNSON, Mother. (1915)

12 Only a mother knows a mother's fondness.
LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Bute, 22 July, 1754.

13 He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 156.

Lord Illingworth: All women become like their mothers. That is their tragedy.

Mrs. Allonby: No man does. That is his.
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act ii.

14 Simply having children does not make mothers.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 38.

15 A lady who had gallantries and several children, told her husband he was like the austere man, who reaped where he did not sow.
SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

16 Mother is the name for God in the lips and hearts of little children.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Vol. ii, ch. 12.

17 Be a stepmother kindly as she will,
There's in her love some hint of winter's chill.

D'ARCY W. THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

A barren sow was never good to pigs.
H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 281.

18 God could not be everywhere and therefore he made mothers.

UNKNOWN. A Jewish proverb.

19 Does your mother know you're out?

UNKNOWN. Title of poem published in the London Mirror, 28 April, 1838. Afterwards a slang phrase in both England and America.
(Notes and Queries. Ser. viii, vol. 8, p. 5.)

II—Mother: My Mother

20 Don't aim to be an earthly Saint, with eyes fixed on a star,
Just try to be the fellow that your Mother thinks you are.

WILL S. ADKIN, Just Try to Be the Fellow.

21 But the father's heart was broken,
And this is all he said:

"Their mother is in a casket
In the baggage coach ahead."

FRANK ARCHER, Mother. Later renamed The Baggage Coach Ahead. (1896)

22 My father urged me sair—my mother didna
speak,
But she looket in my face till my heart was like to break.

LADY ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

23 My mother! when I learn'd that thou wast
dead,

Say, wast thou conscious of the tears I shed?
Hover'd thy spirit o'er thy sorrowing son,
Wretch even then, life's journey just begun?

Perhaps thou gav'st me, though unseen, a
kiss;

Perhaps a tear, if souls can weep in bliss—
Ah, that maternal smile! it answers—Yes.

COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 21.

1
You may have tangible wealth untold;
Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
Richer than I you can never be—
I had a mother who read to me.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, The Reading Mother.

2
Now in memory comes my mother,
As she used, in years ago,
To regard the darling dreamers
Ere she left them till the dawn.
COATES KINNEY, Rain on the Roof.

3
I would weave you a song, my mother, . . .
Yours the tender hand Upon my breast;
Yours the voice Sounding ever in my ears.

MADELEINE MASON-MANHEIM, To My Mother.

4
Me, let the tender office long engage
To rock the cradle of reposing age,
With lenient arts extend a Mother's breath,
Make languor smile, and smooth the bed of
death;

Explore the thought, explain the asking eye,
And keep a while one parent from the sky!
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 408.

5
So loving to my mother
That he might not beteen the winds of
heaven
Visit her face too roughly.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 140.

6
Mother, thou sole and only, thou not these,
Keep me in mind a little when I die,
Because I was thy first-born.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Meleager.

7
Who ran to help me, when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the place to make it well?

My Mother.

ANN TAYLOR, My Mother.

8
Happy he
With such a mother! Faith in womankind Beats with his blood, and trust in all things high

Comes easy to him, and tho' he trip and fall
He shall not blind his soul with clay.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 308.

9
St. Leon raised his kindling eye,
And lifts the sparkling cup on high;
"I drink to one," he said,
"Whose image never may depart,
Deep graven on this grateful heart,
Till memory be dead." . . .

St. Leon paused, as if he would Not breathe her name in careless mood,

Thus, lightly, to another;
Then bent his noble head, as though
To give that word the reverence due,

And gently said: "My Mother!"

UNKNOWN, The Knight's Toast. Attributed to Winthrop Mackworth Praed and to Sir
Walter Scott, but not found in their works.

My mother was a lady, like yours you will allow.
EDWARD B. MARKS, My Mother Was a Lady.
Made famous by Lottie Gilson in 1896.

III—Motherhood

10
Perhaps a better woman after all,
With chubby children hanging on my neck
To keep me low and wise.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 515.

11
What art can a woman be good at? Oh, vain!
What art is she good at, but hurting her
breast

With the milk-teeth of babes, and a smile at the pain?

E. B. BROWNING, Mother and Poet.

The bearing and the training of a child
Is woman's wisdom.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 456.

12
Womanliness means only motherhood;
All love begins and ends there,—roams enough,

But, having run the circle, rests at home.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Inn Album. Canto vii.

13
A mother who boasts two boys was ever accounted rich.

ROBERT BROWNING, Ivan Ivànovitch, l. 154.

14
Lo! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps;
She, while the lovely babe unconscious lies,
Smiles on her slumbering child with pensive
eyes.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 225.

15
So for the mother's sake the child was dear,
And dearer was the mother for the child!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Sonnet: To a Friend Who Asked How I Felt when the Nurse First Presented My Infant to Me.

16
I tell you there isn't a thing under the sun that needs to be done at all, but what a man can do better than a woman, unless it's bearing children, and they do that in a poor make-shift way; it had better ha' been left to the men.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede.

17
Do you perhaps think that nature gave women nipples as a kind of beauty spot, not for the purpose of nourishing their children, but as an adornment of their breast?

FAVORINUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xii, ch. 5, sec. 7.)

1 Pooh—men!

We are done with them now,
Who had need of them then,—
I and you!

FLORENCE KIPER FRANK, Baby.

2 Our women have a proverb, "It is a sad burden to carry a dead man's child."

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. ii, sec. v. (1655)

In the first days

Of my distracting grief, I found myself
As women wish to be who love their lords.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act i, sc. 1.

3 Mine, Lord, all mine, Thy gift and loving token.

J. A. GOODCHILD, The Firstborn.

Beat upon mine, little heart! beat, beat!
Beat upon mine! you are mine, my sweet!
All mine from your pretty blue eyes to your feet,
My sweet!

TENNYSON, Romney's Remorse.

The mercest grin of maternal beatitude
Is worth a world of dull virginity.

GERALD GOULD, Monogamy. Pt. iii, st. 4.

4 There is none,
In all this cold and hollow world, no fount
Of deep, strong, deathless love, save that within

A mother's heart.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Siege of Valencia.

Youth fades; love droops; the leaves of friendship fall:

A mother's secret love outlives them all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Mother's Secret.

If I were hanged on the highest hill,

Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

I know whose love would follow me still,

Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mother o' Mine. (The Light That Failed: Dedication.)

5 Beer will grow mothery, and ladies fair
Will grow like beer.

THOMAS HOOD, The Stag-Eyed Lady.

6 To bear, to nurse, to rear,

To watch and then to lose,

To see my bright ones disappear,

Drawn up like morning dews.

JEAN INGELow, Songs of Seven: Seven Times Six.

7 I arose a mother in Israel.

Old Testament: Judges, v, 7.

Her children arise and call her blessed.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 28.

8 Do you expect, forsooth, that a mother will hand down to her children principles which differ from her own? (Scilicet expectas ut tradat mater honestos Atque alios mores quam quos habet?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 239.

9 How often does a gilded bed contain a woman who is lying in? (Sed jacet aurato vix ulla puerpera lecto?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 594.

10 Maids must be wives and mothers, to fulfil Th' entire and holiest end of woman's being.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Woman's Heart.

11 When people inquire I always just state,
"I have four nice children, and hope to have eight."

ALINE KILMER, Ambition.

12 I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter, 21 Nov., 1864, to Mrs. Bixby of Boston, who lost five sons killed in battle. Said to have been drafted by John Hay, Lincoln's secretary.

13 His mother from the window look'd,
With all the longing of a mother.

JAMES LOGAN, The Braes of Yarrow. St. 4.

14 A woman's love
Is mighty, but a mother's heart is weak,
And by its weakness overcomes.

J. R. LOWELL, A Legend of Brittany. Pt. ii, st. 43.

15 A mother loves her child more than the father does, because she knows it's her own, while the father only thinks it's his.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 657.

16 The bravest battle that ever was fought;
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not;

It was fought by the mothers of men.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Bravest Battle.

17 The angels . . . singing unto one another,
Can find among their burning terms of love,
None so devotional as that of "mother."

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To My Mother.

18 Their mother hearts beset with fears,
Their lives bound up in tender lives.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Goblin Market.

19 I know—yet my arms are empty,

That fondly folded seven,
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

MARGARET SANGSTER, Are the Children at Home? See also DEATH AND THE CHILD.

<sup>1</sup> The pleasing punishment that women bear.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 47.

My dear angel has been qualmish of late, and begins to grow remarkably round in the waist.
SMOLLETT, Roderick Random: Conclusion.

<sup>2</sup> A grandam's name is little less in love,
Than is the doting title of a mother.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 299.

<sup>3</sup> There will be a singing in your heart,
There will be a rapture in your eyes;
You will be a woman set apart,
You will be so wonderful and wise.
You will sleep, and when from dreams you start,
As of one that wakes in Paradise,
There will be a singing in your heart,
There will be a rapture in your eyes.
ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Mother.

<sup>4</sup> And say to mothers what a holy charge
Is theirs—with what a kingly power their
love
Might rule the fountains of the new-born
mind.
LYDIA HUNTLY SIGOURNEY, *The Mother of
Washington*, l. 33.

<sup>5</sup> As through the drifting snow she press'd,
The babe was sleeping on her breast.
SEBA SMITH, The Snow Storm.

<sup>6</sup> Oh! when a mother meets on high
The babe she lost in infancy,
Hath she not then, for pains and fears,
The day of woe, the watchful night,
For all her sorrow, all her tears,
An over-payment of delight?
SOUTHEY, Curse of Kehama. Canto x, st. 11.

<sup>11</sup> Begin, baby boy, to recognize your mother by a smile. (Incipe, parve puer, risu cognoscere matrem.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iv, l. 60.

<sup>12</sup> They say that man is mighty,
He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be;
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE, *What Rules the
World*. (c. 1865)

They say man rules the universe,
That subject shore and main
Kneel down and bless the empery
Of his majestic reign;
But a sovereign, gentler, mightier,
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM STEWART ROSS, The Hand That Rocks the Cradle. (Woman: Her Glory.
Vol. ii, p. 420. 1894.)

"The hand that rocks the cradle"—but today
there's no such hand.
It is bad to rock the baby, they would have us
understand;

So the cradle's but a relic of the former foolish
days,
When mothers reared their children in unscientific ways;

When they jounced them and they bounced them, those poor dwarfs of long ago—
The Washingtons and Jeffersons and Adamses, you know.

I—Mountain: Apothegms

<sup>14</sup> They make of a fly an elephant, and of a molehill a mountain.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism. (c. 1560)

To make an elephant of a fly. ('Ελέφαντα ἐκ μύιας ποιεῖν.)

LUCIAN, Praise of the Fly.

She takes me for a mountain, that am but a molehill.

RICHARD BROME, City Wit. Act iv, sc. 1. (1653)

To make huge mountains of small mole-hills.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 14. (1573)

1 They came to the Delectable Mountains.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

2 Mountains interpos'd

Make enemies of nations, who had else,
Like kindred drops, been mingled into one.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 16.

There are no more Pyrenees. (Il n'y a plus de Pyrénées.)

LOUIS XIV, to his grandson, the Duke d'Anjou, on his accession to the Spanish throne. (VOLTAIRE, Siècle de Louis XIV. Ch. 28.)

Fournier alleges that this is just another example of Voltaire inventing history, and that the phrase was really used by the Spanish Ambassador when he greeted the new king.

3 A mountain and a river are good neighbours.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 Mountains, ye are growing old; your ribs of granite are getting weak and rotten.

E. M. MORSE, Mountains.

5 A mountain was in labor, sending forth dreadful groans, and there was the highest expectation throughout the region. But it brought forth only a mouse. (Mons parturibat, gemitus immanes ciens; Eratque in teris maxima expectatio. At ille murem peperit.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 22, l. 1. The Latin rendering of Æsop's fable of The Mountain in Labor.

The mountain groaned in pangs of birth:

Great expectation filled the earth;

And lo! a mouse was born!

Metrical rendering of Phædrus, iv, 22, 1.

The mountain labors, and a ridiculous mouse is born. (Parturient montes, nascetur ridiculus mus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 139.

The old fable was made good, "A mountain is in travail and then a mouse is born." (Τὸ μυθολογούμενον ὠδίνειν ὄρος, εἶτα μὲν ἀποτεκεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaüs. Ch. 36, sec. 5. In Athanæus, it is Tachos himself who makes this jest upon Agesilaüs, who retorts, "Some day you will think me a lion."

6 Friends may meet,
But mountains never greet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. An English rendering of the Greek proverb, "Ὅρος ὄρει οὐ μίγνυται, "Mountain will not mingle with mountain." The French have a proverb, dating from the fifteenth century, "Entre deux montaignes vallée."

I found the proverb true that men have more privilege than mountains in meeting.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Penniless Pilgrimage. (1618)

Friends possibly may meet, but mountains never.

GEORGE WITHER, Dark Lantern, 29. (1653)

Mountains never shake hands. Their roots may touch: they may keep together some way up; but at length they part company, and rise into individual, insulated peaks. So it is with great men.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

THE MOUNTAIN AND MAHOMET, see under ADAPTABILITY.

7 Mountains are the beginning and the end of all natural scenery.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Nature: Mountains.

8 Who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 4, l. 6.

9 As mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 141.

10 Longer shadows fall from lofty mountains. (Majoresque cadunt altis de montibus umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 84.

II—Mountain: Ossa on Pelion

11 They were fain to pile Ossa on Olympus, and Pelion, with it waving forests, on Ossa, so that heaven might be scaled. ("Ὅσσαν ἐπ' Οὐλύμπῳ μέμασαν θέμεν, αὐτὰρ ἐπ' Ὅσση Πήλιον εἰνοσίφυλλον, ἐν' οὐρανὸς ἀμβατὸς εἶν.")

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 315. An allusion to the myth of the Titans, who piled Mount Pelion and Mount Ossa upon Olympus in order to scale the dwelling of the gods, but were overthrown by Jupiter.

To fling Ossa upon Olympus, and to pile Pelion with all its growth of leafy woods On Ossa.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Bryant, tr.)

They were setting
Ossa upon Olympus, and upon Steep Ossa heavy Pelius.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Chapman, tr.)

To the Olympian summit they essayed
To heave up Ossa, and to Ossa's crown Branch-waving Pelion.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Cowper, tr.)

Heav'd on Olympus tottering Ossa stood;
On Ossa, Pelion nods with all his wood.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Pope, tr.)

1 To pile Pelion upon Olympus. (Pelion imposuisse Olympo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 52.

2 Then the Almighty Father hurled his thunderbolts, shattering Olympus, and dashed Pelion down from underlying Ossa. (Tum pater omnipotens misso perfregit Olympum Fulmine et excussit subjectæ Pelion Ossæ.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 154.

3 I would have you call to mind the strength of the ancient giants, that undertook to lay the high mountain Pelion on the top of Ossa, and set among those the shady Olympus.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 38.

4 Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead, Till of this flat a mountain you have made, To o'ertop old Pelion, on the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 274.

5 Thrice did they attempt to pile Ossa on Pelion, and over Ossa to roll leafy Olympus. (Ter sunt conati Pelio Ossam Scilicet, atque Ossæ frondosum involvere Olympum.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 281.

III—Mountain: Alp on Alp

6 Ah! as a pilgrim who the Alps doth pass,
Or Atlas' temples crown'd with winter's glass,

The airy Caucasus, the Apennine,
Pyrenees' cliffs where sun doth never shine,
When he some heaps of hills hath overwent,
Begins to think on rest, his journey spent,
Till, mounting some tall mountain, he do find
More heights before him than he left behind.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Flowers of Sion: Hymn of the Fairest Fair, l. 149. (1623)

So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky;
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:

But those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way;
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 25. (1711)

7 Alps on Alps in clusters swelling,
Mighty, and pure, and fit to make
The ramparts of a Godhead's dwelling!

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. Extract i, l. 26.

8 Inexperienced travellers who, finding themselves for the first time in the Alps, imagine that they can clear them with every mountain, and, when they have reached the summit, are discouraged to see higher mountains in front of them.

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv. Addison used the same comparison in the Spectator.

9 He was like the adventurous climber on the Alps, to whom the surmounting the most dangerous precipices and ascending to the most towering peaks only shows yet dizzier heights and higher points of elevation.

SCOTT, of Napoleon, in his Life of Napoleon.

IV—Mountain: Description

10 Oh, thou Parnassus whom I now survey,
Not in the phrensy of a dreamer's eye,
Not in the fabled landscape of a lay,
But soaring snow-clad through thy native sky,

In the wild pomp of mountain majesty!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 60.

11 To me
High mountains are a feeling, but the hum
Of human cities torture.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 72.

12 The Alps, the palaces of Nature.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 62.

13 Whose sunbright summit mingles with the sky.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 4.

14 I am homesick for my mountains—
My heroic mother hills—

And the longing that is on me
No solace ever stills.

BLISS CARMAN, The Cry of the Hill-born.

15 Hast thou a charm to stay the morning-star
In his steep course? So long he seems to pause

On thy bald, awful head, O sovran Blanc!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni, l. 1.

Thou, most awful Form!
Risest from forth thy silent sea of pines,
How silently! Around thee and above
Deep is the air and dark, substantial, black,
An ebon mass: methinks thou piercest it
As with a wedge! But when I look again
It is thine own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
Thy habitation from eternity!
O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee,
Till thou, still present to the bodily sense,
Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer
I worshipp'd the Invisible alone.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 5.

Rise, O ever rise!

Rise like a cloud of incense, from the Earth!
Thou kingly Spirit throned among the hills,
Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heaven.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 79.

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains;
They crown'd him long ago,
On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow.

BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1, l. 62.

Mountains are good to look upon
But do not look too long.
They are made of granite. They will break your heart.

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Mountains.

The mountains lie in curves so tender
I want to lay my arm about them
As God does.

OLIVE TILFORD DARGAN, Twilight.

As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form, Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,

Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 189.

So the loud torrent, and the whirlwind's roar,
But bind him to his native mountains more.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 207.

On every mountain height is rest.

GOETHE, Ein Gleiches.

Mountains have a dreamy way
Of folding up a noisy day
In quiet covers, cool and gray.

LEIGH BUCKNER HANES, Mountains in Twilight.

Each cloud capped mountain is a holy altar;
An organ breathes in every grove.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson.

While far below men crawl in clay and clod,
Sublimely I shall stand alone with God.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, The Summit, Mount Everest.

The rocky summits, split and rent,
Formed turret, dome, or battlement,
Or seemed fantastically set
With cupola or minaret.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 11.

Rocks rich in gems, and mountains big with mines,
That on the high equator ridgy rise,
Whence many a bursting stream auriferous plays.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 646.

11

Truly lamentation is a prop of suffering. (Οἱ τοὶ στεναγμοὶ τῶν πόνων ἐπεσώματα.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragmentis. Frag. 213.

12

What I do not presume to censure, I may have leave to lament.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation.

13

Ah! surely nothing dies but something mourns!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 108.

14

Mourn, ye Graces and Loves, and all ye whom the Graces love. (Lugete, o Veneres Cupidinesque, Et quantumst hominum venustiorum.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. iii, l. 1.

15

Each lonely scene shall thee restore;
For thee the tear be duly shed;
Belov'd, till life could charm no more,
And mourn'd, till Pity's self be dead.

WILLIAM COLLINS, Dirge in Cymbeline.

Round, round the cypress bier

Where she lies sleeping,

On every turf a tear,

Let us go weeping!

GEORGE DARLEY, Dirge.

16

It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting.

17

Forever honor'd and forever mourn'd.

18

We lament by the ordinance of Nature.
(Naturæ imperio gemimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 138.

Nature's law

That man was made to mourn.

BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn.

Whom universal Nature did lament.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 60.

19

The air is full of farewells to the dying,
And mournings for the dead.

LONGFELLOW, Resignation.

20

The lonely mountains o'er,
And the resounding shore,

A voice of weeping heard, and loud lament;

From haunted spring, and dale

Edg'd with poplar pale,

The parting Genius is with sighing sent,

With flower-enwoven tresses torn
The Nymphs in twilight shade of tangled thickets mourn.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity,
l. 181.

<sup>1</sup> Too innocent for coquetry, too fond for idle
scorning—

O friend, I fear the lightest heart makes sometimes heaviest mourning.

CAROLINE NORTON, Bingen on the Rhine.

<sup>2</sup> Then flash'd the living lightning from her
eyes,
And screams of horror rend th' affrighted
skies.

Not louder shrieks to pitying Heav'n are cast,

When husbands, or when lapdogs, breathe their last;

Or when rich China vessels, fall'n from high,
In glitt'ring dust and painted fragments lie!

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 155.

<sup>3</sup> Soft is the note, and sad the lay,
That mourns the lovely Rosabelle.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
vi, st. 23.

<sup>4</sup> None mourn more ostentatiously than those who are rejoicing most. (Nulli jactantius moerent quam qui maxime lætantur.)

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 24.

MOUSE

<sup>9</sup> Wee sleekit, cow'rin', tim'rous beastie,
Oh, what a panic's in thy breastie!

BURNS, To a Mouse.

<sup>10</sup> Don't make yourself a mouse or the cat will eat you.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-lore, 105.

<sup>11</sup> It had need to be a wily mouse that should breed in a cat's ear.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

It is a wily mouse
That can build his dwelling-house
Within the cat's ear.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout.

<sup>12</sup> I gave the mouse a hole and she became my heir.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>13</sup> The mice were not impressed by that great house

Wherein you had your glory and your ease;
Magnificence is wasted on a mouse:

They judge all things by cheese.

RICHARD R. KIRK, The Mice.

<sup>14</sup> Consider the little mouse, how sagacious an animal it is which never entrusts his life to one hole only.

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 15.

I hold a mouse's heart not worth a leek,
That hath but one hole for to sterne to.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 572.

The mouse that always trusts to one poor hole,
Can never be a mouse of any soul.

POPE, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 298.

The mouse that hath one hole is quickly taken.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>15</sup> When a building is about to fall down, all the mice desert it.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk.
viii, sec. 103.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 622.

Truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 83.

III—Murder: According to Shakespeare

<sup>15</sup> Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange and unnatural.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 27.

<sup>16</sup> Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd:

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 74.

He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;

And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 80.

At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 91.

Oh me unhappy! I have found them lying
Close in each other's arms, and fast asleep.
But that I would not damn two precious souls,
Bought with my Saviour's blood, and send them, laden

With all their scarlet sins upon their backs,
Unto a fearful judgment, their two lives
Had met upon my rapier!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed with Kindness. Act iv, sc. 6.

1
Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 71.

Blood hath been shed ere now i' the olden time,
Ere humane statute purg'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 75.

The murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 120.

2
Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

Then murder's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 115.

3
The great King of kings
Hath in the tables of his law commanded
That thou shalt do no murder: and wilt thou,
then,

Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 200.

Are you call'd forth from out a world of men
To slay the innocent?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 186.

IV—Murder: Some Jingles

4
Lizzie Borden took an axe
And gave her Mother forty whacks;
When she saw what she had done,
She gave her Father forty-one.

UNKNOWN, Lizzie Borden. Commemorating the murder of Lizzie Borden's father and step-mother at Fall River, Mass., 4 Aug., 1892.

There's no evidence of guilt,

Lizzie Borden,

That should make your spirit wilt,

Lizzie Borden;

Many do not think that you
Chopped your father's head in two,
It's so hard a thing to do,

Lizzie Borden.

A. L. BIXBY, To Lizzie.

5
Up the close an' down the stair,
But an' ben wi' Burke and Hare.
Burke's the butcher, Hare's the thief,
Knox the boy that buys the beef.

UNKNOWN, The West Point Murders. A series of Edinburgh crimes, committed by two degenerates named Burke and Hare for the purpose of supplying subjects for dissection to a medical college.

6
Jesse James had a wife,
She's a mourner all her life;
His children they were brave;

Oh, the dirty little coward

That shot Mr. Howard,

Has laid poor Jesse in his grave.

UNKNOWN, Jesse James. Old song commemorating the murder of Jesse James by Robert Ford, at St. Joseph, Mo., 3 April, 1882. James had been living under the name of Thomas Howard.

7
Two brothers in our town did dwell:

Hiram sought Heaven, but Isaac Sawtell.

UNKNOWN, The Sawtell Murder. A New Hampshire crime of the '90s, in which Isaac Sawtell murdered his brother Hiram.

8
The three men came in the dead of night,
In the wind and the rain and the ruts,
They held Mrs. Shann and they took the
light,

And went up and stole them guts.

UNKNOWN, The Shann Murder Case. A Princeton undergraduate song of 1892, sung to the tune of Don't You Hear Dem Bells. It celebrated the arrest of a local boarding-house keeper named Shann for the murder of her husband, supposedly by poison. It was found that his intestines had been removed, and Mrs. Shann alleged that three men had driven up at midnight, one had held her, while the other two mounted to the room where her husband's body lay and eviscerated it.

9
They cut his throat from ear to ear,
His brains they battered in;
His name was Mr. William Weare,
He dwelt in Lyon's Inn.

THEODORE HOOK, William Weare. On the authority of John Lockhart. The lines, which refer to the murder of William Weare by John Thurtell in 1823, have also been ascribed to Lord William Lennox (see Sporting Review, 1839) and to William Webb, alias "Happy Webb," a London link-man. According to Mr. E. L. Pearson, this jingle delighted Sir Walter Scott. It was at Thurtell's trial that the famous dictum was elicited that respectability consists in keeping a gig. See under RESPECTABILITY.

1 And ever since historian writ,
And ever since a bard could sing,
Doth each exalt with all his wit
The noble art of murdering.
THACKERAY, The Chronicle of the Drum.

I—Music: Definitions

2 Music, the greatest good that mortals know,
And all of heaven we have below.
ADDISON, Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 27.

3 There is no truer truth obtainable
By Man than comes of music.
ROBERT BROWNING, Parleyings with Certain People: Charles Avison.

Music tells no truths.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Village Feast.

4 Music is well said to be the speech of angels.
CARLYLE, Essays: The Opera.

5 See deep enough, and you see musically; the heart of nature being everywhere music, if you can only reach it.
CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 3.

Music is in all growing things;
And underneath the silky wings
Of smallest insects there is stirred
A pulse of air that must be heard;
Earth's silence lives, and throbs, and sings.
GEORGE PARSONS LATHROP, Music of Growth.
The God of Music dwelleth out of doors.
EDITH M. THOMAS, Music.

There is no music in Nature, neither melody or harmony. Music is the creation of man.
H. R. HAWES, Music and Morals. Bk. i, ch. 1.

6 O Music, sphere-descended maid,
Friend of pleasure, wisdom's aid.
WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 95.

7 Music is the poor man's Parnassus.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

8 Music is nothing else but wild sounds civilized into time and tune.
THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England: Ch. 10, Musicians.

9 Emotion, not thought, is the sphere of music;
and emotion quite as often precedes as follows thought.
H. R. HAWES, Music and Morals: Schubert.

10 Music was a thing of the soul—a rose-lipped shell that murmured of the eternal sea—a strange bird singing the songs of another
shore.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks on Familiar Subjects: Art and Life. See also SEA: SEA-SHELLS.

11 O sweet and healing balm of troubles. (O laborum Dulce lenimen medicumque.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 32, l. 14. Referring to music.

Music is the medicine of a troubled mind. (Musica mentis medicina mœstæ.)

WALTER HADDON, Lucubrations Poemata: De Musica.

Music's the medicine of the mind.
JOHN LOGAN, Danish Ode.

Music's the cordial of a troubled breast,
The softest remedy that grief can find;
The gentle spell that charms our care to rest
And calms the ruffled passions of the mind.
Music does all our joys refine,
And gives the relish to our wine.
JOHN OLDHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.

12 Music is the only one of the arts that can not be prostituted to a base use.
ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 39.

Take them, you, that smile on strings, those nobler sounds than mine,
The words that never lie, or brag, or flatter, or malign.
G. K. CHESTERTON, To M. E. W.

13 Music remains the only art, the last sanctuary, wherein originality may reveal itself in the face of fools and not pierce their mental opacity.
JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 142.

14 It is the only sensual pleasure without vice.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Apothegms. (HAWKINS, Johnsoniana.)

Of all noises I think music the least disagreeable.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Morning Chronicle, 16
Aug., 1816.)

15 Yea, music is the Prophet's art
Among the gifts that God hath sent,
One of the most magnificent!
LONGFELLOW, Christus. Pt. iii, interlude 2.

16 Music, the mosaic of the Air.
ANDREW MARVELL, Music's Empire.

17 Music resembles poetry; in each
Are nameless graces which no methods teach,
And which a master-hand alone can reach.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 143.

If Music and sweet Poetry agree,
As they must needs (the sister and the brother),

Then must the Love be great, 'twixt thee and me,

Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Sonnet: To His Friend Master R. L.

Like the ass, deaf to the lyre. (ὄνος λῦρας.)

BOËTHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. i, ch. 4. Quoting an old proverb.

Music sweeps by me as a messenger

Carrying a message that is not for me.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

Because I have no ear for music, at the Concert of the Quintette Club, it looked to me as if the performers were crazy, and all the audience were making-believe crazy, in order to soothe the lunatics and keep them amused.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1861.

I perceive you delight not in music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 66.

<sup>7</sup> Where there's music there can't be mischief. (Donde hay Musica no puede haber cosa mala.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 401.

<sup>14</sup> Music is essentially useless, as life is.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 130.

What most people relish is hardly music; it is rather a drowsy reverie relieved by nervous thrills.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason. iv, 51.

<sup>15</sup> Make battery to our ears with the loud music.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 115.

Wagner's music is better than it sounds.

BILL NYE.

<sup>16</sup> Among all the arts, music alone can be purely religious.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. viii, ch. 3.

As some to church repair,
Not for the doctrine, but the music there.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 142.

Light quirks of music, broken and unev'n,
Make the soul dance upon a jig to Heav'n.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 143.

III—Music: Music Hath Charms

<sup>17</sup> Music has charms to soothe a savage breast,
To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1. (1697)

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast,"
And therefore proper at a sheriff's feast.

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste. (1729)

Rugged the breast that music cannot tame.

JOHN CODRINGTON BAMPFYLDE, Sonnet.

Music has charms, we all may find,
Ingratiate deeply with the mind.

When art does sound's high power advance,
To music's pipe the passions dance;
Motions unwill'd its powers have shown,
Tarantulated by a tune.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 141. (1737)

Music has charms alone for peaceful minds.

POPE, Sappho to Phaon, l. 14.

1 Orpheus cou'd lead the savage race;
And trees uprooted left their place,
Sequacious of the lyre:
But bright Cecilia rais'd the wonder high'r:
When to her organ vocal breath was giv'n,
An angel heard, and straight appear'd
Mistaking earth for heav'n.

DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day, St. 7.

When Orpheus strikes the trembling lyre,
The streams stand still, the stones admire;

The list'n'g savages advance,
The wolf and lamb around him trip,
The bears in awkward measures leap,
And tigers mingle in the dance:
The moving woods attended as he play'd,
And Rhodophe was left without a shade.

ADDISON, A Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 33.

2 Music's force can tame the furious beast:
Can make the wolf or foaming boar restrain
His rage; the lion drop his crested mane
Attentive to the song.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 67.

3 Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 3.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.

In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart

Fall asleep, or hearing, die.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

4 Music oft hath such a charm
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 14.

5 Therefore the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones and floods;
Since nought so stockish, hard and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 79.

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews,

Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,
Make tigers tame and huge leviathans
Forsake unbounded deeps to dance on sands.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 78.

IV—Music: Its Power

See also Song: Its Power

6 Music religious heats inspires,
It wakes the soul, and lifts it high,
And wings it with sublime desires,
And fits it to bespeak the Deity.

ADDISON, A Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 41.

Music exalts each joy, allays each grief.
Expels diseases, softens every pain,
Subdues the rage of poison, and the plague.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 512.

7 Tunes and airs, even in their own nature, have in themselves some affinity with the affections. . . . So it is no marvel if they alter the spirits. Yet generally music feedeth that disposition of the spirits which it findeth.

FRANCIS BACON, Sylva Sylvarum. Century ii,
sec. 114.

8 Is there a heart that music cannot melt?
Alas! how is that rugged heart forlorn!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 453.

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 83. Often misquoted "music in his soul." See also CARLYLE, under LAUGHTER.

9 God is its author, and not man; he laid
The key-note of all harmonies; he planned
All perfect combinations, and he made
Us so that we could hear and understand.

J. G. BRAINARD, Music.

10 [Music] strikes in me a deep fit of devotion, and a profound contemplation of the First Composer. There is something in it of Divinity more than the ear discovers.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 9.

11 Who hears music, feels his solitude
Peopled at once.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 4.

13 When Music, Heav'nly Maid, was young,

While yet in early Greece she sung,
The Passions oft, to hear her shell,
Throng'd around her magic cell.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 1.

1
There is in souls a sympathy with sounds,
And, as the mind is pitch'd, the ear is pleas'd
With melting airs, or martial, brisk, or grave:
Some chord in unison with what we hear
Is touch'd within us, and the heart replies.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 1.

Commemoration-mad; content to hear
(Oh wonderful effect of music's pow'r!)
Messiah's eulogy, for Handel's sake.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 635.

2
What passion cannot Music raise and quell?
DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day. St. 2.

5
Music's golden tongue
Flatter'd to tears this aged man and poor.
KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 3.

6
Who carry music in their heart
Through dusky lane and wrangling mart,
Plying their daily task with busier feet,
Because their secret souls a holy strain repeat.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: St. Matthew's Day.

7
Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie.
MILTON, Arcades, l. 68.

And music, too—dear music! that can touch
Beyond all else the soul that loves it much—
Now heard far off, so far as but to seem
Like the faint, exquisite music of a dream.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan.

8
And learn, my sons, the wondrous power of Noise,

To move, to raise, to ravish ev'ry heart.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 222.

By Music minds an equal temper know,
Nor swell too high, nor sink too low. . . .
Warriors she fires with animated sounds,
Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 22.

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
And Fate's severest rage disarm:
Music can soften pain to ease,
And make despair and madness please:
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliss above.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 118.

9
I am advised to give her music o' mornings;
they say it will penetrate.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 12.
Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his unusual pain?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

10
As I went under the new telegraph-wire, I heard it vibrating like a harp high overhead.
It was as the sound of a far-off glorious life, a supernal life, which came down to us, and vibrated the lattice-work of this life of ours.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Sept., 1851. This entry marks Thoreau's discovery of his favorite musical instrument, to which he refers so often in subsequent pages of his journal.

11
Music hath caught a higher pace than any virtue that I know. It is the arch-reformer;
it hastens the sun to its setting; it invites him to his rising; it is the sweetest reproach, a measured satire.

THOREAU, Winter: Journal, 8 Jan., 1842.

12
All music is what awakes from you when you are reminded by the instruments,
It is not the violins and the cornets, it is not the oboe nor the beating drums, nor the score of the baritone singer singing his sweet romanza, nor that of the men's chorus, nor that of the women's chorus.
It is nearer and farther than they.

WALT WHITMAN, A Song for Occupations.
Pt. iv.

13
Where gripping griefs the heart would wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
There music with her silver sound,
With speed is wont to send redress.
UNKNOWN, A Song to the Lute in Music.
(PERCY, Reliques.)

When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound . . .
With speedy help doth lend redress.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 128. An adaptation of the old song.

Sec. Mus.: I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Peter: O, I cry you mercy. . . . It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 136.

14 Servant and master am I: servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through my spirit immortals speak the message that makes the world weep and laugh, and wonder and worship. . . . For I am the instrument of God. I am Music.

V—Music: Its Sweetness

<sup>1</sup> "This is the way," laughed the great god Pan (Laughed while he sat by the river),
"The only way since gods began
To make sweet music, they could succeed."
Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,

He blew in power by the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument. St. 5.

Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!

Piercing sweet by the river!

Blinding sweet, O great god Pan!

The sun on the hill forgot to die,

And the lilies revived, and the dragon-fly

Came back to dream on the river.

'Twas sad by fits, by starts 'twas wild.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 27.

<sup>6</sup> In notes by distance made more sweet.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 60.

We are like the musician on the lake, whose melody is sweeter than he knows.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Art.

Sweetest melodies

Are those that are by distance made more sweet.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. St. 2.

<sup>7</sup> So just, so small, yet in so sweet a note,
It seemed the music melted in the throat.

JOHN DRYDEN, Flower and the Leaf, l. 199.

<sup>8</sup> Soft as the breath of distant flutes at hours
When silent evening closes up the flowers.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 377.

<sup>9</sup> Let me have music dying, and I seek
No more delight.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 140.

Fading in music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

<sup>10</sup> Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;

Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone.

KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 2.

<sup>11</sup> Who shall silence all the airs and madrigals that whisper softness in chambers?

MILTON, Areopagitica.

<sup>12</sup> Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould
Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment?

MILTON, Comus, l. 244.

There let the pealing organ blow,
To the full voic'd quire below,
In service high, and anthems clear,
As may with sweetness, through mine ear,
Dissolve me into ecstasies,
And bring all Heav'n before mine eyes.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 161.

And ever against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs,
Married to immortal verse
Such as the meeting soul may pierce
In notes, with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness, long drawn out.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 135.

<sup>13</sup> Hark! the numbers soft and clear
Gently steal upon the ear.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 12.

<sup>14</sup> Here will we sit and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 55.

Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays
And twenty caged nightingales do sing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 37.

This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 391.

<sup>15</sup> If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain again! it had a dying fall:
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

Matthew Arnold always contended that "sound" was a misprint for "south."

If music be the food of love,
Sing on, sing on, sing on.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy: Vol. iii, Song. (1661)

Is not music the food of love?

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 1.

There's sure no passion in the human soul
But finds its food in music.

GEORGE LILLO, Fatal Curiosity. Act i, sc. 2.

1 I pant for the music which is divine;
My heart in its thirst is a dying flower;
Pour forth the sound like enchanted wine,
Loosen the notes in a silver shower;
Like a herbless plain, for the gentle rain,
I gasp, I faint, till they wake again.

SHELLEY, Music.

Sounds overflow the listener's brain,
So sweet, that joy is almost pain.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 2.

2 If I were to begin life again, I would devote it to music. It is the only cheap and unpunished rapture upon earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to the Countess of Carlisle, Aug., 1844.

3 Eftsoones they heard a most melodious sound,
Of all that mote delight a dainty ear.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto xii, st. 70.

4 Music bright as the soul of light, for wings an eagle, for notes a dove.

SWINBURNE, Bothwell. Act ii, l. 13.

5 I shall loathe sweet tunes, where a note grown strong

Relents and recoils, and climbs and closes. . . .

I shall hate sweet music my whole life long.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 45.

6 The music had the heat of blood,
A passion that no words can reach;
We sat together, and understood
Our own heart's speech.

ARTHUR SYMONS, During Music.

7 There is sweet music here that softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass, . . .

Music that gentlier on the spirit lies,
Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes;
Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.

TENNYSON, The Lotos-Eaters: Choric Song.
St. 1.

Where light and shade repose, where music dwells

Lingering—and wandering on as loth to die;
Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof

That they were born for immortality.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 43.

Soft is the music that would charm for ever.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 9.

8 The music in my heart I bore,
Long after it was heard no more.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Scotland. No. 9.

VI—Music: Its Sadness

9 The mellow touch of music most doth wound
The soul, when it doth rather sigh than sound.
ROBERT HERRICK, Soft Music.

Gentle and noble are their tempers framed,
That can be quickened with perfumes and sounds.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Ovid's Banquet of Sense.

10 Fair Melody! kind Siren! I've no choice;
I must be thy sad servant evermore;
I cannot choose but kneel here and adore.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 303.

11 Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then,
But I struck one chord of music
Like the sound of a great Amen.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, The Lost Chord. As set to music, the 5th line reads, "I know not what I was playing."

As in an organ from one blast of wind
To many a row of pipes the soundboard breathes.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 708.

12 I am never merry when I hear sweet music.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 69.

13 Inconsolable to the minuet in Ariadne.
SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

14 A lamentable tune is the sweetest music to a woeful mind.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

15 With a secret pain,
And smiles that seem akin to tears,
We hear the wild refrain.
WHITTIER, At Port Royal.

A quality
Which music sometimes has, being the Art
Which is most nigh to tears and memory.
OSCAR WILDE, The Burden of Itys.

VII—Music of the Spheres

16 There is music wherever there is harmony, order, or proportion; and thus far we may maintain the music of the Spheres; for those well-ordered motions and regular paces, though they give no sound to the ear, yet to the understanding they strike a note most full of harmony.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 9. (1642)

<sup>1</sup> Her voice, the music of the spheres,
So loud, it deafens mortals' ears;
As wise philosophers have thought,
And that's the cause we hear it not.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 617.

<sup>2</sup> There's music in the sighing of a reed;
There's music in the gushing of a rill;
There's music in all things, if men had ears:
Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 5.

There is beauty in the bellow of the blast,
There is grandeur in the growling of the gale.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

<sup>3</sup> And left so free mine ears,
That I might hear the music of the spheres,
And all the angels singing out of heaven.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Tears of Peace.

<sup>4</sup> And after shewed he him the nine spheres,
And after that the melody heard he
That cometh of those spheres thrice three,
That well is of music and melody
In this world here, and cause of harmony.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 59.

Water and Air He for the Tenor chose,
Earth made the Base, the Treble Flame arose,
To th' active Moon a quick brisk stroke he gave,

To Saturn's string a touch more soft and grave.
The motions strait, and round, and swift, and slow,

And short and long, were mixt and woven so,
Did in such artful Figures smoothly fall,
As made this decent measur'd Dance of all.
And this is Musick.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davideis. Bk. i, l. 457.

<sup>5</sup> Let me go where'er I will
I hear a sky-born music still: . . .

'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cups of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers,
But in the mud and scum of things
There always, alway something sings.

EMERSON, The Poet. Frag. 14.

<sup>6</sup> When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

<sup>7</sup> Ring out ye crystal spheres!
Once bless our human ears,
(If ye have power to touch our senses so)
And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time;
And let the base of Heav'n's deep organ blow,

And with your ninefold harmony,
Make up full consort to th' angelic symphony.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity. St. 13.

And in their motions harmony divine
So smooths her charming tones, that God's own ear

Listens delighted.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 625.

<sup>8</sup> The celestial music. (La musique celeste.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22.

<sup>9</sup> "This must be the music," said he, "of the spheres,
For I am curst if each note of it doesn't run through one!"

THOMAS MOORE, Fudge Family in Paris. Letter v, l. 28.

<sup>10</sup> Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

<sup>11</sup> When his veering gait
And every motion of his starry train
Seem governed by a strain
Of music, audible to him alone.

WORDSWORTH, The Triad, l. 48.

VIII—Music: The Flute

<sup>12</sup> The flute is not an instrument which has a good moral effect; it is too exciting.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. viii, ch. 6, sec. 5.

<sup>13</sup> The soft complaining flute
In dying notes discovers
The woes of hopeless lovers,
Whose dirge is whisper'd by the warbling lute.
JOHN DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day.

<sup>14</sup> A velvet flute-note fell down pleasantly
Upon the bosom of that harmony, . . .
Somewhat, half song, half odor, forth did float

As if a rose might somehow be a throat.

SIDNEY LANIER, The Symphony.

<sup>15</sup> Govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 372.

You cannot play the flute by merely blowing;
you must use your fingers too.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa, iii.

IX—Music: The Harp

1 His harp the sole companion of his way.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 3.

2 The lyre is welcome at the feasts of supreme Jupiter. (Dapibus supremi Grata testudo Jovis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 32, l. 13.

3 Leave strumming at the doors of inns
To vagabonds and sharpers.

Where men seek minstrels for their sins
They shall not lack for harpers.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Farewell to Town.

4 The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.

So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er;
And hearts, that once beat high for praise,
Now feel that pulse no more.

THOMAS MOORE, The Harp that Once Through Tara's Halls.

If the pulse of the patriot, soldier, or lover,
Have throbb'd at our lay, 'tis thy glory alone;
I was but as the wind, passing heedlessly over,
And all the wild sweetness I wak'd was thy own.

THOMAS MOORE, Dear Harp of My Country.
St. 2.

'Tis believ'd that this harp which I wake now for thee

Was a siren of old who sung under the sea.

THOMAS MOORE, Origin of the Harp.

5 The music of the zither, the flute, and the lyre enervates the mind. (Enervant animos citharæ, lotosque, lyræque.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 753.

6 He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced,

As some vast river of unfailing source,
Rapid, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
And opened new fountains in the human heart.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. iv, l. 675.

7 We hanged our harps upon the willows.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2.

8 Hearken, my minstrels! which of ye all
Touched his harp with that dying fall,
So sweet, so soft, so faint,

It seemed an angel's whispered call
To an expiring saint?

SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain. Canto i, st. 4.

And tuned, to please a peasant's ear,
The harp a king had loved to hear.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction, l. 25.

9 Strange! that a harp of a thousand strings
Should keep in tune so long.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Bk.
ii, No. 19.

TO HARP ON THE SAME STRING, see under PROV-ERBS.

X—Music: The Lute

10 If thou would'st have me sing and play
As once I play'd and sung,
First take this time-worn lute away,
And bring one freshly strung.

THOMAS MOORE, *If Thou Would'st Have Me
Sing and Play*.

11 In a sadly pleasing strain
Let the warbling lute complain.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 5.

12 Do the sounds
Which slumber in the lute, belong alone
To him who buys the chords?

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iv, sc. 21.

13 As sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 342.

Musical as is Apollo's lute.

MILTON, Comus, l. 478.

14 Some dead lute-player
That in dead years had done delicious things.
SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Life. St. 2.

15 It is the little rift within the lute
That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening, slowly silence all.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 388.

XI—Music and Discord

16 So discord oft in music makes the sweeter lay.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ii, st. 15.

Discords make the sweetest airs,
And curses are a sort of prayers.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 919.

I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 121.

17 You had that action and counteraction which,
in the natural and in the political world,
from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers draws out the harmony of the universe.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

18 As there is music uninform'd by art.
DRYDEN, Epistles: To Sir Robert Howard, l. 1.

- <sup>1</sup> You think they are crusaders, sent
From some infernal clime,
To pluck the eyes of Sentiment,
And dock the tail of Rhyme,
To crack the voice of Melody,
And break the legs of Time.
O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.
- <sup>2</sup> Fill'd the air with barbarous dissonance.
MILTON, Comus, l. 550.
- <sup>3</sup> Above the pitch, out of tune, and off the hinges.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 19.
- <sup>4</sup> Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 28.
- Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 431.
- <sup>5</sup> How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 42.
- Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark what discord follows!
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 109.
- And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd fife.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 30.

XII—Music: The Musician

- <sup>6</sup> But God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear;
The rest may reason and welcome: 'tis we musicians know.
ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.
- Therefore to whom turn I but to thee, the ineffable Name?
Builder and maker, thou, of houses not made with hands!
ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.
- <sup>7</sup> From this did Paganini comb the fierce Electric sparks, or to tenuity
Pull forth the inmost wailing of the wire—
No cat-gut could swoon out so much of soul!
ROBERT BROWNING, Red Cotton Night-cap Country. Pt. i.
- <sup>8</sup> When a musician hath forgot his note,
He makes as though a crumb stuck in his throat.
JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 108. (1639)
- <sup>9</sup> Who, through long days of labor,

- And nights devoid of ease,
Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.
LONGFELLOW, The Day is Done.
- <sup>10</sup> He the best of all musicians,
He the sweetest of all singers.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. vi, l. 20.
- He is dead, the sweet musician!
He has gone from us forever,
He has moved a little nearer
To the Master of all music.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xv, l. 56.
- <sup>11</sup> We are the music-makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea-breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams;
World-losers and world-forsakers,
Of whom the pale moon gleams:
Yet we are the movers and shakers
Of the world for ever, it seems.
ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, The Music-Makers.
- <sup>12</sup> The language of tones belongs equally to all mankind, and melody is the absolute language in which the musician speaks to every heart.
RICHARD WAGNER, Beethoven.
- <sup>13</sup> See to their desks Apollo's sons repair,— Swift rides the rosin o'er the horse's hair!
In unison their various tones to tune,
Murmurs the hautboy, growls the hoarse bassoon;
In soft vibration sighs the whispering lute,
Tang goes the harpsichord, too-too the flute,
Brays the loud trumpet, squeaks the fiddle sharp,
Winds the French-horn, and twangs the tinkling harp;
Till, like great Jove, the leader, figuring in, Attunes to order the chaotic din.
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Adresses: The Theatre, l. 20.
- A squeak's heard in the orchestra,
The leader draws across
The intestines of the agile cat
The tail of the noble hoss.
GEORGE T. LANIGAN, The Amateur Orlando. St. 8.
- <sup>14</sup> Come on and hear, come on and hear, Alexander's Ragtime Band.
IRVING BERLIN, Alexander's Ragtime Band. (1911)
- Alexander's Ragtime Band stamped a new character on American music.
ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, Irving Berlin.
- <sup>15</sup> Gayly the troubadour touched his guitar.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Welcome Me Home.
I'll strike the light guitar.
H. S. VANDYKE, The Light Guitar.

1
Hence from their resounding prison the docile winds are loosed, and repay a melody for their liberty received. (Hinc venti dociles resonant se carcere solvunt, Et cantum accepta pro libertate rependunt.)

JEAN BAPTISTE DE SANTEUL, Inscription on an Organ.

2
There's a barrel-organ carolling across a golden street

In the city as the sun sinks low;
And the music's not immortal; but the world has made it sweet

And fulfilled it with the sunset glow.
ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

She played upon her music-box a fancy air by chance,
And straightway all her polka-dots began a lively dance.

PETER NEWELL, Her Polka-Dots.

I have a reasonable good ear in music.
Let's have the tongs and the bones.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 30.

4
He was a fiddler, and consequently a rogue.
SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 25 July, 1711.

He could fiddle all the bugs off a sweet-potato-vine.

STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, The Mountain Whippoorwill.

5
How her fingers went when they moved by note

Through measures fine, as she marched them o'er

The yielding plank of the ivory floor.

BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR, How the Brook Went to Mill.

6
She ran her fingers o'er the ivory keys,
And shook a prelude from them as a bird
Shakes from its throat a song.

JAMES B. KENYON, Twilight and Music.

7
Five-and-thirty black slaves,
Half-a-hundred white,
All their duty but to sing
For their Queen's delight.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

Ah, the gracious tyrannies
Of her finger-tips.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

8
Her ivory hands on the ivory keys
Strayed in a fitful fantasy,
Like the silver gleam when the poplar trees
Rustle their pale leaves listlessly.

OSCAR WILDE, In the Gold Room: A Harmony.

10
'Tis the common disease of all your musicians, that they know no mean, to be entreated either to begin or to end.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act ii, sc. 2.

MYSTERY

11
The lucrative business of mystery.

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

12
It happens, by a common vice of human nature, that we trust most to, and are most seriously frightened at, things which are strange and unknown. (Communi fit vitio naturæ, ut inusitatis atque incognitis rebus magis confidamus, vehementiusque extereamur.)

CÆSAR, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, sec. 4.

Plain truth will influence half a score of men at most in a nation, or an age, while mystery will lead millions by the nose.

HENRY ST. JOHN, Letter, 28 July, 1721.

13
O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is haunted.

THOMAS HOOD, The Haunted House.

14
Listen to voices in the upper air,
Nor lose thy simple faith in mysteries.

LONGFELLOW, The Castle-Builder.

15
If you go directly at the heart of a mystery, it ceases to be a mystery, and becomes only a question of drainage.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 9.

16
There was the Door to which I found no Key;

There was the Veil through which I might not see.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 32. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Shall any gazer see with mortal eyes,
Or any searcher know by mortal mind?
Veil after veil will lift—but there must be Veil upon veil behind.

EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of Asia. Bk. viii.

17
Sacred mysteries. (Arcana sacra.)
TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 18.

18
Let not the conceit of intellect hinder thee from worshipping mystery.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Reading.

NAIL

<sup>1</sup> Nail is driven out by nail. ("Ἡλφ γὰρ ὁ ἥλος.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 9, sec. 6. Quoted as a proverb.

One nail drives out another, at least!
OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

Drive not a second nail till the first be clinched.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1334.

<sup>2</sup> A nail in the wound. (Unguis in ulcere.)
CICERO, Pro Domo Sua. Ch. 5, sec. 12.

<sup>3</sup> With tooth and nail.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)

<sup>4</sup> To the nail. (Ad unguem.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 32; Ars Poetica, l. 294. In the sense of highly finished, see under MANNERS.

<sup>5</sup> Speak the word, and I will help you to it upon the nail.
THOMAS NASHE, Works. Vol. iii, p. 59. (1596)

<sup>6</sup> I'll never see't; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 223.

<sup>7</sup> Falstaff: What, is the old king dead?
Pistol: As nail in door.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 126.
See also under DEATH.

<sup>8</sup> Could I come near your beauty with my nails,
I'd set my ten commandments in your face.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 144.

1; HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 11; RABELAIS,
Works, iii, 35.

<sup>10</sup> Every nail driven should be as another rivet in the machine of the universe, you carrying on the work.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

<sup>11</sup> A white speck upon the nails made them as sure of a gift, as if they had it already in their pockets.
UNKNOWN. (Connoisseur. No. 59. 1755.)

<sup>12</sup> Cut your nails on Monday, you cut them for health;
Cut them on Tuesday, you cut them for wealth;

Cut them on Wednesday, you cut them for news;

Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes;
Cut them on Friday, you cut them for sorrow;

Cut them on Saturday, a present to-morrow;
But he that on Sunday cuts his horn,
Better that he had never been born!

UNKNOWN. (HENDERSON, Folk-Lore N. Counties, 18.)

Hippocrates has even left directions how we should cut our nails; that is, even with the ends of the fingers, neither shorter nor longer.

NAME

I—Name: Apothegms

<sup>13</sup> I can call nothing by name if that is not his name. I call a cat a cat, and Rollet a rogue. (Je ne puis rien nommer si ce n'est pas son nom; J'appelle un chat un chat, et Rollet un fripon.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat i, l. 51.

To CALL A SPADE A SPADE, see under CANDOR.

He said true things, but called them by wrong
names.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

<sup>14</sup> Who hath not own'd, with rapture-smitten
frame,

The power of grace, the magic of a name?
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 5.

<sup>15</sup> "Whose name was writ in water!"

R. W. GILDER, Keats. See also under KEATS.

My name may have buoyancy enough to float
upon the sea of time.

GLADSTONE, Eton Miscellany, Nov., 1827.
Quoted.

<sup>16</sup> And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.
LEIGH HUNT, About Ben Adhem. For Full quotation, see PHILANTHROPY.

<sup>17</sup> Indeed there is a woundy luck in names, Sir,
And a main mystery, an' a man knew where
To vind it.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 1.

Let us speak plain: there is more force in names
Than most men dream of; and a lie may keep
Its throne a whole age longer if it skulk
Behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain,
l. 251.

His opinion was that there was a strange kind of magic bias which good or bad names, as he called them, irresistibly impressed upon our characters and conduct. . . . How many Cæsars and Pompeys, he would say, by mere inspiration of the names, have been rendered worthy of them? And how many, he would add, are there, who might have done exceeding well in the world, had not their characters and spirits been totally depressed and Nicodemus'd into nothing?

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 19.

"Villas" now, with sounding names,
All name and door.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Love's Landmarks.

1 There is no stone without its name. (Nullum est sine nomine saxum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 973.

What is it? a learned man
Could give it a clumsy name.
Let him name it who can,
The beauty would be the same.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 2, st. 2.

2 The name that dwells on every tongue,
No minstrel needs.

DON JORGE MANRIQUE, Coplas de Manrique.
St. 54. (Longfellow, tr.)

3 My name is Legion: for we are many.

New Testament: Mark, v, 9.

A name and also an omen. (Nomen atque omen.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 625. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

4 I have said everything when I have named the man. (Dixi omnia, cum hominem nominavi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22.

I name no parties.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act ii, sc. 3.

Canst thou bring me to the party?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 67.

Although it has been considered an Americanism, the older English writers frequently used "party" in the sense of "person." Shakespeare so uses it more than a score of times.

5 O name for ever sad! for ever dear!

Still breath'd in sighs, still usher'd with a tear.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 31.

6 The name of the Lord is a strong tower.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 10. (Turris fortissima, nomen Domini.—Vulgate.)

But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings.

Old Testament: Malachi, iv, 2.

7 The evil wound is cured, but not the evil name.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 18. (1670)

8 He is a fool and ever shall,
Who writes his name upon a wall.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Fools' names, like fools' faces,
Are often seen in public places.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

9 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments.

New Testament: Revelation, iii, 4.

10 He who pronounces Saxe as Saxy
Would surely call an axe an axy.

J. G. SAXE, Epigram, when asked which was the correct pronunciation of his name.

11 I am the last of my race. My name ends with me.

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act i, sc. 1, l. 100.

12 My foot is on my native heath, and my name is MacGregor.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34.

Who, noteless as the race from which he sprung,
Saved others' names, but left his own unsung.

SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 13.

13 Thou hast stolen both mine office and my name.

The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 44.

A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 64.

14 O good Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 355.

When we were happy we had other names.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 4, l. 8.

A name to be washed out with all men's tears.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althæa.

15 Every godfather can give a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 93.

Giving a name, indeed, is a poetic art; all poetry, if we go to that with it, is but a giving of names.

CARLYLE, Journal, 18 May, 1832.

16 Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike home.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 3, l. 41.

17 I cannot tell what the dickens his name is.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 20. (1600)

What the dickens!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Edward IV. Act iii, sc. 1. (1600)

18 O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name:

Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 33.

I cannot love my lord, and not his name.

TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 92.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 42.

That which we call a Snob, by any other name would still be snobbish.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs.

Love hangs like light about your name

As music round the shell!

SWINBURNE, Adieux à Marie Stuart. Pt. iv.

They lent honorable names [to dishonorable things]. (Honest nomina prætendebant.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 21.

Through superstition of a name. (Superstitione nominis.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 58.

Let be my name until I make my name.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 563.

I would rather make my name than inherit it.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 26.

The blackest ink of Fate was sure my lot,
And, when she writ my name, she made a blot.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. Act iii, sc. 2. (1671) Quoted by Fielding, Amelia. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

II—Name: Great Names

Some mighty man

Who beat his name on the drum of the world's ear.

BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis.

Strong towers decay,

But a great name shall never pass away.

PARK BENJAMIN, A Great Name.

But he whose name is graven in the white stone
Shall last and shine when all of these are gone.

ANNE BRADSTREET, Contemplations.

Our men scarce seem in earnest now:
Distinguished names!—but 'tis, somehow,
As if they played at being names
Still more distinguished, like the games
Of children.

ROBERT BROWNING, Waring. Pt. i, sec. 6.

Round the whole world his dreaded name shall sound,

And reach to worlds, that must not yet be found.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davideis. Bk. ii, l. 834.
(1656)

Nations unborn your mighty names shall sound,
And worlds applaud that must not yet be found!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 193. (1711)

Ill did those mighty men to trust thee with their story;

That hast forgot their names who reared thee
for their glory.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion. Song iii, l.
61. Referring to Stonehenge.

Victorious names, who made the world obey;
Who while they liv'd, in deeds of arms ex-cell'd,

And after death for deities were held.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 518.

Navies nor armies can exalt the state, . . .
But one great name can make a country great.

R. W. GILDER, To James Russell Lowell.

For thou art Freedom's now, and Fame's:
One of the few, the immortal names,

That were not born to die.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

He left a name, at which the world grew pale,
To point a moral, or adorn a tale.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes,
l. 219.

Great names debase instead of elevating those who do not know how to sustain them.
(Les grands noms abaissent au lieu d'élever ceux qui ne les savent pas soutenir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 94.

He stands the mere shadow of a mighty name. (Stat magni nominis umbra.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 135. An adaptation of this, "Stat nominis umbra," was used by Junius as the motto prefixed to his Letters.

Do not concern yourself with anxiety for the shadow of a great name. (Non sit tibi curæ de magni nominis umbra.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk.
xxiv, sec. 2.

An illustrious and ancient name. (Clarum et venerabile nomen.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 203.

He spreads his name throughout the whole world. (Nomen toto sparget in orbe suum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 61, l. 2.

Those rugged names . . .

That would have made Quintilian stare and gasp.

MILTON, Sonnets. No. xi.

The dreaded name Of Demogorgon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 965.

Must I call your master to my aid,

At whose dread name the trembling furies quake,
Hell stands abashed, and earth's foundations quake?

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii. (Rowe, tr.)

1 Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,

His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 5, l. 51.

Your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 192.

2 Bright with names that men remember, loud with names that men forget.

SWINBURNE, Eton: An Ode.

3 To such a name for ages long,
To such a name,
Preserve a broad approach of fame,
And ever-echoing avenues of song!

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. St. 5.

4 What a heavy burden is a name that has become too famous. (C'est un poids bien pessant qu'un nom trop tôt fameux.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Canto iii.

5 Methinks their very names shine still and bright;
Apart—like glow-worms on a summer's
night.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 5.

Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime,
Stand in the spacious firmament of time,
Fixed as a star.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 19.

A name "fast anchored in the deep abyss of time"
is like a star twinkling in the firmament, cold, silent, distant, but eternal and sublime.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Ser. ii, pt. 1.

III—Name and Fame

For Good Name see Reputation

6 For my name and memory, I leave it to men's charitable speeches, to foreign nations, and to the next ages.

FRANCIS BACON. From his will.

7 Bright names will hallow song.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 29.

8 The Glory and the Nothing of a Name.

BYRON, Churchill's Grave.

When I myself am nothing but a name.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Ode upon Occasion of a Copy of Verses of My Lord Broghill's.

9 He left a Corsair's name to other times,

Linked with one virtue, and a thousand crimes.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto iii, st. 24.

10 A poor traditionary fame

Is all that's left to grace his name.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxiv.

11 Charm'd with the foolish whistlings of a name.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Imitations of Vergil: Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 486. (1647)

Ravish'd with the whistling of a name.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 283. (1733)

12 Some to the fascination of a name

Surrender judgment, hoodwinked.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 101.

13 Men but like visions are, time all doth claim;
He lives, who dies to win a lasting name.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets. No. xii.

14 Had swoln 'bove any Greek or Roman name.

DRYDEN, On the Death of Lord Hastings, l. 76. (1667)

On this foundation would I build my fame,
And emulate the Greek and Roman name.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act iii, sc. 1. (1714)

Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 26. (1733)

15 There be of them, that have left a name behind them.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xlv, 8.

16 Only a herald, who that way doth pass, Finds his crackt name at length in the church-glass.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 33.

17 I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 5.

18 Then, when this body falls in funeral fire,
My name shall live, and my best part aspire.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act i, sc. 1.

19 To see the laurel wreath, on high suspended,
That is to crown our name when life is ended.

KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 35.

20 The surest pledge of a deathless name

Is the silent homage of thoughts unspoken.

LONGFELLOW, The Herons of Elmwood.

21 Ah, with what lofty hope we came!

But we forget it, dream of fame,

And scrawl, as I do here, a name.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 6.

1 Oh, breathe not his name! let it sleep in the shade,
Where cold and unhonour'd his relics are laid.
THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name.

2 And like to one he seemed whose better day
Is over to himself, though foolish fame
Shouts louder year by year his empty name.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue: The Wanderers, l. 466.

A far babbled name,
The ceaseless seeker after praise and fame.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 189.

3 Born to fail, A name without an echo.
HENRY NEWBOLT, The Non-Combatant.

4 Perchance my name will be mingled with theirs. (Forsitan et nostrum nomen miscebitur.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 339.

5 O! while along the stream of time thy name
Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 383.

6 Then shall our names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words, . . .
Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 51.

7 Yet leaving here a name, I trust,
That will not perish in the dust.
SOUTHEY, My Days Among the Dead Are Passed.

8 One day I wrote her name upon the strand,
But came the waves and washèd it away:
Again I wrote it with a second hand,
But came the tide, and made my pains his prey.
Vain man, said she, that dost in vain essay
A mortal thing so to immortalize!
For I myself shall like to this decay,
And eke my name be wipèd out likewise.
Not so (quod I) let baser things devise
To die in dust, but you shall live by fame:
My verse your virtues rare shall eternize,
And in the heavens write your glorious name.
SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxxv.

Alone I walked on the ocean strand,
A pearly shell was in my hand;
I stooped, and wrote upon the sand
My name, the year, the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast,
A wave came rolling high and fast,
And washèd my lines away.
HANNAH FLAGG GOULD, A Name in the Sand.

9 No sound is breathed so potent to coerce
And to conciliate, as their names who dare
For that sweet mother-land which gave them birth

Nobly to do, nobly to die.
TENNYSON, Tiresias, l. 116.

10 I won a noble fame;
But with a sudden frown,
The people snatched my crown,
And, in the mire, trod down
My lofty name.
THEODORE TILTON, Sir Marmaduke's Musings.

11 Keeps from age to age an ever-living name.
(Æternumque tenet per sæcula nomen.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 235.

12 When once the trumpet of fame has sounded a poor man's name, farewell his repose for ever.
VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. Capperonnier, June, 1768.

IV—Name: Women's Names

13 Oh! no! we never mention her,
Her name is never heard;
My lips are now forbid to speak
That once familiar word.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Oh! No! We Never Mention Her.

There's a name that's never spoken,
There's a mother's heart half-broken,
There's a loved one that is missing from the old home, that is all;
There's a memory still living,
There's a father unforgetting,
And a picture that is turned toward the wall.
CHARLES GRAHAM, The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall. (1891)

14 I have a passion for the name of "Mary,"
For once it was a magic sound to me,
And still it half calls up the realms of fairy,
Where I beheld what never was to be.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 4.

15 Sweet as the sweetest of melodies
Filling my soul with ecstasy,
Sweeter than all things to me,
The sound of my sweetheart's name.
WILL. D. COBB, The Sound of My Sweetheart's Name. (1901)

16 I ask'd my fair one happy day,
What I should call her in my lay;
By what sweet name from Rome or Greece;
Lalage, Neaera, Chloris,
Sappho, Lesbia, or Doris,
Arethusa or Lucrece.
"Ah!" replied my gentle fair,
"Belovèd, what are names but air?"

Choose thou whatever suits the line;
Call me Sappho, call me Chloris,
Call me Lalage or Doris,
Only, only call me Thine."
S. T. COLERIDGE, Names.

1 Brown's for Lalage, Jones for Lelia,
Robinson's bosom for Beatrice glows,
Smith is a Hamlet before Ophelia,
The glamour stays if the reason goes!
Every lover the years disclose
Is of a beautiful name made free.
One befriends, and all others are foes.
Anna's the name of names for me.
W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

Ruth like a gillyflower smells and blows,
Sylvia prattles of Arcadee,
Sybil mystifies, Connie crows,
Anna's the name of names for me!
W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

2 She who comes to me and pleadeth
In the lovely name of Edith.
LONGFELLOW, Lines in a Private Album.

3 For women's names keep murmuring like the wind
The hidden things that none for ever tells.
ERNEST RHYS, Words.

4 O Sophonisba! Sophonisba, O!
JAMES THOMSON, Sophonisba. Act iii, sc. 2.
When this line was uttered, at the first performance of the play, an exasperated spectator stood up in his box and cried out, "O Jamie Thomson! Jamie Thomson, O!" and the line was altered to, "O Sophonisba! I am wholly thine!"

5 "What is thy name, fair maid?" quoth he.
"Penelophon, O King!" quoth she.
UNKNOWN, *King Cophetua and the Beggar
Maid*. (PERCY, Reliques.) Shakespeare, quoting this old ballad in Love's Labour's Lost (iv, 1, 65), gives the beggar maid's name as Zenelophon.

6 Your name hangs in my heart like a bell's tongue.
EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii,
sc. 6.

7 I do beseech you—
Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers—
What is your name?
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 34.

V—Names Sweet and Ugly

8 The very names of things belov'd are dear,
And sounds will gather beauty from their sense,
As many a face thro' love's long residence
Groweth to fair instead of plain and sere.
ROBERT BRIDGES, The Growth of Love. Sonnet 4.

9 What a name! Was it love or praise?
Speech half-asleep or song half-awake?
I must learn Spanish, one of these days,
Only for that slow sweet name's sake.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Flower's Name.

10 Thrice happy he whose name has been well spelt
In the despatch.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 18.

11 Oh, Amos Cottle!—Phœbus! what a name!
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 399.

12 Pride lives with all; strange names our rustics give
To helpless infants, that their own may live.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. i.

With unpronounceable, awful names.
BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

13 A name?—if the party had a voice,
What mortal would be a Bugg by choice,
As a Hogg, a Grubb, or a Chubb rejoice,
Or any such nauseous blazon?
Not to mention many a vulgar name,
Which would make a doorplate blush for shame,

If doorplates were not so brazen!
HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Christening.

14 Have heard her sigh and soften out the name.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Gebir. Pt. v, l. 145.

15 And if his name be George, I'll call him
Peter;
For new-made honour doth forget men's
names.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act i, sc. 1, l. 186.

16 As Stephen Sly and old John Naps of Greece
And Peter Turph and Henry Pimpernell
And twenty more such names and men as these

Which never were nor no man ever saw.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 95.

17 And last of all an Admirall came,
A terrible man with a terrible name,—
A name which you all know by sight very well,
But which no one can speak, and no one can spell.

SOUTHEY, The March to Moscow. St. 8.

18 But Thomas, and William, and such pretty
names,
Should be cleanly and harmless as doves or
as lambs,
Those lovely and innocent creatures.
ISAAC WATTS, Innocent Play.

1
What with Gertrude, Ep and Ein,
When I hear the name of Stein,
I go creepy down the spine.
UNKNOWN, Precious Steins.

There's a wonderful family, Stein—
There's Gert, and there's Epp, and there's Ein;
Gert's poems are bunk,
Epp's statues are junk,
And no one can understand Ein.
UNKNOWN, The Steins.

VI—Name: Nicknames

2
No orator can measure in effect with him who can give good nicknames.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

3
A nickname is the hardest stone that the devil can throw at a man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Nicknames.

Of all eloquence a nickname is the most concise;
of all arguments the most unanswerable.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Nicknames.

4 Nicknames and whippings, when they are once laid on, no one has discovered how to take off.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Du Paty.

5
His intimate friends called him "Candle-ends,"

And his enemies, "Toasted-cheese."

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark.
Fit 1.

6
Known by the sobriquet of "The Artful Dodger."

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 8.

The dodgerest of all the dodgers.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 13.

7
Called me wessel, Sammy—a wessel of wrath.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 22.

8
I am called "Archibald the All-right"—for I am infallible.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act i.

9
Then you can call me "Timbertoes,"—thet's
wut the people likes;
Sutthin' combinin' morril truth with phrases
sech ez strikes.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 8.

10 Out of his surname they have coined an epithet for a knave, and out of his Christain name a synonym for the Devil.

MACAULAY, Essays: Niccolo Machiavelli.

Nick Machiavel had ne'er a trick
(Tho' he gave his name to our Old Nick),
But was below the least of these,
That pass i' th' world for holiness.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 1313.

11
Sunset Cox.

SAMUEL SULLIVAN COX, from a glowing description of a sunset, written by him, and printed in Ohio State Journal, 19 May, 1853.

12
In the parlance of the street, his first name was Jupiter; this was properly bestowed, for his word was "I command."

JAMES FORD RHODES, History of the United States. Referring to J. P. Morgan. "Jupiter" as a name for Morgan was originated by Thomas Hitchcock, of the New York Sun.

13
The bravest of the Brave. (Le brave des braves.)

MARSHAL NEY won this title at the battle of Friedland (1807). The title had previously been given to Crillon by Henry IV of France.

14
Gentlemen, I give you the Bayard of India,
Major James Outram of the Bombay army.

SIR CHARLES JAMES NAPIER, Toast, at dinner to Outram, 5 Nov., 1842.

15
O sea-green incorruptible.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. iii, ch. 1. Referring to Robespierre.

16
Some American Sobriquets:

The Old Man Eloquent: John Quincy Adams.

The American Cato: Samuel Adams.

Old Bullion: Thomas Benton.

The Plumed Knight; the Tattooed Man: James G. Blaine. (For "Plumed Knight" see 1553:10. "Tattooed Man" derived from a cartoon by Bernard Gillam in Puck, 16 April, 1884, captioned "Phryne Before the Chicago Tribunal," showing Blaine, clad only in a loin cloth and "magnetic pad," his body tattooed with "Mulligan letters," "Bribery," etc.)

The Tenth Muse: Anne Bradstreet.

The Sage of Wheatland: James Buchanan.

The Mill-Boy of the Slashes: Henry Clay.

The Nestor of the Press: Charles A. Dana.

The Little Giant: Stephen A. Douglas.

The Apostle of the Indians: John Eliot.

The Old Roman: Allen G. Thurman.

The Sage of Greystone: Samuel J. Tilden.

The Little Magician: Martin Van Buren.

Mad Anthony: General Anthony Wayne.

The Schoolmaster of the Republic: Noah Webster.

The Quaker Poet: John G. Whittier.

NAPOLEON

I—Napoleon I

<sup>1</sup> Crushed was Napoleon by the northern Thor,
Who knocked his army down with icy hammer.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 61.

And kings crept out again to feel the sun.

E. B. BROWNING, Crowned and Buried, St. 11.

<sup>2</sup> The instinct of active, brave, able men, throughout the middle class everywhere, has pointed out Napoleon as the incarnate Demococrat.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

Napoleon is thoroughly modern, and, at the highest point of his fortunes, has the very spirit of the newspapers.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

When you have penetrated through all the circles of power and splendor, you were not dealing with a gentleman, at last, but with an impostor and a rogue.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

<sup>3</sup> Napoleon was a man! His life was the stride of a demigod.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann, 1828.

You are a man!

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, closing a conversation with Goethe at Erfurt, 2 Oct., 1808.

<sup>4</sup> Yet spirit immortal, the tomb cannot bind thee,

But, like thine own eagle that soars to the sun,

Thou springest from bondage and leavest behind thee

A name which before thee no mortal hath won.

LYMAN HEATH, The Grave of Bonaparte

A little while ago I stood by the tomb of the old Napoleon, a magnificent tomb of gilt and gold, . . . and could see the only woman who ever loved him pushed aside.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Reverie at the Tomb of Napoleon.

I wish my ashes to repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people I have loved so well.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Codicil to His Will, dated 16 April, 1821.

I don't care a twopenny damn what becomes of the ashes of Napoleon Bonaparte.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, attr. (FARMER AND HENLEY, Slang and Its Analogues.)

<sup>5</sup> Napoleon healed through sword and fire the sick nation.

HEINE. (SCHERER, History of German Literature. Bk. ii, p. 116.)

<sup>6</sup> Napoleon was whipped because he carried a chip on his shoulder: this is the one thing that the gods who write the laws of nations will not palliate nor excuse.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 45.

VICTOR HUGO, applying for the first time the word l'Aiglon to Napoleon's son. Napoleon had transferred the imperial eagles of Rome to his own standard.

God was bored by him.

VICTOR HUGO, Referring to Napoleon.

<sup>8</sup> Bonaparte's wisdom was in his thoughts, and his madness in his passions. (La sagesse de Bonaparte était dans ses pensées, et la folie dans ses passions.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 221.

<sup>9</sup> Even the great Napoleon could not dine twice. (Même le grand Napoléon ne pouvait pas dîner deux fois.)

ALPHONSE KARR, Le Chemin le Plus Court.

<sup>10</sup> Grand, gloomy, and peculiar, he sat upon the throne a sceptred hermit, wrapped in the solitude of his own originality.

CHARLES PHILLIPS, The Character of Napoleon.

<sup>11</sup> Although too much of a soldier among sovereigns, no one could claim with better right to be a sovereign among soldiers.

WALTER SCOTT, Life of Napoleon.

<sup>12</sup> What! alive, and so bold, O earth?

SHELLEY, On Hearing the News of the Death of Napoleon.

It is no longer an event; it is only a piece of news.

TALLEYRAND, when some one exclaimed "What an event!" on learning of Napoleon's death at St. Helena. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

<sup>13</sup> Gentlemen, we have a master: this young man does everything, can do everything, and will do everything. (Messieurs, nous avons un maître: ce jeune homme fait tout, peut tout, et veut tout.)

SIEYÈS, Address, to the National Assembly, speaking of Napoleon.

1
No law but his own headstrong will he knew,
No counsellor but his own wicked heart.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Ode, Written during the Negotiations with Buonaparte.

Pre-eminently bad among the worst.

SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. iv, st. 15.

2
He thought to quell the stubborn hearts of oak,
Madman!—to chain with chains, and bind with bands
That island queen who sways the floods and lands. . . .

We taught him lowlier moods.

TENNYSON, Buonaparte.

Though more than half the world was his,
He died without a rood his own;
And borrowed from his enemies
Six feet of ground to lie upon.

THACKERAY, The Chronicle of the Drum.

II—Napoleon III

3
A great unrecognized incapacity. (Une grande incapacité inconnue.)

BISMARCK, of Napoleon III. (Letter, 1862, while minister to France.)

Copies never succeed.

KOSSUTH, Saying.

4
Because we have had Napoleon the Great, must we have Napoleon the Little?

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, Chamber of Deputies, 17 July, 1851. (BARBOU, Life.)

5
We shall see Buonaparte the bastard
Kick heels with his throat in a rope.

SWINBURNE, A Song in Time of Order, 1852.

NATION

See also State

I—Nation: Definitions

6
The true wealth of a country lies in its men and women. If they're mean, unhappy and ill, the country is poor.

RICHARD ALDINGTON, Colonel's Daughter, p. 51.
And you prate of the wealth of nations, as if it were bought and sold,
The wealth of nations is men, not silk and cotton and gold.

RICHARD HOVEY, Peace.

A people is but the attempt of many
To rise to the completer life of one—
And those who live as models for the mass

Are singly of more value than they all.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act v, l. 334.

8
I am firm in my conviction that . . . there is no calamity which a great nation can invite which equals that which follows from a supine submission to wrong and injustice, and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor, beneath which are shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message to Congress, on Venezuelan question, 17 Dec., 1895. Based on draft by Richard Olney, Secretary of State. For contrasted texts see Nevins, Grover Cleveland, p. 640.

That nation is worthless which does not joyfully stake everything in defense of her honor.

SCHILLER, Die Jungfrau von Orleans. Act i, sc. 5, l. 81.

The nation's honor is dearer than the nation's comfort; yes, than the nation's life itself.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, 29 Jan., 1916.

9
A nation is the unity of a people. King and parliament are the unity made visible.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk.

10
Individuals may form communities, but it is institutions alone that can create a nation.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Manchester, 1866.

Nationality is the miracle of political independence. Race is the principle of physical analogy.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 9 Aug., 1848.

11
A nation is a thing that lives and acts like a man, and men are the particles of which it is composed.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks: The National Heart.

12
The nation is like a comedy. (Natio comœdia est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 100.

13
Nations are the citizens of humanity, as individuals are the citizens of the nation.

MAZZINI, Duties of Man.

14
Nations, like men, have their infancy.

HENRY ST. JOHN, On the Study and Use of History.

II—Nation: Apothegms

15
And hath made of one blood all nations of men.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 26.

All nations and kindreds and people and tongues.
New Testament: Revelation, vii, 9.

16
A treaty is the promise of a nation.

FISHER AMES, Speech on the British Treaty, 28 April, 1796.

1 Men, upon the whole,
Are what they can be—nations, what they would.

E. B. BROWNING, Casa Guidi Windows. Pt. i.
Happy are all free peoples, too strong to be dis-
possessed;
But blessed are those among nations who dare to be strong for the rest!

E. B. BROWNING, A Court Lady, l. 39.
2 Nations save, but do not revenge themselves.
GEORGES JACQUES DANTON. (TAINE, French Revolution.)

3 How much more are men than nations!
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

4 Justice is as strictly due between neighbor nations as between neighbor citizens. A highwayman is as much a robber when he plun-ders in a gang as when single; and a nation that makes an unjust war is only a great gang.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter, 14 March, 1785.

5 How wide the limits stand
Between a splendid and a happy land.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 267.

A land of levity is a land of guilt.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts: Preface.

6 The nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 15.

7 No nation is permitted to live in ignorance with impunity.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 407.

If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, it expects what never was and never will be.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 382.

8 Wise nature ever, with a prudent hand,
Dispenses various gifts to ev'ry land;
To ev'ry nation frugally imparts
A genius fit for some peculiar arts.

SOAME JENYNS, The Art of Dancing. Canto
ii, l. 55.

9 I know of no existing nation that deserves to live, and I know of very few individuals.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 208.

10 A nation's right to speak a nation's voice,
And own no power but of the nation's choice!
THOMAS MOORE, Fudge Family in Paris. Letter xi, l. 3.

11 Make your national conscience clean, and your national eyes will soon be clear.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War.

12 A nation strong, train'd up in arms.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, 30.

13 To rise by others' fall
I deem a losing gain;
All states with others' ruin built
To ruin run amain.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, I Envy Not Their Hap.
A nation never falls but by suicide.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1861.
Until nations are generous they will never be wise; true policy is generous policy; all bitterness, selfishness, etc., may gain small ends, but lose great ones.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Letter, March, 1823.

14 A nation's institutions and beliefs are determined by its character.
HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. ii, ch. 16,
sec. 5.

15 The true greatness of nations is in those qualities which constitute the greatness of the individual.

CHARLES SUMNER, Oration on the True Grandeur of Nations.

16 There was never a nation great until it came to the knowledge that it had nowhere in the world to go for help.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, *Studies: Comments
on Canada*. Ch. 3.

17 Just pride is no mean factor in a State;
The sense of greatness keeps a nation great.
WILLIAM WATSON, The True Patriotism.

18 No nation is fit to sit in judgment upon any other nation.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 20 April, 1915.

III—Nation: Little Nations

19 The day of small nations has passed away;
the day of empires has come.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech. Birmingham,
13 May, 1904. See also under IMPERIALISM.

20 There is no such thing as a small country.
The greatness of a people is no more affected by the number of its inhabitants than the greatness of an individual is measured by his height. Whoever presents a great example is great.

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, at Geneva, 17 Nov., 1862.

21 The nations which have put mankind and posterity most in their debt have been small states—Israel, Athens, Florence, Elizabethan England.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 181.)

22 A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lx, 22.

She that was great among nations, and princess among provinces, how is she become tributary!
Old Testament: Lamentations, i, 1.

<sup>1</sup>
The Cry of the Little Peoples goes up to God
in vain,
For the world is given over to the cruel sons of Cain.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Cry of the Little Peoples.

<sup>2</sup>
God has chosen little nations as the vessels by which He carries his choicest wines to the lips of humanity to rejoice their hearts, to exalt their vision, to strengthen their faith.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, Sept., 1914.

NATURE

See also Brooks, Hills, Mountains, etc.

I—Nature: Definitions

<sup>3</sup>
Nature means Necessity.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Dedication.

By fate, not option, frugal Nature gave
One scent to hyson and to wall-flower,
One sound to pine-groves and to waterfalls,
One aspect to the desert and the lake.
It was her stern necessity.

EMERSON, Xenophanes.

<sup>4</sup>
Whatever befalls in accordance with Nature should be accounted good. (Omnia autem, quæsecundum naturam fiunt, sunt habenda in bonis.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 71.

<sup>5</sup>
And what if all of animated nature
Be but organic harps diversely fram'd,
That tremble into thought, as o'er them sweeps,

Plastic and vast, one intellectual breeze,
At once the soul of each, and God of all?

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Eolian Harp, l. 44.

<sup>6</sup>
Nature is a rag-merchant, who works up every shred and ort and end into new creations; like a good chemist whom I found, the other day, in his laboratory, converting his old shirts into pure white sugar.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

<sup>7</sup>
Nature is what you may do. . . . Nature is the tyrannous circumstance, the thick skull, the sheathed snake, the ponderous rock-like jaw; necessitated activity, violent direction.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Nature is a mutable cloud which is always and never the same.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

Nature, as we know her, is no saint. . . . She comes eating, drinking and sinning.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

<sup>8</sup>
The great mother Nature will not quite tell her secret to the coach or the steamboat, but says, One to one, my dear, is my rule also, and I keep my enchantments and oracles for the religious soul coming alone, or as good as alone, in true-love.

EMERSON, Letter to Mrs. Emerson, 20 May, 1871.

<sup>9</sup>
Nature, in her most dazzling aspects or stupendous parts, is but the background and theatre of the tragedy of man.

JOHN MORLEY, Critical Miscellanies: Byron.

<sup>10</sup>
All nature is but art, unknown to thee.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 289.

See also ART AND NATURE.

<sup>11</sup>
Meanwhile, until the world's structure is held together by philosophy, she [nature] maintains its working through hunger and through love.

SCHILLER, Die Weltweisen. Last stanza.

<sup>12</sup>
"Nature" is but another name for health, and the seasons are but different states of health.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Aug., 1853.

Nature will bear the closest inspection. She invites us to lay our eye level with her smallest leaf, and take an insect view of its plain.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 22 Oct., 1839.

II—Nature: Apothegms

<sup>13</sup>
The never idle workshop of Nature.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Elegiac Poems: Epilogue.

<sup>14</sup>
About nature consult nature herself.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum:
Pt. iii, Introductio. Stated by Bacon to be "the sole and only way in which the foundations of true and active philosophy can be established."

<sup>15</sup>
Nature is not governed except by obeying her.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.
Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 129.

Nature, to be commanded, must be obeyed.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum.

<sup>16</sup>
Where man is not, nature is barren.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

<sup>17</sup>
Rich with the spoils of Nature.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 13.

<sup>18</sup>
Nature does nothing in vain. (Natura nihil agit frustra.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 19. Quoted as "the only undisputed axiom in philosophy."

1 And muse on Nature with a poet's eye.
 CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 98.
 Nature indeed looks prettily in rhyme.
 COWPER, Retirement, l. 567.

2 Nature admits no lie.
 CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 5.
 There is no pure lie, no pure malignity in nature.
 The entertainment of the proposition of depravity is the last profligacy and profanation.
 There is no skepticism, no atheism, but that.
 EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

3 It can't be nature, for it is not sense.
 CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 200.

4 Nature abhors annihilation. (Ab interitu naturam abhorrere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 11, sec. 31.
 Nature abhors a vacuum. (Natura abhorret vacuum.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 5. Quoted in Latin.
 5 Roosevelt on the Nature-Fakers.
 EDWARD B. CLARK, Everybody's Magazine, June, 1907.

The modern "nature-faker" is of course an object of derision to every . . . true nature-lover.
 THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Everybody's Magazine, Sept., 1907.

6 All Nature ministers to Hope.
 HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Sonnets. No. 35.
 In nature there is nothing melancholy.
 S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale.

No tears
 Dim the sweet look that Nature wears.
 LONGFELLOW, Sunrise on the Hills.

All Nature wears one universal grin.
 FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 1.
 Some touch of Nature's genial glow.

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto iii, st. 14.
 The saddest heart might pleasure take
 To see all nature gay.
 SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 15.

7 Nature's self's thy Ganymede.
 ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Grasshopper, l. 8.

8 The truth of nature lieth hid in certain deep mines and caves.
 DEMOCRITUS. (BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.)

9 Child of Nature, learn to unlearn.
 BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 1.

10 Nature tells every secret once.
 EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

"Look not on Nature, for her name is fatal," said the oracle.
 EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

11 Nature works very hard, and only hits the white once in a million throws.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Nature hates calculators.
 EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.
 Nature works on a method of all for each and each for all.
 EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

12 The language of nature is the universal language.
 CHRISTOPH GLUCK. (HAWEIS, Music and Morals. Bk. ii, sec. 85.)

13 Nature with little is content.
 ROBERT HERRICK, No Want Where There's Little. See also MODERATION: LIVING ON LITTLE.

14 You may drive out Nature with a pitchfork, yet she will always hasten back. (Naturam expelles furca, tamen usque recurret.)
 HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 24.

Take away the risk, set aside restraint, and Nature will spring forward, to roam at will. (Tolle periculum: Jam vaga prosiliet frenis Natura remotis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 73.

Chase Nature away, it returns at a gallop. (Chassez le naturel, il revient au galop.)

19 Nature never makes excellent things for mean, or no uses.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 15.

20 All that thy seasons bring, O Nature, is fruit for me!

All things come from thee, subsist in thee, go back to thee.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 23.

<sup>1</sup> Beldam Nature.

MILTON, At a Vacation Exercise in the College, l. 48.

I have no enthusiasm for nature which the slightest chill will not instantly destroy.

GEORGE SAND.

<sup>2</sup> And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons.

MILTON, Comus, l. 727.

Accuse not Nature; she hath done her part;
Do thou but thine.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 561.

Nature hath need of what she asks.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 253.

<sup>3</sup> 'Tis one and the same Nature that rolls on her course, and whoever has sufficiently considered the present state of things might certainly conclude as to both the future and the past.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

Let us a little permit Nature to take her own way; she better understands her own affairs than we.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

III—Nature: Love of Nature

<sup>18</sup> And who loves Nature more
Than he, whose painful art
Has taught and skilled his heart
To read her skill and lore?

ROBERT BRIDGES, Spring. Ode ii, st. 4.

<sup>19</sup> To him who in the love of Nature holds Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware.

BRYANT, Thanatopsis, l. 1.

<sup>20</sup> Set him before a hedgerow in a lane,

And he was happy all alone for hours.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Edward Crowhurst.

1
To sit on rocks, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell,

And mortal foot hath ne'er, or rarely been;
To climb the trackless mountain all unseen,
With the wild flock that never needs a fold;
Alone o'er steeps and foaming falls to lean;
This is not solitude; 'tis but to hold Converse with Nature's charms, and view her stores unroll'd.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 25.

Dear Nature is the kindest mother still,
Though always changing, in her aspect mild;
From her bare bosom let me take my fill,
Her never-wean'd, though not her favour'd child.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 37.

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society where none intrudes,
By the deep Sea, and music in its roar;
I love not Man the less, but Nature more,
From these our interviews, in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 178.

2
I am a part of all you see
In Nature: part of all you feel:
I am the impact of the bee
Upon the blossom; in the tree
I am the sap—that shall reveal
The leaf, the bloom—that flows and flutes
Up from the darkness through its roots.

MADISON CAWEIN, Penetralia.

3
He that can draw a charm
From rocks, or woods, or weeds, or things that seem
All mute, and does it—is wise.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, A Haunted Stream.

4
Inebriate of air am I,
And debauchee of dew,
Reeling, through endless summer days,
From inns of molten blue.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 20.

5
He who knows what sweets and virtues are in the ground, the waters, the plants, the heavens, and how to come at these enchantments, is the rich and royal man.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

6
I do not count the hours I spend
In wandering by the sea;
The forest is my loyal friend,
Like God it useth me.

EMERSON, Waldeinsamkeit.

Whoso walketh in solitude,
And inhabiteth the wood,
Choosing light, wave, rock, and bird,
Before the money-loving herd,
Into that forester shall pass,
From these companions, power and grace.

EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. ii.

7
The meanest floweret of the vale,
The simplest note that swells the gale,
The common sun, the air, the skies,
To him are opening Paradise.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 49.

8
Then live who may where honied words prevail,

I with the deer, and with the nightingale!

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, When in the Woods.

9
I have heard the mavis singing
Its love-song to the morn;
I've seen the dew-drop clinging
To the rose just newly born.

CHARLES JEFFREYS, Mary of Argyle.

10
Give true hearts but earth and sky,
And some flowers to bloom and die.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: First Sunday after Epiphany.

11
Nature, in thy largess, grant
I may be thy confidant!

F. L. KNOWLES, To Mother Nature.

12
I was blood-sister to the clod,
Blood-brother to the stone.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, The Fire-Bringer.

13
For him there's a story in every breeze,
And a picture in every wave.

THOMAS MOORE, M. P.: or the Blue Stocking.

14
And we, with Nature's heart in tune,
Concerted harmonies.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Jeannie Morrison.

15
O Nature, how we worship thee even against our wills! (Natura, quam te colimus inviti
quoque!)

SENECA, Hippolytus. Act iv, l. 1116.

16
Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

17
'Tis not for golden eloquence I pray,
A godlike tongue to move a stony heart—
Methinks it were full well to be apart
In solitary uplands far away,
Betwixt the blossoms of a rosy spray,
Dreaming upon the wonderful sweet face
Of Nature, in a wild and pathless place.

FREDERICK TENNYSON, Sonnet.

1 The sounding cataract
 Haunted me like a passion: the tall rock,
 The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
 Their colours and their forms, were then to me
 An appetite; a feeling and a love,
 That had no need of a remoter charm,
 By thought supplied.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 76.

A lover of the meadows and the woods
 And mountains; and of all that we behold
 From this green earth.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 103.

2 And recognizes ever and anon
 The breeze of Nature stirring in his soul.
 WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 599.

As in the eye of Nature he has lived,
 So in the eye of Nature let him die!

WORDSWORTH, The Old Cumberland Beggar.

I was yet a boy
 Careless of books, yet having felt the power
 Of Nature.

WORDSWORTH, Michael, l. 27.

As if the man had fixed his face,
 In many a solitary place,
 Against the wind and open sky!

4 A painted meadow, or a purling stream.
 JOSEPH ADDISON, Letter from Italy, l. 166.

Fountain-heads and pathless groves,
 Places which pale passion loves!
 BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Nice Valour:
Song. Act iii, sc. 3.

Yet nature's charms—the hills and woods—
 The sweeping vales and foaming floods—
 Are free alike to all.
 ROBERT BURNS, To Chloris.

Tracing out wisdom, power, and love,
 In earth or sky, in stream or grove.
 JOHN KEEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

Meadows trim with daisies pied,
 Shallow brooks and rivers wide.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 75.

5 If Nature built by rule and square,
 Than man what wiser would she be?
 What wins us is her careless care,
 And sweet unpunctuality.
 ALFRED AUSTIN, Nature and the Book.

6 There are no grotesques in nature.
 SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
 sec. 19.

O Nature! a' thy shews an' forms

To feeling, pensive hearts hae charms!
 Whether the summer kindly warms,
 Wi' life an' light,
 Or winter howls, in gusty storms,
 The lang, dark night!

BURNS, Epistle to William Simpson. St. 14.

Nothing in Nature is unbeautiful.
 TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 342.

7 Art, Glory, Freedom fail, but Nature still is fair.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 87.

8 Nature, exerting an unwearied power,
 Forms, opens, and gives scent to every flower;
 Spreads the fresh verdure of the field, and leads

The dancing Naiads through the dewy meads.
 COWPER, Table Talk, l. 690.

9 Till o'er the wreck, emerging from the storm,
 Immortal Nature lifts her changeful form:
 Mounts from her funeral pyre on wings of flame,

And soars and shines, another and the same.
 ERASMUS DARWIN, Botanic Garden. Pt. i, canto iv, l. 389.

10 For earth's little secret and innumerable ways,
 For the carol and the colour, Lord, we bring What things may be of thanks, and that Thou hast lent our days

Eyes to see and ears to hear and lips to sing.
 JOHN DRINKWATER, Morning Thanksgiving.

11 When you defile the pleasant streams
 And the wild bird's abiding place,
 You massacre a million dreams
 And cast your spittle in God's face.
 JOHN DRINKWATER, Olton Pools: To the Defilers.

12 Ever charming, ever new,
 When will the landscape tire the view?
 JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 102.

To sit in the shade on a fine day and look upon verdure is the most perfect refreshment.
 JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Ch. 9.

13 There is nothing so wonderful in any particular landscape as the necessity of being beautiful under which every landscape lies.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Miller owns this field, Locke that, and Manning the woodland beyond. But none of them owns the landscape. There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts, that is, the poet. This is the best part of these men's farms, yet to this their warranty-deeds give no title.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Nature.

14 How cunningly nature hides every wrinkle of her inconceivable antiquity under roses and violets and morning dew!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

The rounded world is fair to see,
Nine times folded in mystery:
Though baffled seers cannot impart
The secret of its laboring heart,
Throb thine with Nature's throbbing breast,
And all is clear from east to west.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

She paints with white and red the moors
To draw the nations out of doors.

EMERSON, Nature.

Nature never spares the opium or nepenthe, but wherever she mars her creatures with some deformity or defect, lays her poppies plentifully on the bruise, and the sufferer goes joyfully through life, ignorant of the ruin, and incapable of seeing it, though all the world point their finger at it every day.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

There's gowd in the breast of the primrose
pale,
An' siller in every blossom;
There's riches galore in the breeze of the vale,
And health in the wild wood's bosom.

JAMES HOGG, There's Gowd in the Breast.

There ev'ry bush with Nature's music rings,
There ev'ry breeze bears health upon its wings.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 220.

2
Which of us is not sometimes affected, almost to despair, by the splendid vision of earth and sky?

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

The soft south-wind, the flowers amid the grass,
The fragrant earth, the sweet sounds everywhere,
Seemed gifts too great almost for man to bear.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Story of Rhodope. St. 23.

3
We are what suns and winds and waters make
us;

The mountains are our sponsors and the rills Fashion and win their nurslings with their smiles.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Hellenics.

4 Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free

Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

SIDNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Tolerant plains, that suffer the sea and the rains
and the sun,

Ye spread and span like the catholic man who hath mightily won

God out of knowledge and good out of infinite pain

And sight out of blindness and purity out of a stain.

SIDNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Nature with folded hands seemed there,

Kneeling at her evening prayer!

LONGFELLOW, Voices of the Night: Prelude.
St. 11.

5
Over our manhood bend the skies;
Against our fallen and traitor lives
The great winds utter prophecies;
With our faint hearts the mountain strives;
Its arms outstretched, the druid wood
Waits with its benedictite;
And to our age's drowsy blood
Still shouts the inspiring sea.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal:
Prelude to Part First.

6
Wherefore did Nature pour her bounties forth
With such a full and unwithdrawing hand, Covering the earth with odours, fruits, and flocks,

Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable,
But all to please, and sate the curious taste?

MILTON, Comus, l. 710.

7
Oh, Brignall banks are wild and fair,
And Greta woods are green,
And you may gather garlands there
Would grace a summer queen.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 16.

8
Nature seems unspeakably grand, when, plunged in a long reverie, one hears the rippling of the waters upon a solitary strand, in the calm of a night still enkindled and luminous with the setting moon.

ETIENNE PIVART DE SENANCOUR, Obermann.

9
Nature's unchanging harmony.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto ii.

10
My banks they are furnish'd with bees,
Whose murmur invites one to sleep;

My grottoes are shaded with trees,
And my hills are white-over with sheep.

SHENSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad: Pt. ii, Hope.

11
Once, when the days were ages,
And the old Earth was young,

The high gods and the sages
From Nature's golden pages

Her open secrets wrung.

R. H. STODDARD, Brahma's Answer.

12
The whole wood-world is one full peal of praise.

TENNYSON, Balin and Balan, l. 444.

13
I care not, fortune, what you me deny:
You cannot rob me of free nature's grace;
You cannot shut the windows of the sky
Through which Aurora shows her brightening face:

You cannot bar my constant feet to trace
The woods and lawns, by living stream, at eve.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto ii, st. 3.

1
O nature! all-sufficient! over all
Enrich me with the knowledge of thy works;
Snatch me to Heaven.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1352.

Can he forbear to join the general smile
Of Nature? can fierce passions vex his breast,
While every gale is peace, and every grove
Is melody?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 871.

2
The sun-swept spaces which the good God
made.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, City Children.

3
Talk not of temples, there is one
Built without hands, to mankind given;
Its lamps are the meridian sun
And all the stars of heaven,
Its walls are the cerulean sky,
Its floor the earth so green and fair,
The dome its vast immensity
All Nature worships there!

DAVID VEDDER, The Temple of Nature.

Where Nature seems to sit alone,
Majestic on a craggy throne.

JOSEPH WARTON, Ode to Fancy.

4
I believe a leaf of grass is no less than the journey-work of the stars,
And the pismire is equally perfect, and a grain of sand, and the egg of the wren,
And the tree-toad is a chef-d'œuvre for the highest,
And the running blackberry would adorn the parlors of heaven,
And the narrowest hinge in my hand puts to scorn all machinery,
And the cow crunching with depress'd head
surpasses any statue,
And a mouse is miracle enough to stagger sextillions of infidels.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 31.

5
The harp at Nature's advent strung
Has never ceased to play;
The song the stars of morning sung
Has never died away.

WHITTIER, The Worship of Nature.

Though all the bards of earth were dead,
And all their music passed away,
What Nature wishes should be said
She'll find the rightful voice to say.

WILLIAM WINTER, The Golden Silence.

6
On a fair prospect some have looked,
And felt, as I have heard them say,
As if the moving time had been
A thing as steadfast as the scene
On which they gazed themselves away.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, st. 16.

7
The stars of midnight shall be dear
To her; and she shall lean her ear

In many a secret place
Where rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound
Shall pass into her face.

WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

There's not a nook within this solemn pass,
But were an apt confessional.

WORDSWORTH, The Trosachs.

8
Such blessings Nature pours,
O'erstock'd mankind enjoy but half her stores:
In distant wilds, by human eyes unseen,
She rears her flowers, and spreads her velvet
green;

Pure gurgling rills the lonely desert trace
And waste their music on the savage race.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 227.

9
The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play, . . .
Among the hushing of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born—
Out in the fields of God.

UNKNOWN, Out in the Fields. Published in the Boston Sunday Globe, 30 April, 1899, credited to St. Paul's Magazine, but not discovered there. Erroneously attributed to Elizabeth Barrett Browning. E. M. Tenison, in her Life of Louise Imogen Guiney, states that it was written by Miss Guiney "not long before her lute was broken and her pen laid aside forever." Miss Guiney went to England in 1901 and died in 1920, having previously published two collections of poems in which this one is not included. It is so obviously English—corn, for example, being used in its English sense—that it is the compiler's opinion it was written by an English author.

V—Nature: Its Cruelty

10
Nature is cruel, man is sick of blood;
Nature is stubborn, man would fain adore;
Nature is fickle, man hath need of rest;
Nature forgives no debt, and fears no grave.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Man and Nature.

Nature pardons no mistakes. Her yea is yea, and her nay, nay.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Discipline.

Nature's rules have no exceptions.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics: Introduction.

11
The course of Nature seems a course of Death,
And nothingness the whole substantial thing.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood.

12 Knowing how Nature threatens ere she
springs.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Meg Blane.

1 It is far from easy to determine whether she [Nature] has proved to him a kind parent or a merciless stepmother.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

To man the earth seems altogether

No more a mother, but a step-dame rather.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 3.

2 Nature subjects the weak to the strong. (Naturæ est enim potioribus deteriora summittere.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 4.

3 For nature is one with rapine, a harm no preacher can heal;

The Mayfly is torn by the swallow, the sparrow spear'd by the shrike,

And the whole little wood where I sit is a world of plunder and prey.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. iv, st. 4.

4 Ah, what a warning for a thoughtless man,
Could field or grove, could any spot of earth,
Show to his eye an image of the pangs
Which it hath witnessed; render back an echo
Of the sad steps by which it hath been trod!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 806.

VI—Nature: Its Laws

5 Nature's great law, and law of all men's minds?—

To its own impulse every creature stirs;

Live by thy light, and earth will live by hers!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Religious Isolation. St. 4.

6 I trust in Nature for the stable laws
Of beauty and utility. Spring shall plant
And Autumn garner to the end of time.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

7 For Nature in man's heart her laws doth pen.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 26, st. 2.

8 Nature is the true law.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 32.

9 Against the law of nature, law of nations.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 889. See also LAW: VARIETIES.

10 Laws of Nature are God's thoughts thinking themselves out in the orbits and the tides.

C. H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Pattern in Mount.

11 Those rules of old, discover'd, not devis'd,
Are Nature still, but Nature methodized;
Nature, like Liberty, is but restrain'd
By the same laws which first herself ordain'd.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 88.

VII—Nature, The Teacher

12 The study of Nature is intercourse with the Highest Mind. You should never trifle with Nature.

JEAN LOUIS AGASSIZ, Agassiz at Penikese.

13 Go forth under the open sky, and list
To Nature's teachings.

BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

The house is a prison, the schoolroom's a cell;
Leave study and books for the upland and dell.

JOSEPH H. GREEN, Morning Invitation to a Child.

14 Never does Nature say one thing and Wisdom another. (Numquam aliud natura, aliud sapientia dicit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 321.

Never, no never, did Nature say one thing, and Wisdom say another.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace.
No. 3.

Nature is always wise in every part.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, Harvest Moon.

15 Go, from the creatures thy instructions take:
Learn from the birds what food the thickets yield;

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field;
Thy arts of building from the bee receive;
Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave;

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 172.

16 But any man that walks the mead,
In bud or blade or bloom, may find,
According as his humours lead,
A meaning suited to his mind.

TENNYSON, The Day-Dream: Moral. St. 2.

17 For I'd rather be thy child
And pupil, in the forest wild,
Than be the king of men elsewhere,
And most sovereign slave of care;
To have one moment of thy dawn,
Than share the city's year forlorn.

H. D. THOREAU, Nature.

18 Nature has always had more power than education. (La Nature a toujours été en eux plus forte que l'éducation.)

VOLTAIRE, Life of Molière.

Nature is more powerful than education.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i,
ch. 13.

19 "Is this," I cried,
"The end of prayer and preaching?"

Then down with pulpit, down with priest,
And give us Nature's teaching!"

WHITTIER, A Sabbath Scene.

1 Kind Nature's charities his steps attend;
In every babbling brook he finds a friend;
While chast'ning thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed

By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.

WORDSWORTH, Descriptive Sketches, l. 27.

His daily teachers had been woods and rills,
The silence that is in the starry sky,
The sleep that is among the lonely hills.

WORDSWORTH, Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle, l. 162.

2 One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

3 On every thorn delightful wisdom grows;
In every rill a sweet instruction flows.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 249.

Read Nature; Nature is a friend to truth;
Nature is Christian; preaches to mankind;
And bids dead matter aid us in our creed.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 703.

VIII—Nature: The Book of Nature

4 After the sacred volumes of God and the Scriptures, study, in the second place, that great volume of the works and the creatures of God.

FRANCIS BACON, Letters: To Trinity College, Cambridge.

The volume of nature is the book of knowledge.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 4.

The book of Nature is the book of Fate. She turns the gigantic pages, leaf after leaf,—never re-turning one.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.

J. R. LOWELL, To the Dandelion.

5 Believe one who knows: you will find something more in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you can never learn from masters. (Experto crede: aliquid amplius in silvis invenies quam in libris. Ligna et lapides docebunt te quod a magistris audire non possis.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Epistles. No. 106.
To Master Henry Murdach, afterwards
Archbishop of York.

And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running
brooks,

Sermons in stones and good in every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 15.

London had been my prison; but my books Hills and great waters, labouring men and
brooks,

Ships and deep friendships and remembered days
Which even now set all my mind ablaze.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography.

6 Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, nature was his book.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Spring, l. 31.

7 Out of the book of Nature's learned breast.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

8 See thou bring not to field or stone
The fancies found in books;
Leave authors' eyes, and fetch your own,
To brave the landscape's looks.

EMERSON, Waldeinsamkeit.

9 His listless length at noontide would he stretch,

And pore upon the brook that babbles by.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 103.

10 Nature is a volume of which God is the author.

MOSES HARVEY, Science and Religion.

11 What Nature has writ with her lusty wit
Is worded so wisely and kindly

That whoever has dipped in her manuscript
Must up and follow her blindly.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 33.

12 Boughs are daily rifled
By the gusty thieves,
And the book of Nature
Getteth short of leaves.

THOMAS HOOD, The Seasons.

13 And Nature, the old nurse, took
The child upon her knee,
Saying: "Here is a story-book
Thy Father has written for thee."

"Come, wander with me," she said,
"Into regions yet untrod;
And read what is still unread
In the manuscripts of God."

LONGFELLOW, Fiftieth Birthday of Agassiz.

14 In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 9.

And meditate the Book Of Nature, ever open.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 669.

15 O Reader! had you in your mind
Such stores as silent thought can bring,
O gentle Reader! you would find
A tale in every thing.

WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee, l. 65.

IX—Nature and God

1 Of what I call God,
And what fools call Nature.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book: The Pope, l. 1073.

God is seen God
In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the clod.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. St. 17.

2 Nature which is the time-vesture of God, and reveals Him to the wise, hides Him from the foolish.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

3 Nature, the vicar of th' almighty Lord.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 379.
Stated by Chaucer to be from the Latin of Statius.

Nature, the Handmaid of God Almighty.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters: Bk. ii, To Dr. T. P.

4 At home with Nature, and at one with God!
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Angelus.

5 Nature is but a name for an effect
Whose cause is God.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 224.

His are the mountains and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His t' enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel,
But who, with filial countenance inspir'd,
Can lift to heaven an unpretentious eye,
And smiling say—My Father made them all!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 742.

Full often too
Our wayward intellect, the more we learn
Of nature, overlooks her Author more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 235.

6 What man has written man may read;
But God fills every root and seed
With cryptic words, too strangely set
For mortals to decipher yet.

CHARLES DALMON, Documents.

7 Nature is the art of God. (Deus æternus, arte sua, quæ natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia. Bk. i, l. 3.

The course of Nature is the art of God.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1267.

See also ART AND NATURE.

8 And when I am stretched beneath the pines,
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the lore and the pride of man,
At the sophist schools and the learned clan;
For what are they all, in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?

EMERSON, Good-Bye.

Behold! the Holy Grail is found,
Found in each poppy's cup of gold;
And God walks with us as of old.

Behold! the burning bush still burns
For man, whichever way he turns;
And all God's earth is holy ground.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Dawn at San Diego.

9 He would adore my gifts instead of me,
And rest in Nature, not the God of Nature.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Pulley.

10 Nature is religious only as it manifests God.
MARK HOPKINS, Sermon, 30 May, 1843.

11 A voice is in the wind I do not know;
A meaning on the face of the high hills
Whose utterance I cannot comprehend.
A something is behind them: that is God.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt. i, sc. 1.

12 Every formula which expresses a law of nature is a hymn of praise to God.

MARIA MITCHELL. Inscribed beneath her bust in Hall of Fame.

13 The perfections of Nature show that she is the image of God; her defects show that she is only his image.

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. 12.

14 All are but parts of one stupendous Whole,
Whose body Nature is, and God the soul;
That changed thro' all, and yet in all the same,
Great in the earth as in th' ethereal frame,
Warms in the sun, refreshes in the breeze,
Glow in the stars, and blossoms in the trees; . . .

As full, as perfect, in a hair as heart;
As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
As the rapt Seraph that adores and burns.
To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 267.

A work of skill, surpassing sense,
A labour of Omnipotence;
Though frail as dust it meet thine eye,
He form'd this gnat who built the sky.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Gnat.

Nature reads not our labels, "great" and "small";
Accepts she one and all.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Man with the Hoe: A Reply.

See also GREATNESS: GREAT AND SMALL.

15 Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks thro' Nature up to Nature's God.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 331.

It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths. One follows Nature and Nature's God; that is, he follows God in his works and in his word.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope. It was here, perhaps, that Pope found the famous phrase he used in the preceding quotation.

And not from Nature up to Nature's God,

But down from Nature's God look Nature through.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Luther.

<sup>1</sup> The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork.

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1.

<sup>2</sup> Call it Nature, fate, fortune; all these things are names of the one and the selfsame God. (Naturam voca, fatum, fortunamque; sunt omnia unius et ejusdem Dei nomina.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 8.

Go thou and seek the House of Prayer!

I to the woodlands wend, and there,

In lovely Nature see the God of Love.

SOUTHEY, Written on Sunday Morning.

<sup>3</sup> God, the Great Giver, can open the whole universe to our gaze in the narrow space of a single lane.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Jivan-smitri.

<sup>4</sup> Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams?

So careful of the type she seems,

So careless of the single life.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lv, st. 2.

<sup>5</sup> Nature, so far as in her lies, Imitates God.

TENNYSON, On a Mourner, l. 1.

Nature is the glass reflecting God.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1005.

<sup>6</sup> The course of nature is the art of God.
The miracles thou call'st for, this attest;
For say, could nature nature's course control?
But, miracles apart, who sees Him not?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1266.

Take God from Nature, nothing great is left.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1391.

X—Nature: Human Nature

<sup>7</sup> Nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, seldom extinguished.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nature in Men.

How hard it is to hide the sparks of Nature!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 79.

<sup>8</sup> Nature stamp'd us in a heavenly mould.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 498.

<sup>9</sup> Never can custom conquer nature; for she is ever unconquered. (Nunquam naturam mos vinceret; est enim ea semper invicta.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 27, sec. 78.

It is difficult indeed to change nature. (Naturam quidem mutare difficile est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, l. 20.

Nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 188.

<sup>10</sup> Nor rural sights alone, but rural sounds,
Exhilarate the spirit, and restore
The tone of languid Nature.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 182.

<sup>11</sup> To Nature and yourself appeal,
Nor learn of others what to feel.

WILLIAM HOGARTH, Letter to a Friend, 1761.
Quoted.

<sup>12</sup> The faultless proprieties of nature.

MILTON, Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce: Preface.

<sup>13</sup> Everything unnatural is imperfect.

NAPOLEON, Sayings of Napoleon.

The natural alone is permanent.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

<sup>14</sup> Every one follows the inclinations of his own nature. (Naturæ sequitur semina quisque suæ.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegiæ. Bk. iii, eleg. ix, l. 20.

All men that are ruined are ruined on the side of their natural propensities.

BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace. Letter i.

<sup>15</sup> Nature never deceives us; it is always we who deceive ourselves. (Jamais la nature ne nous trompe; c'est toujours nous qui nous trompons.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iii.

<sup>16</sup> One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 175.

All argument will vanish before one touch of nature.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Poor Gentleman. Act v, sc. 1.

<sup>17</sup> How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms!

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2 l. 151.

<sup>18</sup> Man is not content to take nature as he finds her. He insists on making her over.

F. J. E. WOODBRIDGE, Contrasts in Education, p. 17.

NECESSITY

<sup>19</sup> The force of necessity is irresistible. (Τὸ τῆς ἀνάγκης ἔστι ἀδύνατον ἀένος.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Vincit, l. 105.

Necessity doth front the universe
With an invincible gesture.

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Vincit, l. 105. (E. B. Browning, tr.)

1 Necessity is stronger far than art. (Τέχνη δ' ἀνάγκης ἀσθενεστέρα μακρῶ.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Vincitus, l. 513.

2 Every act of necessity is disagreeable. (Πᾶν γὰρ ἀναγκαῖον πρᾶγμα ἀνιάρων ἔσθ.)

3 Necessity has no law. (Legem non habet necessitas.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Solil. Animæ ad Deum, c. 2, (c. 410.)

Necessity has no law. (Necessitas non habet legem.)

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xiv, l. 45. (1377) Quoted in Latin.

For as men say, need has no law.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 1167. (c. 1390); JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 865. (1520) Also many later writers.

Necessity hath no law. Feigned necessities, imaginary necessities, are the greatest cozenage men can put upon the Providence of God.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Speech, to Parliament, 12 Sept., 1654.

4 Necessity urges desperate measures.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23.

5 It is necessity and not pleasure that compels him. (Necessità 'l c' induce, e non diletto.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xii, l. 87.

6 I do not see the necessity of it. (Je n'en vois pas la nécessité.)

COUNT D'ARCEMSON, to the Abbé Desfontaines, who had been brought before him for publishing libels, and who excused himself by saying, "After all, I must live." (Après tout, il faut bien que je vive.) (VOLTAIRE, Œuvres Complètes, xlvi, 99.) Also attributed to Count d'Argental, censor of books, by Ténault. (Mémoires, 4.)

The ordinary objection is of course raised: I have not the wherewithal to live. To this it may be retorted, Is there any reason why you should live?

1 Who, doomed to go in company with pain,
And fear, and bloodshed,—miserable train!—
Turns his necessity to glorious gain.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 12.

2 Necessity the mother of invention. (Mater artium necessitas.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

Need taught him wit.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria. Fo. 52. (1519)

Necessity is the deviser of all manner of shifts.

THOMAS UNDERDOWN, Heliodorus, 201. (1587)

Necessity, mother of invention.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iii, sc. 3. (1672) Also many later writers.

If necessity is the mother of invention, she is never more pregnant than with me.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act i, sc. 1.

Necessity—thou best of peacemakers,
As well as surest prompter of invention.

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 26, heading.

Sheer necessity—the proper parent of an art so nearly allied to invention.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 2.

Want, the mistress of invention.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Busy-Body. Act i,
sc. 1. (1720)

NECK

3 Would that the Roman populace had but one neck. (Utinam populus Romanus unum cer-vicem haberet!)

CALIGULA, when incensed at the people applauding his opponents. (SUETONIUS, Life.)
Seneca and Dion Cassius also credit the saying to Caligula, but it is ascribed to Nero
by other writers.

Anger wishes all mankind had only one neck;
love, that it had only one heart.

RICHTER, Flower, Fruit and Thorn, iv.

I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse

The tyrant's wish "that mankind only had One neck, which he with one fell stroke might pierce":

My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad, . . .
That womankind had but one rosy mouth,
To kiss them all at once from North to South.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 27.

4 Neck or nothing.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act iii.

5 The stately neck is manhood's manliest part;
It takes the life-blood freshest from the heart.
With short, curled ringlets close around it spread,

How light and strong it lifts the Grecian head!
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 470.

6 They wove the lotus band to deck
And fan with pensile wreath each neck.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. No. 69.

7 Bending down His corrigible neck.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 14, l. 74.

8 I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 1, 153.

And break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 88.

9 Falls not the axe upon the humblest neck
But first begs pardon.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 5.

10 And thus I set my foot on 's neck.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 92.

NEEDLE

11 True as the needle to the pole.

BARTON BOOTH, Song. See under CONSTANCY.

12 To look for a needle in a haystack.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Latin:
Acum in meta fœni quærere.

He gropeth in the dark to find a needle in a bottle of hay.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. xi, p. 252. (1592)

To go look for a needle in a meadow.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 838. (1532)

By wondrous accident perchance one may
Grove out a needle in a load of hay.

JEREMY TAYLOR, A Kicksey Winsey. Pt. vii.

13 You might have heard a needle fall,
The hush was so profound.

H. S. LEIGH, A Last Resource.

14 You have touched it with a needle. (Tetigisti acu.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1306. (Act v, sec. 2.) i. e.,
"You've hit it!"

15 So delicate with her needle.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 198.

Go ply thy needle.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

16 The blooming daughter throws her needle by.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity.

17 The bright little needle—the swift-flying
needle,

The needle directed by beauty and art.
SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Needle.

7
A stillness and a sadness
Pervade the City Hall,

And speculating madness

Has left the street of Wall;
The Union Square looks really

Both desolate and dark,

And that's the case, or nearly,

From Battery to Park.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, Dark Days. (c. 1860)

8
Up in the heights of the evening skies I see my City of Cities float

In sunset's golden and crimson dyes: I look and a great joy clutches my throat!

Plateau of roofs by canyons crossed: windows
by thousands fire-furled—

O gazing, how the heart is lost in the Deepest City in the World.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, New York from a Sky-scraper.

9
Who that has known thee but shall burn
In exile till he come again

To do thy bitter will, O stern

Moon of the tides of men!

JOHN REED, Proud New York.

NEWS

For Newspapers see Press

3 A master-passion is the love of news.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper, l. 281.

4 When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news.

Usually attributed to CHARLES A. DANA, famous editor of the New York Sun, but the evidence favors JOHN B. BOGART, city editor of the Sun from 1873-1890. In a letter to the compiler, Mr. Frank M. O'Brien, the present editor of the Sun, says, "The late Edward P. Mitchell, Dana's right hand man for many years, told me that the author was Mr. Bogart. Mr. Mitchell was meticulous about such things, and if it had not been true I think Mr. Bogart, a most modest man, would have demurred." Stanley Walker (City Editor, p. 20) attributes the saying to Amos Cummings, another of Dana's editors.

Asked for a definition of news, I can give you no better answer than the one on which we were brought up in the Sun office. Mr. Dana used to say, "When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news."

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. (HARRINGTON, Essentials of Journalism.)

Women, wampum and wrongdoing are always news.

STANLEY WALKER, City Editor, p. 44.

5 Good news may be told at any time, but ill in the morning.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Do not awake me when you have good news to communicate; with that there is no hurry. But when you bring bad news, rouse me instantly, for then there is not a moment to be lost.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. To his Secretary. (Quoted by Emerson, Napoleon.)

6 Where village statesmen talked with looks profound,

Collecting toys,

And trifles for choice matters, worth a sponge;
As children gath'ring pebbles on the shore.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 327.

Newton (that proverb of the mind), alas!

Declared, with all his grand discoveries recent,

That he himself felt only "like a youth
Picking up shells by the great ocean—Truth."
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 5.

<sup>1</sup>
When Newton saw an apple fall, he found . . .
A mode of proving that the earth turn'd round

In a most natural whirl, called "gravitation";
And thus is the sole mortal who could grapple,

Since Adam, with a fall or with an apple.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 1.

<sup>2</sup>
Nature and Nature's laws lay hid in Night:
God said, Let Newton be! and all was Light.
POPE, Epitaph for Sir Isaac Newton.

O'er Nature's laws God cast the veil of night:
Out blazed a Newton's soul, and all was light.
ALLAN RAMSAY, On Sir Isaac Newton.

II—Night: Its Beauty

7 The stars are forth, the moon above the tops
Of the snow-shining mountains—Beautiful!
I linger yet with Nature, for the night
Hath been to me a more familiar face
Than that of man; and in her starry shade
Of dim and solitary loveliness
I learn'd the language of another world.
BYRON, Manfred. Act iii, sc. 4.

8 And soft adorings from their loves receive
Upon the honey'd middle of the night.
KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 6.

9 The Night walked down the sky
With the moon in her hand.
F. L. KNOWLES, A Memory.

10 I heard the trailing garments of the Night
Sweep through her marble halls!
I saw her sable skirts all fringed with light

From the celestial walls!
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

And Evening trails her robes of gold
Through the dim halls of Night.
SARAH H. P. WHITMAN, Summer's Call.

11 I felt her presence, by its spell of might,
Stoop o'er me from above;
The calm, majestic presence of the Night,
As of the one I love.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

I heard the sounds of sorrow and delight,
The manifold soft chimes,
That fill the haunted chambers of the Night,
Like some old poet's rhymes.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

O holy Night! from thee I learn to bear
What man has borne before!
Thou layest thy finger on the lips of Care,
And they complain no more.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

Peace! Peace! Orestes-like I breathe this prayer!
Descend with broad-winged flight,
The welcome, the thrice prayed-for, the most
fair,
The best-beloved Night!
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

12 God makes sech nights, all white an' still Fur 'z you can look or listen,
Moonshine an' snow on field an' hill,
All silence an' all glisten.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

13 Silent Night,
With this her solemn bird and this fair
moon,
And these the gems of Heav'n, her starry train.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 647.

14 Bend low, O dusky Night,
And give my spirit rest,
Hold me to your deep breast,
And put old cares to flight.
Give back the lost delight
That once my soul possest,
When Love was loveliest.
LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON, To Night.

15 The gods sell all things at a fair price, said an old poet. He might have added that they sell their best goods at the cheapest rate.
. . . There is no entrance fee to the starlit hall of the Night.
AXEL MUNTHE, Story of San Michele, p. 398.

16 O Night, most beautiful and rare!
Thou giv'st the heavens their holiest hue,
And through the azure fields of air
Bring'st down the gentle dew.
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Night.
How beautiful this night! the balmiest sigh

Which vernal zephyrs breathe in evening's ear
 Were discord to the speaking quietude
 That wraps this moveless scene. Heaven's ebon vault,
 Studded with stars unutterably bright,
 Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
 Seems like a canopy which love had spread
 To curtain her sleeping world.
 SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 1.

How beautiful is night!
 A dewy freshness fills the silent air;
 No mist obscures, nor cloud, nor speck, nor stain
 Breaks the serene of heaven:
 In full-orbed glory yonder moon divine
 Rolls through the dark blue depths.
   Beneath her steady ray
   The desert-circle spreads
 Like the round ocean, girdled with the sky.
 How beautiful is night!
 ROBERT SOUTHEY, Thalaba. Bk. i, st. 1.

1
 Swiftly walk o'er the western wave,
 Spirit of Night!
 SHELLEY, To Night.

2

 See how there the cowlèd night
 Kneels on the eastern sanctuary-stair.
 FRANCIS THOMPSON, Corymbus for Autumn.

4
 Come, drink the mystic wine of Night,
 Brimming with silence and the stars;
 While earth, bathed in this holy light,
 Is seen without its scars.
 LOUIS UNTERMAYER, The Wine of Night.

5
 Mysterious night! when our first parent knew Thee from report divine, and heard thy
   name,
   Did he not tremble for this lovely frame,
 This glorious canopy of light and blue?
 JOSEPH BLANCO WHITE, Night and Death.

6
 Press close, bare-bosom'd night—press close,
   magnetic nourishing night!
 Night of south winds—night of the large few stars!
 Still nodding night—mad naked summer
   night.
 WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 21.

7
 Night, sable goddess! from her ebon throne,
 In rayless majesty, now stretches forth
 Her leaden sceptre o'er a slumbering world.
 Silence, how dead! and darkness, how profound!

Nor eye, nor list'ning ear, an object finds;
 Creation sleeps.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 18.

How is night's sable mantle labour'd o'er,
 How richly wrought with attributes divine!

What wisdom shines! what love! this midnight
   pomp,
 This gorgeous arch, with golden worlds inlaid
 Built with divine ambition!
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 385.
 'Tis Nature's system of divinity,
 And every student of the night inspires.
 'Tis elder scripture, writ by God's own hand:
 Scripture authentic! uncorrupt by man.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 644.

III—Night: Its Sadness

8
 A night of tears! for the gusty rain
   Had ceased, but the eaves were dripping
   yet;
 And the moon looked forth, as tho' in pain,
   With her face all white and wet.
 OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

9
   For now began
 Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
 The desert; fowls in their clay nests were couch'd,
 And now wild beasts came forth, the woods
   to roam.
 MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 499.

10
 Night is the time to weep;
   To wet with unseen tears
 Those graves of memory, where sleep
   The joys of other years.
 JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night.

11
 Night is sadder than the hours of daylight.

Things that love night

Love not such nights as these.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 42.

'Tis a naughty night to swim in.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 116.

The tyranny of the open night's too rough

For nature to endure.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 2.

And altogether it's very bad weather,

And an unpleasant sort of a night!

R. H. BARRHAM, The Nurse's Story.

Give not a windy night a rainy morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xc.

<sup>2</sup> O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!

Dim register and notary of shame!

Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!

Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 764.

I must become a borrower of the night
For an hour or twain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

And the best of all ways To lengthen our days
Is to steal a few hours from the night, my dear.

THOMAS MOORE, The Young May Moon.

But we that have but span-long life,
The thicker must lay on the pleasure;

And since time will not stay,

We'll add night to the day,

Thus, thus we'll fill the measure.

UNKNOWN, Duet. (c. 1795)

<sup>16</sup> Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 46.

Night begins to muffle up the day.

GEORGE WITHER, Mistresse of Philarete.

<sup>17</sup> By the clock, 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp;

Is't night's predominance, or the day's
shame,

That darkness does the face of earth en-
tomb,

When living light should kiss it?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 6.

<sup>18</sup> Light thickens; and the crow
Makes wing to the rooky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and
drowse;

Whiles night's black agents to their preys
do rouse.

The night is long that never finds the day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 240.

1 This night methinks is but the daylight sick.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 124.

2 Wrap thy form in a mantle grey,
Star-inwrought!

Blind with thine hair the eyes of Day;
Kiss her until she be wearied out.

SHELLEY, To Night.

3 Day is the Child of Time,
And Day must cease to be:
But Night is without a sire
And cannot expire,
One with Eternity.

R. H. STODDARD, Day and Night.

5 They wear out day and night. (Noctem-que diemque fatigant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 94.

We did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 181.

6 Night holds the keys that ope the door of
day.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, In a Graveyard.

7 Day full-blown and splendid—day of the immense sun, action, ambition, laughter,

The Night follows close with millions of suns, and sleep and restoring darkness.

WALT WHITMAN, Youth, Day, Old Age and Night.

NIGHTINGALE

8 The nightingale, who still with sorrowing soul,
And "Itys, Itys" cry,
Bemoans a life o'erflourishing in ills.

(*Ἀκόρετος βοᾷς, φεῖ, ταλαίναϊς φρεσὶν
Ἴτυν Ἴτυν στένουσ' ἀμφιβαλὴ κακοῖς ἀηδῶν βίον.*)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1139. (Plumptre, tr.)

9 She walleth the nightingale's lament. (Ἦθνη δὲ γόον τὸν ἀηδόνιον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 157.

10 O sacred bird! let me at eve,
Thus wandering all alone,

Thy tender counsel oft receive,
Bear witness to thy pensive airs,
And pity Nature's common cares,
Till I forget my own.

MARK AKENSIDE, The Nightingale.

11 Hark! ah, the nightingale!

The tawny-throated!

Hark! from that moonlit cedar what a burst!
What triumph! hark!—what pain!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

How thick the bursts come crowding through the leaves!

Again—thou hearest?

Eternal passion! Eternal pain!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

12 Everything did banish moan
Save the Nightingale alone:

She, poor bird, as all forlorn
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the doleful'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity.

Fie, fe fe! now would she cry;

Tereu, tereu! by and by.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Philomel.

What bird so sings, yet does so wail?

O, 'tis the ravish'd nightingale—

Jug, jug, jug, jug, tereu! she cries,

And still her woes at midnight rise.

JOHN LYLY, Spring's Welcome.

13 A nightingale dies for shame if another bird sings better.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 6.

14 Oh nightingale! What doth she ail?

And is she sad or jolly?

For ne'er on earth was sound of mirth

So like to melancholy.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

15 'Tis the merry nightingale
That crowds, and hurries, and precipitates
With fast thick warble his delicious notes,
As he were fearful that an April night
Would be too short for him to utter forth
His love-chant, and disburthen his full soul
Of all its music!

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 43.

16 I wonder if it is a bird
That sings within the hidden tree,
Or some shy angel calling me
To follow far away?

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Nightingales.

17 Sweet bird, that sing'st away the early hours,
Of winters past or coming void of care,
Well pleased with delights which present are,
Fair seasons, budding sprays, sweet-smelling
flowers.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, To the Nightingale.

1
But, leaning on a thorn her dainty chest,
For fear soft sleep should steal into her
breast,
Expresses in her song grief not to be expressed.

GILES FLETCHER THE YOUNGER, Christ's Victorie and Triumph.

Never nightingale so singeth:
Oh, she leans on thorny tree
And her poet-song she flingeth
Over pain to victory!

E. B. BROWNING, The Lost Bower. St. 39.

The bird forlorn
That singeth with her breast against a thorn.
THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 269.

2
The nightingale among the thick-leaved
spring

That sits alone in sorrow, and doth sing
Whole nights away in mourning.

JOHN FLETCHER, Faithful Shepherdess. Act v.

3
Thou wast not born for death, immortal
Bird!

No hungry generations tread thee down;
The voice I hear this passing night was heard

In ancient days by emperor and clown:
Perhaps the self-same song that found a path

Through the sad heart of Ruth, when,
sick for home,

She stood in tears amid the alien corn;

The same that oft-times hath Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam

Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades
Past the near meadows, over the still stream,
Up the hill-side; and now 'tis buried deep

In the next valley-glades:

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
Fled is that music:—do I wake or sleep?

KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Where the nightingale doth sing
Not a senseless, tranced thing,
But divine melodious truth.

KEATS, Ode: Bards of Passion and of Mirth.

To the red rising moon, and loud and deep
The nightingale is singing from the steep.

LONGFELLOW, Keats.

4
Soft as Memnon's harp at morning,
To the inward ear devout,
Touched by light, with heavenly warning
Your transporting chords ring out.
Every leaf in every nook,
Every wave in every brook,
Chanting with a solemn voice

Minds us of our better choice.

JOHN KEBLE, The Nightingale.

5
I had a silvery name, I had a silvery name,
I had a silvery name—do you remember
The name you cried beside the tumbling sea?
"Darling . . . darling . . . darling . . . darling . . ."

Said the Chinese nightingale.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

6
Sweet bird that shunn'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy!
Thee, chauntress, oft, the woods among,
I woo, to hear thy even-song.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 61.

"Most musical, most melancholy" bird!

A melancholy bird! Oh! idle thought!

In nature there is nothing melancholy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 13.

7
All but the wakeful nightingale;
She all night long her amorous descant sung.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 602.

8
O nightingale, that on yon bloomy spray Warblest at eve, when all the woods are
still,

Thou with fresh hope the Lover's heart dost fill,

While the jolly hours lead on propitious May.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,
First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,
Portend success in love.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

That star-enchanted song falls through the air
From lawn to lawn down terraces of sound,
Darts in white arrows on the shadowed ground;
And all the night you sing.

HAROLD MONRO, The Nightingale Near the House.

9
There's a bower of roses by Bendemeer's
stream,
And the nightingale sings round it all day
long.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

10
The Nightingale that in the branches sang, Ah whence and whither flown again, who knows!

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 96. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

11
Yon nightingale, whose strain so sweetly flows,
Mourning her ravish'd young or much-
loved mate,
A soothing charm o'er all the valleys throws
And skies, with notes well tuned to her sad state.

PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet xliii.

<sup>1</sup>
The nightingale got no prize at the poultry show.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH THE YOUNGER, Epigram.

<sup>2</sup>
The sunrise wakes the lark to sing,
The moonrise wakes the nightingale.
Come, darkness, moonrise, everything
That is so silent, sweet, and pale:
Come, so ye wake the nightingale.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Bird Raptures.

Hark! that's the nightingale,
Telling the self-same tale
Her song told when this ancient earth was young:
So echoes answered when her song was sung
In the first wooded vale.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Twilight Calm. St. 7.

<sup>3</sup>
The angel of spring, the mellow-throated nightingale.
SAPPHO, Fragments. No. 39.

<sup>4</sup>
Worlds to conquer!—But Cæsar fails
To add one song To the nightingale's!
WILLIAM KEAN SEYMOUR, Cæsar Remembers.

<sup>5</sup>
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought

No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 104.

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate tree.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc.
5, l. 2.

<sup>6</sup>
O Nightingale,
Cease from thy enamoured tale.
SHELLEY, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 73.

One nightingale in an interfluous wood
Satiates the hungry dark with melody.
SHELLEY, The Woodman and the Nightingale.
St. 2.

<sup>7</sup>
The nightingale as soon as April bringeth
Unto her rested sense a perfect waking,
While late bare earth, proud of new clothing, springeth,
Sings out her woes, a thorn her song-book making.
And mournfully bewailing,
Her throat in tunes expresseth
What grief her breast oppresses.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, O Philomela Fair.

<sup>8</sup>
Where beneath the ivy shade,
In the dew-besprinkled glade,
Many a love-lorn nightingale,

Warbles sweet her plaintive tale.
SOPHOCLES, Edipus Coloneus, l. 17. (Franck-lin, tr.)

<sup>9</sup>
Lend me your song, ye Nightingales! O, pour
The mazy-running soul of melody
Into my varied verse.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 574.

The sober-suited songstress.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 746.

<sup>10</sup>
Last night the nightingale woke me,
Last night, when all was still.
It sang in the golden moonlight,
From out the woodland hill.

CHRISTIAN WINTHER, Sehnsucht. As translated by Théophile Marzials, for his song,
Last Night.

<sup>11</sup>
My two passions, lilacs and nightingales, are in full bloom.

WALPOLE, Letters: To George Montagu, 5
May, 1761.

<sup>12</sup>
O nightingale! thou surely art
A creature of a "fiery heart":
These notes of thine—they pierce and pierce;
Tumultuous harmony and fierce!
WORDSWORTH, O Nightingale!

NILE, THE

<sup>13</sup>
The stream of the river Nile can water the earth, and the word of the monk Nilus can delight the mind.

GREGORY OF NAZIANZUS, *On Nilus the Great
Hermit*. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 100.)

<sup>14</sup>
It flows through old hushed Egypt and its sands,
Like some grave mighty thought threading a
dream.

LEIGH HUNT, Sonnet: The Nile.

<sup>15</sup>
Son of the old moon-mountains African!
Chief of the Pyramid and Crocodile!
We call thee fruitful, and that very while
A desert fills our seeing's inward span.
KEATS, Sonnet: To the Nile.

O'er Egypt's land of Memory floods are level,
And they are thine, O Nile! and well thou knowest
That soul-sustaining airs and blasts of evil,
And fruits and poisons spring where'er thou flow-
est.
SHELLEY, Sonnet: To the Nile.

<sup>16</sup>
The Nile, forever new and old,
Among the living and the dead,
Its mighty, mystic stream has rolled.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

<sup>17</sup>
It is said that dogs run when they drink in the river Nile, lest they should be seized by crocodiles.

(Canes currentes bibere in Nilo flumine,
A crocodilis ne rapiantur, traditum est.)
PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 25, l. 4.

Like a dog by the Nile. (Ut canis e Nilo.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, meaning restless and ill at ease.

1
E'en as the o'erflowing Nile presageth famine.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 50.

The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 7, l. 23.

2
Where's my serpent of old Nile?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 5, l. 25.

3 Mysterious Flood,—that through the silent
sands

Hast wandered, century on century,
Watering the length of great Egyptian lands,
Which were not, but for thee.

BAYARD TAYLOR, To the Nile.

4
For what cause, Father Nile, or in what lands hast thou hid thy head? Because of thee thy Egypt never sues for showers, nor does the parched blade bow to Jove, the rain-giver.

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 23.

5
It would be easier to discover the sources of the Nile. (Facilius sit Nili caput invenire.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

6
A noble soul is like a ship at sea,
That sleeps at anchor when the ocean's calm;

But when she rages, and the wind blows high,
He cuts his way with skill and majesty.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Honest Man's
Fortune*. Act iv, sc. 1.

7
The true standard of quality is seated in the mind; those who think nobly are noble.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill.
Act i, sc. 7.

The nobleman is he whose noble mind
Is filled with inborn worth, unborrowed from his kind.

DRYDEN, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 384.

See also under THOUGHT.

8
Very rich he is in virtues, very noble—noble,
certes;

And I shall not blush in knowing that men
call him lowly born.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
Conclusion.

9
And yet thou art the nobler of us two:
What dare I dream of, that thou canst not
do?

ROBERT BROWNING, Any Wife to Any Husband, l. 148.

10
He is noble who has a priority among freemen, not he who has a sort of wild liberty among slaves.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to the King of Poland, 1792.

11
Here all were noble, save Nobility.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 85.

12
Unto the noble everything is good.

EURIPIDES, Danæ: Fragment.

I take but small account of noble birth;
For me the virtuous is the noble man;
The vicious, though his father ranked above
Great Zeus himself, I still would base-born call.

EURIPIDES, Dictys. Frag. 10.

13
There are epidemics of nobleness as well as epidemics of disease.

FROUDE, *Short Studies on Great Subjects:
Calvinism*.

14
A noble soul alone can noble souls attract.
(Ein edler Mensch zieht edle Menschen an.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act i, sc. 1, l. 59.

15
Noble blood is an accident of fortune; noble actions characterize the great. (Il sangue nobile è un accidente della fortuna; le azioni nobili caratterizzano il grande.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 6.

16
There is a natural aristocracy among men.
The grounds of this are virtue and talents.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 396.

17
Do you deserve to be regarded a blameless person, stalwart for the right in word and in deed? In that case I acknowledge you as a nobleman. (Sanctus haberi. Justitiæque tenax, factis dictisque mereris? Agnosco pro-cerem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 24.

Fond man! though all the heroes of your line
Bedeck your halls, and round your galleries shine
In proud display; yet take this truth from me—
Virtue alone is true nobility! (Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 20. (Gifford, tr.)

'Tis virtue, and not birth, that makes us noble;
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Prophetess.
Act ii, sc. 3.

What tho' no grants of royal donors,

With pompous titles grace our blood;
We'll shine in more substantial honours,
And to be noble we'll be good.
UNKNOWN. Winifreda. (PERCY, Reliques.)

Howe'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good.
TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 7.

1 Be noble in every thought
And in every deed!
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.
Noble by birth, yet nobler by great deeds.
LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Emma and Eginhard, l. 82.

2 Be noble! and the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping, but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own.
J. R. LOWELL, Sonnets. No. iv.

3 Whoso by nature's formed for noble deeds,
E'en though his skin be dark, is nobly born.
MENANDER, Fabulæ Incertæ. Fragment iv, 11.
Ascribed also to Epicharmus, Fabulæ Incertæ, cxviii, 14.

4 He is noble that hath noble conditions.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
The more noble, the more humble.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

5 Common natures pay with what they do, noble ones with what they are. (Gemeine Naturen Zahlen mit dem, was sie thun, edle mit dem, was sie sind.)
SCHILLER, Unterschied der Stände.

6 Men do not care how nobly they live, but only how long, although it is within the reach of every man to live nobly, but within no man's power to live long.
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, 17.

7 His nature is too noble for the world.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 255.
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 256.

This was the noblest Roman of them all.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 5, l. 68.

Methought thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 175.

Nothing she does, or seems,
But smacks of something greater than herself,
Too noble for this place.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 157.

8 True nobility is exempt from fear.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 129.

9 Better not to be at all Than not be noble.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 79.

10 Whoe'er amid the sons
Of reason, valour, liberty, and virtue,
Displays distinguished merit, is a noble
Of Nature's own creating.
JAMES THOMSON, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 3.
Hence, "Nature's nobleman."

11 There is
One great society alone on earth:
The noble Living and the noble Dead.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 393.

NONSENSE

12 For daring nonsense seldom fails to hit,
Like scattered shot, and pass with some for
wit.

SAMUEL BUTLER, On Modern Critics.
For blocks are better cleft with wedges,
Than tools of sharp or subtle edges,
And dullest nonsense has been found
By some to be the most profound.
BUTLER, Pindaric Ode. Pt. iv, l. 82.

I suppose his nonsense suits their nonsense.
CHARLES II, referring to a foolish preacher, very popular in his parish. (WALPOLE, Letters, 22 Oct., 1774.)

13 Such nonsense is often heard in the schools, but one does not have to believe everything one hears. (Multa istius modi dicuntur in scholis, sed credere omnia vide ne non sit necesse.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii. ch. 13, sec. 31.

14 A doosed fine gal—well educated too—with no biggodd nonsense about her.
DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. i, ch. 33.

15 The ropy drivell of rheumatic brains.
WILLIAM GIFFORD, The Baviad.

16 No one is exempt from talking nonsense;
the misfortune is to do it solemnly. (Personne n'est exempt de dire des fadaïses; le malheur est de les dire curieusement.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

17 It is pleasant at times to play the madman.
(Aliquando et insanire jucundum est.)
SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 17.

18 And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 154.

19 Transcendental moonshine.
JOHN STERLING. (Life, p. 84.) Referring to Coleridge. Said to have been applied to Emerson by Carlyle.

20 A careless song, with a little nonsense in it now and then, does not misbecome a monarch.
HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 1774.

A little madness in the Spring
Is wholesome even for the King.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems Pt. v, No. 38.
A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the wisest men.
UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme.

II—Nonsense: A Few Classic Examples

1
The conductor when he receives a fare
Will punch in the presence of the passinjare,
A blue trip-slip for an 8-cent fare,
A buff trip-slip for a 6-cent fare,
A pink trip-slip for a 3-cent fare.
All in the presence of the passinjare.
Punch, brother, punch, punch with care,
Punch in the presence of the passinjare.

ISAAC H. BROMLEY, Punch, Brother, Punch.
Originally published in the New York Tribune, about 1874. Erroneously attributed to Mark Twain, because of his article, A Literary Nightmare, in the Atlantic Monthly, in which he described the sufferings inflicted upon him by this jingle, which was based upon an actual sign seen by Bromley in a street-car.

2
The piper he piped on the hill-top high
(Butter and eggs and a pound of cheese),
Till the cow said, "I die," and the goose said,
"Why?"

And the dog said nothing, but searched for fleas.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Ballad of the Period.

3
Forever! What abysms of woe
The word reveals, what frenzy, what Despair! For ever (printed so)
Did not . . .

Forever! 'Tis a single word!
And yet our fathers deem'd it two:
Nor am I confident they err'd;
Are you?

C. S. CALVERLEY, Forever.

4
If down his throat a man should choose,
In fun, to jump or slide,
He'd scrape his shoes against his teeth,
Nor dirt his own inside.
Or if his teeth were lost and gone,
And not a stump to scrape upon,
He'd see at once how very pat
His tongue lay there, by way of mat,
And he would wipe his feet on that!

EDMUND CANNON, Impromptu.

Aldeborontiphoscophornio!
Where left you Chrononhotonthologos?
HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos. Act i,
sc. 1.

His cogitative faculties immersed
In cogibundity of cogitation.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos. Act i,
sc. 1.

To thee, and gentle Rigdom Funnidos,
Our gratulations flow in streams unbounded.
HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotonthologos. Act i,
sc. 3.

6
"Will you walk a little faster?" said a whiting to a snail,
"There's a porpoise close behind us, and he's treading on my tail!"

LEWIS CARROLL, The Mock Turtle's Song.
(Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 10.)

They told me you had been to her,
And mentioned me to him:
She gave me a good character,
But said I could not swim.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 12.

7
But oh, beamish nephew, beware of the day,
If your Snark be a Boojum! For then
You will softly and suddenly vanish away,
And never be met with again!

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark:
The Boker's Tale.

8
'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves
Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;
All mimsy were the borogoves,
And the mome raths outgrabe.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky. (Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 1.)

"And hast thou slain the Jabberwock?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!"
He chortled in his joy.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky.

He left it dead, and with its head
He went galumphing back.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky.

9
He thought he saw an Elephant,
That practised on a fife:
He looked again, and found it was
A letter from his wife.

"At length I realise," he said,
"The bitterness of Life!"

LEWIS CARROLL, The Gardener's Song. (Sylvie and Bruno.)

10
My recollectest thoughts are those
Which I remember yet;
And bearing on, as you'd suppose,
The things I don't forget.

CHARLES EDWARD CARRYL, My Recollectest Thoughts. (Davy and the Goblin.)

11 Sally Salter, she was a young teacher who taught,

And her friend, Charley Church, was a preacher who praught,
Though his enemies called him a screecher who scaught.

PHIENEE CARY, The Lovers.

12
So she went into the garden to cut a cabbage leaf, to make an apple-pie; and at the same time a great she-bear, coming up the street, pops its head into the shop. "What! no soap?" So he died, and she very imprudently married the barber; and there were present the Picinnies, and the Joblillies, and the Garyulies, and the grand Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top.

SAMUEL FOOTE, An Incoherent Story. Produced by Foote at a lecture by Charles Macklin, the latter having boasted that he could learn anything by rote on once reading it. (Quarterly Review, Sept., 1854). Memoirs of Foote do not mention incident. A correspondent of Notes and Queries (16 Nov., 1850) asserts that the author was James Quin, the actor, and, that he wrote the nonsense in order to test Foote's memory. Printed in Miss Edgeworth's Harry and Lucy, Concluded (Vol. ii, p. 155), and credited to Foote. First use of the word "panjandrum."

1 This is the Yak, so neg-li-gee;
His coiffeur's like a stack of hay;
He lives so far from Any-where,
I fear the Yak neglects his hair.

OLIVER HERFORD, The Yak.

2 If the man who turnips cries,
Cry not when his father dies,
'Tis a proof that he had rather
Have a turnip than his father.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Burlesque of Lopez de Vega.

3 How often, oh! how often
They whispered words so soft;
How often, oh! how often,
How often, oh! how oft.

BEN KING, How Often. Burlesque of Longfellow's The Bridge.

4 On the Coast of Coromandel
Where the early pumpkins blow,
In the middle of the woods
Lived the Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.
Two old chairs and half a candle,
One old jug without a handle,—
These were all his worldly goods.

EDWARD LEAR, The Courtship of the Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.

5 How pleasant to know Mr. Lear!
Who has written such volumes of stuff!
Some think him ill-tempered and queer,
But a few think him pleasant enough.
EDWARD LEAR, Lines to a Young Lady.

6 The Owl and the Pussy-Cat went to sea
In a beautiful pea-green boat.

EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat.

They dined on mince, with slices of quince,
Which they ate with a runcible spoon,

And hand in hand, on the edge of the sand,
They danced by the light of the moon.
EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat.

7 The Pobble who has no toes
Had once as many as we;
When they said, "Some day you may lose them all,"

He replied, "Fish diddle-de-dee!"
And his Aunt Jobiska made him drink
Lavender water tinged with pink,
For she said, "The World in general knows
There's nothing so good for a Pobble's toes!"

EDWARD LEAR, The Pobble Who Has No Toes.

8 If you lift a guinea-pig up by the tail
His eyes drop out!

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Garden Lyric.

9 In a bowl to sea went wise men three,
On a brilliant night in June:
They carried a net, and their hearts were set
On fishing up the moon.

T. L. PEACOCK, The Wise Men of Gotham.

10 Flutt'ring spread thy purple Pinions,
Gentle Cupid, o'er my Heart;

I, a Slave in thy Dominions;
Nature must give Way to Art.
POPE, Song, by a Person of Quality.

11 A most subtle question, whether a chimera buzzing in space could devour second intentions, and was debated for ten daily sittings in the Council of Constance.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 7. Rabelais pretends that this bit of nonsense was the title of a book which Pantagruel, on his visit to Paris, noticed in the library of St. Victor.

12 Bombas: So have I heard on Afric's burning
shore

A hungry lion give a grievous roar,
The grievous roar echoed along the shore.
King: So have I heard on Afric's burning
shore

Another lion give a grievous roar,
And the first lion thought the last a bore!
W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

13 The preyful princess pierced and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 58.

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickle peppers,
A peck of pickle peppers did Peter Piper pick;
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickle peppers,
Where's the peck of pickle peppers that Peter Piper picked?

UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme.

14 But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 9.

They went to sea in a sieve, they did;

In a sieve they went to sea;

In spite of all their friends could say,

On a winter's morn, on a stormy day,

In a sieve they went to sea.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumblies.

Far and few, far and few,

Are the lands where the Jumblies live:

Their heads are green, and their hands are blue;

And they went to sea in a sieve.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumblies.

1 Said Opie Read to E. P. Roe,
"How do you like Gaboriau?"

"I like him very much indeed,"

Said E. P. Roe to Opie Read.

JULIAN STREET and JAMES MONTGOMERY

FLAGG, Read and Roe.

2 He killed the noble Mudjokivis.
With the skin he made him mittens,

Made them with the fur side inside,

Made them with the skin side outside.

He, to get the warm side inside,

Put the inside skin side outside;

He, to get the cold side outside,

Put the warm side fur side inside.

That's why he put the fur side inside,

Why he put the skin side outside,

Why he turned them inside outside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Milkanwatha.

From the Squirrel skin Marcosset

Made some mittens for our hero.

Mittens with the fur-side inside,

With the fur-side next his fingers

So's to keep the hand warm inside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Milkanwatha.

When Bryan O'Lynn had no shirt to put on,

He took him a sheep skin to make him a' one.

"With the skinny side out, and the wooly side in,

'Twill be warm and convanient," said Bryan

O'Lynn.

UNKNOWN, Bryan O'Lynn.

3 One, whom we see not, is; and one, who is not, we see;

Fiddle, we know, is diddle; and diddle, we take it, is dee.

SWINBURNE, The Higher Pantheism in a Nut- shell.

4 There were three sailors of Bristol City

Who took a boat and went to sea.

But first with beef and captain's biscuits

And pickled pork they loaded she.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,

And the youngest he was little Billee.

Now when they got as far as the Equator

They'd nothing left but one split pea.

THACKERAY, Little Billee.

5 Mr. Finney had a turnip
And it grew behind the barn;

And it grew and it grew,

And that turnip did no harm.

UNKNOWN, Mr. Finney's Turnip. Has been attributed to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

6 If all the world were paper
And all the sea were ink,

If all the trees were bread and cheese,

How should we do for drink?

NOON

8 At the king's gate the subtle noon

Wove filmy yellow nets of sun.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Coronation.

9 Clearer than the noonday.

Old Testament: Job, xi, 17.

10 Morning rises into noon,

May glides onward into June!

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

O sweet, delusive Noon,

Which the morning climbs to find,

O moment sped too soon,

And morning left behind.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Noon.

11 Another morn Ris'n on mid-noon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 310.

Another morn Risen on mid noon.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vi, l. 197.

12 'Tis Noon;—a calm, unbroken sleep

Is on the blue waves of the deep.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, To an Absent Wife.

13 With twelve great shocks of sound, the shameless noon

Was clash'd and hammer'd from a hundred towers.

TENNYSON, Godiva.

14 The noonday quiet holds the hill.

TENNYSON, Enone.

NOSE

1

His snore is louder than his war-cry. (Μεῖζον δὲ βέγγοντος ἢ ἀλαλάζοντος.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 5.)

There, too, full many an Aldermanic nose,
Roll'd its loud diapason after dinner.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ghost.

The tuneful serenade of that wakeful nightingale, his nose.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

On deck beneath the awning,
I dozing lay and yawning;
It was the grey of dawning,

Ere yet the Sun arose;

And above the funnel's roaring,
And the fitful wind's deploring,
I heard the cabin snoring

With universal nose.

THACKERAY, The White Squall.

There ain't no way to find out why a snorer can't hear himself snore.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer Abroad. Ch. 10.

2

Jolly nose! there are fools who say drink hurts the sight,

Such dullards know nothing about it;

'Tis better, with wine, to extinguish the light,
Than live always in darkness without it.

OLIVIER BASSELIN, Vaux-de-vire. Quoted by Ainsworth in Jack Sheppard. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Nose, nose, nose, nose!

And who gave thee that jolly red nose?

Sinament and Ginger, Nutmegs and Cloves,
And that gave me my jolly red nose.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Deuteromela, Song No.

7. (1609) Quoted by Beaumont and Fletcher, Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 4.

3

My father was a freedman who wiped his nose on his sleeve.

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 46.)

Sit down now and pray forsooth that the mucus in your nose may not run! Nay, rather wipe your nose and do not blame God!

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 13.

And you'd improve its shape, God wot,

And look less like a pink pug pup

If you would wipe it down, and not

Up.

EDWIN MEADE ROBINSON, A Disagreeable Feature.

4

Any nose May ravage with impunity a rose.

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. Bk. vi.

5

Her nose and chin they threaten ither.

A fellow had cast him in the nose, that he gave so large money to such a naughty drab.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr.)

9

I can make it . . . as plain as the nose on your face.

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly, 25. (1516)

This is as plain as a nose in a man's face.

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. v, Prologue. (1552)

Invisible, As a nose on a man's face.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 142. (1594)

As clear and as manifest as the nose in a man's face.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

10

Ah, who could have foretold that that little retroussé nose would change the laws of an empire?

(Ah, qui jamais auroit pu dire

Que ce petit nez retroussé

Changerait les lois d'un empire?)

CHARLES SIMON FAVART, Les Trois Sultanes.

Referring to Soleiman's favorite Sultana, Roxelane. In France a retroussé nose is still referred to as a nose à la Roxelane.

Cleopatra's nose: had it been shorter, the whole aspect of the world would have been altered.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 162.

If Cleopatra's nose had been flat, the face of the world would have been changed.

BRANDER MATTHEWS, Cleopatra's Nose. A variant of Pascal's epigram.

Another tumble! That's his precious nose!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to My Infant Son.

- <sup>1</sup> Bor'd through the nose by this cheat.
JAMES HOWELL, Forraine Travell, p. 44.
- Paying through the nose.
The origin of this phrase, meaning to pay an excessive price or at an exorbitant rate, is uncertain. It has been suggested that there is some connection with the slang word "rhino" and the Greek rhines, the nostrils. Grimm (Deutsche Rechts Alterthümer) states that Odin had a poll-tax in Sweden called a nose tax, because it was a penny per nose. The same legend is told of Ireland.
- <sup>2</sup> Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose . . . and will turn thee back.

When I was a young man, being anxious to distinguish myself, I was perpetually starting new propositions. But I soon gave this over; for I found that generally what was new was false.

16
There's naught so easy, but when it was new

Seemed difficult of credence, and there's naught

So great, so wonderful, when first 'tis seen,
But men will later cease to marvel at it.

BEAUTY UNADORNED, see under BEAUTY.

10 Naked I seek the camp of those who desire nothing. (Nil cupientium Nudus castra peto.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 22.

11 Without clothes, but with all her insides. (Sine ornamentis, cum intestinis omnibus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 343. (Act i, sc. 3.)

12 With presented nakedness out-face
The winds and persecutions of the sky.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 11.

Iago: Or to be naked with her friend in bed
An hour or more, not meaning any harm?

Othello: Naked in bed, Iago, and not mean harm!

It is hypocrisy against the devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 3.

13 We shift and bedeck and bedrape us,
Thou art noble and nude and antique;
Libitina thy mother, Priapus
Thy father, a Tuscan and Greek.

We play with light loves in the portal,
And wince and relent and refrain;
Loves die, and we know thee immortal,
Our Lady of Pain.

OAK

- <sup>1</sup> The girt woak tree that's in the dell!
There's noo tree I do love so well.
WILLIAM BARNES, The Girt Woak Tree.
- <sup>2</sup> Heart of oak. (Corazon de encina.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 70.
See also ENGLAND: HEARTS OF OAK.
- <sup>3</sup> A song to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who hath ruled in the greenwood long;
Here's health and renown to his broad green
crown,
And his fifty arms so strong.
There's fear in his frown when the Sun goes
down,
And the fire in the West fades out;
And he showeth his might on a wild mid-
night,
When the storms through his branches
shout.
H. F. CHORLEY, The Brave Old Oak.
- Then here's to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who stands in his pride alone!
And still flourish he, a hale green tree,
When a hundred years are gone!
H. F. CHORLEY, The Brave Old Oak.
- <sup>4</sup> The oak, when living, monarch of the wood;
The English oak, which, dead, commands the flood.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. i, l. 303.
- <sup>5</sup> The talking oak To the ancient spoke.
But any tree Will talk to me.
MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Be Different to Trees.
- <sup>6</sup> The monarch oak, the patriarch of the trees, Shoots rising up, and spreads by slow degrees.
Three centuries he grows, and three he stays
Supreme in state; and in three more decays.
DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 1058.
- <sup>7</sup> Every oak must be an acorn.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, 6. See also under TRIFLES.
- <sup>8</sup> Oaks may fall when reeds stand the storm.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3692.
- <sup>9</sup> Those green-robed senators of mighty woods, Tall oaks, branch-charmed by the earnest
stars,
Dream, and so dream all night without a stir.
KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 73.
- <sup>10</sup> The tall Oak, towering to the skies,

The fury of the wind defies,
From age to age, in virtue strong,
Inured to stand, and suffer wrong.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Oak.

- <sup>11</sup> An oak whose antique root peeps out.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 31.
An oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age
And high top bald with dry antiquity.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 105.
- <sup>12</sup> To seel her father's eyes up close as oak.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 210.
I am as close as oak, an absolute freemason for secrecy.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Deuce Is in Him. Act ii.
Mr. Verdant Greene had, for the first time, sporting his oak.
CUTHBERT BEDE, Verdant Greene. Bk. i, ch. 8.
To exclude visitors by closing the outer oaken door of a student's apartment.
- <sup>13</sup> There grew an ancient Tree upon the green;
A goodly Oak sometime had it been,
With arms full strong and largely displayed,
But of their leaves they were disarrayed;
The body big and mightily pight,
Thoroughly rooted, and of wondrous height;
Whilom had been the king of the field.
SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: February.
- <sup>14</sup> It is but a simple oak
That is cut down at the first stroke.
UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, iii, 169. (1477)

OATH

See also Curse, Vow. For Oath in the sense of swearing, see Swearing

- <sup>15</sup> Oaths are not surety for a man, but the man for the oaths. (Οὐκ ἀνδρὸς ὅρκου πίστις ἀλλ' ὅρκων ἀνὴρ.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 222.
'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth,
But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 21.
- <sup>16</sup> Oaths are but words, and words but wind.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 107.
For breaking of an oath and lying,
Is but a kind of self-denying,
A saint-like virtue; and from hence
Some have broke oaths by Providence.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 133.
Oaths were not purpos'd, more than law,
To keep the Good and Just in awe,

But to confine the Bad and Sinful,
Like mortal cattle in a pincfold.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 197.

He that imposes an Oath, makes it,
Not he that for convenience takes it;
Then how can any man be said
To break an oath he never made?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 377.

1 They fear not to swear anything, they spare not to promise anything. (Nil metuunt jurare, nihil promittere parcant.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxiv, l. 145.

2 I will take my corporal oath on it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 10.

3 You may depend upon it, the more oath-taking, the more lying generally among the people.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 25 May, 1830.

4 Let him be Anathema, Maranatha.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xvi, 22.
(Maranatha: The Lord cometh.)

5 Oaths terminate, as Paul observes, all strife;
Some men have surely then a peaceful life!

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 55.

They fix attention, heedless of your pain,
With oaths, like rivets, forc'd into the brain;
And ev'n when sober truth prevails throughout,
They swear it, till affiance breeds a doubt.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 63.

6 Oaths, used as playthings or convenient tools.

WILLIAM COWPER, Expostulation, l. 37.

And hast thou sworn on ev'ry slight pretence,
Till perjuries are common as bad pence,
While thousands, careless of the damning sin,
Kiss the book's outside, who ne'er look within?

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 384.

7 By earth, by springs, by rivers, and by streams. (Μὰ γῆν, μὰ κρήνας, μὰ ποταμούς, μὰ νάματα.)

DEMOSTHENES, his famous metrical oath.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 9.)

8 My tongue has sworn it, but my mind is un-sworn. ('Η γλῶσσά μου μοχ', ἡ δὲ φρήν ἀνώμοτος.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 612. Quoted by Cicero (De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 29, sec.
108), who renders it into the Latin version often quoted: Juravi lingua, mentem injuratam gero.

An oath sworn with the clear understanding in one's mind that it should be performed must be kept.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 29, sec. 107.

9 Would have their tale believed for their oaths,

And are like empty vessels under sail.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 31.

10 An oath that is not to be made is not to be kept.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

An unlawful oath is better broke than kept.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 126.

It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 182.

An oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawful magistrate.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 22.

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:
To keep that oath were more impiety
Than Jephthah's, when he sacrificed his daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 89.

11 We mutually pledge to each other our lives,
our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence.

12 I take the official oath to-day with no mental reservations and with no purpose to construe the Constitution by any hypercritical rules.

LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

You can have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the Government; while I shall have the most solemn one to "preserve, protect, and defend" it.

LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

13 Children are to be deceived with comfits and men with oaths.

LYSANDER. (Bacon, Advancement of Learning, bk. ii, refers to it as "that other principle of Lysander.")

14 I know that he will rather believe me un-sworn than you upon oath. (Injurato scio plus credet mihi quam jurato tibi.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 437. (Act i.)

15 You're a woman; you swear boldly. (Mulier es; audacter juras.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 836. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

16 I write a woman's oaths in water.

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 694.

A woman's oaths are wafers, break with making.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act ii, sc. 1.

17 He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not.

Old Testament: Psalms, xv, 4.

18 Oaths are the fossils of piety.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Interpretations of Poetry, 148.

- 1 As false as dicers' oaths.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 45.
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 52.
The strongest oaths are straw
To the fire i' the blood.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 54.
- 2 Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 162.
- 3 Having sworn too hard a keeping oath,
Study to break it and not break my troth.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 65.
What fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 72. Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 41.
- 4 An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 228.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 2, l. 120.
- 5 If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2, l. 175.
- 6 No oath too binding for a lover.
SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 848. See also LOVE: ITS PERJURIES.

OBEDIENCE

I—Obedience: Apothegms

- 8 Obedience is the mother of success, the wife of safety. (Πειθαρχία γάρ ἐστι τῆς εὐπραξίας μήτηρ, γυνὴ σωτήριος.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 224.
- 9 The fear of some divine and supreme powers keeps men in obedience.
BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sc. iv, mem. 1, subs. 2.
By contenting ourselves with obedience we become divine.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

- 10 Obedience is the key to every door.
GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 53.
We must do the thing we must
Before the thing we may;
We are unfit for any trust
Till we can and do obey.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Willie's Question. Pt. iv.
- 11 All the good of which humanity is capable is comprised in obedience.
J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.
- 12 Even though a god, I have learnt to obey the times. (Καὶρὸν δουλεῖν καὶ θεὸς ὦν ἔμαθον.)
PALLADAS, On a Statue of Heracles. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 441.)
- 13 He who takes his orders gladly, escapes the bitterest part of slavery,—doing what one does not want to do. The man who does something under orders is not unhappy; he is unhappy who does something against his will.
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi, sec. 3.
Let them obey their orders. (Jussisque nostris pareant.)
SENECA, Octavia, l. 459.
- 14 O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 76.
- Obedience,
Bane of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
Makes slaves of men, and, of the human frame,
A mechanized automaton.
SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 177.
- 15 Give obedience where 'tis truly owed.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 2, l. 26.
- 16 One so small
Who knowing nothing knows but to obey.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 183.
- 17 Obedience is the courtesy due to kings.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 713.
Obedience is the bond of rule.
TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 145.
- 18 What the law demands, give of your own free will. (Quod vos vis cogit, id voluntate impetret.)
TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 490. (Act iii, sc. 4.)
- II—Obedience to God
- 19 I find the doing of the will of God, leaves me no time for disputing about His plans.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 72.
- 20 That thou art happy, owe to God;
That thou continuest such, owe to thyself,
That is, to thy obedience.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 520.

1 Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve
 First thy obedience.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 367.

2 Ascend, I follow thee, safe guide, the path
 Thou lead'st me, and to the hand of heav'n submit.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 371.

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
 O'er mountain or plain or sea;

I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
 I'll be what you want me to be.

MARY BROWN, I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go. The favorite hymn of William Jennings Bryan.

3 Henceforth I learn that to obey is best,
 And love with fear the only God.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 561.

III—Obedience and Command

4 The man who commands efficiently must have obeyed others in the past, and the man who obeys dutifully is worthy of being some day a commander. (Qui bene imperat, pa-ruert aliquando necesse est, et qui modeste paret, videtur, qui aliquando imperet, dig-nus esse.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 2, sec. 5.

5 Obedience alone gives the right to command.

EMERSON, Lectures and Sketches: Perpetual Forces.

6 Who hath not served can not command.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 28. (1578)

7 I profess . . . so much of the Roman principle as to deem it honorable for the general of yesterday to act as a corporal today, if his services can be useful to his country.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 186.

8 How fit he is to sway That can so well obey!

ANDREW MARVELL, *An Horatian Ode Upon
 Cromwell's Return from Ireland*.

9 Who best

Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first

Well hath obeyed.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 194.

10 The worthiest and best science that may be,
 to wit, the knowledge how to obey, and the skill how to command.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 14.

11 There was neither command nor obedience.
 (Nusquam imperium, nusquam obsequium.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis.
 14.

12 Obedience is yielded more readily to one who commands gently. (Remissius imperanti melius paretur.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 24.

He that most courteously commandeth, to him
 men most obey.

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 77.
 (Translation of above.)

13 No one can rule except one who can be ruled.
 (Nemo autem regere potest, nisi qui et regni.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 15.

14 Let them obey that know not how to rule.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.

15 No man can ever end with being superior who will not begin with being inferior.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.
 Lecture 9.

16 Learn to obey before you command. ('Ἀρχε πρῶτον μαθὼν ἀρχεσθαι.)

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, 60.)

Through obedience learn to command.

PLATO, Leges. Sec. 762.

17 The common saying, "He was never good master that never was scholar, nor never good captain that never was soldier."

THOMAS STARKEY, *England in the Reign of
 Henry VIII*. Pt. i, ch. 1.

18 No man securely commands but he who has learned to obey.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
 i, ch. 20.

19 Taught to submit,
 A harder lesson than to command.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iii, l. 156.

OBLIVION

20 The iniquity of oblivion blindly scattereth her poppy, and deals with the memory of men without distinction to merit of perpetuity. Who can but pity the founder of the pyramids? . . . Oblivion is not to be hired.
 The greater part must be content to be as though they had not been.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5, secs. 8, 9. See also under MONUMENT.

21 Those sacred Powers Tread on oblivion.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk.
 ii, song 2, l. 435.

22 Without oblivion, there is no remembrance possible. When both oblivion and memory are wise, when the general soul of man is clear, melodious, true, there may come a modern Iliad as memorial of the Past.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches: Introduction.

Oblivion is the dark page whereon memory writes her lightbeam characters, and makes them legible; were it all light, nothing could be read there, any more than if it were all darkness.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History Again.

1 And o'er the past Oblivion stretch her wing.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiv, l. 557. (Pope, tr.)

2 Far off from these, a slow and silent stream,
Lethë, the River of Oblivion, rolls
Her wat'ry labyrinth, whereof who drinks
Forthwith his former state and being forgets.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 582.

3 Cancell'd from Heav'n and sacred memory,
Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 379.

4 Where dust and damned oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 147.

The dust of old oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 87.

A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time
And rasure of oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

In the swallowing gulf Of . . . dark oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 129.

5 And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 194.

A certain Pasha, dead five thousand years,
Once from his harem fled in sudden tears,
And had this sentence on the city's gate
Deeply engraven, "Only God is great." . . .

Lost is that city's glory. Every gust Lifts, with dead leaves, the unknown Pasha's
dust,

And all is ruin, save one wrinkled gate
Whereon is written, "Only God is great."

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Turkish Legend.

For, to make deserts, God, who rules mankind,
Begins with kings, and ends the work by wind.

VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

6 What 's past and what 's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 166.

7 I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: "Two vast and trunkless legs of stone

Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies. . . .

And on the pedestal these words appear:
'My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!'
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away."

SHELLEY, Ozymandias of Egypt.

Sole Lord of Lords and very King of Kings,
He sits within the desert, carved in stone;
Inscrutable, colossal, and alone,
And ancients than memory of things. . . .
Dazed camels pause, and mute Bedouins stare.
This symbol of past power more than man's Presages doom.

LLOYD MIFFLIN, Sesostris.

Where high the tombs of royal Egypt heave,
The vulture shadows with arrested wings
The indecipherable boasts of kings,
Till Arab children hear their mother's cry
And leave in mockery their toy—they leave
The skull of Pharaoh staring at the sky.

GEORGE STERLING, Three Sonnets on Oblivion.
No. ii.

8 Out of the world's way, out of the light,
Out of the ages of worldly weather,
Forgotten of all men altogether.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 15. See also under FORGETFULNESS.

9 Once in Persia reigned a king
Who upon his signet ring
Graved a maxim true and wise,
Which if held before the eyes
Gave him counsel at a glance
Fit for every change and chance.
Solemn words, and these are they:
"Even this shall pass away."

THEODORE TILTON, The King's Ring.

And let its meaning permeate
Whatever comes, This too shall pass away.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, This Too Shall Pass
Away.

10 Our name shall be forgotten in time, and no man shall have our works in remembrance, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dispersed as a mist.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 4.

OBSCURITY

I—Obscurity of Place

11 I give the fight up; let there be an end,
A privacy, an obscure nook for me,
I want to be forgotten even by God.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

For the fellow lay safe
As his mates do, the midge and the nit,
—Through minuteness, to wit.

ROBERT BROWNING, Instans Tyrannus.

12 As night the life-inclining stars best shows,

So lives obscure the starriest souls disclose.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Hymns and Epigrams of Homer: The Translator's Epilogue, l. 74.

1 Thy greatest praise had been to live unknown.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 602.

2 Some village Hampden, that with dauntless breast

The little tyrant of his fields withstood;
Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest,
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 57.

How many a rustic Milton has passed by,
Stifling the speechless longings of his heart,
In unremitting drudgery and care!
How many a vulgar Cato has compelled
His energies, no longer tameless then,
To mould a pin, or fabricate a nail!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 137.

There are no mute, inglorious Miltons, save in the hallucinations of poets. The one sound test of a Milton is that he function like a Milton.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 89.

3 There is many a rich stone laid up in the bowels of the earth, many a fair pearl laid up in the bosom of the sea, that never was seen, nor never shall be.

JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations: Bk. iv, The Veil of Moses. (c. 1647)

Like beauteous flowers which vainly waste their scent

Of odours in unhaunted deserts.

EDWARD CHAMBERLAYNE, Pharonida. Pt. ii, bk. 4. (1669)

Like roses, that in deserts bloom and die.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iv, l. 158. (1712)

And waste their music on a savage race.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 228. (1742)

Full many a gem of purest ray serene

The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear:

Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,

And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 53. (1751)

"Nor waste their sweetness in the desert air."

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. ii, l. 20. (1761) Misquoting Gray.

OCTOBER

<sup>1</sup> October turned my maple's leaves to gold;
The most are gone now; here and there one lingers;

Soon these will slip from out the twig's weak hold,

Like coins between a dying miser's fingers.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Maple Leaves.

<sup>2</sup> And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief,
And the year smiles as it draws near its
death.

BRYANT, October: A Sonnet.

The sweet calm sunshine of October, now
Warms the low spot; upon its grassy mould
The purple oak-leaf falls; the birchen bough Drops its bright spoil like arrow-heads of gold.

BRYANT, October, 1866.

<sup>3</sup> There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir:

We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls, and calls each vagabond by name.
BLISS CARMAN, Vagabond Song.

<sup>4</sup> Hail, old October, bright and chill,
First freedman from the summer sun!
Spice high the bowl, and drink your fill!
Thank heaven, at last the summer's done!
THOMAS CONSTABLE, Old October.

<sup>5</sup> There is no season when such pleasant and sunny spots may be lighted on, and produce so pleasant an effect on the feelings, as now in October.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, *American Note-
Books*, 7 Oct., 1841.

<sup>6</sup> The skies they were ashen and sober;
The leaves they were crisped and sere—
The leaves they were withering and sere;
It was night in the lonesome October
Of my most immemorial year.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Ulalume.

<sup>7</sup> October's foliage yellows with his cold.

OFFENCE

<sup>10</sup> Neither give offence to others, nor take offence from them.

ST. AMBROSE, Letter to St. Augustine. (TAY-LOR, Ductor Dubitantium, i, l. 5.)

<sup>11</sup> She hugg'd the offender and forgave the offence.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 367.

How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love th' offender, yet detest th' offence?
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 191.

<sup>12</sup> The offender never pardons.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>13</sup> What dire offence from am'rous causes springs.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 1.

<sup>14</sup> No offence taken where none is meant.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

If a man's armpits are unpleasant, art thou angry with him? If he has foul breath? What would be the use? The man has such a mouth, he has such armpits. Some such effluvium was bound to come from such a source.

<sup>15</sup> A stumbling-stone and rock of offence.

New Testament: Romans, ix, 33; I Peter, ii, 8.

<sup>16</sup> It is not well to see everything, to hear everything; let many causes of offence pass by us unnoticed. (Non expedit omnia videre omnia audire; multæ nos injuriæ transeant.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 11.

<sup>17</sup> O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

The rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 94.

If their "offence be rank," should mine be rancour?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 271.

<sup>18</sup> In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 8.

All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 199.

The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 80.

1 Time to me this truth has taught,
( 'Tis a treasure worth revealing )
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

OPINION

I—Opinion: Definitions

3 Opinion is the genius, and, as it were, the foundation of all temporal happiness.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Opinion.

4 Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

5 It seems to me that the nursing mother of most false opinions, both public and private, is the too high opinion which man has of himself. (Il me semble que la mère nourrice des plus fausses opinions, et publiques et particulieres, c'est la trop bonne opinion que l'homme a de soy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

6 Truth is one forever absolute, but opinion is truth filtered through the moods, the blood,
the disposition of the spectator.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Idols.

7 Opinion is the mistress of fools.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

8 Everything depends on opinion; ambition, luxury, greed, hark back to opinion. It is according to opinion that we suffer. (Omnia ex opinione suspensa sunt; non ambitio tan-tum ad illam respicit et luxuria et avaritia.
Ad opinionem dolemus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 78, sec. 13.

9 Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 56.

10 All creeds and opinions are nothing but the result of chance and temperament.

J. H. SHORHOUSE, John Inglesant.

11 Opinion is ultimately determined by the feelings, and not by the intellect.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 30,
sec. 8.

12 "There are no diseases, but only persons who are diseased," some doctors say, and I say that there are no opinions, but only opining persons.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 156.

II—Opinion: Apothegms

13 He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still,
Which he may adhere to, yet disown,
For reasons to himself best known.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 547.

Usually misquoted, "A man convinced against his will." See also under ARGUMENT.

14 A difference of opinion, though in the merest trifles, alienates little minds.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

The only sin which we never forgive in each other is difference of opinion.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

15 His sole opinion, whatsoe'er befall,
Centring at last in having none at all.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 133.

16 Opinion says hot and cold, but the reality is atoms and empty space.

DEMOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho.
Bk. ix, sec. 72.)

17 "I never offered an opinion till I was sixty," said the old Turk, "and then it was one which had been in our family for a century."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Iskander. Ch. 8.

18 Every opinion reacts on him who utters it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

19 If thou art a person that hast good authority with the company, 'twere good to look confidently, yet not scornfully, and then mildly say, "This is my opinion."

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.
Vol. i, p. 190.

20 Some men plant an opinion they seem to eradicate.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

21 It is not often that an opinion is worth expressing, which cannot take care of itself.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays, p. 211.

A man's opinions, look you, are generally of much more value than his arguments.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 5.

22 With effervescing opinions, as with the not yet forgotten champagne, the quickest way to let them get flat is to let them get exposed to the air.

preme Court, 1920.

1 The average man believes a thing first, and then searches for proof to bolster his opinion.
ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, Vol. xi, p. 36.

2 Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural, 4 March, 1801.

3 I never had an opinion in politics or religion which I was afraid to own.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 299.

4 How long halt ye between two opinions?

8 Remember that to change thy mind and to follow him that sets thee right, is to be none the less a free agent.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, sec. 16.

9 Each man's opinion freely is his own Concerning anything, or anybody.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act ii, sc. 2.

10 Size is a matter of opinion.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 34.

11 We can never be sure that the opinion we are endeavouring to stifle is a false opinion; and even if we were sure, stifling it would be an evil still.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 2.

12 Men are tormented by their own opinions of things, and not by the things themselves.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. Quoted as "an ancient Greek sentence."

13 Even opinion is of force enough to make itself to be espoused at the expense of life.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40.

14 Some praise at morning what they blame at night,

But always think the last opinion right.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 230.

15 All our pride is but a jest;
None are worst, and none are best;
Grief and joy, and hope and fear,
Play their pageants everywhere:
Vain Opinion all doth sway,
And the world is but a play.

THOMAS CAMPION, Song: Whether Men.

16 I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 33.

Fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

IV—Opinion: Opinion Rules the World

1 Opinion governs all mankind,

Like the blind's leading of the blind.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 267. (1670)

2 We are all of us more or less the slaves of opinion.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On Court Influence.

3 Opinion can do much, and indeed she is that great lady which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No. 39. (1655)

Opinion is that high and mighty Dame Which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Vocal Forest: Introduction.

4 The good opinion of mankind, like the lever of Archimedes, with the given fulcrum, moves the world.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 222.

5 Yet it is but opinion, and that must be the world's master always.

GERVASE MARKHAM, English House-Wife, 70. (1615)

6 In politics it is almost a triviality to say that public opinion now rules the world.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

7 Opinion is the queen of the world. (L'opinion est la reine du monde.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. v, No. 311.

V—Opinion: Stubborn Opinion

8 An illogical opinion only requires rope enough to hang itself.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: The Via Media.

9 The man who never alters his opinion is like standing water, and breeds reptiles of the mind.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

10 Stiff in opinions, always in the wrong.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 547.

11 Last of all, men vehemently in love with their own new opinions, though never so absurd, and obstinately bent to maintain them, gave those their opinions also that revered name of Conscience, as if they would have it seem unlawful to change or speak against them.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 7.

12 People who hold such absolute opinions

Should stay at home, in Protestant dominions, Not travel like male Mrs. Trollopes.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 252.

13 Dogmatism is puppyism come to its full growth.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Man Made of Money. (Wit and Opinions of Jerrold, p. 28.)

14 Those who never retract their opinions love themselves more than they love truth. (Ceux qui ne se rétractent jamais s'aiment plus que la vérité.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 161.

15 The foolish and the dead alone never change their opinion.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Abraham Lincoln.

16 His own opinion was his law.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

17 Loyalty to petrified opinion never yet broke a chain or freed a human soul.

MARK TWAIN. Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

18 The deep slumber of a decided opinion.

UNKNOWN, Thoughts for the Cloister and the Crowd, p. 21. (Quoted by Mill, On Liberty.)

VI—Opinion: Other People's Opinion

19 We think as we do, mainly because other people think so.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 328.

20 Stay at home in your mind. Don't recite other people's opinions.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

When private men shall act with original views, the lustre will be transferred from the actions of kings to those of gentlemen.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

21 That man is best who considers everything for himself. (Οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος, ὃς αὐτὸς πάντα νοσή φρασάμενος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 293.

22 For the most part, we inherit our opinions. We are the heirs of habits and mental customs. Our beliefs, like the fashion of our garments, depend on where we were born.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Why I Am an Agnostic.

<sup>1</sup> I very much suspect that if thinking men would have the courage to think for themselves, and to speak what they think, it would be found they do not differ in . . . opinions as much as is supposed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 349.

<sup>2</sup> Opinion! which on crutches walks,
And sounds the words another talks.

DAVID LLOYD, The Poet, l. 55.

<sup>3</sup> My opinion, my conviction, gains infinitely in strength and success, the moment a second mind has adopted it.

NOVALIS, Fragment. (Carlyle, tr.)

<sup>4</sup> He adopts the opinion of others like a monk in the Sorbonne. (Il opine du bonnet comme un moine en Sorbonne.)

PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales. No. 2.

<sup>5</sup> I have never yet given a second-hand opinion of any thing, or book, or person.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Notes on a Cellar-Book, p. x.

<sup>6</sup> It is difficult, if not impossible, for most people to think otherwise than in the fashion of their own period.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

VII—Opinion: Public Opinion

See also People: Their Fickleness

<sup>7</sup> Public opinion is no more than this,
What people think that other people think.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Prince Lucifer. Act vi, sc. 2.

<sup>8</sup> Where an opinion is general, it is usually correct.

JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Ch. 11.

What everyone says must be true.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>9</sup> When the people have no other tyrant, their own public opinion becomes one.

BULWER-LYTTON, Ernest Maltravers. Bk. vi, ch. 5.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Thomas Burgh, Dec., 1779.

<sup>11</sup> That bloated vanity called public opinion.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

<sup>12</sup> Happy those who are convinced so as to be of the general opinions.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 227.

Singularity in right hath ruined many: happy those who are convinced of the general opinion.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

<sup>13</sup> I traversed a dominion
Whose spokesmen spake out strong
Their purpose and opinion
Through pulpit, press, and song. . . .

I saw, in web unbroken,
Its history outwrought
Not as the loud had spoken,
But as the mute had thought.

THOMAS HARDY, Mute Opinion.

<sup>14</sup> Nothing is more unjust or capricious than public opinion.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 84.

Public opinion, a vulgar, impertinent, anonymous tyrant who deliberately makes life unpleasant for anyone who is not content to be the average man.

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays: Ser. i, Our Present Discontents.

<sup>15</sup> The pressure of public opinion is like the pressure of the atmosphere; you can't see it—but, all the same, it is sixteen pounds to the square inch.

J. R. LOWELL, in interview with Julian Hawthorne. (BRANDER MATTHEWS, New York Times, 2 April, 1922.)

<sup>16</sup> Public opinion has its natural flux and reflux.

MACAULAY, Essays: Machiavelli.

<sup>17</sup> Popular opinions, on subjects not palpable to sense, are often true, but seldom or never the whole truth.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 2.

<sup>18</sup> To take by armed conquest is spasmodic and temporary, the conquest of public opinion alone is enduring.

DORA RUSSELL, Right to Be Happy, p. 112.

<sup>19</sup> I know where there is more wisdom than is found in Napoleon, Voltaire, or all the ministers present and to come—in public opinion. (Je connais quelqu'un qui a plus d'esprit que Napoléon, que Voltaire, que tous les ministres présents et futurs: c'est l'opinion.)

TALLEYRAND, Speech, in French Senate, 1821.

OPPORTUNITY

I—Opportunity: Definitions

<sup>20</sup> Opportunity is whoredom's bawd.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 329. (1605)

Opportunity is the great bawd.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Thou strong seducer, Opportunity.

DRYDEN, II Conquest of Granada. Act 4, sc. 3.

<sup>21</sup> What is opportunity to the man who can't use it? An unfecundated egg, which the waves of time wash away into nonentity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes from Clerical Life: Amos Barton.

1 Occasion is a great matter. Terence says well, "I came in time, which is the chief thing of all." Julius Cæsar understood occasion: Pompey and Hannibal did not.

LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 848.

2 Opportunity is a god. (Τὸν Καὶρὸν ἔφησθε θεόν.) PALLADAS, quoting Menander. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 52.)

3 O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!

'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason: Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;

Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;

'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;

And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,

Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 876.

The opportunity for doing mischief is found a hundred times a day, and of doing good once in a year. (L'occasion de faire du mal se trouve cent fois par jour, et celle de faire du bien une fois dans l'année.)

VOLTAIRE, Zadig.

4 Opportunity is the best captain of all endeavor. (Καὶρὸς γάρ, ὅσπερ ἀνδράσιν μέγιστος ἐργῶν παντὸς ἐστ' ἐπιστάτης.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 75.

II—Opportunity: Apothegms

5 A man must make his opportunity, as oft as find it.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 3.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.

BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.

6 Opportunity makes a thief.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to the Earl of Essex, 1598. The earliest appearance of this axiom in English literature is in a manuscript of unknown authorship, Hali Meidenhad (Early English Text Society, 17), dating from about 1220: "Man saith that ease maketh thief."

Opportunity makes a man commit larceny.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 169. (1591)

7 When one door is shut, another opens. (Donde una puerta se cierra, otra se abre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 21.

8 Small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises.

DEMOSTHENES, Ad Leptinem, l. 163.

9 Observe the opportunity.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, iv, 20.

10 No great man ever complains of want of opportunity.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 534.

11 Fortune once in the course of our life doth put into our hands the offer of a good turn.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello. Vol. ii, p. 148.

12 Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

JOHN FLAVEL, A Faithful and Ancient Account of Some Late and Wonderful Sea Deliverances. (c. 1680) Quoted by Lord Belhaven in a speech to the Scottish Parliament, 2 Nov., 1706.

13 Seek not for fresher founts afar,

Just drop your bucket where you are.

SAM WALTER FOSS, Opportunity.

Let down your buckets where you are.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, Address, Atlanta Exposition.

14 Keep thou from Opportunity, and God will keep thee from the Sin.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

15 He who seizes the [right] moment is the right man. (Der den Augenblick ergreift Das ist der rechte Mann.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4, l. 494.

Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute!

GOETHE, Faust, i, 4, 494. (Anster, tr.)

16 Let us snatch our opportunity from the day, my friends. (Rapiamus, amici, Occasionem de die.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xiii, l. 3.

17 We sail, at sunrise, daily, "outward bound."

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Outward Bound.

18 To improve the golden moment of opportunity, and catch the good that is within our reach, is the great art of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. vi, p. 214.

19 The career open to talents, that was my principle.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.) The same principle which he expressed in another phrase, "Every French soldier carries in his knapsack the baton of a marshal of France."

To the very last, he had a kind of idea; that, namely, of la carrière ouverte aux talents—the tools to him that can handle them.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART, referring to Napoleon. (Article on Sir Walter Scott in London and Westminster Review, 1838.) Carlyle, in his essay on Mirabeau (1837), quotes the phrase as from "a New England book."

20 Opportunity has power everywhere; always let your hook be hanging; where you least expect it, there will swim a fish. (Casus ubique valet; semper tibi pendeat hamus: Quo minime credas gurgite, piscis erit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425.

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 79.) Diogenes Laertius says that this apothegm belongs to Pittacus, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died about 570 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi.

Know your opportunity. (Γινώσκε καιρόν.)

PITTACUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 203.)

I am come in time. (Veni in tempore.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 758. Ausonius cites this as the equivalent of Pittacus' axiom.

<sup>2</sup> Opportunity could not be more opportune. (Opportunitas non potuit opportunius.)

<sup>3</sup> A good opportunity is seldom presented, and is easily lost. (Occasio ægre offertur, facile amittitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 487.

<sup>4</sup> There's place and means for every man alive.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 375.

I happen, temporarily, to occupy this White House. I am a living witness that any one of your children may look to come here as my father's child has.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, to Ohio soldiers, 22 Aug., 1864.

<sup>5</sup> Nor time nor place Did then adhere.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 51.

Never the time and the place

And the loved one all together.

ROBERT BROWNING, Never the Time and the Place.

I've got the time, I've got the place, but it's hard to find the girl.

MACDONALD-HENRY. Title and refrain of popular song. (1910)

<sup>6</sup> The perfect spy o' the time; The moment on 't.

<sup>7</sup> Opportunities are seldom labeled.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour on the Continent. No. 38.

III—Opportunity: Its Knock

<sup>10</sup>

O, once in each man's life, at least,

Good luck knocks at his door;

And wit to seize the fitting guest

Need never hunger more.

But while the loitering idler waits

Good luck beside his fire,

The bold heart storms at fortune's gates,

And conquers its desire.

L. J. BATES, Good Luck.

As th' pote says, Opporchunity knocks at ivry man's dure wanst. On some men's dures it hammers till it breaks down th' dure an' thin it goes in an' wakes him up if he's asleep, an' iver afterward it wurruks f'r him as a night-watchman. On other men's dures it knocks an' runs away, an' on th' dures iv some men it knocks an' whin they come out it hits thim over th' head with an axe. But ivrywan has an opporchunity.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Carnegie's Gift.

<sup>11</sup>

Master of human destinies am I!

Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait.

Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate

Deserts and seas remote, and passing by

Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late

I knock unbidden once at every gate!

If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before

I turn away. It is the hour of fate,

And they who follow me reach every state

Mortals desire, and conquer every foe

Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,

Condemned to failure, penury and woe,

Seek me in vain and uselessly implore:

I answer not, and I return no more!

JOHN JAMES INCALLS, Opportunity.

With rustling wings, she swept from heaven and stood

Beside me where I loitered in the way.

Her brow was calm, and in her outstretched hand

She bore a gift—a virgin bud that blushed

Disparting its green sheath. . . . She spake no word,

But paused a little space and looked at me

With silent scorn; then plumed her shining wings

In sudden flight, nor ever came again.

JAMES B. KENYON, Opportunity.

<sup>12</sup>

They do me wrong who say I come no more

When once I knock and fail to find you in;

For every day I stand outside your door

And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Weep not for precious chances passed away!

Weep not for golden ages on the wane!

Each night I burn the records of the day—

At sunrise every soul is born again!

WALTER MALONE, Opportunity.

The actual fact is that in this day Opportunity not only knocks at your door but is playing an anvil chorus on every man's door, and then lays for the owner around the corner with a club.

ELBERT HUBBARD. (The Philistine.)

IV—Opportunity: Its Forelock

1 Let nothing pass that will advantage you; hairy in front, Opportunity is bald behind. (Rem tibi quam nosces aptam dimittere noli; Fronte capillata, post est Occasio calva.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha in Moribus, ii, 26. In Roman mythology, Occasio (Occasion, or, in more idiomatic English, Opportunity) was personified as a god or goddess standing on a rotating wheel, the feet fitted with winged sandals, the head hairy in front but bald behind. Time (Saturnus) also had a character of Opportunity, as distinguished from Length of Years, and in this character (in Greek Καιρός as distinguished from Κρόνος) was also represented as hairy in front and bald behind.

2 Who lets slip Fortune, her shall never find; Occasion, once passed by, is bald behind.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Pyramus and Thisbe. St. 15. (1663)

Occasion . . . being bald can not easily be gotten again if she be once let slip.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, i, 266. (1566)

3 Zeal and duty are not slow, But on occasion's forelock watchful wait.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 172.

4 Opportunity has hair on her forehead, but is bald behind. If you meet her seize her, for once let slip, Jove himself cannot bring her back. (Occasio prima sui parte comosa, posteriore calva. Quam si occupasis, teneas elapsum. Non isse possit Jupiter reprehendere.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 8.

5 "And who art thou?" "Time who subdueth all things." "Why dost thou stand on tiptoe?" "I am ever running." "Why dost thou have a pair of wings on thy feet?" "I fly with the wind." . . . "Why does thy hair hang over thy face?" "For him who meets me to take me by the forelock." "And why is the back of thy head bald?" "Because none whom I have once raced by, though he sorely wishes it, may take hold of me from behind."

POSIDIPPUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 275. The Planudean Appendix.) Time, here, it should be noted, is in his character of Opportunity, the word used being Καιρός.

"Why hast thou hair upon thy brow?"

"To seize me by, when met."

"Why is thy head then bald behind?"

"Because men wish in vain,

When I have run past on winged feet

To catch me e'er again."

POSIDIPPUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus.

A metrical version.

6 For occasion hath all her hair on her forehead;

when she is past, you may not recall her. She hath no tuft whereby you can lay hold on her, for she is bald on the hinder part of her head, and never returneth again.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 37.

7 Let's take the instant by the forward top.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act v, sc. 3, l. 39. (1602)

We can escape even now,
So we take fleet Occasion by the hair.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 1, l. 36.

8 Time wears all his locks before,
Take thou hold upon his forehead;

When he flies, he turns no more,

And behind his scalp is naked.

Works adjourned have many stays,

Long demurs breed new delays.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Loss in Delay.

9 Tell her the joyous Time will not be stayed,
Unless she do him by the forelock take.

EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxx. (1595)

Lose not this advantage, but take time by the forelock.

he will. (Quia qui non vult cum potest, non utique poterit cum volet.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Policraticus. Bk. viii, century 17. (c. 1150) Referred to as a proverb. St. Augustine (Opera, xxxviii) has it in somewhat different form: "Corrigant se, qui tales sunt, dum vivunt, ne postea velint et non possint." Which in turn harks back to Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 6: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near."

could.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 27.

<sup>1</sup> Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 7, l. 89.

<sup>2</sup> That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this
"would" changes

And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 119.

OPTIMISM

See also Pessimism

<sup>3</sup> The one sits shivering in Fortune's smile,
Taking his joy with bated, doubtful breath.
The other, gnawed by hunger, all the while Laughs in the face of Death.

T. B. ALDRICH, Pessimist and Optimist.

Two men look out through the same bars:
One sees the mud, and one the stars.

FREDERICK LANGBRIDGE [?]. This couplet is credited to Langbridge in A Cluster of Quiet Thoughts, published by the Religious Tract Society, but no information concerning him seems to be available. It was once credited to Clarence Hawkes, but he stated that he had merely quoted it, and that his copyist had omitted quotation marks by mistake. It has also been ascribed to Robert Louis
Stevenson. There are several versions.

The optimist is blind and the pessimist bitter.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 134.

'Twixt optimist and pessimist

The difference is droll:

The optimist sees the doughnut,

The pessimist, the hole.

McLANDBURGH WILSON, Optimist and Pessimist.

Two knights contended in the list—

An optimist, a pessimist;

But each by mist was blinded so

That neither struck a single blow.

R. T. WOMBAT, Quatrains.

<sup>4</sup> What good I see humbly I seek to do,
And live obedient to the law, in trust

That what will come, and must come, shall come well.
